

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

LAW

Pres. L. Eng. A. B d. 66

OW. U.K.

800

L 400

LAW

U.S. L. Eng. A. B d. 66

OW. U.K.

800

L 400

THE
LEGAL GUIDE.

---

VOL. III.

FROM NOVEMBER 2, 1839, TO APRIL 25, INCLUSIVE.

25

L O N D O N :

PUBLISHED FOR THE PROPRIETORS, BY

JOHN RICHARDS & CO.

LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS, 194, FLEET STREET.

1840.

---

G. NORMAN, PRINTER, MAIDEN LANE, COVENT GARDEN.

TABLE OF CASES REPORTED.

---

- |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Adcock v. Flake, 26 Addis v. Campbell, 153 Anon. 262 Attwood v. Banks and others, 153 Attwood v. Small, 375 Bartlett, James, case of, 72 Barton v. Smith, 165 Beadles v. Burch, 405 Belcher and another, Assignees of Driver, v. Oldfield, 71 Bennett v. Beckett, 88 Boord, In re. 340, 381, 391 Briggs v. Glover, 121 Brown, B. in Re, 342 Bushy Park Rangership, case of, 37 Catell and others v. Simons and Wife, 407 Cardross, L. and Messrs. Hodgson and Barton, Re, 410 Chambers and Son, in Re, 105 Chambers, A. H. case of, 169, 343, 363 Chambers v. Bircham, 410 Clare, ex parte Re John Glover, 55 Cornfoot v. Sir Frederick Fowke, Bart. 40 Coe, William, in Re, 328 De Houmelin v. Sheldon and the Attorney-General, 100 Doe dem. Pryme v. Gifford, 346 Eaton v. Smith, 85 Ebenezer Jacob, in Re, 56 Evens v. Sloman, 123 Frost, John, case of, 106, 123, 171, 180, 207, 221, 233, 329, 345 Galway v. Rose, 299 Gay v. Martin, 382 Gibbs v. Gregg, 26 Ginger v. Peach, 104 Glover, John, ex parte Clarke, 55 Goock v. Weller, 86 Gumpertz v. Ansell, 231 Hales v. Lay, 22 Hall v. Stanley, 412 Hatch v. Traves, 406 Harrison v. Warneford, 71 Harvey v. Norton, 278, 204 Heriz v. Regina, 391 Hicks v. Keat, 24 Hill v. White, 104 Hill v. Gomme, 230 Hodgson v. Casler, 342 Holby and Wife v. Munnings, 88 | Johnson, R. B. and William Harris, case of, 45 Jacob, Ebenezer, Re, 56 Kennell v. Abbott, 135 Keymer v. Perring, 377 Lee v. Holland, 87 Lloyd v. Pettigrew, 4 Manners v. Rowley, 394 Marks v. Benjamin, 87, 265 Marshall v. Lyn, 218 Marston, in Re Wm. 136 Mason v. Kiddle, 299 May, Thomas, ex parte, 56 Meinertshagen, v. Davis and others, 23 Mercer's Company v. Hudson, 204 Mortimer v. M'Allan, 248, 311 Muddle v. Stride and another, 298 Muir v. Sewell, 412 Nelson v. Slee, 86 Nelson v. Bridges and Woodhead, 69 Newlands v. Holmes, 105, 184, 215, 361 Newton and another v. Clarke, 167 Nun v. Johnson and others, 87 Parker, ex parte, 165 Peters v. Fleming, 266 Peters, Re, ex parte Mrs. Peters, 56 Powlett v. the Imperial Bank of England, 71 Ratcliffe v. Dickens, 293 Reeve v. Kent, 311 Regina v. Steward of the Manor of Richmond, 25 —— v. Bick, 363 —— v. Mould, 362 Reynolds v. Sherwood, 412 Richards, J. Re, 396. Ricket v. Edginton, 120 Rising v. Dolphin, 310 Robinson v. May, 103 Rowe, ex parte, 21 Rudd v. Sewell, 359 Rushton v. Cobb, 134 Salmond v. Rollin, 186 Samuel v. Pile, 299 Scarborough v. Borman, 218 Schultz, W., Case of, 72 Schwabacher v. Fleming, 122 Serjeants at Law, Case of, 396 Sheriff of Middlesex, in Re, 206 Sloman v. Kelly, 166 Spry v. Hood, 137 Squires v. Edward, 41 |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Table of Cases Reported

Stephenson and Wile. v. Smith and others, 378 Stockdale v. Dunslop, 411
 ——— v. Hammond, 41. 57. 88. 129. 136. 139. 204.
 207. 251. 253. 259. 261. 311
 Stuart v. Carroll, 381
 Strong v. Champneys, 38. 243

Taylor, Miss., in Re, 22, 108
 ——— v. Vichell, 392
 Trenchard, Sir G., in Re, 364
 Trenchard, exports in Re Foynter, 31

Talbot v. Armstrong, 316
 Tarynan, exports, 72
 Uthman v. Carr, 36

Ward v. Byrne, 34
 Wellerley v. Wellerley, 119
 Wetherhead v. Burton, 105
 Winterman's B., Case, 27
 Williams v. Bousfield, 207
 Wilkinson v. Harwood, 85
 Wood, in Re, 300

INDEX.

answer to Bill after Amendment, Report, 165
 ——— sufficiency of, in gambling case, 166
 Appellate Jurisdiction—Sir E. Sugden's notice, 340
 ——— Sir E. Sugden's proposed resolutions, 349
 Articled Clerks—see Clerks
 Assault and Battery, Actions for Costs in, 398 Attornies, Petition of, to the House of Commons in Howard's Case, 325
 ——— Resolutions in do. 314
 ——— Whether an Attorney is entitled to carry on a cause for trial after notice from his client (the plaintiff) not to do so—Whether he can be called upon to answer matter in an affidavit which charges him with an offence for which he may be indicted, 265
 ——— Whether the bill of costs of a London agent upon the application of the country solicitor is or is not taxable; and if so, whether as of course or upon terms—Reports, 340, 381, 391
 ——— purchasing property of their clients—Whether in the absence of fraud, and with long acquiescence, such a sale will be disturbed
     by the court, 359
 ——— Whether in cases where bills are filed to impeach deeds on the ground of fraud, the attorney who prepared them may be properly made a party to the suit as a party to the fraud to obtain a discovery, 406 ——— Imprudence of a solicitor acting for vendor and purchaser, 407
 ——— Jurisdiction of a Court of Law for calling upon an attorney to deliver his bill of costs, where no business has been done in the Court in which the application is made, 410 ——— Lien for costs upon deeds in their custody, Report, 24
 ——— Neglect of an attorney not being in Court when cause called on and plaintiff called—Whether relief will be granted under special circumstances, Report, 26
 ——— Whether an attorney can oppose an in-solvent's discharge for a bill of costs, not delivered before the hearing, Report, 72
 ——— Bill of costs, Reports, 104, 121
 ——— Admission of rules of Court, 230
 ——— Responsibility of, 251
 ——— Liabilities for negligence, 299

 Bailments, Essay upon the English Law of, 385, 401 Bankruptcy, Reports, 55, 56, 71, 165, 262
 ——— Court of Equitable Jurisdiction of, 105, 153
 ——— Court of, see Justice Bar, Gentlemen called, 92 — Petition of, to the House of Commons on the privilege question, 230

Barristers exclusion from the C. P. 87 ——— admitted to the coil, 302
 Bill amendment of, after replication, Report, 153
 ——— see answer
 ——— amendment of, after demurrer, Report, 391
 Bill of Exchange, Reports, 299, 408
 Bond, in restraint of trade—How far void in Law,
     Report, 64
 Bushy Park, rangership of, Report, 27

 Capias, Writ of, Reports, 86, 412
 Central Criminal Court, Sitings, 96 Circuits of the Commissioners for the relief of Insolvent debtors, 15, 303, 366
 Civil Law, Editor's Notes, Husband and Wife, 135 Clerks, articled, Whether a clerk can, under particular circumstances, be examined for practice as an attorney before the expiration of his articles, Report, 72
 ——— see statutes, 11
 ——— notice to, 16
 ——— applying to be admitted attornies, 27, 62, 74, 91, 111, 127
 ——— who passed their examination, 92, 253, 271, 286
 ——— Examination at Serjeant's Inn Hall, before the Judges—In the matter of an unsuccessful candidate, before the Law Examiners, 140
 ——— applying to be admitted SOLICI-TORS in CHANCERY, 156
 ——— Orders of the Master of the Rolls respecting such admissions, 156
 ——— Examiners of, 16
 ——— New order for their examination
     at the Rolls, 414
 Cognovit, execution of, Report, 299 Commission of inquiry—see justice
 ——— Special at Monmouth, 106—see Frost Commons, House of—Privileges of the—Opinion of Mr. Justice Pattison, 273, 289
 ——— of Lord Brougham, 193
 ——— Judgment pronounced by the Chief Justice of Newfoundland in the Chambers, August 13, 1838, upon the application of Edward Keilly, to be discharged from custody under the writ of Habeas Corpus, he having been committed by the Speaker's warrant for an alleged breach of privilege, 195, 211, 250
 ——— Opinion of Lord Chief Justice Holt upon the power of the Court of King's Bench to discharge a man committed upon a warrant, signed by the Speaker of the House of Commons for a breach of privilege, also the privilege now asserted by that House, 258
 ——— Reports, 182, 199, 230, 245, 261, 303, 309, 314, 325, 340, 357, 358, 359, 374, 391
 Companies Joint Stock, Reports, 71, 105, 136, 296, 328, 394
 Contracts, Reports, 40, 218, 298

- Copyhold Enfranchisement Bill, 199
 Correspondents of the Judges, 285
 Courts, business of the, 31, 48, 64, 80, 96, 112, 208—see sittings
 Criminal Law, Charge of the Recorder to the Grand Jury occasioned by the recent changes in the Criminal Law, made by the Statute 7 W. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 85, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws relating to offences against the person," Report, 8 Debt, Act for abolishing arrest for. Reports, 22, 23, 26, 27, 45, 56, 72, 169, 186, 207, 328, 343, 363, 410 Distress for rent—see rent
 ———— Trespass for, Report, 412
 Distringas, Report, 207
 Dublin Law Society, 353, 367
 Editor's Notes—upon reported cases, Kennell v. Abbott, 136
 ———— Newton v. Clarke, 168
 ———— Barclay v. Raine, 276
 ———— Nelson v. Woodhead, 62
 ———— Doe dem Chadborn v. Green, 346
 ———— Weymouth v. Knipe, 341
 ———— In re Boord, Solicitor, 340
 ———— Bligh v. Brown, 362
 ———— Jones v. Roberts, 392
 ———— on the liabilities of trustees and executors, 378
 ———— on costs in actions for assault and battery, 398
 Elections controverted—Report of the select committee, 365
 Equity, want of, Report, 375
 ESSAYS, ORIGINAL, on new Law of real property—see Real property ———— on the Law of Injunction, 115
 ———— on the Privileges of the House of Commons, 273, 289, 305
 ———— upon the ENGLISH LAW of BAILMENTS, 385, 401
 Examiners of Articled Clerks, Michs. Term, 1839, 16
 Executor's Report, 85, 378
 Fee simple estate described, 158
 Frost's Trial, charge of C. J. Tindal to the Grand Jury, 106, 123, 171, 189, 207, 233, 329, 345
 ———— Opinion of the Judges, 234
 Gambling—see Answer
 Husband and Wife—Whether a married woman, tenant for life of real estates, has a right to a settlement out of the rents and profits as against the Assignees of her Husband, an Insolvent Debtor? 36, 247
 ———— Reports, Editor's Notes upon the Law governing this subject, 36, 37
 ———— Whether the wife of a bankrupt being entitled to a legacy, has a right to a settlement out of it, Report, 56
 ———— Alien Husband, Report, 100
 ———— Legacy to an assumed wife—see Legacy, 134
 ———— Husband's liabilities, 278
 ———— after deed of separation, 294, 296 Infants Bill, custody of, Report, 22
 ———— see Statutes
 ———— Necessaries, Reports, 122, 266
 Injunction, on the law of, Essay, 115, 150
 Innkeepers, liabilities, Report, 120, 382
 Insolvent Court—see Justice
 Insurance on profits, Report, 411
 Issue, practice, Report, 231
 Joint Stock Companies—see Companies Judges' Summons, Report, 342
 ———— Order, Report, 412
 Justice, administration of, in the Courts of Bankruptcy and Insolvency, Commission of Inquiry, 106
 ———— Analysis of the Lord Chancellor's new bill, 324, 347
 Landlord and Tenant, Reports, 69, 346, 412
 Legacy given to a person under a particular character, falsely assumed, Editor's observations, the civil law and code considered, 134
 ———— duty, return, 400
 Letters to the Editor—
 ———— by H. D. M., 20, 383
 ———— Alphonso, 77
 ———— C. C., 191
 ———— S. A. W., 236, 335, 384, 399
 ———— An Articled Clerk, 236
 ———— I. L. P., 284
 ———— A, 302
 ———— Amicus, 320
 ———— R. H., 364
 ———— M. I. M., 365
 ———— E. A., 383
 ———— Newportiensis, 398
 ———— J. A. M., 399
 ———— to Subscribers, by R. J. J., 304
 Libel, Report, 57, 88, 139
 Lights, obstruction to, Report, 204
 Lords, House of, Reports, 100, 199, 261, 373, 390
 Marriages Abroad—As to the validity in England of marriages of British subjects with the subjects of other nations at the hotel of the British Embassy by the chaplain to the Ambassador, Report, 4
 ———— in what churches, 222
 ———— settlements, Report, 375
 ———— law of, as relates to a clergyman refusing to perform the ceremony, 413
 Master and Servant, Report, 382
 Merchants, custom of, Report, 298 Mining contracts, Editor's observations, 70
 Necessaries—see Infants
 Notices to Subscribers, 16, 364, 390, 396, 398
 Notice to Correspondents, 112, 128, 144, 160, 176, 192, 208, 223, 239, 256, 287, 304, 390, 396, 352, 368, 384, 400, 416
 Orders—see Postage
 ———— see Clerks, Articled Outlawry, Report, 26, 363
 Parties, want of, Report, 375
 Partners, Report, 293
 Pilots' liabilities, Report, 409
 Plea of Puis d'ancien continuance, Editor's note, 278
 Pleading—see Joint-Stock Companies, 71
 ———— Power of the Court to quash frivolous Pleas, Report, 41
 Poor Law Amendment Act, Report, 10
 Postage Act—Orders, 46, 73, 95, 141, 155, 173, 192, 239, 268, 400, 416
 ———— English and French, 819

Postage Act, Returns under the Fourpenny and Penny Rates, 361

Privileges of the House of Commons, Essay upon—see Essay

——— of the Serjeants-at-Law—see Serjeants Problems—

1. Chattel interests—What is a chattel? 4

Answer, 21

2. Contract—When it is to be performed, 21

Answer, 52, 365

3. Descent—Local Customs—What are the principal modes of descent derived from local customs? 36

Answer, 87, 149

4. Distress for Rent—Who may distrain? 51

Answer, 306

5. Fieri Facias—What is this writ? When, where, and how is it executed? What sort of property may be taken, and how disposed of? 67

Answer, 198

6. What is an estate tail by implication? 84

Answer, 338, 368

7. Merger—What is it? 98

Answer, 213

8. Livery of seisin—When is it necessary? To whom may it be made? How is it made? 117

Answer, 180

9. Legacies—Under what circumstances is a legacy regarded as a satisfaction of a debt? 131

Answer, 292

10. Damage Fessant—Describe what it is—What kind of thing is capable of being damage fessant? 147

Answer

11. Written Instruments of a private nature—When a deed or will is given in evidence at law, what is the general rule of proof? 168

Answer

12. Scintilla—What is the doctrine of scintilla? 180

Answer, 243

13. Writ of Summons—Describe this writ—What are the requisites of this process, and the proceedings to compel an appearance where the defendant can be served? 197

Answer, 307

14. Title Deeds—In what cases will equity compel the owner of title deeds to produce them to other persons; and in what cases will their production be compelled in adverse suits and actions? 213

Answer, 276

15. Plea Plus Darrien Continuance—Describe the plea. When may it be resorted to as a matter of defence? 227

Answer, 277

16. Agreements—What is a sufficient signature by the party, or his agent, to an agreement for the sale and purchase of land? 243

Answer, 357

17. Bankruptcy—Who may be made a bankrupt? 261

Answer, 403

18. Chancery—Plea to a bill. What is its object? What constitutes a good plea? 276

Answer, 372

19. Terms of years to attend the inheritance—What is the nature of a term to attend the inheritance? 292

Answer, 389

Problems—

20. Bankruptcy—What are the different acts of bankruptcy? 305

Answer

21. Powers—In what cases will a defective execution of a power be supported? 322

Answer

22. Writ of Inquiry in ordinary cases—What is a writ? In what case is it necessary? How is it executed, and in what manner is execution had after verdict? 338

Answer

23. Law of Evidence—What will, under ordinary circumstances, be received at law as a sufficient proof of handwriting? 355

Answer

24. Devastavit—What shall amount to a devastavit? 371

Answer

25. Bill in Chancery.—On what subjects may relief be obtained by a bill in Chancery? 288

Answer

26. Illusory Appointments. What is deemed an Illusory Appointment? 403

Answer

ANSWERS to Problems in Vol. II.

——— to Problem 3, 84

——— to Problem 4, 117, 163

——— to Problem 7, 131

——— to Problem 11, 322

——— to Problem 13, 98

——— to Problem 19, 371

——— to Problem 20, 371

——— to Problem 24, 213

——— to Problem 26, 147, 261

Promissory Note, Report, 103

QUESTIONS at the EXAMINATIONS, 77, 219

Real Property, New Law of—8 & 4 Wm. 4th, cap. 74, Act for the Abolition of fines and recoveries, and for substitution of more simple modes of Assurance (28th August, 1833), Essay on, 1, 17, 33, 49, 65, 81, 97, 113, 129, 145, 161, 177, 321, 337, 369

——— TAX—The; or an Analysis of the principal Estates in Real Property, 20

Rector's rights, Report, 137

Rent, distress for, Report, 87

Reviews of New Books:—

Precedents in Conveyancing, adapted to the present state of the Law, illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by F. G. Western, Esq., F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple, 16, 108

Dr. Robinson's Magistrates' Pocket-book, 78

The Rise and Progress of the Laws of England and Wales, by Owen Flintoff, Esq. M.A., Barrister-at-law, 125

An Introduction to Conveyancing, and the History, Nature, Incidents, and Titles of Legal Estates, by Owen Flintoff, Esq., 158

The Law and Commercial Daily Remembrancer for 1840, 191

Compendium of the Laws of England, Scotland, and Ancient Rome, 221

Law and Lawyers, or Sketches and Illustrations of Legal History and Biography, 236

Supplement to a Letter to the Right Honourable Sir Edward Knatchbull, Bart., 367

Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England, incorporated with the Political Text of the late J. L. De Lolme, LL.D., Advocate, by T. G. Western, Esq. F.R.A.S. SECOND EDITION, 254

Rule to compute, Reports, 241, 242

Separate List—Judgment of the MASTER of the Rolls in Thurvell v. Armstrong, 220, 223, 241, 242

— — — — — Judgment of the LORD CHANCELLOR in Thurvell v. Armstrong, 216

— — — — — Editor's Summary of the latter Judgment, 215

— — — — — Judgment of the LORD CHANCELLOR in Various v. Various, 184

— — — — — There is also, 213

— — — — — Report in ibid., 261

Separation Board in Report, 112, 224

Separation of Law—Practice of 1808

— — — — — per ibid., 206

Sequestration—What constitutes the Process, 143, 147

— — — — — Report, 57

Sherrill's Law of the Kingdom, 331

— — — — — the ibid., 334

Sherrill's Law Reports, 4: 122, 261

Sittings of the Courts, 5: 45, 46, 49, 51, 57, 170, 172, 222, 244, 314, 346

Substitutes in Chancery, admission of—see Clarks v. Clarks

Statutes 2 & 3 Vict. c. 39—42. Are to indemnify and persons to the Lord's Kingdom as have control or quality themselves for officers and appointments, and for extending the time to make the three returns respectively until the 25th day of March, 1841, and for the relief of clerks of Assizes and Sessions in certain cases, &c.

— — — — — 2 & 3 Vict. c. 39—42. Are to amend the law relating to the Courts of Justice, &c.

— — — — — 2 & 3 Vict. c. 39—42. Are to regulate the proceedings in the Supreme Courts of England and Wales, &c.

— — — — — Statute of Lord Rensselaer & Company's Bankruptcy, 241, 242, 314, 332

— — — — — Statute of the Lord Chancellor's Bill for facilitating the administration of Justice, 241, 242

Statutes—

— — — — — An Act to give summary Protection to persons employed in the publication of Parliamentary Papers, 414

Stock-Brokers and Jobbers, Reports, 248, 311

Stockdale's Case, 182, 189, 199, 204, 206, 207, 230, 231, 243, 251, 261, 263, 268, 281, 296, 308, 312, 314, 325, 352, 391

Stolen Goods, possession of, Charge of Mr. Sergeant Adams, 381

Subpoena, Report, 104

Summons, Writs of, Report, 126

— — — — — Judges—see Judges

Tenancy, Construction of—"for 7 years and so on from year to year," 346

Trade—Bond in restraint of—see Bond, 54

Trover—As to the right of a Consignee of Goods before the Bankruptcy of the Consignor where the goods came into possession after the Bankruptcy, Report, 71

Trustees' Liabilities—Under 5th order of the Court of Chancery, Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, Report, 33

Trusts, Report, 25

Twins—their right of succession to Real Property, 302

Treaty Law, Report, 21

University College London examination, 351

Vendor and Purchaser, Report, 100

— — — — — see Attorneys

Vindictive Licensed, Report, 51

Warrant of Attorney, Reports, 25

— — — — — Execution of 300, 302

Will, Act, Reports, 25, 26, 311, 342, 352, 396

Writs—New Forms of 313, 324, 351

PLATE

The Real Property Tax 31

The Legal Guide.

VOL. III.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1839.

[No. 1.

NEW LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

An Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.—[28th August, 1833.]

OF all the changes that have been recently made in the practice of Conveyancing, this statute is the most important, and requires the strict attention of the practitioner and the student, who, in order to well understand it, must make himself acquainted with the old law of settlement, and the assurances which it has abolished.

The ancient fiction of a COMMON RECOVERY for enlarging an estate tail into a fee simple, first arose in Taltarum's case, so going back as the 12 Edw. 4. (a), in which B. being seised, in fee of the lands in question, gave them to one Wm. Smith, to hold to him and the heirs of his body, by force of which he was seised. Wm. Smith died, leaving Humphrey, his eldest son, on whom these lands descended, who entered and was seised per formam doni. Humphrey enfeoffed one Tregos, of the lands in fee, who rendered them to Humphrey, and Jane his wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies, remainder in fee to Humphrey, by force of which they were seised. Some time afterwards Jane died, on which Humphrey became sole seised of the lands in tail, and being thus seised, one Taltarum brought a writ of right against Humphrey, and counted of his possession against him. Humphrey made defence, and vouched to warranty one R. King, who entered into the warranty, and joined the demise on the mere right. Afterwards R. King, the vouchee, made default, and departed in contempt of the Court; in consequence of which final judgment was given, that the demandant, Taltarum, should recover the lands against Humphrey, and that Humphrey should recover lands of equal value of R. King, the vouchee. Humphrey afterwards died without leaving heirs of his body, and the question was, whether Richard, the brother of Humphrey, who was heir in tail to the lands, should be barred by this recovery. It was determined by all the judges, that the estate tail was not barred by the recovery, because the tenant in tail was not seised of the estate tail at the time of the recovery, but of another estate; and as the recovery in value goes according to the estate whereof the tenant was seised at the time of the recovery, and not in recompense of the estate he had not, the issue in tail would have no recompense in this case, and therefore was not barred by the recovery. It follows hence,

(a) See Year Book, 14. 19.

that if Humphrey had been seised of the estate tail of the gift of J. B. at the time of the recovery, Richard, who, it should be observed, was tenant in tail in remainder, would have been barred, so that by a recovery duly suffered, not only the estate tail of the recoveree, but all ulterior estates tail in remainder, would also be barred, and as by force of the judgment the recoveror was in of an estate in fee, it follows that all ulterior remainders and reversions would be also barred, and that consequently all charges and incumbrances created by persons in remainder or reversion would be also barred. (a)

Thus was the fiction of a Common Recovery established in opposition to the statute donis conditionalibus, (b) (the gentilitium municipali (c) as it has been named) called the Statute of Westminster, which enacted the mischief of an indestructible entail (d), and by which fiction an estate tail was enlarged into a fee simple, and it became a common assurance, and so remained until the passing the present statute. Although it is said that a recovery suffered by tenant in tail passes a fee simple derived out of the estate tail—a larger estate got out of a smaller—yet we find this nonsense or ignorance in some of the books which are looked up to as containing golden opinions.

But even this assurance was found not effectual to enable a tenant in tail in remainder to bar the estate tail without the concurrence of the owner of the immediate freehold. The common law then stepped in, and by another artificial assurance called a FINE completed the work that was afterwards sanctioned by the Legislature (e), which established proclamations, and subsequently (f) gave to the fine of a tenant in tail the effect of absolutely excluding the issue in tail as such from the succession, and of diverting the land for the time of the continuance of such issue, into the ordinary channels of descent and alienation, and this in the face of its own previous Act (g). Thus was established the old effectual method of barring an entail.

Taltarum's Case is the model and foundation of all Common Recoveries, and it were, we submit, only waste of time and space here to enlarge upon either the machinery or its working from that time. This Essay would, however, be incomplete without such an introduction, in which we have, in as few words as possible, explained the old Law as to barring of estates tail and in remainder or reversion after estates tail—springing uses and executory devices, and other eccentric schemes for the disposal of real property followed. “Each step, subsequent to the statute de donis, was an effort to recover the liberty of alienation, but by pursuing that object without method, by employing different devices, in the various kinds and degrees of operation, the law became entangled among subtleties and forms hardly less injurious than the perpetuity which it abhorred. The wrong assurance was adopted, or the technical requisites were not duly observed, and the effect upon the title of the blunder or omission, was overlooked or misconceived.”

At length came the statute 3 & 4 W. 4. c. 74. by which it is enacted,

(a) Capel's Case, 1 Rep. 62.; Cholmeley's Case, 2nd Id. 52; Hudson v. Benson, 2 Lev. 28.

(b) 13 Edw. 1. c. 1.

(c) Co. Litt. 392. b.

(d) See also Mary Portington's Case, 10 Rep. 37. b. and Lumbar's Case, 44 Ed. 3. Year Book, 21.

(e) 4 Hen. 8. c. 24, called the STATUTE OF FINES.

(f) 32 Hen. 8. c. 36.

(g) As under the Statute de donis, an estate tail became a particular estate, so under these statutes a base or determinable fee, derived out of the estate tail, became also a particular estate, and thus the common law, which prohibited a remainder after a fee, was infringed.

That in the construction of this Act the word "Lands" shall extend to manors, advowsons, rectories, messuages, lands, tenements, tithes, rents, and hereditaments of any tenure (except copy of Court Roll), and whether corporeal or incorporeal, and any undivided share thereof, but when accompanied by some expression including or denoting the tenure by copy of Court Roll, shall extend to manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of that tenure, and any undivided share thereof; and the word "Estate" shall extend to an estate in equity as well as in law, and shall also extend to any interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance in, upon, or affecting lands, either at law or in equity, and shall also extend to any interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance in, upon, or affecting money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands; and the expression "Base Fee" shall mean exclusively that estate in fee simple into which an estate tail is converted where the issue in tail are barred, but persons claiming estates by way of remainder or otherwise are not barred; and the expression "Estate Tail," in addition to its usual meaning, shall mean a base fee into which an estate tail shall have been converted; and the expression "actual Tenant in Tail" shall mean exclusively the tenant of an estate tail which shall not have been barred, and such tenant shall be deemed an actual tenant in tail, although the estate tail may have been divested or turned to a right; and the expression "Tenant in Tail," shall mean not only an actual tenant in tail, but also a person who, where an estate tail shall have been barred and converted into a base fee, would have been tenant of such estate tail if the same had not been barred; and the expression "Tenant in Tail entitled to a Base Fee" shall mean a person entitled to a base fee, or to the ultimate beneficial interest in a base fee, and who, if the base fee had not been created, would have been actual tenant in tail; and the expression

"Money subject to be invested in the Purchase of Lands" shall include money, whether raised or to be raised, and whether the amount thereof be or be not ascertained, and shall extend to stocks and funds, and real and other securities, the produce of which is directed to be invested in the purchase of lands, and the lands to be purchased with such money or produce shall extend to lands held by copy of Court Roll, and also to lands of any tenure, in Ireland or elsewhere out of England, where such lands or any of them are within the scope or meaning of the trust or power directing or authorizing the purchase; and the word "Person" shall extend to a body politic, corporate, or collegiate, as well as an individual; and every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things as well as one person or thing; and every word importing the plural number shall extend and be applied to one person or thing as well as several persons or things; and every word importing the masculine gender only shall extend and be applied to a female as well as a male; and every assurance already made or hereafter to be made, whether by deed, will, private Act of Parliament, or otherwise, by which lands are or shall be entailed, or agreed or directed to be entailed, shall be deemed a settlement; and every appointment made in exercise of any power contained in any settlement, or of any other power arising out of the power contained in any settlement, shall be considered as part of such settlement, and the estate created by such appointment shall be considered as having been created by such settlement; and where any such settlement is or shall be made by will, the time of the death of the testator shall be considered the time when such settlement was made: Provided always, that those words and expressions occurring in this clause, to which more than one meaning is to be attached, shall not have the different meanings given to them by this clause in those cases in which there is any thing in the subject or context repugnant to such construction.

Section 2. That after the thirty first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, no fine shall be levied or common recovery suffered of lands of any tenure, except where parties intending to levy a fine or suffer a common recovery shall, on or before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, have sued out a writ of dedimus, or any other writ, in the regular proceedings of such fine or recovery; and any fine or common recovery which shall be levied or suffered contrary to this provision shall be absolutely void.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM I.

Vol. 3.

CHATTEL INTERESTS.

What is a CHATTEL?

Law Reports.

CONSISTORY COURT OF LONDON.

LLOYD v. PETITJEAN, CALLING HERSELF LLOYD.

MARRIAGES ABROAD.—As to the validity in England of marriages of British subjects with the subjects of other nations at the hotel of the British Embassy by the Chaplain to the Ambassador.

FIRST JUDICIAL CONSTRUCTION of the statute 9 Geo. 4. c. 91. whether a marriage in the house of a British Ambassador, in which one of the parties only is a British subject, is or is not excluded from the operation of that Act.

This is a subject of considerable importance at the present day, and it may be as well, before entering upon the case, to shew what is the LAW of FRANCE previous to the celebration of a marriage.

Civil Code. tit. 2. ch. 3. 63.

“ Avant la célébration du mariage, l'officier de l'état civil fera deux publications, à huit jours d'intervalle, un jour de dimanche, devant la maison commune. Ces publications et l'acte qui en sera dressé, énonceront les prénoms, noms, professions et domiciles des futurs époux, leur qualité de majeurs ou de mineurs, et les prénoms, noms, professions et domiciles de leurs pères et mères.”

“ Le fils qui n'a pas atteint l'âge de vingt-cinq ans accomplis, la fille qui n'a pas atteint l'âge de vingt-un ans accomplis, ne peuvent contracter mariage sans le consentement de leurs père et mère : en cas de dissentiment, le consentement du père suffit.”—Ibid. tit. v. ch. i. 148.

“ Il n'y a pas de mariage lorsqu'il n'y a pas de consentement.”—Ibid. tit. v. ch. i. 146.

In this case, Mr. George Lloyd was born in the East Indies, on the 17th October, 1815, and baptised in England, on the 28th April, 1821. He was a natural son of Sir Wm. Lloyd, and married Athalie Pulcherie Clotilde Petitjean, an actress at Paris, who was born there, 29th December, 1812. The marriage took place, in the first instance, by civil contract, before the Mayor of the second arrondissement of Paris, on the 26th October, 1837, an entry being duly made in the registry of the acts of marriage; and on the same day, the parties were married at the hotel of the British Ambassador at Paris, by the Chaplain of the Embassy, and being described as George Lloyd, of Wrexham, in the county of Denbigh, bachelor, and A. P. C. Petitjean, of the parish of St. Roch, Paris, spinster. Mr. Lloyd was at this time a domiciled subject of England, and the lady a domiciled subject of France. The suit was promoted for a nullity of the marriage, on the ground that at the time of the contract, Mr. Lloyd was but 22 years and nine days old, and that, although a certain act of declaration, dated 30th or 31st August, 1837, signed by Sir Wm. Lloyd, specifying the age of his son, and containing a legal acknowledgment of him as such, was produced to the French authorities and accepted as a consent to the marriage, in conformity to the requisites of the Civil Code, such act of declaration was not made or intended to convey a consent to the marriage on the part or

Sir Wm. Lloyd, who was not acquainted with his son's design previous to the marriage; but under an idea that he was about to enter into a literary engagement with a Frenchman, and that it was necessary to prove his birth according to the law of France. It, therefore, alleged that the first marriage was null and void, through want of consent of the father. With respect to the second marriage, the libel pleaded, that neither of the parties was a member of the household or in the retinue of the British Ambassador, by reason whereof, a marriage so celebrated between such parties was null and void to all intents and purposes.

Haggard, Dr., for the wife, contended that the libel was inadmissible. The object of the suit is to annul a marriage, because the husband is incompetent by the law of France to contract marriage; asking the Court to say that a British subject, competent to contract marriage according to the law of this country, may set aside a marriage in France, unless he fulfils all the requisites of that law applicable to its own subjects. There is no case in point, and I am not prepared to say that the marriages of British subjects abroad, valid according to the law of the country where celebrated, would be necessarily held to be valid according to the law of this country. I do not mean to say, that Huber is correct in laying down as universally true, that personales qualitates, alicui in certo loco jure impressas, ubique circumferri et personam comitari,—that, being of age in his own country, a man is of age in any other country, be their law of majority what it may; yet it is not to be laid out of the case, that the Dutch law would impose in this respect a very unfavourable disability upon the British subject. Whether Huber's doctrine be correct, has been much discussed by jurists. The question is, if there is a personal disqualification, how far it extends. Here the parties are not both British subjects, one being a subject of France. This marriage has not been called in question in the Courts of the country where it was had; but the aid of this Court is invoked by a party, sui juris, to annul a marriage because all the requisites of the French law as regards himself, a British subject, have not been complied with. But the validity of the marriage does not rest on the civil contract; the parties were re-married, according to the rites of the church of England, in the chapel of the British Embassy. The question, in this part of the case, may turn on the construction of the Act of 1823 (4 Geo. 4. c. 91); and we have no case directly applicable. In Pertreis v. Tondear, 1 Cons. Rep. 136, which was in 1790, the marriage took place in the chapel of the Bavarian Ambassador, the party proceeding to annul it being in the suite of the Spanish Ambassador, and the other party (the female) not being in the suite of any Ambassador. In that case, Lord Stowell said: "Taking the privilege to exist in Ambassadors' chapels (which, perhaps, has not been formally decided), I may still deem it a fit subject of consideration, whether such a privilege can protect a marriage where neither party is of the country of the Ambassador, and where one of them has acquired a matrimonial domicile in this country, and where it is not shewn that she had been living in a house entitled to privilege during her residence in England."

In Ruding v. Smith (1821), Lord Stowell, speaking of marriages in the English factories abroad, says, "There is a jus gentium upon this matter—a comity, which treats with tenderness, or at least with toleration, the opinions and usages of a distinct people in this transaction of marriage. It may be difficult to say, a priori, how far the general law should circumscribe its own authority in this matter; but practice has established the principle in several instances, and where the practice is admitted, it is entitled to acceptance and respect. It has sanctioned the marriages of foreign subjects in the houses of the ambassadors of the foreign country to which they belong: I am not aware of any judicial recognition upon the point; but the reputation which the validity of such marriages has acquired, makes such a recognition by no means improbable, if such a question was brought to judgment." To remove all doubts, the Legislature, in 1823 (the same year in which the present Marriage Act passed), passed the Act, 4 Geo. 4. c. 91, which is entitled, "An Act to relieve his Majesty's Subjects from all doubts concerning the validity of certain Marriages solemnized abroad;" and it accordingly enacts, that "whereas it is expedient to relieve the minds of all his Majesty's subjects from any doubt concerning the validity of marriages solemnized by a minister of the church of England in the chapel or house of any British ambassador or minister residing within the country to the court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel belonging to any British factory abroad, or in the house of any British subject residing in such factory, &c.; be it enacted, that all such marriages as aforesaid, shall be deemed and held to be as valid in law as if the same had been solemnized within his Majesty's dominions, with a due observance of all forms required by law."

Nicholl, D.—According to the law of England, the husband was of age to marry without the consent of his father. If there is any incapacity by the municipal law of France, it is on the ground of an invasion of the father's rights. The remedy is sought by the husband, an Englishman, not by the wife, who is a foreigner and the remedy is sought in an English Court, on the ground of a disability not existing under the law of England. The husband does not seek a remedy in the courts of France, where the wife is resident, but drags her here. The father is an Englishman, resident in this country. If the marriage had been in Scotland, or any part of the British dominions, he could not have interfered to prevent the marriage. The Court will not impose a legal disability on the husband for his own advantage--a disability intended to protect his father, who is not entitled to such protection, and to the prejudice of the wife, who was of age to contract marriage. I do not deny that the lex loci contractus must govern the marriage. What is it? The parties resort to and are married at the British ambassador's house, and I submit that, for that purpose, the British ambassador's house is by law part of the British dominions, and it is just as if the parties had come from France to Scotland or Dover. The lex loci contractus, therefore, is the general law of England before the Marriage Act (since that Act extends to England only), and by that law the marriage is good. Lord Stowell says, in Ruding v. Smith, that in the English factories abroad, marriages are regulated by the law of the original country to which they are still considered to belong: "an English resident at St. Petersburg does not look at the ritual of the Greek church, but to the rubric of the church of England." If the English ambassador's house be, for this purpose, part of the British dominions, it makes no difference whether both or one of the parties have a British domicile. No tribunal would set aside the marriage if it had been solemnized in Scotland; and what is the difference, if the house of the ambassador be a part of this kingdom? The Act of Parliament was passed to relieve the doubts of "all" her Majesty's subjects; will it do so, if it do not apply to British subjects who marry foreigners?

The Queen's Advocate, for Mr. Lloyd. The first marriage depends on the law of France, and must be decided by that law. The law of England adopts, generally speaking, the law of the country where the marriage was solemnized, and holds it good or bad, according to the lex loci contractus. That is the general rule and doctrine laid down by Lord Stowell. There may be exceptions to the rule, and where there is an essential difference of religion, as in the Turkish dominions, and in other instances, in which British subjects resident in a foreign country cannot contract marriage. The first point then is, whether we have sufficiently pleaded the invalidity of the marriage before the mayor of the arrondissement, according to the law of France. We have pleaded this law (which is a fact to be proved), and that by it a son under 25 cannot contract marriage without the consent of his father, and we plead this to be the law generally, in all cases, there being no distinction between natural and lawful children. By the law of France, after children have attained their majority, they are required before marriage to ask the advice of their parents, by a respectful act (acte respectueux) which is expressly made applicable to "natural children legally acknowledged;" and à fortiori the rule would apply to such children under 25. It is said that this law, as to the minority of Mr. Lloyd, cannot apply in the present case, and was not applied in Ruding v. Smith. But that case is distinguishable from the present. Here the question is as to the validity of a marriage in the civil form between a British subject and a French subject in the territory of France. The civil contract must be according to the general law of the land, which is applicable to all contracts, whether the parties be subjects of that kingdom or foreigners. Suppose a bill of exchange, drawn in France, a British subject being a party to it, to come before a British Court; would such a case be decided by the law of England or of France? In Trimby v. Vignier, 1 Bingham 151. (N. S.), the marginal note is: "By the law of France, an endorsement in blank does not transfer any property in a bill of exchange; Held, that the holder of a bill drawn in France, and endorsed there in blank, cannot recover against the acceptor in the courts of this country." L. C. J. Tindal held that the law of France must prevail, and govern the contract. (1)

The COURT.—That was on the doctrine of the lex loci contractus.

The Queen's Advocate.—Yes; it is the general law. The point is clear as to all civil contracts; if invalid according to the law of the foreign country, they are invalid according to the law of England. It is said, "how unjust it is for Mr. Lloyd, being major in this country, to bring a suit of nullity here, and plead his minority in France!" But, being a resident here, he has a right to institute a suit in this court if he thinks fit. With respect to the marriage in the British ambassador's chapel, it is said that such marriage is good and valid under the Act Geo. 4. c. 91. There has been no decision on that Act which affords a construction of it, as to its effect where one or both of the parties be not British subjects.

Dr. LUSHINGTON. (a)—It will presently be seen, that it is unnecessary for me to enter into a consideration of the validity of the first marriage. I think it most expedient, therefore, to consider, in the first instance, the validity of the second marriage in the house of the British ambassador at Paris.

(a) See Monthly Law Mag. vol. 6. p. 48.

The validity of this marriage must depend, either on the law as it existed anterior to an Act of Parliament, passed in the year 1823, for the purpose of relieving his Majesty's subjects "from all doubt concerning the validity of certain marriages solemnized abroad," or on the law as it exists subsequent to the passing of that statute.

With respect to this Act itself, I am not aware that it has ever received (after deliberation and more) any judicial construction whatever. I do not know that in any case, in this or any other court, this question has been submitted to judicial consideration; namely, whether a marriage in the house of a British ambassador, in which one of the parties only is a British subject, is or is not excluded from the operation of the Act. All I can find on the subject is, that a case, that of O'Connor v. Ommuney, occurred in the Court of Chancery under precisely similar circumstances. A party was entitled to a sum of money in Court, but it was necessary to shew that there had been a valid marriage; and it appeared that a marriage de facto had taken place between the parties, one being a British subject and the other a Swiss, and that they were married in the house of the British ambassador at Naples in 1816. It was referred to the Master to report whether the party had proved the marriage; he reported that a valid marriage had taken place; the report was not objected to, and was confirmed by the Court, and a decree passed which declared the marriage to be good and valid. I was informed that, when this case came under the consideration of the Court of Chancery, the matter underwent much discussion, which brought the facts and the law fully to the attention of the Court. I have, however, made inquiry of the present Lord Chancellor and of the Master of the Rolls, as to whether they have any recollection of having decided the point in question, and I am informed by both these learned lords, that they have no recollection of having decided it. I mention this, because whatever decree may have been actually made, it is possible that I can consider it as a ruling decision, unless the question had been deliberately argued and decided on consideration. I am, therefore, under the necessity of applying myself to a consideration of the question without the benefit of any authority of a decided case in any one of those Courts, which are entitled to great respect at my hands.

I now proceed to consider the statute itself, and I shall consider its effect with reference to the words of this statute alone, and without reference to any other statute in pari materia before or since.

There is one observation which strikes me at the first perusal of this statute; that is, that it is a remedial statute, intended for the redress of what in the judgment of the Legislature was a grievance and hardship. It is an Act "to relieve his Majesty's subjects from doubt concerning the validity of certain marriages solemnized abroad." I apprehend that there can be no doubt that this is a remedial statute, and, according to all legal principles of construction, it is to receive such an interpretation as will meet the evil intended to be remedied, and is therefore to have an extended, not a restricted, construction. And it begins by saying, "Whereas, it is expedient to relieve the minds of all his Majesty's subjects"—these words must be construed in an ample, not a confined sense,—“from any doubt concerning the validity of marriages solemnized by a minister of the church of England in the chapel or house of any British ambassador or minister residing within the country to the Court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel belonging to any British factory abroad, or in the house of any British subject residing at such factory,”—and it goes on to include marriages within the lines of a British army serving abroad;—and it enacts, "that all such marriages as aforesaid, shall be deemed and held to be as valid in law as if the same had been solemnized within her Majesty's dominions, with a due observance of all forms required by law."

Now, certainly the statute is not expressed in very satisfactory terms; because not a word is said as to whether it applies to marriages between British subjects alone; or to marriages in which one party is a British subject and the other a foreigner; or whether it applies to all marriages whatsoever, had and solemnized in a British ambassador's chapel. It is not very satisfactorily worded, so as to convey a definite and specific idea on this point. On the other hand, there are no words of exclusion, which shew that it was the intention of the Legislature that the Act should apply exclusively to British subjects, and not to marriages where one party was a British subject and the other a foreigner; it only declares that the marriage itself so had shall be good, without any specification as to the parties: "that all such marriages as aforesaid shall be deemed and held to be valid," without any words of exclusion. It is clear that a marriage between two British subjects is valid by this Act; and I cannot see on what principle I can put a construction upon it which should exclude a marriage where one party is a British subject and the other a foreigner; because, if I were to do so, I should not carry the Act into full effect, for I should not relieve the minds of all his Majesty's subjects from doubt. I am, therefore, was charged with causing the death of one of the seamen by striking him several times with a piece of stick. The other charge of murder was against the steward of the vessel, who was alleged to have stabbed the captain with a knife as he lay in bed, the latter being wholly unprepared for the attack, and could obtain no assistance, as it appeared that the crew were intimidated, and the fire-arms and other weapons of defence had previously been hidden. With regard to the case of the mate, it appeared that after the death of the captain he assumed the command of the ship, and, the weather being boisterous, the assistance of all hands was required on deck, and it would appear that one of the sailors, the unfortunate deceased, being unable from disease to quit his hammock, was consequently unable to take that active part in the ship which the exigencies of the case required. The mate, who was not at the time aware of the man's illness, supposed that he was shirking from his duty, and under that impression he chastised him in the manner described. Now certainly, if the mate, having the command of a ship under the circumstances, had good reason to suppose that the deceased was shirking from his duty, was justified in compelling him to work, but he would not be justified in using unnecessary violence, and the question for the grand jury would be, whether the death of the man was occasioned by the alleged ill-treatment he met with from the mate, or whether the disease under which he laboured might not have caused his dissolution independently of the personal violence he was said to have received. The learned judge then observed, that having looked carefully into the depositions in the case, his own opinion was that there was no ground for the charge of murder, but the grand jury would judge for themselves. As regarded the other case—namely, the alleged murder of the captain by the steward, he did not think it necessary to trouble them with many observations, because, the assault having been committed under the circumstances stated, and the weapon used on the occasion being a knife, there could be but little doubt as to the intention of the party charged, and therefore he had no hesitation in recommending that the case should be submitted to the consideration of the petty jury, who would judge, when the whole of the facts were placed before them, how far the charge of murder was sustained. Reverting once more to the other case, he would just suggest that the undue severity exercised by the mate over the deceased might have been produced without any intention to cause death, or the mate might have been at the time so completely under the control of the crew as to place his own safety in jeopardy if he did not act in such an emergency with the vigour and determination which his men required of him. It should not be forgotten that the vessel was buffeted about by foul weather at the time, and if the illness of the deceased was not known to the mate, he would have been justified in compelling him to work like the rest of the crew, although he had no right to use undue violence. The learned Recorder called the attention of the grand jury to two cases of rape which appeared in the calendar. The circumstances which attended one of the cases were rather peculiar. The prosecutrix, it appeared, was bar-maid in a public-house, and the party charged with violating her person was her master. From the evidence of the young woman, it would appear that the prisoner entered her bed-room, and while there she swooned twice away from the effects, as she alleged, of previous illness. Her statement was, that while she was in a state of insensibility her master had violated her person, but she was not aware of the fact until the following morning, when certain symptoms, coupled with the recollection of what had passed, convinced her that the prisoner had been guilty of effecting her ruin. There was one circumstance which certainly tended strongly to strengthen her statement, and that was, that on the following morning she mentioned what had occurred both to her mother and another person, and then immediately left the house. Now, in all charges of this description, it was essential to the ends of justice that the jury should be satisfied that the prosecutrix had taken the earliest opportunity to make known her wrong, which appeared to have been done in this instance, and under all the circumstances, the charge being one of a very serious description, his Lordship was of opinion that the grand jury would do well to send the case into this Court for trial. The second charge of rape was alleged to have been effected on a young girl only 14 years of age, and the party charged was alleged to have entered her bedroom, as in the last case, and, taking advantage of the absence of her sister, effected or attempted to effect, his object. From the evidence of the surgeon, however, the grand jury would probably see that the capital charge could not be supported in this instance, but that was a question solely for them to consider. There were no less than nine cases of cutting and wounding in the calendar, and one of attempting to stab with a knife, making in all ten charges of this description within little more than a month. The learned judge then proceeded to read the clauses applicable to offences of this kind in the 1st of Victoria, cap. 85, and after adverting at some length to the provisions of the Act in question, which gave power both to Judges and juries to mitigate the severity of the previous law, the Recorder observed, that offences of this serious description had within the last two years become so numerous, that it became all persons to whom the administration of the law was intrusted to endeavour to repress a species of crime which, if unchecked, would remain as a lasting stigma and disgrace on the national character. The grand jury would therefore do well to put all such cases in the course of further inquiry; and, in order to effect that object, it was most desirable that they should examine all the witnesses in such cases, so as they should not ignore bills upon light or insufficient grounds. It too frequently happened that relatives were desirous of softening down their evidence when they came before grand juries, in order to screen their connexions by blood or marriage from the consequences of their violence; but the ends of justice required that the law should be vindicated in all such cases, and that offences of this unmanly and un-English description should be put down with a strong hand.

KENSINGTON PETTY SESSIONS.

October 28.

POOR LAW AMENDMENT ACT.

Under the Statute 3 Vict. c. 62, the Board of Guardians are entitled to a summons against Overseers of a Parish to shew cause why a distress should not issue against their goods and chattels, for non-payment of the calls made upon them by the Board for the maintenance of the Poor.

Present Mr. Robert Ginter, the Chairman, and Messrs. Hawkes and Kemish, two of the guardians of the Kensington Union, attended before Sir John Sturt, L.J., and Mr. Barton the sitting magistrates, for the purpose of making the following application.

Mr. Ginter said he attended before their worship for the purpose of making an application of considerable importance, and only for the purpose of saving the Kensington Union, and also for all other parishes under the operation of the Poor Law Amendment Act, from the commencement of the Kensington Union the Board of Guardians had experienced the greatest difficulty in obtaining from the Overseers of St. John's Church, payments of the various calls made upon them by the Board for the maintenance of the poor in that parish; and he was anxious the Board had been compelled to apply to the Court of Chancery for a writ of mandamus against the parochial authorities to compel the payment. To remedy that evil, and to prevent the difficulties to which the board of guardians had consequently been subject, a bill was introduced last session of Parliament for the purpose of empowering boards of guardians generally to proceed against the officers of parishes in default by a more summary process than the tedious mode of writ of mandamus, which was always evaded by the parties paying the amount the day previous to the writ being returnable. That bill, however, met with a strong opposition, more particularly from Lord Lyndhurst, and he believed he might say it was in fact only owing to the conduct of the Chelsea authorities being adduced that the bill was ever passed into a law. It was under that statute (2nd and 3rd of Victoria, cap. 82) that he and the other members of the deputation applied, by direction of the board of guardians, to the bench for a summons against the four overseers of Chelsea, calling upon them to shew cause why a distress warrant should not issue against their goods and chattels for the amount in arrear, £961. 11s. 6d.

Mr. Hawkes trusted the Bench would grant the application, and would appoint an early day, as it was most important that the amount should be got in as speedily as possible, it being unfair that the other parishes should be compelled to support the poor of Chelsea, which was absolutely the case. There was at that moment a writ of mandamus in existence against Chelsea, which, however, was not returnable until November term. Every obstacle that could be thrown in the way of that board was thrown for the purpose of obtaining a dissolution of the union, it being contended by the Chelsea authorities that the rates had been greatly increased in that parish by the formation of the union.

The Bench said they had heard of such statements, and they believed also that there was a large number of defaulters on the rates, between 1,000 and 2,000 summonses having been recently issued for their recovery.

Mr. Ginter observed that the parish of Chelsea was governed by what was called a parochial committee, which consisted of forty members, who had the power in their own hand of making whatever amount of rates they pleased; yet, strange to say, although the last rate they had made was one of 1s. 10d. in the pound, and the whole amount of the arrears for which the summonses had been issued had been collected in, it would not have been sufficient to pay the arrears due to the Board of Guardians. The parochial committee had recently made another rate of 1s. 10d. in the pound, which would be far from sufficient to pay the necessary demands upon it.

The BENCH inquired how it was that the parochial committee did not make rates large enough, especially as they had the power in their own hands.

Mr. Rymill replied, that it was owing to the rental of the parish having been reduced under the General Assessment Act, while the rental of the other parishes had been raised. While, therefore, the other parishes raised rate sufficient for a moderate poundage, that of Chelsea was unable to raise enough, for fear of the rate appearing too exorbitant.

The BENCH, on examining the Act of Parliament, said they saw it was necessary that the summonses should be heard before a special sessions of the magistrates for the whole of the parishes within the division of the county; it could therefore be necessary that some days should elapse before that could be accomplished, the chairman himself being in Sussex.

Mr. Cornell said it was most necessary that every magistrate should be summoned, for even if only one was omitted, the whole proceedings would be informal.

Mr. Rymill suggested, that, in addition to the four overseers, the names of five (being a quorum) of the parochial committee should be likewise inserted in the summons, the Act saying "the parochial and other officers."

After considerable further discussion,

The BENCH decided on issuing the summonses, and directed that the divisional clerk, should be required to issue a precept to the high constable of the division, to summon a special meeting of the justices at the earliest day possible.

ARTICLED CLERKS RELIEF BILL.

2 & 3 VICT. CAP. XXXIII.

In Act to indemnify such persons in the United Kingdom as have omitted to qualify themselves for offices and employments, and for extending the time limited for those purposes respectively until the twenty-fifth day of March one thousand eight hundred and forty; and for the relief of Clerks to Attornies and Solicitors in certain cases.

[29th July, 1839.]

(Concluded from p. 415, vol. 2.)

VII. And be it enacted, that in case the attorney, solicitor, proctor, or notary to whom any person shall have duly served his clerkship under articles in writing for that purpose shall after such service of the clerk be struck off the roll in consequence of some defect in the service under the articles of clerkship or of the admission and enrolment of such attorney, solicitor, proctor, or notary, the person who has so duly served his clerkship shall not be prevented or disqualified from being admitted and enrolled as an attorney, solicitor, proctor, or notary, nor liable to be struck off the roll if admitted, by reason of any such defect as aforesaid, provided that such clerk or person be otherwise entitled to be admitted and enrolled according to the laws now in force relating thereto.

VIII. And be it enacted, that no person who has been admitted and enrolled, and in actual practice as an attorney, solicitor, proctor, or notary, shall be liable to be struck off the Roll for or on account of any defect in the articles of clerkship, or the registry thereof, or the service under such articles, or of his admission and enrolment, unless the application for striking him off the Roll be made within twelve months from the time of his admission and enrolment.

IX. Provided always, and be it enacted, that in any case in which the original articles of clerkship shall have been or shall hereafter be lost or destroyed before or after payment of the duty, it shall be competent to either of her Majesty's Superior Courts at Westminster, to direct the enrolment of a copy of such articles, upon being satisfied, by such evidence as shall appear to the Court sufficient to prove the loss of such original articles, the authenticity of the paper proposed for enrolment, and that the duty has been duly paid upon such articles or upon the copy thereof, to be shown by the denoting or other appropriate stamp, as the case may require, and provided such Court shall be satisfied that the clerk has duly served under such articles from the time of the execution thereof, or for such time as shall appear satisfactory to the Court under the circumstances of the case.

X. And whereas by an act passed in the seventh year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Fourth, to allow, until the 10th day of October, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, the enrolment of certain articles of clerkship, and for other purposes therein mentioned, it was enacted, that it should not be lawful for the Commissioners of Stamps, or any of their officers, to stamp, under any pretence whatever, after the expiration of six months from their date, any articles of clerkship to attornies or others, as therein specified: and whereas the using of the word "Months" in the said last-mentioned act, in this respect, without the addition of the word "Calendar," occasioned mistakes and inconveniencies; be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the word "Months" used in the said last-mentioned act, so far as the same relates to the stamping of articles of clerkship to attornies and others therein specified, shall be understood to mean calendar months.

XI. And whereas several persons bound to serve as clerks or apprentices to attornies or solicitors have applied to have the indentures or contracts of such clerkship stamped after the expiration of six lunar, and before the expiration of six calendar months from the date thereof; be it enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, or any of their proper officers, at any time before the last day of Michaelmas Term, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-nine, to stamp any articles of clerkship, contract, indenture, or other instrument whereby any person hath become bound to serve as a clerk or apprentice, in order to his admission as an attorney or solicitor in any of the courts of law or equity, although the period of six calendar months from the date thereof hath now elapsed, upon payment of the proper duty payable in respect of the same, and of the further sum of five pounds by way of penalty, provided it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said commissioners, that application was made to them or to their proper officer to have such articles, contract, indenture, or instrument, stamped within six calendar months from the date thereof.

XII. Provided always, and be it enacted, that this act or any thing herein contained shall not extend or be construed to extend to restore or entitle any person or persons to any office or employment, benefice, matter, or thing whatsoever, already actually avoided by judgment of any of her Majesty's Courts of Record, already legally filled up and enjoyed by any other person; but that such office or employment, benefice, matter, or thing, so avoided or legally filled up and enjoyed, shall be and remain in and to the person or persons who is or are now, or shall at the passing of this act, be legally entitled to the same, as if this act had never been passed.

XIII. And be it enacted, that in case any action, suit, bill of indictment, or information shall from and after the passing of this act be brought, carried on, or prosecuted against any person or persons hereby meant or intended to be indemnified, recapacitated, or restored, for or on account of any forfeiture, penalty, incapacity, or disability whatsoever, incurred, or to be incurred, by any such neglect or omission, such person or persons may plead the general issue, and upon their defence give this act and the special matter in evidence upon any trial to be had thereupon.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. In continuation of the Precedents by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq. Vol. III. Part 3. London: John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street—Nov. 1839.

Another number of this ORIGINAL WORK upon CONVEYANCING is before us, and like its predecessors is calculated to be of great benefit to the profession. Such a work has long been wanted. The present Number contains what may be termed COMMERCIAL PRECEDENTS, and among them we find the Author has stamped his work with originality by introducing a NEW FORM of Limitation applicable to POWERS of SALE. Much has been written upon the legality of these Powers now in use. The Author in a note to the New form he has introduced, says—

This is a New Form of Limitation, and is considered by the author as one of great simplicity, and well calculated to effect the intentions of the parties to such a trust, without involving them in any difficulties. The legal fee is vested (or supposed to be, with the aid of the incumbancers, who may convey that fee to the trustees, without any further concurrence of the mortgagor) in the trustees, their heirs and assigns; and the powers are to be executed by the trustees, or the survivor of them, his executors, administrators, or assigns. Since the case of Bradford v. Belfield (2 Sim. 264.) it has become of importance that the limitation should be to the assigns of the donee of the power. See also Townsend v. Wilson, 1 Barn. and Ald. 608.

It is said that a power of sale to a mortgagee, his executors or administrators, or his or their appointees or assigns, is objectionable, as tending to a perpetuity; and various new forms have been suggested to meet such a difficulty.

The only serious difficulty that has yet appeared is in the case of an infant heir, which is now remedied.

Sir Edward Sugden, in his Treatise on Powers (Vol. ii. p. 494, ed. 6.) says, as to the validity of powers of sale and exchange not re-trained to lives in being, and twenty-one years afterwards, the general practice had been not to define them, and that half the titles in the kingdom depended on the validity of such powers. That if the power were within the rule of perpetuities, the line could always be drawn, and there appeared to be no reason why it should be deemed void in its creation. Such powers appeared to be valid on the same ground that a shifting use may be limited to take effect at any period, however remote, where the estate is regularly limited in tail, because the tenant in tail may destroy the shifting use by a common recovery; yet there the estate of a tenant in tail not having suffered a recovery may be defeated together, whereas under the exercise of a power of sale and exchange, there is merely a change of title, and not a destruction of interest. In point of fact such a power enables the alienation of property without affecting the interest of the person beneficially entitled to the property; and that in the case of Boyce v. Hanning, (2 Crompt. and Jew. 334.) it was determined that such a power is valid. Upon the observation made by Sir Edward, that the power of sale did not tie up property, but enabled the alienation of it, Bayley, B. observed, (2 Crompt. and Jew. 339.) that it enabled the trustees to sell; but the owner in fee, who would otherwise be able to sell, was incapacitated. But of course this applies only to the reversioner or remainderman; and his power of alienation is not fettered, although the subject of his transfer is still liable to the conditions in the settlement (or instrument creating the trust). Sir Edward proceeds to say, that the same decision has been made in several other cases where the power was general and unrestricted; but in all of them the sale was actually made in the lifetime of the tenants for life, who were in esse at the date of the settlements. (See Biddle v. Perkins, 4 Sim. 135.; Powis v. Capron; Waring v. Coventry, ib. 138. 140. n.) The general point is set at rest; but it may still be a question during what period the power is capable of being exercised. That the power, although unlimited as to time, is good for the lives of parties living at the date of its creation; and it may be now that the power might be held further to exist for twenty-one years from the death of the survivor of the lives.

In the New form the Author has drawn the line.—UPON TRUSTS FOR SALE, he says—

A trust for sale was considered by Mr. Fearn to be ministerial, for the price is not arbitrary, or at the trustee's discretion, but to be the best that can be gotten for the estate, which is a fact to be ascertained independently of any discretion in the trustee. (F. P. W. 313.) A trust to sell for the payment of debts is a special trust, (as distinguished from a simple trust, which corresponds with the ancient use, or where property is simply vested in one person upon trust for another, and the nature of the trust, not being qualified by the settlor, is left to the construction of law; the trustee, in such case, being a mere passive depositary,) where the trustee is bound to exert himself, so to use his best exertions, not only to dispose of the trust property, but to do so to the best advantage, and obtain the best price that can be had for the benefit of the creditors. Uses, by the statute 27 Hen. 8. c. 10., became merged in the legal estate; but special trusts and trusts of chattels are not within the act;—the former, because the use as well as the legal interest was in the trustee; the latter, because the termor is said to be possessed, and not seised. Lord Hardwicke describes interests in land as being of three kinds; viz.—1st, the estate in the land itself, the ancient common law fee; 2dly, the use, which was originally a creature of equity, but since the Statute of Uses it drew the estate in the land to it, so that they were joined and made one legal estate; and 3dly, the trust, of which the common law takes no notice, but which carries the beneficial interest and profits in a court of equity, and is still a creature of that court, as the use was before the statute. (Willett v. Sandford, 1 Ves. 186.; Coryton v. Helyar, 2 Cox, 342.) Lord Mansfield said that trusts were not on a true foundation, till Lord Nottingham (who, from the sound and comprehensive principles upon which he administered trusts, has been called the father of equity) held the great seal; but by steadily pursuing from plain principles trusts in all their consequences, and by some assistance from the legislature, a noble, rational, and uniform system of law has been raised; so that trusts are now made to answer the exigencies of families and all purposes without producing one inconvenience, fraud, or private mischief, which the statute of Hen. 8. meant to avoid. A use or trust, his lordship observed, was theretofore understood to be merely as an agreement by which the trustee, and all claiming from him in privity, were personally liable to the cestui que use, and all claiming under him in like privity; nobody in the post was entitled under or bound by the agreement; but now the trust in this court is the same as the land, and the trustee is considered merely as an instrument of conveyance. See Burgess v. Wheate, 1 W. Blackst. 123., 1 Eden. 223. 226. In that case Lord Northington said, “This court has considered trusts as between the trustee, cestui que trust, and those claiming under them, as imitating the possession ; but it would be a bolder stride, and, in my opinion, a dangerous conclusion, to say therefore this court has considered the creation and instrument of trust as a mere nullity, and the estate is in all respects the same as if it still continued in the seisin of the creator of the trust, or the person entitled to it. For my own part, I know no instance where this court has permitted the creation of the trust to affect the right of a third person." (Id. 250. 251.) Under the law as it stood before the passing of the statute 4 & 5 W. 4. c. 23. (1834), intituled "An Act for the Amendment of the Law relative to the Escheat or Forfeiture of Real or Personal Property holden in trust," if a trustee of the legal estate in the fee died without an heir, the land was escheated (excidit, fell away) to the lord, who, being in title paramount, was not bound by the trust ; so where a mortgagee of the legal fee died without an heir, the mortgagor lost his estate, unless restored by the performance of the condition if no breach had been made in it ; so where a trustee or mortgagee had been attainted.

Now, by statute 11 Geo. 4. & 1 W. 4. c. 60. s. 8., where any person seised of any land upon any trust shall be out of the jurisdiction of, or not amenable to, the process of the Court of Chancery ; or it shall be uncertain, where there were several trustees, which of them was the survivor ; or it shall be uncertain whether the trustee last known to have been seised be living or dead, or, if known to be dead, it shall not be known who is his heir ; or if any trustee seised as aforesaid, or the heir of any such trustee, shall neglect or refuse to convey such land for the space of twenty-eight days next after a proper deed for making such conveyance shall have been tendered for his execution by, or by an agent duly authorized by, any person entitled to require the same ;—the Court of Chancery is empowered to direct any person in the place of the trustee or heir to convey such land to such person and in such manner as the Court shall think proper, and every such conveyance is to be as effectual as if the trustee so seised, or his heir, had made and executed the same ; and in ex parte Frier, 8 Sim. 325., where a person had been ordered to convey in the place of a refusing trustee, it was held not to be necessary that he should execute a new deed that should recite the order, but that such person might execute the deed tendered to the trustee, and that the attestation should express that such person had executed it in the place of the trustee, in pursuance of the order.

The Notes also contain a very copious interpretation of Sir Edward Sugden's Trustee Act and Lord Langdale's Amendment, and the Author shews the conflicting opinions held by the Judges upon the construction of the former Act. He also continues to animadvert upon the UNSETTLED STATE of the Law, and gives another illustration, in the want of any defined character for a Mortgagor in possession, the whole Law upon which subject will be found in this part.

Some Judges have maintained that he is a tenant at will, others that he is a tenant at sufferance, and others again have called him a receiver, a trustee, and a disseizor : the latter surely cannot apply, because his possession is not properly his own, but that of the mortgagor (2 Mer. 360). What is his proper character at this day is to be determined by the next decision that shall be made upon the question.

THE PRECEDENTS are really USEFUL, and are well adapted for practice. The TRUST DEEDS for CREDITORS, and the instructions for their application, and the DUTIES of TRUSTEES, as well as the precautions to be taken by purchasers on the purchase of property from Trustees for Sale, will be found of great service to practical men, and we do not hesitate in recommending the work to general notice.

CIRCUITS

OF THE

COMMISSIONERS FOR THE RELIEF OF INSOLVENT DEBTORS.

1839.	Northern Circuit.	Midland Circuit.	Home Circuit.	Southern Circuit.
in Circuits.	H. B. Reynolds, Esq., Chief Commissioner.	J. G. Harria, Esq. Commissioner.	T. B. Bowen, Esq. Commissioner.	W. J. Law, Esq. Commissioner.
Wed. Oct. 23	Oakham . . .	. . . . .	Dover . . .
day . 24	. . . . .	. . . . .	Canterbury .
. . 25	Sheffield . .	. . . . .	Maidstone . .
ay . 28	Wakefield . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Reading
ay . 29	. . . . .	Chelmsford .	Horsham . .	Oxford
eday . 30	. . . . .	Colchester . .	. . . . .
day . 31	. . . . .	Ipawich . . .	. . . . .	Worcester & City.
day, Nov. 2	Kingston-upon- Hull . . .	Yarmouth . .	. . . . .	Hereford
ay . . 4	. . . . .	Norwich & City.	. . . . .	Presteigne
ay . . 5	York and City	. . . . .	. . . . .	Brecon
eday . 6	. . . . .	Lynn . . . .	. . . . .
day . 7	Richmond . .	Bury St. Edmunds	. . . . .	Carmarthen and
v . . 8	Durham . . .	Cambridge . .	. . . . .	Borough.
day . 9	. . . . .	Huntingdon . .	. . . . .	Cardigan.
ay . 11	Newcastle-upon- Tyne and Town	Peterborough .	. . . . .	Haverfordwest and Town.
ay . 12	. . . . .	Lincoln & City	. . . . .
uesday . 13	Carlisle . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Swansea.
day . 14	. . . . .	Nottingh. & Town	. . . . .
y . . 15	Appleby . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Cardiff.
day . 16	Kendal . . . .	Derby . . . .	. . . . .
ay . . 18	Lancaster . .	Lichfield . . .	. . . . .	Monmouth.
ay . . 19	. . . . .	Stafford . . .	. . . . .
uesday . 20	. . . . .	. . . . .	Hertford . .	Gloucester & City
y . . 22	. . . . .	Shrewsbury . .	. . . . .
day . 23	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Bristol.
ay . . 25	. . . . .	Oldbury . . .	. . . . .
ay . . 26	Preston . . .	Birmingham .	. . . . .	Bath.
uesday . 27	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Wells.
day . 28	Liverpool . .	Warwick . . .	. . . . .
y . . 29	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Exeter and City.
day . 30	. . . . .	Coventry . . .	. . . . .
ay, Dec. 2	Chester and City	Leicester . . .	. . . . .	Plymouth.
day . 3	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Bodmin.
uesday . 4	Mold . . . . .	Northampton .	. . . . .
sday . 5	Ruthin . . . .	Bedford . . .	. . . . .
y . . 6	. . . . .	Aylesbury . . .	. . . . .	Dorchester.
day . 7	Beaumaris . .	. . . . .	. . . . .
ay . . 9	Carnarvon . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Salisbury.
day . 10	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Southampton.
uesday . 11	Dolgelly . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Winchester.
y . . 13	Welch Pool . .	. . . . .	. . . . .

EXAMINATION OF ARTICLED CLERKS.

Michaelmas Term, 1839.

We beg to call the attention of those gentlemen who are desirous of passing their Examinations to the following observations.

EXAMINERS.

One of the Masters of the COMMON PLEAS.

Mr. Austen,

Mr. Harrison,

Mr. Metcalfe,

Mr. Ranken,

} Attornies.

The Examination must take place within ten days of the Term, and it is considered that it will take place on Monday the 18th November, but of this due notice will be given in this Journal. The Rule of Court does not entitle the Candidates to such notice, or to a copy of the Questions which are annexed to the regulations made by the Judges. The Candidates will find in the two volumes of this paper just published ALL THE QUESTIONS PUT BY THE EXAMINERS AT EVERY EXAMINATION, and by reference to our Problems and the Answers, much useful information will be gained by Students of such a solid nature as by application will go far towards enabling them to pass the ordeal with little difficulty. It may not be inaptly termed a thumb screw with the screw worn out, and will not do much harm to any Candidate of small pretensions to legal knowledge.

We shall publish the Questions for the next Examination immediately after they are promulgated.

NOTICE TO ARTICLED CLERKS

SO AS TO OBTAIN ADMISSION BEFORE THE END OF THE TERM.

It is of importance that Candidates should take notice, that where the Articles of Clerkship will expire during the Term, but not until after the first seven days of Term, such articles should, nevertheless, be left at the Law Society, with answers to the questions as to due service up to the time of leaving them, and proof of the completion of the service may be given afterwards so as to obtain admission before the end of the term.

Where Candidates are out of time required by the Rule of Court for leaving their Testimonials, instead of moving the Court for leave, as hath been so often unnecessarily done, they should apply to the Examiners who have power to interfere.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

H. D. M.—We are much pleased with your communication.—You must order 25 copies of No. II., and we will meet the rest of the expense.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We call attention to our last Notice.

The Index and Title-page to Vol. II. next Saturday, price 6d.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

In the Press,
SECOND EDITION,
Shortly will be published.

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. D. LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, November 2, 1839.

The Legal Guide.

III.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1839.

[No. 2.]

LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

Essay II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.—[28th August, 1833.]

(Continued from p. 4.)

may be as well here to call the attention of our readers to the fact, that sec. 4. Mr. Pigott's Act (14 Geo. 2. c. 20.) is applicable to existing titles. That where a person or persons hath or have purchased, or shall purchase for a valuable consideration any estate or estates, in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, whereof a recovery or recoveries is, are, or were necessary to be had, in order to complete the title, such person or persons, and all claiming under him, her, or them, having been in possession of the purchased estate, or estates, from the time of such purchase, shall and may, after the end of twenty years from the time of such purchase, produce in evidence the deed or deeds, making a tenant to the writ or writs of entry, or other writs for suffering a common recovery or recoveries, and declaring the uses of a recovery or recoveries: and the deed or deeds so produced (the execution thereof being duly proved) shall, in all

VOL. III.

Courts of Law and Equity, be deemed and taken as a good and sufficient evidence for such purchaser and purchasers, and those claiming under him, her, or them, that such recovery or recoveries was or were duly suffered and perfected, according to the purport of such deed or deeds, in case no record can be found of such recovery or recoveries, or the same shall appear not to be regularly entered on record. Provided always, that the person or persons making such deed or deeds as aforesaid, and declaring the uses of a common recovery or recoveries, had a sufficient estate and power to make a tenant to such writ or writs as aforesaid, and to suffer such common recovery or recoveries. (a)

With this observation we will proceed with the new Statute.

Sect. 3 enacts, That in case any person shall, after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, be liable to levy a fine or suffer a common recovery of lands of any tenure, or to procure some other person to levy a fine or suffer a common recovery of lands of any tenure, under a covenant or agreement already entered into or hereafter to be entered into, before the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, then and in such case, if all the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery

(a) See s.s. 8. 10. & 11. of the new Statute post.

can be effected by a disposition under this Act, the person liable to levy such fine or suffer such recovery, or to procure some other person to levy such fine or suffer such recovery, shall, after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, be subject and liable under such covenant and agreement to make or to procure to be made such a disposition under this Act as will effect all the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery; but if some only of the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery can be effected by a disposition under this Act, then the person so liable to levy such fine or suffer such recovery, or to procure some other person to levy such fine or suffer such recovery as aforesaid, shall, after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, be subject and liable under such covenant or agreement to make, or procure to be made, such a disposition under this Act as will effect such of the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery as can be effected by a disposition under this Act; and in those cases where the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery, or any of them cannot be effected by any disposition under this Act, then the person so liable to levy such fine or suffer such recovery, or to procure some other person to levy such fine or suffer such recovery as aforesaid, shall, after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, be liable under such covenant or agreement to make, or to procure to be executed, some deed whereby the person intended to levy such fine or suffer such recovery shall do what he desires that such deed shall have the same operation and effect as such fine or recovery would have had if the same had been actually levied or suffered; and the deed by which such disposition shall be made shall, if none of the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery can be effected by a disposition under this Act, have the same operation and effect in every respect as such fine or recovery would have had if the same had been actually levied or suffered; but if some only of the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery can be effected by a disposition under this Act, then the deed by which such declaration shall be made shall, so far as the purposes intended to be effected by such fine or recovery cannot be effected by a disposition under this Act, have the same operation and effect in every respect as such fine or recovery would have had if the same had been actually levied or suffered.

Sec. 4 enacts, That no fine already levied in a superior Court of lands of the tenure of ancient demesne which hath not been reversed, and no fine hereafter to be levied of lands of that tenure, shall, upon a writ of deceit already brought by the Lord of the Manor of which the lands were parcel, the proceedings in which are now pending, or upon a writ of deceit which at any time after the passing of this Act may be brought by the Lord of the said Manor, be reversed as to any person except the Lord of the said Manor; and the Court shall order such fine to be vacated only as to the Lord of the said Manor; and every such fine which may be reversed as to the Lord of the said Manor upon such writ of deceit as aforesaid shall still remain as good and valid against all persons claiming under them, as such fine would have been if the same had not been reversed by such writ of deceit as aforesaid, and no common recovery already suffered in a superior Court of Lands of the Tenure of Ancient Demesne which hath not been reversed, and no common recovery hereafter to be suffered of lands of that tenure, shall, upon a writ of deceit already brought by the Lord of the Manor, of which the lands were parcel, the proceedings in which are now pending, or upon a writ of de-which at any time after the passing of this Act may be brought by the Lord of the said Manor, be reversed as to any person except the Lord of the said Manor; and the Court shall order such recovery to be vacated only to the Lord of the said Manor; and every such recovery which may be reversed as to the Lord of the said Manor upon such writ of deceit as aforesaid shall still remain as good and valid against and as binding upon the vouchees therein, and all persons claiming under them, as such recovery would have been if the same had not been reversed by such writ of deceit as aforesaid.

Sec. 5 enacts, That if at any time before or after the passing of this Act a fine or common recovery shall have been levied or suffered, or shall be levied or suffered in a superior Court, of lands of the tenure of ancient demesne, and subsequently to the levying or suffering thereof a fine or common recovery shall have been or shall be levied or suffered of the same lands in the Court of the Lord of the Manor of which the lands have been previously parcel, and the fine or common recovery levied or suffered in such superior Court shall not have been reversed previously to the levying of the fine or the suffering of the common recovery in the Lord's Court, then and in every such case the fine or common recovery levied or suffered in the Lord's Court shall, notwithstanding any alteration or change of the tenure by the levying or common recovery previously levied or suffered in the superior Court, be as good, valid, and binding as the same would have been if the tenure had not been altered or changed; and that in every other case where a fine or common recovery shall at any time before the passing of this Act have been levied or suffered in a Court whose jurisdiction does not extend to the lands of which such fine or recovery shall have been levied or suffered, such fine or recovery shall not be invalid in consequence of its having been levied or suffered in such Court, and such Court shall be deemed a Court of sufficient jurisdiction for all the purposes of such fine or recovery; and in every other case where persons shall have assumed to hold Courts in which fines or common recoveries have been levied or suffered, and such Courts shall be unlawful or held without due authority, the fines or common recoveries which at any time before the passing of this Act may have been levied or suffered in such unlawful or unauthorised Courts shall not be invalid in consequence of their having been levied or suffered therein, and such Courts shall be deemed Courts of sufficient jurisdiction for all the purposes of such fines or recoveries.

Sec. 6 enacts, That in every case in which at any time, either before or after the passing of this Act, the tenure or ancient demesne has been or shall be suspended or destroyed by the levying of a fine, or the suffering of a common recovery of lands of that tenure in a superior Court, and the Lord of the Manor of which the lands at the time of levying such fine or suffering such recovery were parcel, shall not reverse the same before the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, and shall not by any law in force on the first day of this session of Parliament be barred of his right to reverse the same, such lands, provided within the last twenty years immediately preceding the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, the rights of the Lord of the Manor of which they shall have been parcel shall in any manner have been acknowledged or recognized as to the same lands, shall, from the said first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, again become parcel of the said manor, and be subject to the same heriots, rents, and services, as they would have been subject to if such fine or recovery had not been levied or suffered; and no writ of deceit for the reversal of any fine or common recovery shall be brought after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three.

Sec. 7 enacts, That if it shall be apparent, from the deed declaring the uses of any fine already levied, or hereafter to be levied, that there is in the indentures, record, or any of the proceedings of such fine, any error in the name of the conusor or conusee of such fine, or any misdescription or omission of lands intended to have been passed by such fine, then and in every such case the fine, without any amendment of the indenture, record, or proceedings in which such error, misdescription, or omission shall have occurred, shall be as good and valid as the same would have been, and shall be held to have passed all the lands intended to have been passed thereby, in the same manner as it would have done if there had been no such error, misdescription, or omission.

Sec. 8 enacts That if it shall be apparent, from the deed making the grant to the writ of entry or other writ for recovering a common recovery already suffered or hereafter to be suffered that there is in the exemplification thereof or any of the proceedings of such recovery any error in the name of the tenant, donor, or receiver of such recovery, or any misdirection or omission of name in relation to have been proved by such recovery, then and in every such case the court to which the proceedings of the exemplification thereof are presented up in which such error, misdirection or omission shall have appeared shall be as good and valid as if such error, misdirection or omission had not been made and shall be held to be as valid as the original deed in every respect thereto. I am signed William W. Phelps Secy of the Court.

The 1st of January 1900 was a day of great rejoicing in the city of London. The people were very happy and the streets were filled with flowers and bunting.

THE REAL PROPERTY TREE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,— In again intruding upon your kindness after a long silence, (but during which time I have not been an inattentive spectator of “passing events,” though circumstances have prevented my being as active in the “good cause” as I could have wished,) I beg to forward for your kind consideration the accompanying “Legal Tree,” being a sort of analysis of the Principal Estates in Real Property, and shewing at one glance their relative situations and derivations. I took the idea from the Tree of the Greek Verbs, and constructed it for my own use and convenience, while reading up the laws of Real Property this vacation, and much time and trouble has it saved me, while the thought, that it may prove of like service to many of your correspondents, has induced me to trouble you with these lines, to introduce it to your notice; and, should it meet with your approbation and not interfere with your arrangements, the insertion of this “Tree” (which I have never before seen applied to legal subjects) will not, I flatter myself be without its use among the excellent matter which weekly fills your valuable Journal, while at the same time it will confer an obligation on myself.

* In some cases some important witnesses

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 84

THEY ARE NOT TO BE USED FOR ANY OTHER PURPOSES.

JUNE 20-1968

Arvins falstanger bare medle rindst:

THE SECRET SERVICE

THE CHINA ILLUSION

~~Transmit to the following:~~

I remain, Sir,

YOUR ADVANTAGE SERVICE

E. D. M.

6. The Government's Position

57. ~~2000~~

PROBLEM II.

Vol. 3.

CONTRACT.

When it is to be performed.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM I.

VOL. III.

Chattel Interests.—What is a Chattel?

Under the word "Chattels," are included sorts of things moveable which may attend a man's person wherever he goes; nor such a regard paid to them by the law as things which are in their nature more permanent. It was originally derived from the Latin word "catalla," signifying beasts of husbandry, but in its more extended sense, is used to signify all sorts of moveables. Chattels are of two kinds, real and personal. Chattels real are such as issue out of, or are annexed to, real estates, of which they have one quality, viz. immobility, which predominates them "real;" but want the other, viz. a sufficient legal indeterminate duration, and this want it is that constitutes them "Chattels." Such are a lease for years, a Presentation to a Church, &c.

Chattels personal are, properly and strictly speaking, things moveable, which may be annexed to, or attendant upon, the person of the owner, and carried about with him. Such are cattle, furniture, wearing apparel, &c.

—2 Blackstone's Comm.

J. S.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Nov. 4.

APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF REVIEW.

Ex parte ROWE.

PERSEDEAS—PRACTICE—Whether the time of affixing the Great Seal to a Fiat is to be considered the time of issuing, so as to bind the property of the Bankrupt, and establish the legality of the Bankruptcy as required by 6 Geo. 4. c. 16. sec. 6.*

In this case the bankrupt, on the 5th of March, signed a declaration of insolvency, which he inserted in the London Gazette, under the provisions of the 6th sec. of the stat. 6. Geo. 4. c. 16. The docket was struck on the 4th of May following, and the fiat was dated on that day, but it was not delivered to the solicitor to the commission until the 6th of May. The bankrupt petitioned the Court of Review for a supersedeas, on the ground that the fiat was not issued within two months from the commission of the act of bankruptcy, as required by the Bankrupt Act, which petition was dismissed by that Court, and the present appeal was brought. The question was, whether the commission issued within two months after the act of bankruptcy, agreeably to the direction of the Bankrupt Act.

Mr. Swanston, for the petitioner, contended that the commission ought to be superseded, as the petitioner had made a declaration of insolvency on the 5th of March, whereas the fiat was not issued until the 6th of May.

Mr. Bethell, for the respondents, contended that "sealing" was "issuing," as applied to a commission, 14 Ves. 80; and here the fiat had been sealed and bore date on the 4th of May, although it was not taken by the solicitor from the office till the 6th.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, he was bound to take the facts to be as stated in the special case, that the fiat bore date the 4th of May, and that the docket had been struck on that day. The question was, when was the great seal applied to the fiat? There was nothing in the special case to cause him to doubt that the great seal was affixed to the fiat the day of its date. The petitioning creditor did all that he could do—he lodged the docket, and he applied for the fiat all in due time. Was he to be answerable for any delay in delivering the commission to him. From the time the great seal was applied to the fiat, the property was bound by it; suing out a commission was the application for it, and the issuing was the affixing the great seal, both of which had been done within two months. His Lordship said, he had no doubt that the terms of sec. 6. of the Bankrupt Act had been sufficiently complied with.

Petition dismissed without costs.

Nov. 4.

Appeal from the Court of Review.

Ex parte TERREWEST in re POYNTER, a Bankrupt.

USURY LAWS—Purposes of the Stat. 3 & 4 W. c. 98—Whether an Agreement to pay £10. per cent. for money for a period not* exceeding 18 months upon Bills, to be renewed every 3 months during that time, is Usurious.

The petitioner, Mr. Reuben Terrewest, a solicitor, claimed to be a creditor of the bankrupt for £1,137. the balance of principal and interest upon a promissory note due at the date of the fiat against the bankrupt. The note was dated in August, 1835, and was for the sum of £1,600. payable three months after date. The appellant petitioned the Court of Review to be allowed to prove for the said balance with interest. That court decided that the note in question was given as a security for a pre-existing debt, and that no money was in fact advanced thereon, but that the debt mentioned in the note was for money lent long before for an indefinite time, but not to exceed 18 months, the borrower agreeing to pay interest at the rate of £10. per cent. per annum, and that a series of such notes should be given and renewed every three months, and the note in question was the last of the series, and that the notes so given were a contrivance to evade the laws against usury. The Court of Review, having so adjudged, dismissed the petition. (a)

Mr. Wigram, for the appellant, contended that the note in question was protected by the act 3d and 4th Geo. IV. c. 98, which allowed any interest, however large, to be taken on bills of exchange and promissory notes, not exceeding three months from their date. There was no agreement to bind the petitioner to renew the bill. It did happen that he did renew three or four times, at the request of the bankrupt. There was a verbal understanding that he would so renew, if requested, but there was no agreement binding on either party.

Mr. Swanston, for the respondents, submitted that the note was void, and was merely colourable to evade the statutes against usury. The special case found that the bankrupt, being in want of money, agreed with Mr. Terrewest for the advance at 10 per cent., with an understanding that a bill should be given for the amount, and renewed every three months for an indefinite period, not exceeding 18 months. The bill in question was the last of the series, and was not rendered valid by the recent statute, which only applied to discounting or negotiating bills, and not to securities for antecedent debts.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said he had no doubt either upon the case or the law. If the argument of the respondents prevailed, the statute would not protect one of the most ordinary of mercantile transactions—namely, renewing a bill, if more than 5 per cent. were taken. He thought this was just the case the Legislature had in view, and they had appeared carefully to extend the protection to all bills not having more than three months to run. There was nothing in the agreement which prevented the plaintiff from suing upon the first bill, if he had not felt disposed to renew it according to the understanding. The case stated that the arrangement was for the purpose of evading the usury laws, but the very object of the recent statute was to relieve against them. There was no intention here to evade the law of the land, and he found no contract for a loan independently of the bill, which was perfectly legal. Perhaps the party who wished to renew a bill which he was unable to pay was one of those who needed the assistance of the statute most. The decision of the Court of Review must be reversed.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.—Nov. 2.

HALES v. DAY.

Act for abolishing Arrest for Debt on mesne process, s. s. 14. and 18.—Judgment at law made available against assets in the Court of Chancery.

Mr. C. Barker applied to the Court ex parte for a rule to shew cause why a sum of money, standing in the name of the Accountant-General of the Court to the separate account of the defendant Day, should not be charged with the amount of a judgment at law obtained against him in the Court of Exchequer. The learned counsel stated, that he made this application to the Court under the powers given to the Court by the 14th and 18th sections of the Act for the Abolition of Imprisonment for Debt upon mesne process.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, having minutely perused the provisions of the act, said he considered the Court had the power to make the order, and granted the rule nisi.

In re MRS. TAYLOR.

CUSTODY of INFANTS' BILL, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 54. (a)—First application under this new Act.—PRACTICE.—Whether the Court will order substitution of service of the Petition on the Husband's Solicitor.

Mr. K. Bruce said, that he was instructed to apply to the Court on behalf of a married lady, for an order of access to her children, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, passed last session, namely, the 2nd and 3rd of Vict. 1.

(a) See this case reported ante, Vol. ii. p. 12.

(a) See post, p. 28.

s. 54. intitled, "An Act for Amending the law relating to the Custody of Infants." The circumstances under which the present petition was filed were these:—The lady in question, about two years ago, left her home and separated from her husband, under an impression—of the accuracy of which he would say nothing—of her husband's misconduct on the part of her husband, which had been communicated to her by a person who was then supposed to be very friendly to her. Circumstances afterwards came to the lady's knowledge, which induced her certainly to doubt the accuracy of the representations made to her to their full extent, and she, therefore, being painfully anxious about her children, was desirous to return home to her husband, and to be reconciled to him. With that view she wrote him several letters of submission, declaring therein her anxious desire to return to her family. None of these communications did she receive an answer, with the exception of a suggestion that all further communication should be addressed to his solicitor. The lady had addressed similar communications to her husband's solicitors, but the only answer she received from them was that they had received no instructions to act in the matter. Prior to the Act passing under which this application was made to the Court, the lady instituted a suit in the Consistory Court against her husband for the restitution of conjugal rights, to which the husband put in an allegation, alleging that his wife had voluntarily left her home, and had made false charges of misconduct against him. The Judge of the Consistory Court dismissed the husband's allegation, being of opinion that the lady was fully entitled to be restored to her home. That sentence was appealed against in the Court of Arches, but the sentence of the Court below was affirmed. Subsequently, the husband had appealed to the Privy Council, and that appeal was now pending; so that up to the present moment the lady had obtained no relief under the decree of the Consistory Court; and during the whole of this time she had suffered the greatest pain and anxiety in being kept from seeing her six children, of whom were young. It was under these circumstances that the present petition was presented to the Court under the new Act.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR asked if the husband had been served with the petition.

Mr. K. Bruce said that he had mentioned the matter now for the purpose of asking the Court to allow substitution of service of the petition upon the husband's solicitors. The husband was a gentleman of large fortune, and had a dwelling-house at Southgate, in the vicinity of London. He was also a partner in a brewery at Limehouse, and had a country-seat at Gilsborough, in Northamptonshire. He had been seen at his house at Southgate about the 10th of October last; since then inquiries had been made by the lady's solicitor at the various residences of her husband, with a view of serving him with the petition, but neither he nor the children were to be found anywhere. It was supposed that he had gone abroad, and the affidavits stated, that he kept out of the way on purpose to avoid being served with this petition. The husband's solicitors had been applied to to accept service, but they declined, saying they had received no instructions.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR asked if he had any jurisdiction under the new Act to make an order to substitute service.

Mr. K. Bruce.—The Court had jurisdiction according to its own rules of practice, but the Act in question said nothing about service of the petition, so that the Court might make the order upon the petition itself ex parte.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, that would not be altogether consistent with justice. He could easily conceive that there might occur such a gross case as might induce the Court to make an order ex parte, on the ground of necessity; but he could not at present say that this was such a case as that, until he had had an opportunity of reading through all the affidavits. When he had done so, he would state what his opinion was.

The matter was then ordered to stand over for the present.

This is the first application which has been made under the new Act.

Nov. 2.

MEINERTZHAGEN v. DAVIS AND OTHERS.

PRACTICE—NEW ORDERS of the Court of Chancery, issued under the Stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110.—CONSTRUCTION of the 5th ORDER. (a)—TRUSTEES liabilities.

Mr. K. Bruce applied for an order of reference to the Master to inquire into the validity of the appointment of new trustees in this case in substitution of the original trustees, and also for the Master to inquire as to whether the trust fund comprised in the settlement was now invested in any government stock or securities in America or in this country, according to the trust declared in the deed of settlement; and the notice of motion further asked that the defendant Davis should within a certain time transfer into Court the sum of £5,000. exchequer bills, which by the answer was admitted to be in his possession. This motion was made in pursuance of the terms of the fifth order of the last "new orders in chancery." The learned counsel stating that those preliminary inquiries were rendered absolutely necessary under the circumstances of this case, in order that the Court might thereby be better enabled to decide upon the respective rights of the parties, when the cause should come before the Court for hearing. It appears that by the marriage settlement of a Mr. and Mrs Warwick, a sum of £7,000. stock was vested in a trustee, to be laid out in government stock or securities, or upon real estate, as it was alleged, in this country. Some time after the marriage, Mr. and Mrs Warwick, being connected with America, were desirous of having the trust fund invested in the government stock of the United States. To that transfer of the fund the original trustee declined to accede, and in 1831, at the request of Mr. and Mrs. Warwick, the original trustee relinquished the trust, and a new deed appointing three American trustees, was executed, one of whom only, it was alleged, had executed the deed, and the trust fund was subsequently transferred to America and invested in the government stock of that country. The original trustee, who was a defendant to the suit, being some time after this transfer of the trust fund by the new trustees, advised that he might be rendered liable to make good the trust fund, in case of loss, as there existed great doubts as to the validity of the deed of substitution of new trustees under which he had parted with the trust fund, applied to Mr. Warwick to remit him a sum of money to be invested by him as an indemnity in case he should be called upon to restore the trust fund. Mr. Warwick deposited with him accordingly certain tobacco warrants to be held by him as an indemnity, and those warrants he had since sold, and had invested the proceeds in a sum of £5,000. exchequer bills. Mr. Warwick, it was alleged, had since become a bankrupt, and his assignees had filed this bill with a view of having the £5,000. exchequer bills paid over to them by the original trustee. Under those circumstances it was submitted that the rights of the parties could not be properly decided upon at the hearing, unless those preliminary inquiries as to the validity of the substitution of new trustees and the present position of the trust fund were had.

(a) See ante, Vol. ii. p. 78.

Mr. Jacob opposed the motion, contending that no clear case for the necessity of such preliminary inquiries had been made out; besides, the new trustees, although defendants to the suit, were out of the jurisdiction. They had no objection to that part of the motion which asked for the transfer of the £5,000. exchequer bills into Court.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that it appeared to him that the notice of motion was certainly made in a manner not consistent with what was expressed in the 5th of the late new orders. Having read the 5th order, his Honour said that he was of opinion that no case had been made out, either showing the necessity for those preliminary inquiries, or that they would be useful to the Court at the hearing of the cause. Upon a fair construction of the object of the 5th of the late new orders, he was of opinion that that order was made to apply only to clear cases, and not to cases like the present. The Court, in granting such a reference, had to see that the result would not only be useful at the hearing, but would also bind all the parties to the suit. It was quite obvious that those defendants who were out of the jurisdiction might, in the mean time, if the order of reference were granted, come within the jurisdiction, and, by answering, render all that might be done under the reference useless. It certainly appeared to him that the fair and legitimate object of the order was, that the Court should only grant those preliminary inquiries in cases in which the Court should be satisfied that if the cause was actually at the hearing, those inquiries would be necessary. Upon this notice of motion he was of opinion he could make no order, under the terms of the 5th order, against those defendants who had not appeared, and who were out of the jurisdiction. He must, therefore, refuse the motion as to the order of reference.

Mr. Jacob then consented to the £5,000. exchequer bills being transferred into Court.

ROLLS' COURT.—Nov. 5.

HICKS v. KEAT.

SOLICITOR'S LIEN for COSTS upon DEEDS in his custody, distinguished as between Deeds belonging to the person that employed him, and Deeds belonging to another party.

In this case, which came on upon exceptions to the Master's report, it appeared that in December, 1833, Henry Gray Keat, who was possessed of several leasehold houses, died intestate, leaving his widow and one son, Ebenezer, surviving, and that Ebenezer alone took out letters of administration. Mrs. Keat, who as widow was entitled to one-third of the intestate's property, died soon after the death of her husband, leaving a will, dated January 8, 1834, by which she bequeathed various legacies, amounting to about £1,200, and appointed the plaintiff her executor, who proved the will. Ebenezer Keat employed Homfray as his solicitor in the affairs of the intestate, and in completing the sales of se-of the leasehold houses of the intestate, the deeds of these houses came into the possession of Homfray as such solicitor. In December, 5, Ebenezer Keat became bankrupt, being at that time indebted to Homfray in £400. and upwards for costs. The plaintiff, as executor of Mrs. Keat, the widow of the intestate, filed a bill for the administration of the estate of Henry Keat, the intestate, to one-third of which the plaintiff, as executor, was entitled, and in the course of the suit an application was made to the Court for an inquiry into the lien which Homfray claimed on the deeds, and a reference was directed, on which the Master reported that Homfray had no lien, to which report exceptions were taken.

The plaintiff's solicitor had applied to Ebenezer Keat for money to pay the legacies given by Mrs. Keat's will, and Homfray deposited with him the leases of two houses of the intestate, one in Albany and the other in Cleveland-street. The house in Albany-street was afterwards sold, and the purchase money, £500., was paid to the plaintiff's solicitors in part of Mrs. Keat's legacies, and the lease of another house in Brooke-street was deposited with the plaintiff's solicitors, in part of the legacies bequeathed by Mrs. Keat, which remained unpaid. It was argued for the exceptions that Homfray, as solicitor to Ebenezer Keat, had a lien for his costs on all the deeds deposited with him by his client. For the plaintiff it was contended that there could be no lien against Homfray as he never employed Homfray, or deposited deeds with him.

Lord LANGDALE said, Homfray being possessed of the deeds as solicitor of Ebenezer Keat, could not have a lien upon them, but that lien could be upon the interest of the person who employed him; a solicitor could not have a lien upon any thing to which other parties were entitled. The right of Homfray was narrowed by the transactions which had taken place. There was a deposit of some of the documents with the plaintiff's solicitors to secure what the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and this deposit was made through the agency of Homfray. Homfray had no right to derogate from the security given by the deposit, nor had he any right to withhold documents tending to make that security available, or to retain any deeds which he afterwards acted upon relating to the same security, for he had a lien upon them as against the plaintiff. With regard to the documents respecting the houses in Cleveland-street and Brooke-street, Homfray had a lien whatever. As to the other property, the plaintiff had no interest in it. It was, however, a different question whether Homfray had a lien against the assignees of Ebenezer Keat. The plaintiff, with the plaintiff's solicitors was to secure his share of the property to which the plaintiff was entitled as executor of Mrs. Keat, but, subject to that interest of the plaintiff, Homfray had a lien. The plaintiff was right in maintaining that there was no lien against him, but he was not satisfied that the Master was right in reporting generally against the lien, and he would consider whether Homfray had not such a lien as would be good against Ebenezer Keat or his assignees, after satisfying the claim of the plaintiff Hicks.

Nov. 6.

Lord LANGDALE said, that as against the plaintiff Hicks Mr. Homfray had no right to retain the deeds; but that as against Ebenezer Keat or his assignees there must be reserved to Homfray any lien he might have. The exceptions to the Master's report with respect to the plaintiff must be overruled; but the lien of Homfray against Ebenezer Keat or his assigns must be reserved.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—Nov. 2.

REGINA v. STEWARD OF THE MANOR OF RICHMOND.

COPYHOLDS—MANDAMUS PRACTICE—Where the Queen is Lady of the Manor, whether this Writ should be directed to the Steward or the Lady of the Manor.*

The Attorney-General showed cause against a rule calling upon the steward of this manor to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not be directed to him commanding him to admit a party to some copyhold property within the manor; he would, however, take a preliminary objection. This was a mandamus directed only to the steward, whereas it should have been a mandamus to the lord or lady of the manor. In the present instance, Queen Victoria was the lady of the manor, and therefore, as her Majesty could not be served with a mandamus, the remedy was by petition of right. Upon this ground he submitted the rule must be discharged.

Sir W. Follett, in support of the rule, contended, that as the Queen was lady of the manor, no one could admit but the steward; it was a ministerial, not a voluntary act; the Crown could not interfere; it was in the power of the steward to exercise a discretion, and the writ, therefore, he submitted, was properly directed to the steward.

Nov. 4.

Lord DENMAN gave the judgment of the Court. His Lordship said, that in ordinary cases it had been then held that it was not enough to serve the writ upon the steward, and it must be served upon the lord of the manor as well as upon the steward; but with respect to a Crown manor there might be a difference to that general rule, and in this case the Court considered the steward to be a statutable officer, which made such a difference that the writ ought to go.

Writ ordered accordingly.

ULLITHORNE v. CASS.

PRACTICE—NEGLECT OF AN ATTORNEY, not being in Court when cause called on, and Plaintiff called. Whether relief will be granted under special circumstances.

Mr. Humfrey moved for a rule to show cause why the nonsuit which had been entered in this case should not be set aside and a new trial had. The facts were these:—This case was set down No. 8 in the common jury list, on the last day of the sittings, there being four special jury cases also entered. The clerk to the attorney seeing this, and thinking he was safe until the after part of the day, went to receive a considerable sum of money to which he was entitled in right of his wife before he repaired to Westminster-hall. On his arrival at the court he found, that although two counsel had been employed, neither had been present; and as he himself was also absent, the plaintiff had been called. The learned counsel hoped that under these circumstances the Court would grant his application.

Lord DENMAN said that the Court felt that it ought not to listen to applications of this nature; neither the two counsel who had been employed nor the attorney's clerk were in attendance. The party must bring another action.

Rule refused.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Nov. 5.

ADCOCK v. FISKE.

OUTLAWRY.—Whether the Court for relief of Insolvent Debtors has the power to reverse an Outlawry, in discharging an Insolvent under the Act for the Abolition of Arrest for Debt, without the consent of the Court.

Mr. Serjeant Wilde, for the defendant, applied to the Court for an order that he might be discharged from custody, instead of his being charged in execution at the suit of the plaintiff, who had obtained a judgment of outlawry against the defendant, and had brought him up in custody to be charged in execution in the usual manner, on the ground that the defendant had been discharged from the judgment by the adjudication of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, where he had been heard upon his petition and discharged under the Act.

Mr. Kelly, for the plaintiff, contended that the Insolvent Debtors' Court had no power to reverse an outlawry, at all events without the consent of the Crown, which had an immediate interest in the goods of the outlaw. The question was whether the outlawry was reversed by the decision of the Insolvent Court, for if not, there could be no doubt that the plaintiff was entitled to charge the defendant in execution.

The COURT observed, that this was an application, in the ordinary course, to bring a party up to have him charged in execution upon a judgment; but it appeared that he had been already discharged in respect of this action, so far as his person was concerned, by the Insolvent Debtors' Court. The answer given to that was that the defendant was an outlaw; but that point was disposed of by the case of "The Queen v. The Commissioners of the Insolvent Debtors' Court." The words in the Act, "any process whatsoever," were large enough to include the process of outlawry.

Ultimately the defendant was discharged, the Court being of opinion that he being brought before them on writ of habeas corpus, and there being no ground for detaining him, he was entitled to his discharge.

BAIL COURT.—Nov. 2.

GIBBS v. GREGG.

OUTLAWRY—previous to the Act for abolishing Arrest for Debt on mesne process.—PRACTICE—SHERIFF LAW.

Mr. Watson moved for an attachment against the Sheriff of Bristol for not taking bail of the defendant when in custody under a writ of capias utlagatum. The outlawry of defendant had taken place before the act of the 1st of Victoria, c. 110, and the application was made under the 4th and 5th of William and Mary, c. 18, s. 5, which requires that when, according to practice, an action is bailable, the sheriff, upon a capias utlagatum, must take the defendant's bail, double the sum at issue, for his appearance in court; but where the action is not bailable, he might take the attorney's bail as for a common appearance. This was a bailable action, as the sheriff was aware; but he was satisfied to take the bail of Mr. Bevan, an attorney of Bristol. The learned counsel cited a case in point from the 3d Bur. p. 1482.—Granted.

Nov. 4.

TICLED CLERKS.—Notices for Admission.

ANONYMOUS.

Mr. Humfrey applied, on the part of a gentleman who desired to be called as an attorney in court, to obtain an indulgence to the following purport, and under these circumstances:—It is necessary that any person desirous of being an attorney should give notice to that effect three days before the commencement of the term preceding that on which the examination call were intended to take place. In this instance such notice had been served before Hilary Term last past, but, unfortunately, his lordship had been compelled to leave town, in consequence of the severe and dangerous illness of a relative; and he now begged of the Court to allow the notice given to serve for his call in Hilary, instead of this term.

Mr. Justice LITLEDALE observed, that it was of importance that the rules of the court, in relation to such matters as this, should be adhered to as closely as possible. There did not appear on the part of the applicant a sufficient case made out to sustain his object. Why could he not wait up for a couple of days for the examination, which took place towards the end of term? The affidavit in the case did not state how the illness of the applicant's sister could keep him till then out of town, or hinder him from coming up.

Mr. Humfrey said that he should inquire into the circumstances to which his lordship alluded, and for the present declined pressing his application.

SOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.—Nov. 5.

HENRY WHITEMAN'S CASE.

Whether an Insolvent out upon Bail, and having petitioned the Court is discharged, and his detaining Creditor while so out of custody, can be heard upon his Petition.

This insolvent had been out on bail: last night the discharge at the suit of the detaining creditor was lodged at Whitecross-street Prison. The insolvent, however, appeared this morning to pray his discharge under the Act.

The COURT said, they could not assist the insolvent. It was a hardship upon him, after the expense to which he had been put, that the creditor should send his discharge, instead of appearing to oppose him; but, as he had been out on bail when the discharge was lodged, they could not assist him.

In cases where the parties have been actually in prison, the Court, under similar applications, have, under the new Act, afforded the assistance prayed.

BRENTFORD PETTY SESSIONS.

Nov. 2.

RANGERSHIP OF BUSHY PARK—Right of the Ranger (HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN DOWAGER) to pursue and kill game upon Hounslow Heath, now become private property. (a)

This case was again heard by adjournment from October 12, before COLONEL CLITHEROW (CHAIRMAN), and MESSRS. POWNALL, BAILLIE, and ARMSTRONG, the sitting magistrates.

Colonel CLITHEROW inquired if any answer had been received from the office of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, as to whether it was the intention of the law officers of the Crown to maintain the claim which had been set up.

Mr. Kirby replied that he had communicated with the Commissioners on the subject, but had, up to his leaving town that morning, received no answer from them.

Mr. Rees apprehended, from a communication he had received from Mr. Kirby, that the Queen Dowager had no intention to interfere at all in the matter. It also would appear that the Commissioners of Woods and Forests did not intend to interfere, or some person would have attended to maintain the claim on the part of the Crown. The case, therefore, resolved itself into a common trespass. It had been contended that it came under the 35th section of the act:—Be it enacted, that the aforesaid provisions against trespassers, and persons found on any land, shall not extend to any person found hunting or coursing upon any lands with hounds or greyhounds, and being in fresh pursuit of any deer, hare, or fox, already started upon any other land, nor to any person bona fide claiming or exercising any right, or reputed right, of free warren or free chase, nor to any land or any steward of the Crown, of any manor, lordship, or royalty, nor to any gamekeeper lawfully appointed by such lord or steward, within the limits of such manor, lordship, or royalty, or reputed manor, lordship, or royalty." He would, however, contend, that gamekeepers could only be protected in their just rights while they were acting legally. Gamekeepers were bound to know the limits of their deputations, and not to trespass beyond them as the defendants had done. That clause of the act was not intended to apply in cases of common trespass, but only to the cases of gentlemen who had it in their power to repay any damage they might commit. It was clear from the loose manner in which the letters patent stated the right of free warren to exist—viz. from Staines-bridge to Brentford-bridge, that the Crown would not and could not set up a claim. It was also clear that Isleworth, in which parish the locus in quo was situated, was not mentioned in the letters patent, and that the free warren of the manor of Isleworth Sion is vested in his Grace the Duke of Northumberland. He must, therefore, for the protection of the gentlemen in that portion of the county of Middlesex and of their property, apply to the Bench for a conviction against Mr. Sawyer, there being no evidence that he had any right on the premises in question.

(a) See the two previous hearings of this case, reported ante vol. ii. pp. 379, 384.

Colonel CLITHEROW differed in opinion. The letters patent had been produced, and evidence given that the gamekeeper had been in the habit of shooting over the limits therein named for the last thirty years.

Mr. Rees contended that had not been proved. What had been said was, that they had shot there. But there was no proof that their doing so was not a trespass. They had also said they had shot over Hanworth, where they had clearly no right at all.

Mr. Clark (clerk to the magistrates) said, it was evident from the arguments adduced, that two claims had been set up, and he would put it to the parties whether it was possible the justices could decide where there were conflicting rights?

Mr. ARMSTRONG said—The defendant Sawyer was charged with a trespass, in answer to which he declared he had a right to shoot on the property in question, and his solicitor contended that the Bench had no power to interfere in the case. In his (Mr. Armstrong's) opinion, the 42d clause bore that out, and that the exemption was clearly proved.

Mr. Rees contended that the clause quoted by the worthy magistrate told against the defendant.

Mr. ARMSTRONG considered it told in favour of the defendant. At any rate, he had proved that he had the colour of an authority, and such an one as clearly gave him the colour of a right. He therefore was of opinion that the Bench could not interfere in the matter, and that the summons must be dismissed.

Mr. Rees said, if that was the intention of the Bench, he must say he wished it to be properly stated, as he must consequently apply by mandamus to the Court of Queen's Bench.

Mr. ARMSTRONG said he was only expressing his individual opinion.

Mr. POWNALL considered if the matter appeared before them as a question of right, there could be no difficulty in deciding it. It was clear that the Duke of Northumberland had a right to the free warren of the manor of Isleworth Sion, and it was only in the Hampton Enclosure Act that the right of free warren was reserved to the Crown. The Isleworth and Heston Enclosure Acts contained no such reservations, while that of Bedfont gave a clear right of free warren to the Duke of Northumberland; part of which ground abutted on the road from Staine's-bridge to Brentford-bridge. The 35th section, in his (Mr. Pownall's) opinion, clearly shut out the Bench from deciding on such a case; for, a clear colour of claim of right having been proved on the part of the defendant Sawyer, it was the duty of the Bench to send the case to a higher tribunal. With regard to the defendant Nichol, it appeared to him that the defendant Sawyer said, "I have a right, and Mr. Nichol being my friend, I took him with me."

The BENCH then having shortly conferred together, decided that they had no jurisdiction in the case, and dismissed the summons.

The case of Mr. Nichol was then called on, and his name being called without any answer being returned,

Colonel CLITHEROW said, Mr. Nichol had pleaded guilty on his first appearance.

Mr. Rees said, that fact proved that the Queen Dowager's gamekeeper was in his (Mr. Nichol's) opinion a trespasser.

Mr. POWNALL could not take that as a proof.

Mr. Dawe said, he had no wish to press for a heavy penalty against Mr. Nichol, whom he did not doubt had been misled by Mr. Sawyer.

The BENCH then inflicted a nominal fine of 5s. with costs.

The question, it was understood, will be carried immediately to the superior courts, as the decision will be of considerable importance to the landowners and inhabitants of that portion of Middlesex.

CUSTODY OF INFANTS' BILL.

2 and 3 Vict. Cap. LIV.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Custody of Infants. [17th August, 1839.]

Whereas it is expedient to amend the law relating to the custody of infants: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That after the passing of this Act it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor and the Master of the Rolls in England, and for the Lord Chancellor and the Master of the Rolls in Ireland, respectively, upon hearing the petition of the mother of any infant or infants being in the sole custody or control of the father of or of any person by his authority, or of guardian after the death of the father, if he shall see fit, to make order for the access of the petitioner to such infant or infants, at such times and subject to such regulations as he shall deem convenient and just; and if such infant or infants shall be within the age of seven years, to make order that such infant or infants shall be committed to and remain in the custody of the petitioner until attaining such age, subject to such regulations as he shall deem convenient and just.

II. And be it enacted, That on all complaints made under this Act it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor or the Master of the Rolls in England, and for the Lord Chancellor or the Master of the Rolls in Ireland, to receive affidavits sworn before any Master in Ordinary or Master Extraordinary of the Court of Chancery; that any person who shall depose falsely or corruptly in any affidavit so sworn shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and incur the penalties thereof.

III. And be it enacted, That all orders which shall be made by virtue of this Act by the Lord Chancellor or the Master of the Rolls in England, and by the Lord Chancellor or the Master of the Rolls in Ireland, shall be enforced by process of contempt of the High Court of Chancery in England and Ireland respectively.

IV. Provided always, and be it enacted, That no order shall be made by virtue of this Act, whereby any mother against whom adultery shall be established, by judgment in an action for criminal conversation at the suit of her husband, or by the sentence of an Ecclesiastical Court, shall have the custody of any infant or access to any infant, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

V. And be it enacted, That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed during this present Session of Parliament.

EQUITY SITTINGS IN MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

Before the LORD CHANCELLOR at Westminster.

|                |    |   |   |                                         |
|----------------|----|---|---|-----------------------------------------|
| Saturday, Nov. | 2  | - | - | Appeal Motions and Adjourned Petitions. |
| Monday, „      | 4  | - | - | Petition Day.                           |
| Tuesday, „     | 5  | - | - | } Appeals.                              |
| Wednesday, „   | 6  | - | - |                                         |
| Thursday, „    | 7  | - | - | Appeal Motions and Ditto.               |
| Friday, „      | 8  | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                   |
| Saturday, „    | 9  | - | - |                                         |
| Monday, „      | 11 | - | - |                                         |
| Tuesday, „     | 12 | - | - |                                         |
| Wednesday, „   | 13 | - | - | } Appeal Motions and Ditto.             |
| Thursday, „    | 14 | - | - |                                         |
| Friday, „      | 15 | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                   |
| Saturday, „    | 16 | - | - |                                         |
| Monday, „      | 18 | - | - |                                         |
| Tuesday, „     | 19 | - | - |                                         |
| Wednesday, „   | 20 | - | - | } Appeal Motions and Ditto.             |
| Thursday, „    | 21 | - | - |                                         |
| Friday, „      | 22 | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                   |
| Saturday, „    | 23 | - | - |                                         |
| Monday, „      | 25 | - | - | Appeal Motions and Ditto.               |

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Before the VICE-CHANCELLOR at Westminster.

|                |   |   |   |                                                                 |
|----------------|---|---|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday, Nov. | 2 | - | - | Motions.                                                        |
| Monday, „      | 4 | - | - | Petition Day.                                                   |
| Tuesday, „     | 5 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
| Wednesday, „   | 6 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Thursday, „    | 7 | - | - | Motions.                                                        |
| Friday, „      | 8 | - | - | } Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions, and General Cause Paper.   |
|                |   |   |   |                                                                 |

Equity Sittings in Michaelmas Term, 1839.

|                |    |   |   |   |                                                               |
|----------------|----|---|---|---|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday, Nov. | 9  | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
| Monday, „      | 11 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Tuesday, „     | 12 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Wednesday, „   | 13 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Thursday, „    | 14 | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Friday, „      | 15 | - | - | { | Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions, and General Cause Paper.   |
| Saturday, „    | 16 | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
| Monday, „      | 18 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Tuesday, „     | 19 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Wednesday, „   | 20 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Thursday, „    | 21 | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Friday, „      | 22 | - | - | { | Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions, and General Cause Paper.   |
| Saturday. „    | 23 | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
| Monday, „      | 25 | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |

ROLLS COURT.

Before the Right Hon. the MASTER OF THE ROLLS, at Westminster.

|                |    |   |   |   |                                                               |
|----------------|----|---|---|---|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday, Nov. | 2  | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Monday, „      | 4  | - | - |   | Petitions in General Paper.                                   |
| Tuesday, „     | 5  | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Wednesday, „   | 6  | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Thursday, „    | 7  | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Friday, „      | 8  | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Saturday, „    | 9  | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Monday, „      | 11 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Tuesday, „     | 12 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Wednesday „    | 13 | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Thursday, „    | 14 | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Friday, „      | 15 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Saturday, „    | 16 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Monday, „      | 18 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Tuesday, „     | 19 | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Wednesday „    | 20 | - | - | { | Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Thursday, „    | 21 | - | - |   |                                                               |
| Friday, „      | 22 | - | - |   | Petitions in General Paper.                                   |
| Saturday, „    | 23 | - | - |   | Motions.                                                      |
| Monday, „      | 25 | - | - |   | Short Causes after swearing in the Solicitors.                |
| Tuesday, „     | 26 | - | - |   |                                                               |

Consent Causes, Short Causes, and Consent Petitions every Tuesday, at the sitting of the Court.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

SITTINGS IN MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

| Banco.   |        |                           |   | Equity.            | Nisi Prius.     |
|-----------------|--------|---------------------------|---|---------------------------|------------------------|
|                 |        |                           |   | Before Lord Abinger.      |                        |
| Saturday, .     | Nov. 2 | .                         | . | Petitions and Motions     | .                      |
| Monday . . .    | 4      | .                         | . | .                         | .                      |
| Tuesday . . .   | 5      | .                         | . | .                         | .                      |
| Wednesday . . . | 6      | .                         | . | Paper of general business | Middlesex 1st sitting. |
| Thursday . . .  | 7      | .                         | . | .                         | Ditto by adjournment.  |
| Friday . . . .  | 8      | .                         | . | Petitions and Motions     | .                      |
| Saturday . . .  | 9      | Errors & Lord Mayor sworn |   | .                         | .                      |

|           |         |                           |                           |   |   |                        |
|-----------|---------|---------------------------|---------------------------|---|---|------------------------|
| Monday    | Nov. 11 | Special paper             | .                         | . | . | London 1st sitting.    |
| Tuesday   | 12      | Errors and Sheriffs sworn | .                         | . | . | .                      |
| Wednesday | 13      | Special paper             | .                         | . | . | .                      |
| Thursday  | 14      | .                         | Petitions, Motions, and   | . | . | .                      |
|           |         |                           | Short Causes              | . | . | .                      |
| Friday    | 15      | .                         | .                         | . | . | Middlesex 2nd sitting. |
| Saturday  | 16      | .                         | .                         | . | . | Ditto by adjournment   |
| Monday    | 18      | .                         | .                         | . | . |                        |
| Tuesday   | 19      | .                         | Petitions and Motions     | . | . | .                      |
| Wednesday | 20      | Special paper             | .                         | . | . | .                      |
| Thursday  | 21      | .                         | .                         | . | . | London 1st sitting.    |
| Friday    | 22      | .                         | Paper of general business | . | . | Ditto by adjournment.  |
| Saturday  | 23      | .                         | Petitions and Motions     | . | . | .                      |
| Monday    | 23      | .                         | .                         | . | . | .                      |

DEMURRER PAPER.

Michaelmas Term, 1839.

|           |        |                                     |
|-----------|--------|-------------------------------------|
| Monday    | Nov. 2 | } Motions inArrest of Judgment. |
| Tuesday   | — 4    |                                     |
| Wednesday | — 5    |                                     |
| Thursday  | — 6    |                                     |
| Friday    | — 7    |                                     |

Special Arguments.—Wednesday, Nov. 13.

Doe (Marchant) v. Errington.
Hill v. White and others.
France and another v. Same.
Byers and others, assignees v. Southwell.
Steanes and others, assignees v. Wainwright.
Beesley v. Dolley.
Pisani v. Lawson.
Devaux and another v. Steinkeller.
Belcher and others, assignees v. Oldfield.
Hill v. White and another.
Lohmann v. Rougemont and another.
Brook & others, assignees v. Mitchell & others Samson v. Rhodes.
Dulley v. Linnell.
Smith v. White.
Cockburn & another v. Wright & others, ex.
Carswell, admor. v. Farncomb.
Doe d. Capes, executors v. Walker.
Pogson v. Thomas.
Jenner v. Nash.
Hunnybun v. Mitchell and another.
Bruce the younger v. Waite and another.
Low v. Stocken.
Thornton v. Jenyns, clerk and others.
Pilbeam v. Briggs.
Lucas v. Eastes.
Poulters v. Phillips.
Houlditch and another v. Duthie.
Gale v. Davis.
Chew and another v. Eldridge.
Hinde and others v. Gray.
Houlditch and another v. Duncombe, M. P.
Middleton v. Chambers.

Hodges v. Same.
Waller v. Lacy.
Ashdown v. Burgess.
Bristow v. Fairclough.
Thompson and another v. Farden and others.
Walbancke v. Allen the younger.
Smith and others v. Nicholls.
Billing v. Kightley.
Crawshay and others v. Barry.
Drummond and others v. Lowther.

Business of the Courts.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

Attorney-General v. Wilson, for judgment—Harding v. Harding, to be spoke to—Jennings
v. Newman, petition, by order.
Appeal motions—Warden v. Robins—Busk
v. Beetham—Ranger v. Great Western Railway
—Dearman v. White—Wiggins v. Peppin.
Cause Petitions—Sharp v. Manson—Mills
v. Finlay—Jennings v. Newman.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

In re Taylor, petition for judgment.
Short causes and unopposed petitions.
After the unopposed petitions—Kelsey v.
Larkins, motion, by order—Leicester v. Leicester, ditto—Bryan v. Twigg, petition by order—Sowerby v. Sowerby, ditto—Higham v. Howes, ditto—Attorney-General v. Ludlow, ditto—Nye
v. Maule, ditto—Lane v. Oliver, to be spoke to.
After which his Honour will proceed with the list of adjourned petitions.

ROLLS' COURT.

In re Rugby School, petition.
After which motions continued.
Causes after the motions—Hemming v. Pinkerton, part heard—Jones v. Maurice—Du Hourmehn v. Sheldon, exceptions, further directions, and costs.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Sittings in Banco.

BAIL COURT (Queen's Bench)

Middlesex Common Juries—Meredith v. Simons, part heard—Kent v. Hayes—Nicholls and others v. Newbery.

ORDER OF THE COURT.

If the Motions for New Trials ended yesterday, the Court will take the business in the following order:—

Friday, Nov. 8, Monday the 11th, Thursday the 14th, the peremptory paper.

Tuesday, Nov. 12, Friday the 15th, Tuesday the 19th, the special paper.

Saturday, Nov. 9, Wednesday the 13th, Saturday the 16th, the Crown paper.

Monday, Nov. 18, Wednesday the 20th, the new trial paper.

Thursday, Nov. 21, Friday the 22nd, Saturday the 23rd, Monday the 25th, motions.

The remaining five days of the week after the 25th, two days will be taken for the new trial paper, and three days for the special paper.

The four last days of the term for motions.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Middlesex Common Juries—Doe v. Gass—Dent v. Harrison—Clarke v. Treherne—Casson v. Law—Fletcher v. the Same—Berry v. Latham—Saxe v. Welsh—Kislinbury v. Day—Roberts v. Meux, Bart.—Staniland v. Harper—Reeves v. the Same—Crew v. Sewell—Ashdown v. Grant—Meux, Bart. v. Roberts—Wright v. Paulton—Richmond v. Davis—Davies v. Nookham—Warren v. Anderson—The Same v. the Same—Finden v. Blyth—Chapman v. Matthews—Tipper v. Burr—Smith v. Wilkinson—The Same v. the Same—The Same v. Goudge—The Same v. Morgan—The Same v. Dempsey—Green v. Duckett—Seymour v. Eckford—Hammond v. Plaskett—Allen v. Graham—Denton v. Thompson.—The Court will also sit in Banco.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Sittings in Banco.

EQUITY EXCHEQUER.

Petitions—Re Bristol and Exeter Railway; petition of Tuckett—Re Newcastle and Carlisle Railway; petition of Richardson—Re Great Western Railway; petition of White—Re the Same; petition of the Corporation of Chippenham—Re Manchester and Birmingham Railway—Ex parte Christ's Hospital (2)—Re Great Western Railway; petition of Large—Re Same; petition of Ripley—Re Same; petition of Freke—Re Birmingham and Gloucester Railway; petition of Sargeant—Price v. North—Archer v. Berkeley.—After the Petitions, Motions.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

THE Lithographs of the REAL PROPERTY TREE cannot be sent post free with this Paper into the Country, they will be delivered to the Booksellers, and we hope that our friends will receive them.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

On Dec. 1 will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. III. Part IV.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING,

adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This Number will complete Vol. III.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press,
SECOND EDITION,

Shortly will be published, price 18s. cloth bds.

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, November 9, 1839.

The Legal Guide.

. III.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1839.

[No. 3.

LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

Essay III.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.—[28th Aug., 1833.]

(Continued from p. 80.)

PREVIOUS to the passing of this statute, fines and recoveries were liable to more errors than any other species of Common Law assurance, and the Court of Common Pleas (to which Court alone all applications for relief could be made) was at all times backward in interfering, as when the parties wished to change the term (which amounted to levying a new fine) (a), or to change the names of the parties (b), except in the Christian names required change (c), in a case occurred (d) where, after a lapse of 50 years, the Court ordered the names to be transposed. So where the name of the county was required to be changed (e), or where two counties were required to be inserted to cover one parish (f), but where the amendment required was mere matter of form or detail, and the Court was satisfied that it was an error, the amendment was generally allowed (g). Most of the cases are now, however, provided for by this statute, and titles are made much more secure by its provisions. S. s. 7 (before cited) cures all defects occasioned by errors in names, and by the misdescription or omission of parcels without further amendment (unless any Court of competent jurisdiction shall have refused to amend); but notwithstanding this enactment an application was made to the Court in 1834 (h) to amend a fine by substituting for the parish of Burton Latimer, which was mentioned by mistake in the fine, the parish of Isham, in which according to the deed to lead the uses the premises were situated, on the ground that sec. 7 (before cited) did not exclude the jurisdiction of the Court in matters of amendment; and that by sec. 9 (also before cited) the jurisdiction was expressly reserved in cases not provided for by the Act, and in that case a purchaser had refused to accept the title unless the amendment was sanctioned by the Court. This misdescription, however,

Heath v. Wilson, 2 Black. 788.

Ex parte Motley, 2 Bos. & Pul. 455.

Bro. & Bing. 16.; 4 Bing. 97.

4 Bing. 10.; 1 M. & Sc. 43.

4 Taunt. 835.

VOL. III.

(f) 8 Taunt. 87.

(g) 1 Hen. Black. 73; 6 Taunt. 73; 4 Id. 155; Id. 226; Id. 708; Id. 738; Id. 798; 5 Id. 207; 1 Bing. 22; 2 Id. 93; Id. 386; 3 Bing. 176.

(h) Lockington and Shipley, 1 Ring. N. C. 355.

being apparent on the face of the instrument was held to be within the meaning of the Act. TINDAL, C. J. said, "Here is a misdescription apparent on the face of the instrument, within the meaning of sec. 7. If we accede to your application, we shall be in the same situation as before the Act—called on to amend, upon every conveyancer's doubt, and all the expense will be incurred which the Act was passed to prevent." Without deciding the question of jurisdiction, the Court considered that under sec. 7 there was no need for its interference.

Secs. 10 and 11 cure defects occasioned by the non-inrolment within due time of a bargain and sale to make a tenant to the precipe, or by the non-concurrence of the owner of the legal freehold in making the tenant, provided the beneficial owner of the freehold in possession shall, within the time limited for making the tenant, have conveyed to the tenant. The non-inrolment clause applies to the single case of a bargain and sale, being within the statute of Hen. 8. and purporting to make the tenant; it does not cure non-compliance with any other statute requiring inrolment or registration, nor extend to any case in which the deed to make the tenant is insufficient by reason of the non-inrolment of a previous bargain and sale.

The inrolment of a bargain and sale, under the last-named statute, has relation to the execution of the instrument. That statute denies effect to the assurance, "except it be made in writing, indented, and sealed, and be inrolled within six (lunar) months after the date." The condition being complied with, the same statute imparts legal efficacy to the use from its inception. But a bargain and sale under an act of Parliament is, in general, merely the execution of a naked authority, given to A to dispose of the estate of B, and has no other title to the appellation of a bargain and sale than that which it may derive from the occurrence of the words

"bargain and sale" in the statute which confers, and in the instrument which executes the authority. The same observation applies to every instrument assuming the form of a bargain and sale, by which lands are disposed of in pursuance of a power or authority, whether created by statute or by other means. If the power or authority requires the deed to be inrolled, but does not limit the time, the inrolment is wholly independent of the period fixed by the statute of inrolment (a), but until inrolment the power or authority remains unexecuted at law. The inrolment of a bargain and sale under the statute of Uses, relates back to the creation of the use which springs on the execution of the deed from the seisen of the bargainer.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That no common recovery already suffered or hereafter to be suffered shall be invalid in consequence of the neglect to enrol in due time a bargain and sale purporting to make the tenant to the writ of entry or other writ for suffering such recovery, provided such recovery would have been valid if the bargain and sale purporting to make the tenant to the writ had been duly inrolled.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That no common recovery already suffered or hereafter to be suffered shall be invalid in consequence of any person in whom an estate at law was outstanding having omitted to make the tenant to the writ of entry, or other writ for suffering such recovery, provided the person who was the owner of, or had the power to dispose of an estate in possession, not being less than an estate for a life or lives in the whole of the rents and profits of the lands in which such estate at law was outstanding, or the ultimate surplus of such rents and profits after payment of any charges thereout, and whether any surplus after payment of such charges shall actually remain not, shall, within the time limited for making the tenant to the writ for suffering such recovery, have conveyed or disposed of such estate in possession to the tenant to such use; and an estate shall be deemed to be an estate in possession, notwithstanding there shall be subsisting prior thereto any lease for years or years, absolute or determinable, upon which a rent is reserved, or any term of years upon which no rent is reserved.

(a) Ingram v. Parker, T. Raym. 239, cited.

Sec. 12. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That where any fine or common recovery shall before the passing of this Act have been wholly reversed, such fine or recovery shall not be rendered valid by this Act; and where any fine or common recovery shall before the passing of this Act have been reversed as to some only of the parties thereto, or as to some only of the lands therein comprised, such fine or recovery shall not be rendered valid by this Act, so far as the same shall have been reversed; and where any person who would have been barred by any fine or common recovery if made, shall before the passing of this Act have had any dealings with the lands comprised in such fine or recovery on the faith of the same being invalid, such fine or recovery shall not be rendered valid by this Act, and this Act shall not render valid any fine or common recovery as to lands of which any person shall at the time of the passing of this Act be in possession in respect of any estate which the fine or common recovery, if made, would have barred, nor any fine or common recovery which, before the passing of this Act, any Court of competent jurisdiction shall have refused to amend; nor shall this Act prejudice or affect any proceedings at law or in equity, pending at the time of the passing of this Act, in which the validity of any fine or recovery shall be in question between the party claiming under such fine or recovery and the party claiming adversely thereto; and such fine or recovery, if the result of such proceedings shall be to invalidate the same, shall not be rendered valid by this Act; and if such proceedings shall abate or become defective in consequence of the death of the party claiming under or adversely to such fine or recovery, any person who but for this Act would have a right of action or suit by reason of the invalidity of such fine or recovery shall retain such right, so that he commence proceedings within six calendar months after the death of such party.

Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, the records of all fines and common recoveries levied and suffered in his Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, and all the proceedings thereof, shall be deposited in such places and kept by such persons as the said Court of Common Pleas shall from time to time order or direct; and the records of all fines and common recoveries levied and suffered in his Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster, and all the proceedings thereof, shall be deposited in such places and kept by such persons as his Majesty's Justices of Assize for the County Palatine of Lancaster for the time being shall from time to time order or direct; and the records of all fines and common recoveries levied and suffered in the Court of Pleas of the County Palatine of Durham, and all the proceedings thereof, shall be deposited in such places and kept by such persons as the said Court of Pleas shall from time to time order or direct; and in the meantime the said records and proceedings shall remain in the same places respectively where they are now deposited, and be kept by the respective persons who would have continued entitled to the custody thereof if this Act had not been passed; and while the said records and proceedings respectively shall be kept by such persons respectively, searches may be made and extracts and copies obtained as heretofore, and on paying the accustomed fees; and when any of the records and proceedings shall, by the order of the court or Justices having the control over the same, be kept by any other person, then, so far as relates to the records and proceedings in the custody of such other person, searches may be made and extracts or copies obtained at such times and on paying such fees as shall from time to time be ordered by the court or Justices having the control over the same; and the extracts or copies so obtained shall be as available in evidence as they would have been if obtained from the person whose duty it would have been to have made and delivered out the same if this Act had not been passed.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM III.

VOL. 3.

DESCENT—LOCAL CUSTOMS.

What are the principal modes of descent derived from Local Customs?

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Nov. 7.

STURGIS v. CHAMPNEYS.

APPEAL FROM THE VICE-CHANCELLOR.

HUSBAND and WIFE.—Whether a Married Woman, Tenant for Life of real estates, has a right to a Settlement out of the rents and profits when her Husband takes the benefit of the Insolvent Act.(a)

The Bill in this cause was filed by the plaintiff as the official assignee under the first insolvency of Sir Thomas Champneys on behalf of the creditors for a Declaration of the Court that he was entitled to the rents of certain estates to which his wife, Lady Champneys, was tenant for life during her coverture, and that the receiver should account to him accordingly. Lady Champneys insisted that she was entitled to a provision out of her life estate.

It was admitted that during the filing of the bill the creditors under the first insolvency had all accepted a composition in satisfaction of their debts, so that the claims of the plaintiff were fully satisfied. The question therefore was between Lady Champneys and the creditors of the second insolvency.

The facts of this case we have before fully reported; (a) at the hearing before the VICE-CHANCELLOR in July last, when his Honour was of opinion that he ought not to do so dangerous a thing as to countenance the claim made on behalf of Lady Champneys to the creditors under the second insolvency of her husband, against this decision the present appeal was brought.

The LORD CHANCELLOR in giving judgment said, this was one of those cases which were argued last summer, and in which his Lordship had, during the vacation, delivered his judgment to the solicitors for the parties. He now gave his reasons for that decision. The matter had come before his Lordship upon the petition of Lady Champneys, praying that the assignees of the estate of her husband, Sir T. Champneys, who had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act, might be ordered to pay to her a reasonable sum for her maintenance out of certain property of great value, which had been bequeathed to her by her father, but which had been taken possession of by her husband's assignees for payment of his debts. The Vice Chancellor was of opinion that the Court had no power to order payment out of this property for the maintenance of Lady Champneys; but his Lordship said, that he was of a different opinion, and thought that the assignees, in coming to this Court for the purpose of enforcing equitable rights against this property, should themselves do equity by allowing a reasonable sum for the support of Lady Champneys. His Lordship cited the cases of Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. Jun. 87.; (a) Stackpole v. Beaumont, 3 Ves. J. 98.; Moody v. Mathews, 7 Ves. J. 174. The common law gave the husband the wife's estate, because it threw upon him the obligation of maintaining her. In the present case the Court would not interfere on behalf of the assignee until a proper provision was made for Lady Champneys. His Lordship had thought it proper to examine the authorities, out of respect to the opinions of other Judges, and not from any doubt he felt either at the argument or now. He should reverse the decree of the Vice-Chancellor. The property, which was estimated to be worth £10,000. a year, came by will to the lady, without any settlement upon her out of it. His Lordship directed a reference to the master to settle the proportion that ought to be appropriated to the maintenance of the petitioner. Upon application by the counsel for Lady Champneys for payment to her of a certain sum pending the rence, stating that there was a sum of £10,000. I into Court from the property, the Lord Chancellor ordered £1,000. to be at once paid to

(a) See Piat against ——— Peters, post No. IV.

(a) Ante Vol. 2. p. 232.

7) SIR WM. GRANT, M. R., entered at length upon the various distinctions applicable to the property of a married woman where her husband becomes bankrupt; that case Mrs. Mitford during coverture entitled to a legacy, her husband became bankrupt and died. The assignees claimed the fund, and the bill was filed by trustees upon the opposite claims set up by the widow of Mr. Mitford and by the assignees. Mrs. Mitford contended that as she had outlived her husband, who never received the legacy into possession, and that she was entitled by survivorship. The assignees stated that Mrs. Mitford had a settlement made upon her on her marriage, so that the bankrupt became the purchaser of her fortune; and therefore they submitted whether they were not entitled to the whole of the money; but they contended that, at all events, they were entitled to it subject to a proper settlement to be made upon her. That the settlement was, that was made by the bankrupt upon his marriage, is not denied by the assignees. Sir W. Grant said, it is mere fact that there was a settlement, but they by no means prove, that the husband became a purchaser of all the fortune that might afterwards come to her. This settlement appears to be in consideration of her fortune, as specified and described in the deed: part of which was settled and part was left to the husband, so he cannot be considered a purchaser of anything more than the share she then had; for Lord Hardwicke in Garforth v. Bradley (2 Ves. I. 677), said that if a man marries, and in consideration of that marriage makes a settlement upon his wife by way of jointure, and in consideration of such portion as she is or may be entitled to, if any thing comes afterwards during the coverture to the wife, he is considered as a purchaser: and shall take it. If, on the other hand, the settlement on the wife is in consideration of her present portion or fortune, without reference to what comes afterwards, and the husband does not reduce it into possession, it will survive to the wife in equity, as well as by the rule of law.

Even if it were otherwise, it is contended, and I think with justice, that, while the obligations of the husband remain unperformed, as it is said they do to the extent of £3000, which in the case ex parte Mitford (1 Bro. C. C. 398) was held not proveable under the commission, neither he nor any person claiming under him could be permitted to receive any part of her fortune upon any other condition than that of making good the settlement. But upon that supposition, not the wife, but the trustees under the settlement would be entitled to the fund, or to so much as may be necessary to make good the deficiency: for the husband or his assignees, if purchasers, would have the right, subject only to the equity of the trustees to have the settlement made good. But if the husband be no purchaser, as I am of opinion he is not, the trustees have no claim whatever upon it, but the question lies entirely between the assignees and the wife. The question depends on the effect, that an assignment under a Commission of Bankruptcy has upon the choses in action or equitable interest of the wife of the Bankrupt. Of the many cases cited it is necessary to examine those only, in which the contest has been between the surviving wife and the assignees of the bankrupt husband. What may have been determined as to a particular assignment for valuable consideration, or an assignment under a Commission of Bankruptcy, where the husband was living, when the question between the wife and the assignees has arisen, cannot furnish a precise rule for such a case as this: for between a particular assignment for valuable consideration, and an assignment by operation of law, such a distinction has always been made, that the effect of the one is not necessarily to be inferred from that produced by the other: and it is only, where the husband is dead, that the question between the wife's right by survivorship and the right of the assignees under the Commission can arise.

In four of the cases that have been referred to, the question has been of the nature I have described: that is, between a surviving wife and the assignees of a Bankrupt husband.

Two of these, viz. Boswil v. Brander, (1 p. Will. 458.) and Pringle v. Hodgson, (ante, 1st ser. vol. 3. 617.) were relied upon by the assignees, and two, viz. Grey v. Kentish, (1 Atk. 280. corrected from the register's book in Mr. Cox's note, 1 p. Will. 459.) and Gayer v. Wilkinson, (before Lord Bathurst, 1 Bro. C. C. 50. 2 Dick 492.) were cited for the widow. Though all, that is directly determined by the first of those cases, was that the wife should not have the aid of equity to take the writings out of the hands of the assignees of her deceased husband, yet that is founded upon the opinion formed ultimately by Sir Joseph Jekyll, that the right to the debt was vested in the assignees; and in Pringle v. Hodgson, Lord Rosslyn lays down the same doctrine, that the assignee at law has a right to the chose in action of the wife; and the law reduces it into possession; the Bankrupt Laws give over all, that the husband had, or could dispose of, to the assignees; the property is vested by law in them; and the question of survivorship is quite laid aside by the Bankruptcy. Miles v. Williams, (1 p. Will. 249.) does not belong to this class of cases. But Parker, Chief Justice, afterwards Lord Macclesfield, delivering the opinion of the Court of King's Bench, notices this point; and expresses himself strongly in favour of the assignees against the claim of the wife. But, on the other hand, in Grey v. Kentish, Lord Hardwicke decided in favour of the surviving wife against the assignees, and so did Lord Bathurst, in Gayer v. Wilkinson. The case of Saddington v. Kinsman, (1 Bro. C. C. 44.) in which this question was argued, never was determined. But Lord Thurlow's inclination is manifest by the question put by him, whether the counsel knew any case contradicting Gayer v. Wilkinson, Lord Thurlow himself not recollecting any.

Where such authorities are opposed to each other, it is necessary to examine the principles, on which the decision of the question depends. What interests survive to the wife in equity in general is determined by analogy to the rules of law. As at law her choses in action, not reduced into possession by the husband, survive to her, so do her equitable interests in the same case survive to her in equity. But there are some legal interests, which do not admit or stand in need, of being reduced into possession, being in possession already, and not lying in action, as terms for years, and other chattels real, of which the legal title is in the wife. They will survive, if no act is done by him; but he may assign them; which passes the legal interest, whether with or without consideration. The analogy is followed in equity. Equitable interests of the same description may be transferred in the same manner. Therefore, in Lord Carteret v. Paschall, (3 p. Will. 197.) an interest in the nature of an equitable estate was bound by the voluntary assignment of the husband. With respect to choses in action, they are not assignable at law; consequently the husband's assignment cannot prevent their legally surviving to the wife. In strict analogy, therefore, equitable interests, of the nature of choses in action, ought not to be affected by his assignment. But in equity a distinction seems to have been made between a voluntary assignment and an assignment for valuable considera-which case has ever since been admitted to, and acted upon. But, by an assignment for valuable consideration, it is she is bound, both as to choses in action and equitable interests, Bates v. Dandy, (2 207.) and the case I before referred to,

The wife surviving is not bound by voluntary assignment. That was determined in Burnet v. Kinnaston, (2 Vern.

Carteret v. Paschall. Suppose this line to be established, the question then is, whether an assignment in bankruptcy be of the same nature, and produces the same effect, as an actual assignment for valuable consideration? It may seem strange, that a man should in any way be able to transfer to another a larger and better interest than he has in himself. The interest he has in her chose in action, or equitable interest, is only a right or power to reduce it into possession. But what is supposed to pass to an assignee for valuable consideration is the absolute right to the property, wholly freed from her contingent liability by survivorship. If such be the rule, the favour a Court of Equity shews to a purchaser, that operates, as in many cases it does, to put him in a better situation than the party from whom he derives his interest. But is an assignee, under a Commission of bankruptcy, placed in a different situation from that of the bankrupt himself? I have always understood, the assignment from the commissioners, like any other assignment by operation of law, passed his rights precisely in the same plight and condition as he possessed them. Even where a complete legal title vests in them, and there is no notice of any equity affecting it, they take subject to whatever liability the bankrupt was liable to. This shews they are not considered purchasers for valuable consideration, in the proper sense of the words; indeed, a distinction has been constantly taken between them and a particular assignee for a specific consideration; and the former are placed in the same class as voluntary assignees and personal representatives. Thus in Jewson v. Moulson (2 Atk. 417.) Lord Hardwicke says, it is clear if the husband makes a voluntary assignment of the wife's portion, the volunteer must stand in the place of the husband: and there is the same equity as to assignees of bankrupts; for it is the law that casts it upon them: and in Worral v. Marlar (1 p. Will. 459. Mr. Cox's note) Lord Thurlow says, a court of equity has much greater consideration for an assignment actually made by contract, than for an assignment by mere operation of law; for as to the latter, when the equitable interest of the wife was transferred to the creditor of the husband by mere operation of law, he stood exactly in the place of the husband, and was subject precisely to the same equity with respect to the wife; and accordingly, although it has been much agitated, and is not yet perhaps perfectly determined, whether a particular assignee be liable to make a provision for the wife out of her fortune, it has been long settled, that assignees under a commission of bankruptcy, coming into a court of equity to reduce the interest of the wife into possession, are bound to make such a settlement as the husband would, in the same case, have been compelled to make. But if the assignment has the effect of reducing the wife's interest into possession, how could this equity ever have prevailed? Out of that, of which the husband has obtained possession, no settlement can be compelled. If the assignment, therefore, put the assignees in possession, it would completely extinguish all the claims of the wife, as the possession of the husband himself certainly does. They ought, on that principle, to be considered as coming here to claim what had by the assignment ceased to be a trust for the wife, and become wholly a trust for the creditors. But the Court considers the assignment as doing nothing more than to place the assignees in the room of the husband. So far from treating the assignment as equivalent to possession, it is upon the very ground that the assignees want its assistance to reduce the property into possession, and this Court imposes on them the condition, on which alone it would have assisted the husband to obtain the possession. It seems to me, the decisions in favour of the wife's claim by survivorship are most consonant to acknowledged principles, with regard to the operation of assignments under the bankrupt laws. It is to be observed with respect to the cases, in which contrary doctrines have been advanced, that in Boswil v. Brander, Sir Joseph Jeykell had at first decided against the assignees; and at last only refused to interfere against them to take the deeds out of their hands, expressing great doubt whether, if they had come into equity to enforce a claim against the surviving wife, they would have received its assistance; that in Miles v. Williams (1 p. Will. 249.) the question was not directly before the Court; the point decided being only, that the certificate of the husband would, if well pleaded, have been a bar to an action brought against him and his wife, on a bond given by her before the marriage; and that in the case of Pringle v. Hodgson the question related to a species of property, which the Court seems to have thought not to be of the nature of a chose in action, or an equitable interest, being stock that at the time of the marriage stood in the wife's name; it cannot, therefore, be said, that the question before the Court has been directly and explicitly decided in either of these cases.

With regard to the authorities on the other side it may, perhaps, be observed, that the case of Grey v. Kentish is not precisely the same in circumstances as the present; for there the husband died before the tenant for life of the legacy, of which the wife had the remainder, and consequently there was no period of his life at which it was in the power of him or his assignees to have reduced it into possession. A good deal of stress was laid upon the same circumstance in the argument of the case of Saddington v. Kinsman; but it does not appear that the decision in Grey v. Kentish at all turned on that circumstance, or that Lord Hardwicke doubted about the wife's having an assignable interest at the time of the bankruptcy. In Bates v. Dandy (2 Atk. 207.), and Hawkins v. Obyn (2 Atk. 549.), his Lordship held, that even a possibility of the wife might be assigned by the husband for a valuable consideration. It must, therefore, have been because the assignees did not claim under an assignment of that description, and not because the interest was not assignable, that the claim of the widow prevailed. In Gayer v. Wilkinson the tenant for life died before the bankrupt. In that case, therefore, as in this, the interest of the wife vested in possession before the husband's death; but that circumstance was not held to make any difference in favour of the assignees.

On the whole I am of opinion, both on principle and authority, that Mrs. Mitford, having survived her husband, is entitled to the £1355. 16s. 8d. mentioned in the pleadings, together with the dividends thereon from the time of her husband's death; and that the same ought to be transferred and paid to her by the plaintiff, the surviving trustee.

---

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Nov. 6.

---

CROWFORT v. SIR FRED. FOWKE, BART.(a)

CONTRACTS—NUISANCE—Whether a House of ill fame is a sufficient nuisance to relieve a party from an Agreement for taking adjoining premises, of the ill fame of which he was ignorant at the time of making the Contract.

Mr. Thesiger moved for a rule nisi for a new trial in this case, on the ground of misdirection by Lord Abinger, before whom the trial came on at the sittings after last term, in this Court, on occasion a verdict passed for the defendant. The action was one brought to enforce the performance of an agreement for the lease of a house in York-place, Baker-street, Portman-square, to which the defendant had pleaded that he had been induced to enter into it by fraud and misrepresentation. At the trial it appeared that the action was grounded on the fact that, though the agent of the plaintiff had told the defendant, in answer to a question, that there was "nothing wrong about the house," yet that the house was not but one to it, in an adjoining cross-street, was a house of ill fame, the house in question being at the corner of York-place.

---

(a) Ante Vol. 2, p. 123.

Thesiger now contended, that as there was no imputation on the agent, who did not know of this fact, the agreement could not be said to have been obtained fraudulently by him on the part of the defendant; besides which, as he had authority to pledge the house of his employer to a certain extent, it was clear that he had acted within his instructions in so warranting the house, and that the defendant was not to be held answerable for such an excess of authority. The action was granted on both grounds.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Nov. 12.

SQUIRES v. EDWARDS.

Issue—Pleading Power of the Court to quash FRIVOLOUS PLEAS.

There was an action on a bill of exchange, to which the defendant pleaded that it had not been paid for non-payment.

Humfrey moved for a rule to show cause why the plea should not be quashed, on the ground of frivolity, and why the plaintiff should not be at liberty to sign judgment. It had been said over and over again, that this plea was a nullity, furnishing no answer whatever to the action; and in a late case the Court of King's Bench had declared their intention to treat all such pleas as nullities as were clearly manifestly on the face of them trifling with the Court.

The COURT granted the rule.

Justice BOSANQUET observed, that he entertained doubts as to the power of the Court to set aside pleas of this description, if they were regularly pleaded; but having consulted several of his brother judges on the subject, they had come to the conclusion that they had the power, and would hereafter act upon it.

Sergeant Wilde expressed a hope that as the opinions of the learned judges upon the point were to be contradictory, the Court would carefully consider it, and lay down some fixed rule on the subject for the guidance of the profession.

Lord Chief Justice TINDAL said that was a very easy matter, seeing that the word "frivolous" was a very wide term.

The learned Sergeant then moved for a rule to show cause why an order of Mr Justice Maule, setting aside a plea for frivolity under similar circumstances, should not be rescinded.

Mr. Justice MAULE said, that as the point appeared to him to be doubtful, he had deemed it right not to allow the judgment to be entered up until the defendant should have an opportunity of applying to the Court, and having the question argued. It was his own opinion, that where a plea was on the face of it bad, and manifestly pleaded for the mere purpose of delay, a judge at chambers had the power to set it aside.

The LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE observed, that if it turned out that the judges had that power, it was one which might be exercised most beneficially for the ends of justice.

The COURT granted the rule.

BAIL COURT.—Nov. 9.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

Sheriff Law.—Power of the Court under circumstances to stay the execution of a Writ of Inquiry on the application of the Sheriff.

Mr. Kennedy moved, on the part of the Sheriff of Middlesex, for a rule calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the execution of the writ of inquiry issued in this case should not be stayed until the further orders of the Court. The present action was altogether different from that in which the Court had already given judgment. The action was brought for the very same cause, for the very same libel, as the former one, but was brought since the prorogation of Parliament. The defendants (the Messrs. Hansard) had allowed judgment to go by default, and a writ of inquiry had been issued, and the Sheriff was commanded to have it executed by the 12th of this month, which would be Tuesday next. Such was the state of facts as stated on the affidavit of the Under-Sheriff of Middlesex. The position in which the Sheriff was then placed was of the most embarrassing description, and might entail upon him the most serious evil, unless he should be considered entitled to the relief of the Court.

Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE said, that in the absence of any precedent he felt great difficulty in entertaining such a motion as the present. The party upon whose behalf the application was made was no party to the action. He was merely an officer of the Court, and he (Mr. Justice Littledale) did not see what power he had to make such a rule as that which was moved for on the part of a person who was no suitor of the Court, nor in any other manner connected with the action than that he was the person by whose agency part of the proceedings were to be effected.

Mr. Kennedy said, it was true that the Sheriff was but an officer of the Court. It was, however, the case, that he was also the officer of another body—namely, of the House of Commons, and the conflict which must result from his desire to perform his duty to the Court, and his liability, in the event of his performing it, to the most serious punishment from the other quarter,—it was this peculiarity of his condition that constituted his danger, and induced him to entreat this Court to throw the shield of its protection before him. He could not adduce a precedent in support of his motion, but hoped that when the case had been fully considered by his Lordship, it would be found to justify the Court in that extension of its protection to the Sheriff which was sought for. Here the attorney for the plaintiff had thought proper to cause a writ of inquiry to be issued from this Court, and the Sheriff was to inquire through a jury of twelve men, on oath, what damages the plaintiff had suffered from the libel complained of. On the other hand, the Sheriff was served with the following notices on the part of the attorneys for the defendant Hansard:

*“ Westminster, 21, Great George-street,
October 31, 1839.*

“ STOCKDALE v. HANSARD AND OTHERS.

“ SIR,—Having been instructed by the defendants that the action in which you have caused to be served a notice of declaration, on the 26th inst., is brought for the alleged publication of certain papers by order or under the authority of the House of Commons, we deem it right to give you a formal notice of the Resolutions of the House of Commons in relation to publications by its authority (of which we send you a copy on the other side), and to warn you, that, in the event of your promoting or carrying on such proceedings, your conduct in that respect will be represented in due manner to the said House, and that you will become amenable to its authority, as expressed in the said Resolutions.

“ We are, Sir, your obedient servants,

“ PARKES & PRESTON.”

“ To Tho. France, Esq., Under-Sheriff, &c.”

“ Resolutions of the House of Commons, 30th of May, 1837.

“ 1. That the power of publishing such of its reports, notes, or proceedings, as it shall deem necessary or conducive to the public interests, is an essential incident to the constitutional functions of Parliament, more especially of this House, as the Representative portion of it.

“ 2. That by the law and privileges of Parliament, this House has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction to determine upon the existence and extent of its privileges, and that the institution or prosecution of any action, suit, or other proceeding, for the purpose of bringing them into discussion or decision before any court or tribunal elsewhere than in Parliament, is a high breach of such privilege, and renders parties concerned therein amenable to its just displeasure and to the punishment consequent thereon.”

“ 1st of August, 1839.

“ 1. That Messrs. Hansard, in printing and publishing a Report and Minutes of Evidence on the present state of the islands of New Zealand, communicated by the House of Lords to this House on the 7th of August, 1838, acted under the orders of this House: and that to bring or assist in bringing any action against them for such publication would be a breach of the privileges of this House.

“ 2. That Messrs. Hansard be directed not to answer the letter of Charles Shaw, mentioned in their petition, and not to take any step towards defending the action with which they are threatened in the said letter.”

The Sheriff, therefore, had reason to fear, not only for himself, but for every officer or assistant acting under him in this matter, that they would become liable and subject to the severe animadversion of the House of Commons. In this state of things he was without remedy, unless the Court would graciously interfere as he now prayed. If he were sent to prison by the House of Commons, there was no power by which he could be released for an indefinite period. If he refused to execute the writ, he was liable to an action on the part of the plaintiff, and to pay all the damages declared, although not proved to have been incurred, and, in default of payment, he would be subjected to imprisonment. The present action was brought for a libel published on the 20th of June, 1839; that the damages on the declaration were laid at the sum of £50,000.; and that the libel complained of was contained in a letter addressed to Lord John Russell by Messrs. Crawford and Russell, Inspectors of Prisons, in reply to a Report by a Committee of the Court of Aldermen upon the same subject. This letter was dated in 1836, and ordered to be printed in May, 1837. In the former action, which was brought against the present defendants for the same subject, they had pleaded two Resolutions of the House of Com-asserting their privilege of publishing such &c., as they might think fit, and declaring the next place, that they were themselves judicious judges of their own privileges. In this judgment was given for the plaintiff by term last for £100. Upon the 17th the House of Commons resolved, that in the circumstances of that case it was not to adopt any further proceedings in relation to it. They resolved, moreover, that the publication was essentially necessary for the exercise of their constitutional privileges, and that they would adopt measures for the complete establishment and inviolability of the Committee which had been appointed to make a full report to the House upon the subject. The learned counsel went on to state that a person named Polack having threatened to commence an action against Messrs. Hansard for another publication of papers relating to the colony of New Zealand, the defendants presented a petition to the House of Commons for protection, and that the House thereupon resolved that the publication by Messrs. Hansard had been under the orders of the House, and that any proceeding by action against them for a publication was a breach of the privileges of Parliament. The House resolved further that Messrs. Hansard be directed not to obey the letter which they had received from the attorney of Mr. Polack, and not to take any step for the defence of the action. The defendants' attorneys, Messrs. Parkes and Kennedy, who were also the attorneys of the House of Commons, transmitted to Mr. Shaw the copy of these resolutions, accompanied with a statement stating that in the event of his being a party to any proceedings against Messrs. Hansard, both himself and every other person aiding him therein would become amenable to the jurisdiction of the House of Commons, and liable to punishment for a breach of the privileges of the House according to the tenor of the resolutions. In these circumstances, the Sheriff, who was the present applicant, was under an apprehension that if he took any step which might tend to the execution of the writ of inquiry, he would incur the serious displeasure of the House of Commons, and be exposed to great and manifold evils in his person and property, whilst the House which he feared would admit of no mitigation of redress. True it was that the majority of the public and of the bar approved of the decision which that Court had already given upon the subject in question. It was, however, certain that a powerful minority disapproved of it; that the House of Commons had expressed their determination to oppose and to defeat it by every means in their power; and that they would not fail to visit with the severest punishment any person who might be instrumental in carrying the principle of the decision into effect in any other case. What, then, was the Sheriff to do? If he should become liable to an attachment out of this Court for not executing the writ, he could not obtain his discharge from prison until he had paid the whole amount of the damages in the declaration, which was £50,000.; and if he should comply with the writ, he would be imprisoned by the House of Commons during the remainder of the present Parliament, which would be a period of five years. In support of the position that the Sheriff could not be released from an attachment without paying the whole debt in the declaration, the learned gentleman referred to Heppel v. King, 7 T. R. 370, Fowles v. Mackintosh, 1 Hen. Black. 1986. With regard to the final execution in the case, it was impossible to contemplate it without the most awful apprehensions. It was quite certain that the Sheriff had authority to call to his aid the whole power of the country, and that he could summon to the posse every man above fifteen years of age. It was equally certain, however, that the Government would unite with the House of Commons, and as they could command the services of the military and the police, it was not impossible that a conflict might take place of the most awful description. This course of calling out the military and the police was that which had been actually recommended already to the Government by an eminent member of the House of Commons, who was also a most distinguished member of the bar. This had been the course recommended by that eminent person, and such would be the fearful consequences which in all probability would afflict the metropolis if the sheriff should attempt to carry the proceedings in this case into complete effect. To avoid this terrible conflict, he had no other alternative, except to commit a contempt of this Court, for which he would be sent to prison, out of which he could not obtain his release without the payment of fees, the amount of which alone was perfectly ruinous, and such as ought not to be tolerated in a free country; and he (Mr. Kennedy) hoped that the time would come when the inhabitants of this country would be able to go into prison and come out of it gratuitously. Supposing the sheriff then to be imprisoned, what remedy could he have? The only one to which he could at all have recourse would be a habeas corpus, and that would be altogether ineffectual for his purpose. The learned gentleman then laid down the position, that whenever the House of Commons commits a person to prison, expressing generally in the warrant of committal that the party is committed for a contempt of the privileges of the House, without specifying what the particular privilege may be, every court in Westminster Hall will, upon habeas corpus, be obliged to remand such prisoner. The cases to which he referred in support of this position were Captain Streater's case, 5 Howell's State Trials, 366; Lord Shaftesbury's case, 6 Id. 1269; Murray's case, 1 Wilson, 299; the King v. Peyton, 2 Lord Raymond; the case of Brasse Crosby, Lord Mayor of London, 19 Howell, and 3 Wilson, 188; the King v. Flower, 3 Term. Rep. 314; and the case of Sir Francis Burdett v. Abbott, 5 Dow, 165; in which last case all the judges and the House of Lords were unanimously of opinion that no prisoner could be discharged on habeas corpus from an imprisonment by the House of Commons, if the warrant upon the face of it expressed nothing more than a general contempt; and he thought it might be assumed as a certainty, that the House of Commons would take care that their warrant should, upon the face of it, be such as, according to the doctrine laid down by all the cases, would be sufficient to insure that the prisoner be remanded. It was, moreover, to be observed, that the statute of Habeas Corpus did not apply to a case like the present; and that the granting of a habeas corpus at common law was by no means a matter of course, as had been decided in Hobhouse's case, 3 B. and A. 420. If the present application should, therefore, not be successful, the case of the sheriff would be the only one known to the law of a wrong without a remedy, and of a right which there existed no means of enforcing. The learned gentleman concluded this part of his speech by referring to the judgment of this Court in the case of Stockdale v. Hansard, already decided, and which judgment, as he contended, gave additional authority to the position for which he had been contending,—namely, that if the House of Commons abstain from setting forth in the warrant of commitment any special breaches of privilege committed by the prisoner, he must, as a matter of course, be remanded upon habeas corpus.

Nov. 11.

Mr. Kennedy resumed his application, and went on to cite a great variety of cases in support of the position, that the Court was continually in the habit of exercising an equitable jurisdiction for the protection of the sheriff, where he acted bona fide, and was placed between two parties who possessed conflicting rights. In such cases it was usual for the courts even to suspend vested and important interests, in order that the sheriff, who was the ministerial officer of the court, might not be exposed to injury or inconvenience as long as he faithfully performed his duties to the court and the public.

In most of the cases to which he referred, the parties whose proceedings had been stayed, or whose rights had been set aside, or who had been obliged to indemnify the sheriff for the performance of his duty, were persons against whom no impropriety was alleged. If the Court, then, was in the habit of protecting the sheriff, even against those who had only asserted in a legal and regular manner the rights to which they were entitled by law, how much more ought such protection to be accorded to the present defendant against a plaintiff, who had so abused the process of the Court as actually to bring three actions in respect of the very same subject matter, and who in the last of them had laid his damages at £50,000, an amount which was perfectly monstrous? It was, moreover, quite possible that the plaintiff might derive no benefit from the proceeding, even if the sheriff were compelled to execute the writ of inquiry. The jury would certainly be summoned, but they were exposed to no higher penalty for non-attendance than a fine of £5, whilst it was in the power of the sheriff to reduce that sum even to a farthing if he pleased; and considering the consequences which would hang over the jurors themselves for participating in the proceedings, he (Mr. Kennedy) thought that they would consider themselves to have got very well out of the matter upon the payment of even the highest fine to which they could be made liable in the Sheriff's Court for a default. But even the default of the jury would be of no advantage to the sheriff. He would still have incurred the grievous displeasure of the House of Commons for at least moving towards the execution of the writ. If on the other hand, he refused to do it, he would be liable to an attachment from that Court, and the attachment must be addressed to the two coroners for the county of Middlesex. One of those gentlemen was a member of the House of Commons, and there could be no doubt of the part which he would take, and as both the coroners must act together, the attachment could not be executed. But if Mr. Wakley should act in opposition to the resolution of the House of Commons, and be by them committed for contempt and breach of privilege, there could be no doubt but that Lord Holt himself, if he should return to the bench, would hold that upon habeas corpus Mr. Wakley must be remanded. To avoid these and the many other dangers which must result from a perseverance in the present course, there seemed no way, except by suspending the proceedings until such time as there could be an adjustment of the matters in question, which would probably be effected upon the sitting of Parliament by a conference between both Houses. The learned gentleman mentioned two instances of the success of such con-namely, that of Skinner v. the East India Company, in which the Lords unsuccessfully claimed a right to entertain original suits: and of Shirley v. Fagg, in which they had failed in establishing the right of appellate jurisdiction. The learned gentleman, in anticipation of the perils which would be incurred by himself, adverted to the manner in which the House of Commons, augustissimum orbis terrarum concilium, had manifested their power upon various occasions, and he particularly instanced the case of Lord Strafford and Bishop Mordaunt, the latter of whom was committed by the House for publishing a book which was construed to be a contempt. He drew a picture of the probable convulsion which must shake the metropolis, and which would even reach the very majesty of the Crown, if the insolvents were not executed; and concluded by convincing the learned judge, while there was yet time for interposition, to prevent the occurrence of so momentous a crisis, and of consequences so dangerous to the tranquillity of the empire. Justice LITTLEDALE immediately delivered judgment of the Court in the following terms:—"I think that in this case there are no legal grounds for the Court to interfere. I will be no rule."

INSOLVENT COURT.—Nov. 7.

OF RICHARD BLENCOWE, JOHNSON, AND WILLIAM HARRIS.

JUDGMENT—Insolvents out on Bail, when heard remanded—The time they were out upon Bail is EXCLUDED from the computation of the Court.

The insolvents were partners, and had been cloth and leather-sellers at Coventry. They carried on business in October, 1837, and discontinued in November last. Mr. Johnson had a capital of £586, and the other insolvent £190. Their present partnership debts were about £350. It appeared that the insolvents were indebted to Messrs. Goodall, the bankers at Coventry, in the sum of £600, which was secured by Mr. Latham, the father-in-law of Harris. An assignment of the book-debts and stock was made to a Mr. Perkins, under which the property was sold. The bankers were paid, and Mr. Latham received £157 of his debt. Some property was sold at a loss. The insolvents resided in London, and with a sum of money they were offered 10s. in the pound. The offer was accepted by some of the creditors, and refused by Mr. Burbury and Mr.

Hudson. Before the insolvents were taken to prison a considerable sum had been expended; they had, however, paid those who accepted the composition. They had been discharged on bail.

Mr. Hudson stated that his debt was upwards of £20, contracted in September, 1838. It was the first transaction. His clerk had refused 10s. in the pound, expressing a determination not to take a shilling less than the money owing.

The insolvents stated that they were advised to make an assignment of the book-debts, &c. by their attornies, and by the professional advisers of the bankers.

An affidavit was read, in which it was stated that there were several witnesses at Coventry to be examined; that the majority of the creditors resided in the country, where the insolvents should have been heard.

It was contended, that the insolvents had made away with their property to two particular creditors, and that an application would have been made to send them to Coventry to be heard, but the expense must have been paid by the party applying, and it was therefore abandoned.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN, on hearing counsel on both sides, said, he had a clear impression that the payment to Mr. Latham of the £157 was voluntary, without the slightest pressure, and he was prepared to give a judgment, without the learned counsel for the insolvents asked for an adjournment. He should give his opinion on the other part when he adjudicated.

Mr. Woodroffe declined asking for an adjournment.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN gave judgment. He said the bankers were entitled to be paid, and no complaint could be made on that ground, because there was a pressure against the insolvents. But why Mr. Latham was to be paid he could not tell. It was a clear preference to him to the injury of the creditors, for which the insolvents would be remanded. They had made a fair offer to the creditors, and everything had been done to get them to accept the composition. Still that did not get rid of the payment to Mr. Latham, which was as clear a preference as he (Mr. Commissioner Bowen) had ever heard. The insolvents had been some time out on bail, which would, of course, be excluded in the remand. The judgment was, that the insolvents should be discharged when they had been in custody nine calendar months from the vesting order, for making away with their property by giving a preference to Mr. Latham.

ATTORNIES APPLYING TO BE RE-ADMITTED ON THE LAST DAY OF MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Baly, Charles, Canonbury Terrace ; and Blackbrook, Kidderminster.
 Beardshaw, Thomas, Worksop.
 Bubb, Benjamin, Cheltenham.
 Borlase, James John Grenfell, Gloucester and Truro.
 Conolly, James, 3, Raven's Place, Hammer-smith ; and Parliament Street.
 Cole, William, Sudeley Street, City Road ; and 64, Shepperton Cottages.
 Chadwick, James William, Long Ashton.
 Chester, Edward Matthew, Liverpool.
 Downes, Peter Joseph, 42, Primrose Hill, Salisbury Square.
 Evans, William Martin, Gloucester.
 Garratt, James, Ely Place, Holborn ; Sidmouth ; and Peckham Rye.
 Grover, John Logan, 9, Weston Street, Pentonville.
 Gore, Arthur, 51, and 31, Oxford Street.
 Hingeston, George, Lyme Regis.
 Heywood, William Henry, Poulton.
 Hall, James Tarbutt, 13, Clarence Place, Pentonville ; and 12, Spencer Street.
 Jackson, William, Kexborough ; and Bank End ; both near Barnsley.
 Knight, Joel, Haverfordwest.
 Monkton, John, 7, Barrett Street, Vauxhall ; and Brook Street.

Price, Liscombe, Red Lion Street, Wapping.
 Rippon, John, 5, Great Union Street ; Kennington Causeway ; and Walnut Tree Walk.
 Rowles, George Samuel Serjent, Richard Street Star Street, Islington.
 Simpson, William Robert, 8, Red Lion Street Clerkenwell.
 Seaman, Lewis, Otley.
 Swinford, Henry Knott, Margate ; France ; and Belgium.
 Saunders, Joseph, George Greenham, near Newbury.
 Taylor, David Passmore, 9, Stringer's Buildings Bridge Road, Southwark ; and Hercules Buildings.
 Williams, Benjamin Price, Luton.
 Wynne, Llewellyn, Manchester Street, Manchester Square.

Affidavit filed at the Master's Office on the 2nd of November.

Parsons, Henry, North Petherton.

Affidavit filed nunc pro tunc, pursuant to a rule of Court.

Forrester, Gilbert Davis, Lincoln's Inn Fields Brentford Butts ; Greenhithe ; Robert Street and St. James's Place, Hampstead Road.

COMMON PLEAS.

Hodgson, Edward, 6, Symond's Inn ; 5, Cecil Street, Strand ; 13, Hatfield Street, Blackfriars.

NEW POSTAGE ACT.

Treasury Minute, Dated 12th Nov. 1839.

My Lords read the Act, 2d and 3d Vic. cap. 52, for the further regulation of the Duties on Postage until the 5th October, 1840.

Since the prorogation of Parliament my Lords have turned their unremitting attention to the measures necessary for carrying into effect the intention of the Legislature.

The powers with which this board are invested by the Act were recommended to Parliament, not only for the purpose of enabling my Lords to adopt such mode of payment as might, on consideration, appear the most advisable, but also to enable my Lords to carry into practical effect this great alteration in the manner which might be least liable to derange the regularity and the despatch of the correspondence of the country, as now executed by the Post-office.

My Lords have always been aware that the coteremporaneous adoption of the charging letter by weight, and the reduction of postage to a uniform rate of one penny, would be attended with much practical difficulty. The time occupied now at the large offices and at the forward offices in charging and sorting the letters has been reduced, for the public convenience, to as narrow limits as possible. To alter the mode of charging from that to which the officers of the Post-office have been long accustomed must of itself, for a time, be accompanied with some inconvenience, and my Lords apprehend it would be imprudent to increase that difficulty by adding at the same moment so large a number of letters as must naturally arise from the immediate reduction to the penny rate. My Lords fear that, for a time great irregularities would prevail, and public inconvenience result. However satisfactory, therefore, and however desirable, in points of view, it might be to carry into effect coterminously the complete plan, Lordships, upon a full consideration, have come to the conclusion that, by adopting some immediate measure, and bringing into operation the mode of charging the letters by weight, thus to the entire reduction of the rate of postage, their Lordships will not only avoid the expense to which the other course is liable, but may also facilitate the introduction of the remaining parts of the plan.

With these opinions their Lordships have, in communication with the Post-office, turned their attention to the framing such regulations as may be made, with as little delay as possible, to be by weight.

Their Lordships propose to accompany this experiment with such reduction of postage as may be a material relief to the public, and not interfere with the proper discharge of the duties of the officers of the Post-office as at present regulated.

The regulations which, in conjunction with the Post-office, have been matured, and which the Board propose to sanction, my Lords apprehend material advantages will be secured. A considerable relief will be given to the public as regards the charge of letters. One of the great practical difficulties in introducing the penny will be removed, and such information being obtained as will enable my Lords to adopt with security, and consequently at an earlier period, the remaining part of the system.

In giving their sanction to the proposed experiment, my Lords consider it as a temporary measure only, and as a step to the introduction of a uniform penny charge, and their Lordships continue their anxious efforts to give effect to the whole of the intentions of the Legislature with as little delay as is consistent with the due consideration of the public convenience. Their Lordships are pleased to direct that all letters sent on or after the 5th December next shall be subject to the following regulations:—

General post letters shall be charged by weight as follows:—

|                                            |                          |
|--------------------------------------------|--------------------------|
| Letters not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ ounce, | one postage.             |
| Ditto                                      | 1 ounce, two postages.   |
| Ditto                                      | 2 ounces, four postages. |
| Ditto                                      | 3 ounces, six postages.  |

And so on, adding two postages for every ounce to sixteen ounces, beyond which no packet subject to postage shall be received.

All single postage rates between places within the United Kingdom which now exceed

4d. shall be reduced to that sum; inferior rates to remain undisturbed, but letters to be charged by weight. Additional charges to which general post letters are now liable, if posted or delivered beyond the limits of the general post, free delivery; as also the additional halfpenny on Scotch letters, and the additional penny for passing the Menai and Conway bridges, to cease.

3. All letters and packets exceeding the weight of one ounce to be prepaid and delivered in at the window; if not so prepaid and delivered, to be charged double postage.

Foreign letters and packet letters will be charged according to the preceding scale of weight.

Letters to and from the British West Indies to be charged la. per single rate; the same charge to attach to letters from and to Gibraltar, Malta, and the Ionian Isles, conveyed by packet and not transmitted through France.

My Lords reserve for future consideration the whole question of the rates on foreign letters, as their Lordships consider that it will be a proper subject for communication with foreign powers, in the hope that such foreign powers may be induced to make a corresponding reduction in their charges on letters to and from this country.

All ship letters between parts of the United Kingdom, including the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, to be charged by weight and according to the rates chargeable on inland letters. Other ship letters to be charged by weight, according to the foregoing scale, the single sea postage rate remaining as at present, and the inland rate being regulated as for inland letters.

London district post, including twopenny and threepenny delivery:—

1. All letters not exceeding  $\frac{1}{2}$  ounce, provided the postage be prepaid, to be charged 1d.

2. The 2d. charge on general post letters delivered in the London district to cease.

3. No further alteration to be made in the charges leviable in the London district post. My Lords have no intention, by the present arrangement, to make any alteration with respect to newspapers, franked letters, or Parliamentary papers, which will still continue to enjoy the same privileges and be subject to the same charges as at present.

Transmit copy of this minute officially to the Postmaster-General, and desire his Lordship will give the necessary instructions to his officers to carry the directions of my Lords into effect.

Desire also that he will direct the Solicitor of the Post-office to prepare a draft of a warrant, in conformity with the provisions of the Postage Acts, to be signed by My Lords, and inserted in the Gazette.

Business of the Courts.*COURT OF CHANCERY.

Chapman v. Severne, appeal for judgment—Collard v. Allison, motion for judgment—Gompertz v. Ansdell, cause, part heard—Sainsbury v. Jones, appeal.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Short causes and unopposed petitions.

After the petitions—Tilt v. Tilt, petition, by order—Pytches v. Revett, ditto—St. John v. Champneys, ditto, and exception, by order—Livesey v. Livesey, exceptions, two sets, by order—Russell v. Buchanan, motion, part heard—Bentley v. Forster, motion—Earle v. Wicks, ditto—Bridle v. Slade, demurrer, part heard.

ROLLS' COURT.

Cullingworth v. Lloyd, part heard—Collins v. Johnson, further directions and costs—Maw v. Hill—Stubbs v. Liston—Farmer v. Dunnebar—Stead v. Nelson—Palmer v. Lord Kensington—Drake v. Drake—Farhall v. Farhall—Wormald v. Mackintosh, exceptions, further directions, and costs—Curtis v. Holcombe, exceptions—Baring v. Bordelins.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Sittings in Banco.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Sittings in Banco.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Middlesex Common Juries—Smith and others v. Dempsey—Geils v. Hitchcock—Utting v. Carrington—Jeffrey v. Graham—Bryan v. Brandon—Lindus v. Bullock—Bicknell v. Jacob—Morrice v. King—Blore v. Flack—Guinard v. Bourn—Warren v. Price—The Same v. Saunders—Hall v. Munro—Skerrett v. Clarke.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Sittings in Banco.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Middlesex Common Juries—Harrison v. Warneford—Barker v. Vaughan—Smith v. Avery—Miller and Wife v. Pain—The Same v. The Same—Pilling v. Law—Geary v. Harvey—Hampton v. Cross—Adams v. Humphries—Moss v. Cornforth, undefended—Prescott and others v. Ahrenfield—Skey v. Franks—Edwards v. Robertson, undefended—Mopsey v. Brown, ditto—Hall v. Perry, ditto—Aubert v. Morgante, ditto.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.—A correct report of the trial of this issue before the Sheriff of Middlesex, on Tuesday last, will appear in our next number. We have not room this week.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

ERRATA.

P. 20, col. 2, quotation from Virgil—line 3, for "rubescue" read "rubescere;" line 6, for "jacent" read "jaceant."

On Dec. 1 will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. III. Part IV.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This Number will complete Vol. III.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers
194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, November 16, 1839.

The Legal Guide.

III.] SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1839. [No. 4.

LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY IV.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.—[28th Aug., 1833.]

(Continued from p. 33.)

WE have shown the origin of a Common Recovery, and in what manner that fiction became established, and we will now show the origin, the different sorts of fines, and the three principal uses to which they were applied.

A fine in its origin was an amicable composition, by leave of the King or his justices, in an actual suit, whereby the lands were acknowledged to be the right of one of the parties, and at Common Law all persons were barred by it who did not claim within a year and a day. The safe title acquired by this process led, it is supposed, to the practice of transferring lands by means of a fictitious suit of the same nature as the real one above alluded to. This is the origin of the fine, which, subject to certain modifications, has from time to time by statutes, have been in use for centuries. The bar by non-claim after a year and a day on fines at Common Law was taken away by the statute 34 Edw. 3, c. 16. The statutes 1 Rich. 3, c. 7, and 4 Hen. 7, c. 24, have declared that a fine proclaimed in four successive terms, the first proclamation being made in the term in which the fine is engrossed, should operate as a bar by non-claim at the end of five years after the last proclamation, but with a certain limited extension of time in the cases of infancy, coverture, lunacy and absence beyond seas; and by the latter statute, and the statute 32 Hen. 8, c. 36, the further effect of barring estates tail was given to fines levied with proclamations. The two last statutes gave rise to a distinction between fines levied with proclamations and fines levied without proclamations; the latter being fines at Common Law, and having those effects only which fines had immediately after the passing of the statute 34 Edw. 3, c. 16.

There were four sorts of fines, viz. 1st. a fine "sur conuzance de droit come ceo," &c.; 2ndly. a fine "sur conuzance de droit tantum;" 3dly, a fine "sur concessit;" and, 4thly, a fine "sur done grant et render." The first and third were those in general use; the second was sometimes used, but the same purposes could be attained either by the first or third. The first was always levied with proclamations, and so it seems was the fourth fine; but the second and third were usually levied without proclamations.

The three principal uses to which fines were applied was to bar estates tail, and enable a tenant in tail to acquire or pass a base fee, determinable on the failure of the issue in tail, to gain a title by non-claim, and to pass the estates and bar the rights of married women. For the first two objects, the first fine was usually resorted to. The last object was often accomplished by the first fine, sometimes by the second, but more frequently by the third, which was usually resorted to for conveying the life estates and interests of married women, and for creating terms of years to bind, by way of estoppel, their contingent, or executory or other estates and interests. (See Co. Litt. 121, n. 1.)

A fine, according to the sort used, would also produce the following effects;— it would operate by estoppel in other cases besides the one above noticed; it would operate as a confirmation of all prior defeasible estates or charges made by the party levying it: it would release or extinguish rights, interests, and powers: it would destroy, or extinguish contingent remainders and executory interests: it would create a discontinuance when levied by a tenant in tail possession: it would revoke devises, and when levied by a tenant for life or in tail after possibility of issue extinct, or by a tenant for years, or by a copyholder, it would produce a forfeiture; and when levied by a tenant in tail, with the immediate remainder or reversion in fee to himself, the base fee acquired by the fine would merge in the remainder or reversion, which would immediately become an estate in possession, and all the estates and charges made on the remainder or reversion not only by the tenant in tail himself, but also by those who were previously entitled to the remainder or reversion, would in consequence of the merger, be let into possession, and become immediately available.

To proceed with the New Statute.

Sec. 14. And be it further enacted, That all warranties of lands which after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, shall be made or entered into by any tenant in tail thereof shall be absolutely void against the issue in tail, and all persons whose estates are to take effect after the determination or in defeasance of the estate tail.

Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, every actual tenant in tail, whether in possession, remainder, contingency, or otherwise, shall have full power to dispose of for an estate in fee simple absolute, or for any less estate, the lands entailed, as against all persons claiming the lands entailed by force of any estate tail which shall be vested in or might be claimed by, or which but for some previous Act would have been vested in or might have been claimed by, the person making the disposition, at the time of his making the same, and also as against all persons, including the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, whose estates are to take effect after the determination or in defeasance of any such estate tail; saving always the rights of all persons in respect of estates prior to the estate tail in respect of which such disposition shall be made, and the rights of all other persons, except those against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made.

Sec. 16. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That where, under any settlement made before the passing of this Act, any woman shall be tenant in tail of lands within the provisions of an Act passed in the eleventh year of the reign of his Majesty King Henry the Seventh, intituled "Certain Alienations made by the Wife of the Lands of her deceased Husband shall be void," the power of disposition hereinbefore contained as to such lands shall not be exercised by her except with such assent as, if this Act had not been passed, would, under the provisions of the said Act of King Henry the h, have rendered valid a fine or recovery levied or suffered by her lands.

17. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That, except as to lands comprised in a settlement made before the passing of the said Act of the eleventh year of his Majesty King Henry the eighth, shall be and the same is hereby enacted.

18. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That the power of disposition before contained shall not extend to persons of estates tail who, by an Act in the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth years of the reign of his Majesty King Henry the eighth, intituled "An Act to embarment the Recovery of Lands wherein the right is in reversion," or by any other Act, have been restrained from barring their estates tail, or tenants in tail after possibility of issue.

19. And be it further enacted, That from the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, in any case in which an estate tail in any land shall have been barred and converted into a base fee, either before or on or after the death of the person who, if such estate tail had not been barred, would have been actual tenant in tail of the same lands, shall have power to dispose of such lands as against all persons, including the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, until the estates are to take effect after the expiration of the term or in defeasance of the base fee, which the estate tail shall have been converted into, so as to enlarge the base fee into a fee simple absolute; saving always the rights of all persons in respect of estates tail, and the estate tail which shall have been converted into a base fee, and the rights of all persons, except those against whom disposition is by this Act authorized to be made.

Sec. 20. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That nothing in this Act contained shall enable any person to dispose of any lands entailed in respect of any expectant interest which he may have as issue inheritable to any estate tail therein.

Sec. 21. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That if a tenant in tail of lands shall make a disposition of the same, under this Act, by way of mortgage, or for any other limited purpose, then and in such case such disposition shall, to the extent of the estate thereby created, be an absolute bar in equity as well as at law to all persons as against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made, notwithstanding any intention to the contrary may be expressed or implied in the deed by which the disposition may be effected: Provided always, that if the estate created by such disposition shall be only an estate pour autre vie, or for years absolute or determinable, or if by a disposition under this Act by a tenant in tail of lands, an interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance shall be created without a term of years absolute or determinable, or any greater estate, for securing or raising the same, then such disposition shall in equity be a bar only so far as may be necessary to give a full effect to the mortgage, or to such other limited purpose, or to such interest, lien, charge, or incumbrance, notwithstanding any intention to the contrary may be expressed or implied in the deed by which the disposition may be effected.

(To be continued.)

---

PROBLEM IV.

VOL. 3.

DISTRESS FOR RENT.

Who may Distrain?

---

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM 2. VOL. III.

CONTRACT—WHEN IT IS TO BE PERFORMED.

As it is obvious that a contract should be performed according to its legal construction, I think it would not be improper to introduce in this place a brief consideration of a few of the principal recognized rules for the interpretation of contracts.

1st. The construction of the agreement should be reasonable, and as near the apparent intents of the parties as the rules of law will admit. (2 Bl. Com. 379.)

2nd. It should be favourable. So that where the intention is clear, too minute a stress should not be laid on the strict and precise signification of words. (2 Saund. 157.) And if the words will bear two senses, one agreeable to and another against law, that sense should be preferred which is most agreeable thereto. (2 Bl. C. 379.)

3rd. Generally the plain and popular sense of the words employed by the parties must prevail, in preference to their strict grammatical and etymological meaning. (4 East, 136.) Nevertheless the usage of trade may, in respect to the subject matter, have given the language of the contract a peculiar meaning, and, in that case, the peculiar sense must prevail. (4 East, 135; Haynes v. Halliday, 5 M. and P. 572.) And,

4th. The construction should be made of the entire agreement, and not merely upon disjointed parts. (15 East, 421.)

With the aid of these rules, and others of perhaps minor importance, which may be found in the works of the various text-writers upon this subject, it may not generally be found very difficult to determine the legal construction of a contract; and this being determined it must be performed accordingly. But in considering the performance of contracts, they would seem to present three distinct varieties, to which it may be of importance to attend. First, it is to be inquired whether the contract contains mutual and independent agreements; for if it does, then each party is entitled to claim from the other a performance of the contract, or to recover damages for the non-performance, even though he himself should have been guilty of a breach of it. Or, secondly, whether the acts to be done on one side are to precede the acts to be performed on the other, and are, what are technically termed conditions precedent and dependent; if they are precedent conditions, they must be first performed. Thirdly, whether or not the agreements be mutual, and the acts agreed to be done, are to be performed at the same time; if in the affirmative, then if one of the parties be ready at the agreed time, and offers to perform his part of the contract, and the other is not ready, he may maintain an action for such default although it is doubtful which of them is obliged to perform the first act. (Comyns Contr. 40.)

It has been said that the precedent condition must be strictly fulfilled by the plaintiff, otherwise he cannot demand the completion of the contract; and so rigidly is this rule adhered to, that where it was a part of a condition precedent to the claim of a sum of £80. in addition to the purchase money of a new house, that the pavement in front of the adjoining houses should be laid down by the 21st of April, Tindal held that the delay of four days, though occasioned by bad weather, which prevented the workmen from proceeding, was sufficient to prevent the recovery of such claim. (Maryon v. Carter, 4 C. & P. 295.) It seems, moreover, that the performance of a condition on which a duty attaches, is not excused even where the prevention arises from a mere stranger. (6 T. R. 710.) It must, however, be observed that the time for the performance of the precedent condition is not always l in equity as at law (Radcliffe v. Gorton 12 Vesey Jun. 333).

ality in a contract (except in one or es) is essential to the validity of a or its performance (Howell v. George 1. 1.). So that a written agreement nain with A. B. two years, for the of learning a trade," is not binding, t of an engagement in the same in- it by A. B. to teach—(Lees v. Whit- Bing. 34).

performance of a contract is some- cused by statute; but there are some which a statute will not repeal a. "The difference," says Holt, C. J. Praym. 321) "where an Act of Par- will amount to a repeal of a cove- a contract], and where not, is this: a man covenants not to do a thing t was lawful for him to do, and an Parliament comes after and compels do it, there the Act repeals the cove- and vice versa: but where a man ts not to do a thing which was un- at the time of the covenant, and rds an Act makes it lawful, the Act t repeal the covenant."

ems to be a general rule, that where , by his own contract, engages to do it is deemed to be his own fault and at he did not thereby expressly pro- against contingencies, and exempt 'from responsibility in certain events; 1 such case, therefore, that is, in the e of an absolute and general contract, formance is not excused, by inevitable it, or other contingency, although not n by, or within the controul of the (Chitt. Junr. on Contr. p. 273; 8. 267.). To excuse the contractor the nance of the contract must be decid- npossible, by any means, at the time stipulation (Chit. Contr. 14).

entire contract cannot be apportioned; f a party engage to complete a certain fore his claim to remuneration is to accrue, he cannot recover for a partial per- formance, although the completion was pre- vented by accident, as fire, &c. (6. T. R. 320), or by the tortuous act of the person against whom he claims (Hull v. Height- man, 2 East, 146). But if the defendant by any act disaffirm the entirety of the contract, he renders himself liable for partial completion of the agreement. (Bragg v. Cole 6 Moore 114.)

In conclusion we shall notice a few of the leading rules for the rescinding of con- tracts—

The non-performance of a condition pre- cedent, especially if there be a refusal to complete it, entitles the defendant to aban- don the contract.(a)

The right to rescind a contract (except where the contract contains mutual and independent agreements) vests only in the party who has been guilty of no default. And by him it must be exercised within a reasonable time, to be determined by a jury (1 Moore 106).

A contract cannot, in general, be re- scinded by one party, unless both parties can be placed in the same situation, and can stand upon the same terms as existed when the contract was made (7 East 484). So that where a party has received a partial benefit from the contract, he cannot rescind it.

ALPHONSO.

(a) Our Correspondent refers us to Chitty on Contracts, p. 275, as the authority from whence he gains this RULE. Whether this reference was intended to mystify us or our readers we cannot say, but certainly no such rule is there to be found. The fact is, that these rules are copied altogether from Chitty on Contracts, p. 574, but are so mutilated and unintelligible that we find it necessary to give Mr. Chitty's own words.

"The general rule is, that a contract can- not be rescinded by one party so as to enable him to recover back money paid by him thereon, as money had and received to his use, unless the other party concur in treating the agreement as abandoned ab initio; or unless it were part of the original bargain, that in a certain event the power of rescinding, and right to recover back such money should be vested in one of the parties.

“There are some instances in which, although an agreement of a continuing nature has been in part performed, the further performance of it may be excused, or discharged by conduct of the other party wholly at variance with the spirit of the contract. These are not cases strictly within the law relative to the abandonment or rescinding of the contract ab initio; when a right to recover back money paid as the consideration may arise.

“A contract cannot, in general, be rescinded in toto by one of the parties, where both of them cannot be placed in the identical situation which they occupied, and cannot stand upon the same terms as those which existed, when the contract was made, Hunt v. Silk, 5 East 449; Beed v. Blandford, 2 Y. & I. 278. The most obvious instance of this rule is, where one party by having had possession, &c. has received a partial benefit from the contract. It would be unjust to destroy a contract, in toto, where a party has derived some advantage by the other party having, to some extent, performed the agreement; in such case the agreement shall stand: the defendant must perform his part thereof, and must seek in a cross action compensation in damages for the plaintiff's default. Of late, however, the Courts, to prevent unnecessary litigation, have, in many instances, allowed a defendant, in case of a partial failure of consideration (except where the action is on a bill of exchange, and a question of unliquidated damages would be raised by inquiring into the consideration for such bill, Moggeridge v. Jones, 14 East, 486, Spiller v. Westlake, 2 B. & ad 155;

post division 4.) instead of bringing a cross action, to reduce the damages by setting up such partial failure of consideration. This relaxation of the rule generally applies in the case of a contract for goods, or work and labour and materials; in which the defendant, when sued for the price, may shew the insufficiency of the goods, or incomplete performance of the work, &c., although a specific sum were agreed upon. Havelock v. Geddes, 10 East, 546; Wilbeam v. Ashton, 1 Camp., 78; Bragg v. Cole, 6 Moore, 114; Pordage v. Cole, 1 Saund. 320; b, note.—Chitty on Contracts, p. 574.—Ed.

Law Reports.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Nov. 12.

Sittings in Banco.

WARD v. BYRNE.

Bond in restraint of Trade—How far void in Law.

Mr. Erle showed cause against the rule, on the score that the condition of the bond between the parties, for the breach of which the plaintiff sued and had recovered, was one void in law, as being in restraint of trade—not to carry on himself, or be employed in, the business of a coal-merchant, during the space of nine months after he should have left his service. This was not such a contract as was opposed to the general policy of the common law, to such an extent at least as would warrant the Court in arresting the judgment which the plaintiff had obtained. If it had been a general unlimited restraint upon trade, then the defendant might maintain his rule, but inasmuch as the restriction was only for the short space of nine months, during which the defendant might easily obtain a livelihood in other occupations beside that of a coal-merchant, neither he nor the public could be said to suffer to such an extent as was contemplated by the early writers upon the subject, when they said that a general restraint upon trade was opposed to the policy of the common law, and therefore bad.

Mr. Addison replied, and distinguishing the cases quoted by his learned friend from that now before the Court, argued that this restraint was bad, because it was clearly unnecessary for the protection of the plaintiff, who it was admitted have bound down the defendant not to the plaintiff's trade within certain limits pace. Here, however, he had absolutely tied the defendant from carrying on any trade throughout the whole of England for a period of nine months—a contract which was necessary for his own safety, and unreasonable in its terms, on which account it ought to be allowed by the courts of law.

COURT were of opinion that the judgment ought to be arrested in this case. All limitations were against good policy, and bad in law, and there were some exceptions to it, but the present was not one. By the agreement or arrangement the defendant was prohibited from going into the service of a coal-merchant, even in the capacity of a footman or a knife-cleaner, although his employment was at Exeter or Carlisle. It ought to be said that his acceptance of even the position of traveller and clerk at such a distance ought to amply indemnify the plaintiffs.

absolute.

COURT OF REVIEW.—Nov. 7.

J. JOHN GLOVER.—EX PARTE CLARE.

SUPREDEAS—CONCERTED BANKRUPTCY supposed to affect the validity of a Fiat—no interference under 1 & 2 W. 4. c. 56. s. 42.

Swanston (with whom was Mr. Anderson) said this was the petition of a creditor for a supersedeas at the cost of Mr. William Gibbons the petitioning creditor. The petition alleged that the act of bankruptcy was invalid, and that there was no sufficient petitioning creditor's certificate, and that the whole was an arrangement contrived for the bankrupt's benefit. The applicant had sued out a judgment, and levied execution on the defendant's goods, but was defeated by the issue of the present fiat, and consequently lost the proceeds of the sale by the sheriff to the hands of the assignees. The property in question constituted the whole of the bankrupt's assets.

Temple, for the respondent, contended that this was a proper commission, sued out for the purpose of preventing one creditor from getting away the whole of the property under execution.

J. CROSS said, the petitioner was an execution creditor for a sum of £75 on a valid debt. No execution was served than the bankruptcy applied to a solicitor, who proposed an assignment, if the creditor would give up the execution. This was refused, on the ground that it would constitute an act of bankruptcy. This was the case of the bankrupt, struggling against the execution, met the present petitioning creditor, one of the bankrupt's relatives, who consented to sue out a fiat. Knowledge of an act of bankruptcy was apparently furnished by the bankrupt himself. The petitioning creditor alleged a debt of £100 for money lent, and £75 for a sum owing to his wife before marriage. No particulars of the £100 debt were given; but for the £75 a promissory note was produced, which had been taken by this creditor two years after the alleged loan of £100. This was only an incident, but it certainly tended to diminish the credit due to the parties. The bankrupt's goods were sold under the execution for £80, and nothing remained. A fiat was sued out, which could not cost less than that sum, if worked to a certificate for the alleged purpose of preventing one creditor from sweeping off the property. Nearly all the creditors who proved were members of the bankrupt's family; having thus power to give the bankrupt his certificate at the expense of the execution creditor. He (Sir J. Cross) was of opinion that this was a fraudulent transaction, not intended for the benefit of the creditors, but contrived for the purpose of defeating the petitioner, and affording the bankrupt the protection of a certificate. The fiat must be superseded.

Sir G. ROSE, believed that this was the first interference under sec. 42, (a) of the act 1 and 2 William IV. c. 56, which was understood to have involved an alteration in the bankrupt law. The present supersedeas was sought principally on the ground that it was a fraudulent commission; and it would be undoubtedly the duty of the Court to supersede the fiat on the ground that it was concerted, and ought not to be protected by the act of Parliament. Concert in itself was not sufficient to affect the validity of a fiat; but the Court would not allow a bankrupt to use a concerted and fraudulent commission for his own purposes. It might be right to issue a fiat to defeat an execution, but it must not be the fiat of the bankrupt. The solicitor's affidavit had not contradicted the charge of concert, but had rather confirmed it. It was answered in such a manner, that it could not be considered sufficient. This was a concerted commission, tainted by fraud, and such was not a state of circumstances which the law could cover.

Fiat superseded with costs.

Mr. Temple inquired whether the decision of the Court turned on the question of law?

The COURT said that it disposed of the matter generally. It was of opinion that the debt and act of bankruptcy had not been proved, and that the commission was fraudently contrived.

(a) That from and after the passing of this Act, no Commission of Bankrupt shall be superseded, nor any fiat annulled, nor any adjudication reversed, by reason only that the commission, fiat, or adjudication, has been concerted by, and between the petitioning creditor, his solicitor, or agent, or any of them; and the bankrupt, his solicitor, or agent, or any of them, save and except where any petition to supersede a commission for any such cause shall have been already presented, and shall be now pending.—Ed.

Nov. 12.

Ex parte THOMAS MAY.

PRACTICE—Jurisdiction of the Court under 2 and 3 W. 4, c. 114, s. 6. over the proceedings of a Fiat after Supersedeas.

Mr. Russell said this was the petition of Mr. May, against whom a fiat was issued by the assignees under a superseded commission against a person named Malachy. The fiat against the petitioner was annulled for want of prosecution, and an action was brought against the petitioning creditor for its illegal issue. In production of this action it was requisite to produce the fiat, and an application was made for its prosecution and enrolment, but was met by a refusal. The petitioner was willing to pay the costs of enrolment, and entreated the Court to interfere and prevent the respondent from defeating the action by the omission of the requisite formality.

Messrs. Swanston and Bethell contended that the enactment in the 96th section of the 6th George IV., upon which this application was founded, had reference only to subsisting fiats. The Court had no jurisdiction to make such an order after the annulling of a fiat by the Lord Chancellor. It would be wholly without precedent.

The COURT said the 6th section (2 and 3 William IV., c. 114) directed entry of record in the Enrolment-office on application in behalf of parties interested therein. Here was an action which must fail if the fiat was not recorded, as the 8th section of the same act declares that no fiat issued, or to be issued shall be received as evidence except as entered in record. The respondent had shown no reason for refusal, except that it would give the petitioner an opportunity of trying a cause: a good reason for granting the prayer of the petition. It was the opinion of that Court that it was competent to make the order, and that this was a fit case for such an order to be made; and, as proper application had been made to the respondents before applying to the authority of the Court, the petitioner was entitled to be repaid the costs which had been occasioned by the pertinacity of his opponents.

BAIL COURT.

In re EBENEZER JACOB.

Abolition of Arrest for Debt Act—PRACTICE—Defendant being arrested upon affidavit that he was about to leave the Country—RULE to show cause why he should not be discharged.

Mr. Miller applied to the Court in this case for a rule, calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the defendant should not be discharged out of the custody of the Marshall, upon the ground that he had been improperly arrested upon mesne process. The learned gentleman first read the affidavit upon which the defendant has been held to bail, which stated only that the deponent had a conversation with a person named William Baker, in which Baker intimated that he believed Mr. Jacob was upon the point of returning to his residence at Dungarvan, in the county of Waterford, in Ireland. In support of the application the learned counsel next read the affidavit of the defendant himself, stating that he had been Member of Parliament for the borough of Dungarvan, and that he had been held to bail on the 29th of October last, upon the ground that he was about to go out of the jurisdiction. He said, that since May, 1838, he had wholly resided in this county at the Union Hotel in Cockspur-street; at the St. Alban's, in Charles-street, St. James's; at Blake's, at the Blue Posts, in the Haymarket; and at Mount-gardens, Lambeth; that he did not contemplate leaving the county at all to go anywhere, and least of all to Ireland; that he had no property in Dungarvan or elsewhere in the county of Waterford, and that he had not had any residence in Ireland for the last year and a-half. He finally denied that he knew any body of the name of William Baker, from whom the plaintiff appeared to have received his information as to the deponent's intention to return to Ireland.

Rule granted.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.—Nov. 9.

FIAT AGAINST ——— PETERS.

Husband and Wife—Whether the Wife of a Bankrupt, being entitled to a Legacy, has a right to a Settlement out of it. (a)

In this case William Moody, by his will,

(a) See Sturgis v. Champneys, ante p. 36.—Ed.

he 14th of June, 1814, gave to his wife, Elizabeth Peters (the bankrupt's wife) - - £200 Consols, the interest of £1400, 3 per cent. during her life, and at her decease he be divided among the children as follows:-

|                                        |   |   |              |
|----------------------------------------|---|---|--------------|
| Elizabeth Peters (the bankrupt's wife) | - | - | £200 Consols |
| William Moody                          | - | - | 200 —        |
| Peter Moody                            | - | - | 400 —        |
| Thomas Moody                           | - | - | 500 —        |

case of the death of either of the afore-children, his or her money was to be equally among the survivors. The testator died August, 1814, leaving his wife and the children surviving. Mr. Peters became at the 9th of June, 1827. William, one of the legatees, died the 7th of June, in the lifetime of the testator's widow. Elizabeth Moody, the testator's widow, died the 2nd of July, 1837, and on her death the £200 Consols, and one-third of the £200 Consols, and one-third of the £200 Consols, became payable.

The assignees claimed the legacy, which rose as to the right of the bankrupt's wife by her father, and which has become payable.

The assignees and the bankrupt and his wife to be bound by his Honour's decision, as to the right of the wife to a settlement, and if then to what extent such settlement be made.

Commissioner HOLROYD said he was of opinion that the bankrupt's wife had an equity, and was entitled to a settlement. It was a well settled rule that a party coming into a court must do equity, and therefore if a husband was obliged to file a bill for a legacy, the court required that a settlement should be made for the wife and children as the consideration for the husband's assistance, and the same equity applied against the assignees of the bankrupt husband, and the same rule held though the property might be recovered in the Ecclesiastical Court.

These cases bore upon the point—Re Moulson, 2 Atk. 419; Beresford v. Morgan, 1 Mad. 362. Then as to what proportion of the legacy the wife should have; indeed this the Court exercised a discretion, not tied down to any fixed rule. Under the circumstances of this case, he thought the wife should have half.

REPORT OF THE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX.—Nov. 12.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

Libel.

Writ of inquiry of damages was executed before Mr. Burchell, the Under-sheriff in this case. Mr. Stockdale appeared in person, but no one appeared for the defendants.

The plaintiff, in stating the case, said, what they had that day to try was an action for libel contained in the reports of certain inspectors of prisons; or rather in the reply of those inspectors to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, with respect to the prison of Newgate. The declaration began by setting forth that he (Mr. Stockdale) "was, and for a long time had been, a bookseller; and, as such bookseller and publisher of books, had published divers and very many scientific books, and particularly, in the year 1827, a certain physiological and anatomical book, written by a learned physician, on the generative system, illustrated by anatomical plates." And the libel for which the action was brought was thus set forth in that declaration:—"This last is a book," meaning the physiological and anatomical book, although the name was not given, on the generative system by John Robertson—"this last is a book of a most disgusting nature, and the plates indecent and obscene in the extreme." . . . "But we deny that that book is a scientific work (using that term in its ordinary acceptation), or that the plates are purely anatomical—calculated only to attract the attention of persons connected with surgical science; and we adhere to the terms which we have already employed as those only by which to characterize such a book. We also applied to several medical booksellers, who all gave it the same character. They described it as 'one of Stockdale's obscene books;' that it never was considered a scientific work; that it never was written for, or bought by, the members of the profession as such; that it was intended to take young men in, by inducing them to give an exorbitant price for an indecent work." On the present occasion the damages were laid at £50,000, and he had not the shadow of a doubt that when he sat down—before the Court was cleared—he would have every shilling at the jury's hands. As his counsel, on a former occasion, had observed in the Court of Queen's Bench, "The history of a cause is often of greater importance than the cause itself." And important as it might be, perhaps, to assess the damages in this cause, it was yet a cause the most essential in principle that had ever come before a British jury. He was not, however, entirely unread in the constitutional history of this kingdom, and he defied the Attorney-General or any counsel, let their knowledge be however great, to contradict him, when he said that the jury had nothing to try but the amount of damages. Still the importance of the question on which they would have to decide did not leave this as a common assessment of damages; they were not to deal with the defendants as there set forth, but with the Commons, the representatives of the people of England in Parliament assembled, as one branch of the legislature. They were the real defendants.

The UNDER-SHERIFF: You have no evidence to prove that.

Mr. Stockdale would produce evidence.

The UNDER-SHERIFF: There is no evidence to show that the House of Commons or any other body are the virtual defendants.

Mr. Stockdale would produce the resolutions of the House of Commons itself, purchased from Messrs. Hansard, the printers to that House. The case was of such infinite importance to the country, that he would not give up any matter of form, but would take his right as he had it, whilst the jury's and his own names would be enrolled in the history of their history as having stood between despotic usurpation and the rights of the people of England. It was for the jury to say what damages he had sustained: he had laid them at £50,000; he expected that sum at their hands, and he would be satisfied with no less. This was the third judgment which he had already obtained, and he regretted to say that upon every occasion there had been the repetition of the same endeavours, the same unconstitutional endeavours, to intimidate the jury in order to defeat his claims; he had been represented as unworthy support, as being about to run away to America; but there he was: he stood on the basis of the constitution, and no Attorney-General, however contemptuously he might speak of him, either within or without the walls of the House, could succeed in intimidating him; at the hands of the jury he hoped to beat that officer for the third time on a question of the law of England. When the first verdict was obtained, he was represented by the Attorney-General as the publisher of Harriet Wilson; but he soon said that the Commons of England were on their trial, and he would have produced an effect upon the Bench if the Lord Chief Justice had not, in a burst of eloquence, declared that "it were a tyranny which no man ought to submit to." That conduct the House had continued to that very hour.

The UNDER-SHERIFF: We do not know what they are doing in the House.

Mr. Stockdale: On that first action he had got nothing, not even his costs. On that trial, the very day before the case was tried, however strange the jury might think it, and however incredible, the House of Commons had come to a resolution to intimidate the judge and jury as well as the plaintiff.

The UNDER-SHERIFF: There can be no evidence of the fact that they came to the resolution to intimidate the judges.

Mr. Stockdale had the judgment of the judges, which the Under-Sheriff had doubtless seen.

The UNDER-SHERIFF had not seen it, but he was sure that the House did not come to a resolution to intimidate the judges.

Mr. Stockdale: The jury would soon see it from the application of the Sheriff of Middlesex himself.

The UNDER-SHERIFF: The defendants could have nothing to do with any application by the Sheriff.

Mr. Stockdale: It might be the legal form that the defendants had nothing to do with it; for when a motion was made which occupied two days in order to prevent the plaintiff's right—a right to which every person was by law entitled—it was difficult for him to believe that the defendants had nothing to do with it. What reason had the Sheriff to make the motion? He had no concern in the action; but the damages were laid at £50,000; the Sheriff was frightened at the amount, and wished to back out of the responsibility. And he might refer to this, because, as the papers for three days had been filled with nothing else, it was impossible for the jury not to know what had taken place. He assured them that it was not till three days after the first verdict that he had known that there had been a petition against him in the House of Commons. The Chief Justice and three other judges—Mr. Justice Littledale, Mr. Justice Patteson, and Mr. Justice Coleridge—had all declared that that was a most "extraordinary endeavour to influence trial by jury;" and it was most extraordinary in those who were emphatically a "Whig Government." The result of his first application was, that there was a verdict, from which he got nothing. But he found certain resolutions of the House, which he understood from the newspapers were passed on the 30th of May, 1837, and of which the defendants, at least, had cognizance; for their attorney, who was in Court, had served notice on him as well as on the Sheriff; and, though it frightened the Sheriff, it did not frighten him. One of the resolutions thus passed was intended to intimidate the jury, and it ran thus:—"That the power of publishing such of its reports, notes, or proceedings, as it shall deem necessary or conducive to the public interests, is an essential incident to the constitutional functions of Parliament, more especially of this House, as the representative portion of it." He wished to draw the attention of the jury especially to this resolution; for he wished to insist on the manner in which their rights were usurped, and a prejudice raised against him. The second resolution said, "That by the law and privilege of Parliament, this House has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction to determine upon the existence and extent of its privileges, and that the institution or prosecution of any action, suit, or other proceeding, for the purpose

ging them into discussion or decision in any court or tribunal elsewhere than in London, is a high breach of such privilege, and renders parties concerned therein amenable to the just displeasure and to the punishment of the law thereon." So that all parties—the Justices, the counsel, the attorney, the defendant himself of course and the jury (and now indeed, the High-Sheriff, and he feared the Sheriff himself)—would meet with the condemnation. It was, however, a principle of the British constitution, that those who lived in houses should be extremely careful how they broke the windows of other people. Now, as regards to the inspectors of prisons themselves, there was one curious fact; one of the parties who were the origin of these proceedings, although styled an esquire, had declared in his (Mr. Stockdale's) hearing, on the motion of the Chief Justice, as a clergyman, as described by Lord John Russell as North Russell, Esq., but he had described himself as a clergyman; and in answer to the question which was put to him, he declared that he had never known anything of medical or legal works, and therefore he was of all men the most incompetent judge, although he wrote strong language in order to furnish to her Majesty's Government an excuse for depriving the city of London of its charter. They thought that they could only do this by bringing in the name of the most unpopular man in the country, having already stripped him of his property. They thought, however, that this plaintiff had offended so many by his conduct, and by his uncompromising determination to do good and to do justice, that through the charter of London might be overthrown, there might no longer be that imperium in seipsum which the city of London now constituted. Having obtained two verdicts, he did not make great complaint that, "like an eagle in a snare," as Coriolanus said, he was obliged to stand forward to oppose the omnipotent powers of England. The Commons, however, had no more power than he had—they did not know their privileges as well as he did—threatened, but they delayed till their committee had made a certain report, and then they were put in committee, and the House of Commons of England afterwards resolved, that they would have, and will exercise "this fearful power of taking away a man's property which might not be recovered—of taking away a man's liberty which is considered beyond price—of taking away a man's life, which, as far as he (Mr. Stockdale) was concerned, he did not value at a snap of the finger—of taking away that, which he did infinitely value, his character. He would stand in the future pages of history as high as any man living, and he was even prepared to lay down his life on the block if it were necessary—one of his name knew no fear, corporeal or mental. Those against whom the verdict would be that day given must be considered as the agents of the House of Parliament. The House had paid all their former expenses, raised as those expenses were to the utmost possible extent. He was glad that they got them: for there were no men in London, or in the empire, that he respected more than Messrs. Hansard. He had known their father when a servant in the house of which he had died the head, and with him and with them he had spent many large sums of money. He acknowledged that his respect for them was unlimited; and he hoped that they would for many years hold the valuable office they enjoyed, but not to the injury of the jury or of himself, or to fritter away the rights of the public. The only ostensible plea which had been made use of in the course of these proceedings was, "Nobody will choose to encounter this great (so-called) omnipotent power." Many would feel that it was certain ruin—that it was fighting the public purse against an individual. But did he fear? With the law at his back, why should he fear? It was true they might ruin him, but he had been ruined before—he had been ruined by fire—he had been ruined by shipwreck—he had been ruined by water—he had been ruined by bad debts; but there he stood, rather the worse for age, but with physical power sufficient to do not only himself and his family, but the public and his country justice. It was said that the defendants had nothing to do with this, and that there was no reason why he should make such remarks; but he made them because the defendants had pleaded that they were the agents of the House of Commons.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—Not in this cause.

Mr. Stockdale.—In the two former causes they had so pleaded, and in this cause the defendants' attorney intimated that they were agents of the House of Commons, and although the forms of the House did not enable them to plead at all, it must not be forgotten that the House would bear them harmless. He held in his hand a parliamentary document which proved this.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—Those were expenses relating to a former cause.

Mr. Stockdale said he was pleading this in aggravation.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—As to the verdicts before, the forms of law are open to recover the amount of damages; they could not be recovered in this action.

Mr. Stockdale.—The costs allowed to the defendants in the former action amounted to £1200l. or £1300l. It was necessary that the jury should see the document.

(To be continued.)

BOROUGH COURTS IN ENGLAND AND WALES.

2 & 3 VICT. CAP. XXVII.

An Act for regulating the proceedings in the Borough Courts of England and Wales.

[19th July, 1839.]

Whereas great difficulty has been found in framing legal and convenient rules for regulating the practice of Borough Courts under the authority given for that purpose by an Act passed in the Session holden in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales;" and by an Act passed in the Session holden in the sixth and seventh years of the same reign, intituled "An Act for the better Administration of Justice in certain Boroughs;" and it is expedient that the power to make rules for regulating the proceedings of such Courts, subject to the approbation and confirmation of the Judges of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster, should be explained and in some respects enlarged: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that in every Borough named in the Schedules A. and B. to the first herein-before mentioned Act annexed, in which by charter, custom, or otherwise, there is, or ought to be, holden a Court of Record for the trial of civil actions, every Judge of such Court shall have authority to make, alter, and revoke such rules for appointing the times of holding such Court, for regulating the forms and manner of proceeding, the process, appearance, practice, and pleadings in such Court, and for settling the reasonable fees of the Attornies of the Court for business transacted therein, as shall from time to time seem to him necessary and proper for expediting the business of such Court with most convenience, and at the smallest reasonable expense: Provided always, that no such rules, or any order revoking or altering such rules, shall be of any force until they shall have been allowed and confirmed by three of the Judges of the superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster.

II. Provided also, and be it enacted, That every such Court shall be holden for the trial of Issues of Fact and of Law four times at least in each year, and with no greater interval between the holding of any two successive Courts than four calendar months.

III. And be it further enacted, That from and after the first day of September next, all personal Actions brought in the Borough Courts of England and Wales shall be commenced by Writ of Summons.

IV. And be it enacted, That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present Session of Parliament.

NOMINATION OF SHERIFFS.—Nov. 15.

ENGLAND.

Bedfordshire.—Arthur Macnamara, of Easton Bray, Esq.; William Frederick Brown, of Dunstable, Esq.; William Sutcliffe, of Great Bramingham, Esq.

Berkshire.—Henry Hippley, of Lamborn-place, Esq.; John Jesse Bulkeley, of Lindonhill, Esq.; Sir Henry Russell, of Swallowfield, Bart.

Buckinghamshire.—John Peter Deering, of the Lee, Esq.; John Frederick Crewe, of Lokes-hall, High Wycombe, Esq.; Thomas Newland Allen, of the Vache, Chalfont St. Giles, Esq.

Cambridge and Huntingdon.—Thomas Mortlock, of Little Abingdon, Esq.; Edward Humphreys Greene, of Hinxton, Esq.; John Slack, of Soham, Esq.

Cheshire.—Charles Lawton, of Lawton, Esq.; John Tollemache, of Tilstone-lodge, Esq.; James Walthall Hammond, of Wistaston, Esq.

Cornwall.—Henry Lewis Stephens, of Tregenna-castle, Esq.; Sir Richard Rawlinson Vy-vyan, of Trelowarren, Bart.; William Henry Pole Carew, of East Anthony, Esq.

Cumberland.—Sir George Musgrave, of Eden-hall, Bart.; James Robertson Walker, of Gilgarran, Esq.; Fletchville Lawson Ballantine Dykes, of Dovenby-hall, Esq.

Derbyshire.—William John Bagshaw, of the Oaks, Esq.; Thomas Pares, of Hopewell, Esq.; Sir Henry Hunloke, of Wingerworth, Bart.

Deronshire.—Augustus Stowey, of Tenbury, Esq.; Charles Gordon, of Wiscombe-park, Esq.; John Crocker Bulteel, of Fleet, Esq.

Dorsetshire.—John Samuel Wanley Saw-bridge Erle Drax, of Charborough-park, Esq.; William Charles Lambert, of Knowle-cottage, Corfe Maule, Esq.; John Hussey, of Mark-hill, Esq.

Durham.—Sir Hedworth Williamson, of Whitburn, Bart.; William Russell, of Brancepeth-castle, Esq.; Robert Eden Duncombe Safton Whitworth-park, Esq.

Essex.—Christopher Thomas Tower, of Weald-hall, Esq.; Abraham Johnson, of Bewick-place, Esq.; John Archer Houlton, of Hallingbury-place, Esq.

Gloucestershire.—Sir Michael Hicks Hick-Beach, of Williamstrip-park, Bart.; Edmund son, of Edgworth, Esq.; James Wood-Walters, of Barnwood-house, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Thomas Heywood, of Hop-sq.; Robert Lane, of Ryelands, Esq.; n Barneby, of Clater, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Charles Snell Chauncey,
e Munden, Esq.; George Gould Morgan, chendenbury, Esq.; John Bennet Laws, hampsted, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Charles Milner, of Preston-hall, Esq.; d Hussey, of Scotney-castle, Esq.; Arott, of Bentham-hill, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Sir George Joseph Palmer, nlip, Bart.; Richard Mitchell, of En-Esq.; John Bainbrigg Story, of Lock-Esq.

Herefordshire.—Thomas George Corbett, of Esq.; Sir Edward Brakenbury, of Sken-Knt.; Sir John Charles Thorold, of Sys-use, Bart.

Herefordshire.—Samuel Homfray, of Bed-Esq.; Summers Harford, of Sirhowy, John Etherington Welch Rolls, of the Esq.

Herefordshire.—William Howe Wyndham, of gg, Esq.; Henry Villebois, of Marham-Esq.; Sir John Jacob Buxton, of Shad-Bart.

Herefordshire.—Thomas Alderson of Peterborough, Esq.; Frederick Wilernon Wentworth, of Stoke-park, Esq.;
t Sackett Tomlins, of Fotheringhay-castle,

Herefordshire.—William Lawson, of irst, Esq.; Sir Matthew White Ridley, of on, Bart.; William Hodgson Cadogan, of burn Priory, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Thomas Dickenson Hall, atton, Esq.; Sir Jukes Granville Jukes n, of Clifton, Bart.; Henry Smith, of rd, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Hugh Hammersley, of Asten, John Shawe Phillips, of Culham, Esq.; Vanderstegen, of Caneend, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Samuel Richard Fydell, of ott, Esq.; Joseph Tomblin, of Leighfield, Richard Westbrook Baker, of Cottesmore,

Herefordshire.—Sir Andrew Vincent Corbett, ton Reynold, Bart.; Thomas Eyton, of Esq.; the Hon. Gustavus Frederick lton, of Burwarton.

Herefordshire.—John Jarratt, of Camerton, William Francis Knatchbull, of Babing-Esq.; Robert Charles Tudway, of the city
ells, Esq.

Herefordshire.—Edmund Wigan, of Lapley, Henry John Pye, of Clifton-hall, Esq.;
ard Grove, of Shenstone-park, Esq.

County of Southampton.—George Henry

Ward, of Northwood-park, Esq.; John Meggott
Elwes, of Bossington-house, Stockbridge, Esq.; Horatio Francis Kingsford Holloway, of March-wood-lodge, Southampton, Esq.

Suffolk.—George St. Vincent Wilson, of Redgrave, Esq.; Sir Joshua Ricketts Rowley, of Tendrigg-hall, Bart.; Edward Bridgrain, of Coney Weston, Esq.

Surrey.—William Leveson Gower, of Titseyplace, Oxted, Esq.; the Hon. Peter Locke King, of Woburn-park; Charles Barclay, of Bury-hill, Esq.

Sussex.—John Davis Gilbert, of Eastbourne, Esq.; Sir Richard Hunter, of Patching, Knt.; George Wyndham, of Petworth, Esq.

Warwickshire.—Dempster Heming, of Caldecott, Esq.; Keeling Greenway, of Warwick, Esq.; John Little, of Newbold Pacey, Esq.

Wiltshire.—William Henry Fox Talbot, of Lacock Abbey, Esq.; John Edward Andrew Starkey, of Spye-park, Esq.; Ambrose Hussey, of Salisbury, Esq.

Worcestershire.—James Foster, of Stourbridge, Esq.; Thomas Charles Hornybold, of Blackmore-park, Esq.; Edward Holland, of Linchwick, Esq.

Yorkshire.—Sir Thomas Aston Clifford Constable, of Burton Constable, Bart.; Robert Milnes, of Bawtry, Esq.; the Hon. Sir Edward Marmaduke Vavasour, of Hazlewood.

WALES.

Anglesea.—Sir Richard Bulkeley Williams
Bulkeley, of Baron-hill, Bart.; Thomas Asheton Smith, of Trefarther, Esq.; John Williams, of Trefes, Esq.

Breconshire.—Richard Douglas Gough, of Yniscedwen, Esq.; Howel Jones Williams, of Corty Mawr, Esq.; William Bevan, of Gaunaal, Esq.

Cardiganshire.—John William Lewis, of Llanceydon, Esq.; Alban Thomas Davies, of Tyglyn, Esq.; David Davies, of Cardigan, Esq.

Carmarthenshire.—John Mears, of Llanstephen-place, Esq.; John Lloyd Price, of Glanzwelly, Esq.; William Peel, of Taliaris, Esq.

Carnarvonshire.—The Hon. Edward Mostyn
Lloyd Mostyn, of Plas-Flen; Sir Love Parry Jones Parry, of Madryn, Knt.; Edward Lloyd, of Tymauz-Llysfaen, Esq.

Denbighshire.—Townshend Mainwaring, of Marchwell-hall, Esq.; the Hon. Edward Mostyn Lloyd Mostyn, of Bodidrist; John Bamford Hesketh, of Bryndulas, Esq.

Flintshire.—William Shipley Conway, of Bodryddan, Esq.; William John Banks, of Soughton-hall, Esq.; Sir William Lewis Salusbury Trelawney, of Ledbrooke, Bart.

Glamorganshire.—Charles George Calland, of Upper Forest, Esq.; Michael Williams, of Morfa, Esq.; John Bruce Pryce, of Duffryn, Esq.

Merionethshire.—George Lloyd, of Plasgudie, Esq.; Edward Griffith, of Gwastradryn, Esq.; Lewis Williams, of Fromrtion, Esq.

Montgomeryshire.—Thomas Evans, of Maenol, Esq.; John Vaughan, of Cefndu, Esq.; Sir John Roger Kynaston, of Hardwick, Bart.

Pembrokeshire.—Richard Llewellyn, of Tregwynt, Esq.; John Llewellyn Puxley, of Tenby, Esq.; Thomas Lloyd, of Killrhew, Esq.

Radnorshire.—Edward Rogers, of Stanagepark, Esq.; Francis Phillips, of Abbey Cwmlie, Esq.; George Cornwall Lewis, of Harptoncourt, Esq.

---

ARTICLED CLERKS APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED ATTORNIES(a)
IN HILARY TERM, 1840.

---

| Clerk's Name and Residence.                                                                                          | To whom Articled or Assigned.                                                                                        |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Anstis, Bernard, 5, Beaufort Buildings; and Wadebridge.                                                                     | Matthew Anstis, Liskeard; assigned to Edmund Hambly, Wadebridge.                                                            |
| Abbott, Charles James, 36, Gower Street.                                                                                    | Charles Thelwell Abbott, New Inn.                                                                                           |
| Alcock, Thomas Crawhall, 3, Denmark Row, Camberwell; and Sunderland.                                                        | Robert Wilson, Sunderland.                                                                                                  |
| Bullmore, Henry Orlando, 10, Wilmington Square; and Falmouth.                                                               | Francis Pendor and James Genn, Falmouth.                                                                                    |
| Bircham, Merick Bircham, 8, Devonshire Street; and Cambridge.                                                               | Francis John Gunning, Cambridge; assigned to Frederick Talbot, Bedford Row.                                                 |
| Riswood, Thomas, 21, College Place, Camden Town.                                                                            | Charles Cook, New Inn.                                                                                                      |
| Bramley, Thomas Charlesworth, 3, Camden Terrace, Kentish Town.                                                              | Charles John Showbridge, South Square                                                                                       |
| Brown, Henry Isaac, Bristol.                                                                                                | Thomas Dix, Bristol.                                                                                                        |
| Berry, Edward, Leicester; Sidmouth Street; and Hampstead.                                                                   | Samuel Stone, Leicester.                                                                                                    |
| Bartlett, Robert Henry William, 31, Francis Street; New Milman Street; Southampton Row; Kenton Street; and Shepton Mallett. | Samuel Craddock, Shepton Mallett; assigned to Edward Michell, Shepton Mallett.                                              |
| Beil, Adam, Manchester.                                                                                                     | John Law, Manchester.                                                                                                       |
| Bevil, James Wilfred, Basingstoke; and Piccadilly.                                                                          | Charles Chatfield, 22, Cornhill.                                                                                            |
| Brownlow, Richard Bolton.                                                                                                   | Edmund Haworth, Bolton; assigned to Adam Haworth, Bolton.                                                                   |
| Birch, Andrew Robert, Ashton-under-Lyne.                                                                                    | William Slater, Manchester.                                                                                                 |
| Brown, William, Manchester.                                                                                                 | Richard Maychell, Bolton-le-Moors; assigned to W. Christopher Chew, Manchester; assigned to William Hugh Myers, Manchester. |
| Barrett, George, 9, South Square.                                                                                           | William Barrett, Gray's Inn.                                                                                                |
| Beaton, Charles, 45, Gower Place; and Bath.                                                                                 | Robert Cook, Bath.                                                                                                          |
| Bellack, John Henry, Chorlton-upon-Medlock.                                                                                 | Alexander Thompson, Manchester.                                                                                             |
| Baker, Elijah Cresser, 15, King Street, Covent Garden; and Norwich.                                                         | James Winter, Norwich                                                                                                       |
| Beckett, Henry Hugh, 50, Burton Street; Frederick Place; and George Street.                                                 | William Beckett, Doncaster.                                                                                                 |
| Benjamin, Benjamin, Leeds.                                                                                                  | George Sheppard, Odry.                                                                                                      |
| Black, Edward, Sheffield; Manchester; Lincoln's Inn Fields.                                                                 | Robert Rodgers, Liverpool; assigned to John Morris, Manchester.                                                             |
| Clark, William Fox, Beverley.                                                                                               | James Baker Bainton, Beverley.                                                                                              |
| Carpenter, William Smith, 13, Coleman Street.                                                                               | Elmer Lawrence, Ipswich.                                                                                                    |
| Chicker, John Gilbert, 43, Gower Place.                                                                                     | Henry James Leigh, Taunton.                                                                                                 |
| Chambers, Charles John, Shepherd's Bush.                                                                                    | John William Fleetwood, Penbridge; assigned to Frederick John Manning, Dyer's Buildings.                                    |

<sup>a</sup> Marked * are Common Pleas, the rest are Queen's Bench.

- r, 15, Everett Street; and Truro. George Simmons, the younger, Truro.
 n, Ayling, Portsea. Daniel Howard, Portsea.
 h, Barnsley; and Trinity Terrace, Edward Newman, Barnsley.
- William, 57, Upper Seymour Street; Meaburn Staniland, Boston. and Belgrave Street.
 John James, the younger, King's John James Coulton, the elder, King's Lynn.
- George William Francis, 15, Sussex George Philips Foster Gregory, Poultry.
 Regent's Park.
 John, 44, Devonshire Street. George Delmar, 56, Lincoln's Inn Fields.
 John Martin, Bishopwearmouth. Thomas Thompson, Bishopwearmouth; assigned to George Smith Ransom, Bishopwearmouth.
- nry, Kingston-upon-Hull. Thomas Thompson, Kingston-upon-Hull.
 Edward, Cross Street, Hatton Garden; Richard Holier Atkinson, Southampton Buildings; assigned to Christopher Crouch, the younger, Southampton Buildings.
 d's Place; and Brownlow Street. Thomas Coombs, the elder, Dorchester.
- Thomas, the younger, Dorchester; and Thomas Coombs, the elder, Dorchester.
 Ormond Street.
 Edmund William, 46, Drummond Baker Gabb and William Woodhouse Secretan, ; and Abergavenny. Abergavenny.
 William Brissett, 63, Connaught Ter- Sir George Stephen, 17, King's-Arms Yard.
- lyde Park.
 Isaac, 10, Norfolk Street, Straud. James Phineas Davis, 14, Charlotte Street, Bedford Square.
- rt, William, 16, Ely Place. Robert Southee, Ely Place.
 , George, Dursley. William Duberley, Dursley.
 , Walter Wren, Prescott. William Rowson, Prescott.
 Thomas Hammond, 3, Upper Kenning- Henry Harpur, Kennington Cross.
- reen.
 John Frederick, 32, Tonbridge St., Henry Earle, Andover; assigned to Daniel ancras; Duke Street; and Winchester. Cullington, Craven Street.
 George Barbor, 20, East Street, Red William Lamb Hockin, Dartmouth; assigned Square; and Upper Eaton Street. to Edward Dunsterville Puddicombe, Lincoln's Inn Fields.
- John Reed, 16, Norfolk Street, Strand, George Frederick Fairclough, Liverpool.
 Liverpool.
 James Armstrong Francis, 42, Lower John Archibould, Thrapston.
 our Street; and Thrapston.
- Richard Chambers, Nantwich; and John Stanley, Newport; assigned to Richard Edleston, Nantwich.
 Charles, 2, Pinner's Court, Old Broad Thomas Evans, Hereford; assigned to John
 ; Hereford; and Parliament Street. Burder, Parliament Street.
 Richard, 25, Frederick Place, Hamp- Joseph Haywood, Sheffield.
- Road; Sheffield; Chichester Place;
 am, Henry, the younger, 36, Judd Thos. Bartlett, and Chas. Bartlett, Wareham, t, Wareham; and New Milman Street. assigned to Barry Parr Squance, Coleman Street.
- Charles, Barnstaple, Devon; and Joseph Fisher, Bury Street, St. James's, deceased; assigned to Thomas Hooper Law, hampton Row. Barnstable; assigned to Samuel Fisher, Bucklersbury.
- Frederick, Liverpool. Robert Frodsham, Liverpool.
 John, Chesterfield; and Newcastle-upon- Bernard Maynard Lucas, Chesterfield; assigned to Henry Ingledew, Newcastle-upon Tyne.
- David, Darlington. George Allison, Richmond and Darlington.
 Charles Mair, Nottingham. William Nicholson Hodgson, Carlisle.

(To be continued.)

Business of the Courts.*COURT OF CHANCERY.

Cheney v. Boulton, by order—Jones v. Goodrich, part heard.

Appeals.

Wellesley v. Wellesley, part heard—Wroe v. Clayton—Dutmas v. Robertson—Easum v. Appleford.

Petition by Order.

Coltham v. West.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.*Short Causes and Unopposed Petitions.*After the petitions,

Horner v. Seyner, to be spoke to—Ward v. Hatfield, cause and motion by order—St. John v. Champneys, exceptions and petition by order—Down v. Brayley, exceptions by order—Beadles v. Burch, two demurrers, part heard—Morris v. Morgan, demurrer—Ker v. Pew, ditto—Henry v. Pindar, plea—Strickland v. Strickland, ditto—Ryan v. Hill, part heard.

ROLLS' COURT.

Bebb v. Beckwith, further directions and costs—Larkins v. Paxton, ditto—Attorney-General v. Johnson—Pride v. Fooks, further directions and costs—Evans v. Brown, ditto, and petition—Davies v. Hopkins, ditto—Hodgson v. Charlton, ditto—Hopkins v. Hopkins—Cooper v. Waldegrave, exceptions—Evans v. Thomas.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.*Sittings in Banco.*BAIL COURT (QUEEN'S BENCH.)

Last Sittings at Nisi Prius in Michaelmas Term.

Undefended causes only will be taken.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.*Sittings in Banco.*COURT OF EXCHEQUER.*Sittings in Banco.*COURT OF EXCHEQUER.*London Common Juries.

Rossetti v. Milne—Hawkes v. Alger—Emery v. Clarke—Jones v. Lockwood—Aulagner v. James—Willis v. Lloyd—Atkins v. Gompertz—Abrahams v. Abbotts—Spyer v. Gregory—Morgan v. Jones—Hastings v. Smith—Bliss v. Davies—Kerridge v. Hesse—Wilson v. Banner.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.*BUSINESS OF THE COURT AFTER TERM.

Nov. 26.—Peremptory paper.

Nov. 27 and 28.—New Trials.

Nov. 29 and 30.—Special Paper.

Nov. 30.—The Court will give judgment upon cases previously argued.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

H. and C. B. under consideration.

SARAH CREIGHTON'S CASE.—From some unexplained cause, we have only just received this case. What was the title of Margaret Sewell? What is the custom of the Manor? and how does it affect a tenant by curtesy?

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

On Dec. 1 will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. III. Part IV.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This Number will complete Vol. III.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press,

SECOND EDITION,

Shortly will be published, price 18s. cloth bds

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. D. LOMME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, November 2, 1839.

The Legal Guide.

III.] SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1839.

[No. 5.]

LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.—[28th Aug., 1833.]

(Continued from p. 51.)

1. CONSIDERED.—DEEDS OF APPOINTMENT AND SETTLEMENT.—WHETHER IT IS POSSIBLE FOR A MAN TO TAKE TO HIMSELF POWER OF LIMITING AN ESTATE BY DEED, WILL, OR WRITING, ATTESTED AS REQUIRED, AT THE SAME TIME TAKING TO HIMSELF THE WHOLE INTEREST IN THE FEE OVER WHICH THE POWER IS TO BE EXERCISED.

Sec. 1 of this statute enacts (as we have before shown (a)), that every assurance lawfully made, or hereafter to be made, whether by deed, will, private Act of Parliament, or otherwise, by which lands are or shall be entailed, or agreed, or directed to be settled, shall be deemed a settlement; and any appointment made in exercise of any power contained in any settlement, or of any power arising out of the power contained in any settlement shall be considered part of such settlement, and the estate created by such appointment shall be considered as having been enacted by such settlement.

It has long been settled (b) that where a power of appointment over real estate is executed, the appointment takes under him who created the power, and not under him who executes it. The estates limited in default of and until the execution of the power are defeated by an appointment, for the execution of a power is the limitation of a use under and by the effect of the instrument by which the power was reserved.

Lord ELDON took a very elaborate view of the subject, in Maundrell v. Maundrell (c), upon one of the questions raised in that case, whether it is possible for a man to take to himself a power of limiting an estate by deed, will, or writing, attested as required; at the same time taking to himself the whole interest in the fee, over which the power is to be exercised; and his Lordship considered the practice was universal from his own experience. It was an ordinary thing for a man, about to suffer a recovery of an estate, of which he was tenant in tail, to declare that the recovery should enure to such uses, intents and purposes, as he should appoint; and in the mean time, and in default of appointment, and as to so much of the interest, of which there should be no appointment, or as should not be exhausted by the appointment that the estate should enure to himself in fee. Mr. Butler states that the fee vests until execution of the power (a); and the execution of that power, in the words of Mr. Booth, is the limitation of a use under and by the effect of the instrument, by which the power is reserved. It is true, the practice has left it almost without example, that the party does not also pass an interest for the security of the purchaser; for by many acts not disclosed the power might have been gone. When, therefore, the vendor recites his power, executes it, and conveys by feoffment, bargain and sale, or lease and release, he does profess both to execute his power and to pass his interest; and many cases might be put. Suppose the lease for a year was not executed, having been forgot, or had not a proper stamp, the release would have no operation, but the execution of the power would have limited a use to the persons named; and the use would engraft itself upon what Mr. Booth calls Scintilla Juris in the releasees; and those persons named in the execution of the power, would have taken precisely as if they had been persons to whom uses were limited in the original deed. Take the ordinary case of a marriage settlement, with a power to the tenants for life of leasing during minority. A power in the tenant for life to lease for twenty-one years is almost as inconsistent with his interest as a power to limit the fee with that of tenant in fee. But, when the tenant for life executes the power, the effect is not technically making a lease, but that lessee in fact stands precisely in the same relation to all the persons named in the first settlement, as if that settlement had contained a limitation to his use, for twenty-one years antecedent to the life estate and the subsequent limitations.

(a) Ante, p. 3.

(b) Sir Edward Clerke's case, 6 Rep. 18.

(c) 10 Ves. Jun. 255.

It cannot be represented as a question of any doubt that such a power may be reserved to the person, having the fee, and is capable of being executed. The extent to which the contrary proposition would go in affecting titles is surprising, and therefore the statement of any doubt upon it is alarming. In Sir Ed. Cleere's case (e) it is laid down expressly. All the cases applicable to the question of revocation of a devise, by the effect of a partition are wrong, if there is any ground for this doctrine, for, though it has been supposed very difficult to distinguish the cases of Tickner v. Tickner (b), and Luther v. Kidby (c), the distinction is obvious. In the one the object was a mere partition; the deviser, having an undivided moiety of the estate, took a divided moiety; and it was held no revocation, there being no purpose beyond partition. But, where partition is made, and in the mode of doing it the deviser conveys to such cases as he shall appoint; and, in default of appointment, to himself in fee, that is a revocation. Why? Because he had limited a power. They inferred, that it was legally limited; otherwise there would have been no difference in law between the one and the other. This was recognized in the case of Kenyon v. Sutton (d), before Lord ALVANLEY, when Chief Justice of Chester; and the will was held revoked as the deviser had taken a fee, with a power, over-riding it, to limit a use; and is not only sanctioned by practice, but really has its foundation in principle, acknowledged by the courts for the last two or three hundred years. As to the conclusion of the judgment (f) in Maunderell v. Maunderell, where the Master of the Rolls (g) seemed to think there is some pe-

(a) Co. Litt. 372. b. See also Fearnes cont. rem. 584. Smith v. Lord Cranford, 2 Ves. J. 602; 3 Id. 745.

(b) Cited in Parsons v. Freeman, Amb. 116; 3 Atk. 741; 1 Wils. 308.

(c) 3 P. Will. 170, n.; 8 Vin. 148.

(d) Cited Ves. J. 601.

(e) Ante p. 65.

(f) 7 Ves. 167.

(g) Sir W. Grant.

ity from the limitation to such uses as t Maundrell should, "by deed or will"
it, there is no such thing; for the deed l to create a use, to engraft upon the of the releases under the old instrumay be a deed or will that passed no t whatsoever. There is no difficulty in g that in fact thousands of securities in untry have their foundation in nothing
e execution of such a power.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM V.

VOL. 3.

PERI FACIAS.

What is this Writ? When, Where, and is it Executed?
What sort of Property may be taken, and disposed of?

THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM 3. VOL. III.

ARE THE PRINCIPAL MODES OF DE-SCENT DERIVED FROM LOCAL CUSTOMS?

Two modes of local descent are two, being Borough English and Gavelkind, the inci-attached to each it will be desirable to separately.

Borough English is a custom relating descent of lands in some ancient bo-and copyhold manors that estates descend to the youngest son, or if the has no issue, to the younger brother; custom is prevalent in Edmonton among places. The following reason is as-for the custom—that the youngest son, son of his tender age, is not so able to himself as the elder; the right of con-age with his tenant's wife on the wed-night never existed in the Lord of the r, although the belief long prevailed about England and Scotland, and was ed as the reason for the custom. This n goes with the land, and guides the descent to the youngest son, although there be a decree to the contrary. (2 Sev. 138.) If a man seised in fee of lands in Borough English make a feoffment to the use of himself and the heirs male of his body according to the course of the Common Law, and afterwards die seised, having issue two sons, the younger son shall have the lands by virtue of the custom, notwithstanding the feoffment. (Dyer, 179.) If a copyhold in Borough English be surrendered to the use of a person and his heirs, the right will descend to the youngest son according to the custom. (1 Med. 102.) And a youngest son shall inherit an estate tail; but an heir at Common Law may take advantage of a condition annexed to a Borough English land, though the youngest son shall be entitled to all actuals in right of the land, &c.; and the eldest son shall have tithes arising out of land Borough English, for tithes of common right are not inheritances descendible to an heir, but come in succession from one clergyman to another. Borough English land being descendible to the youngest son, if a younger son die without issue male, leaving a daughter, such daughter shall inherit jure representationis. (1 Salt. 243.)

By the custom of Borough English, the widow shall have the whole of her husband's lands in dower, which is called her Free Bench, and is given to her the better to provide for the younger children, with the care of whom she is entrusted. (1 Co. Litt. 33, 111.) Borough English is one of those customs of which the law takes particular notice; there is no occasion to prove that such custom actually exists, but only that the lands in question are subject thereto; but the extension of the custom to the collateral line must be specially pleaded. (Robinson, Gavelk. 38, 43, 93.) And as Borough English may be extended by special custom, so may it be restrained, therefore the customary descent may be confined to fee simple. (1 Inst. 110. 6 in n.)

2nd. Gavelkind is a custom annexed to lands in Kent, whereby the lands of the father are equally divided at his death among all his sons, or the lands of the brother among all the brethren, if he has no issue of his own—and is relied on by Blackstone as a pregnant proof that tenure in free socage was a remnant of Saxon liberty. It is universally known what struggles the Kentish men made to preserve their ancient liberties, and the success with which their struggles were attended. And as it is principally here that the custom of Gavelkind prevails, we may fairly conclude that this was a part of those liberties, agreeable to Mr. Selden's opinion, that Gavelkind, before the Roman Conquest, was the general custom of the realm. The distinguishing properties of this tenure are various. Some of the principal are, that the tenant is of sufficient age to alien his estate by Feoffment at the age of fifteen; that the estate does not escheat in case of attainder and execution for felony; that in most places the tenant had power of devising lands by will, before the statute for that purpose was made, the descent of the lands, as above stated, which was, indeed, anciently the most usual course of descent all over England, (Glanvil 67. c. 3.) though in particular cases particular customs prevailed. The daughter of a tenant in Gavelkind shall inherit jure representationis, although not within the words of the custom, dividing the lands among the heirs male. A wife shall be endowed of Gavelkind, of a moiety of the land whereof her husband dies seised, during her widowhood. (Co. Lit. 3.) The husband shall be tenant by the curtesy of half the Gavelkind lands of the widow during the time he continues unmarried, without having any issue by his wife; but if he marry, he shall forfeit his tenancy by the curtesy. If the husband have issue by the wife, and she die, he shall be tenant by the curtesy of the whole land, and though he marry, shall not forfeit his tenancy.

Gavelkind lands are, and always were forfeitable for treason, although the belief, "The father to the bough, the son to the plough extensively prevailed." Rents granted out of Gavelkind land descend in the same way as the land. Lay Rectories are descendible, according to the custom of Gavelkind; but the tithes, according to the Common Law. Parceners at Common Law and co-heirs in Gavelkind have the same rights. All lands in Kent shall be taken to be in Gavelkind, unless disgavelled by particular statutes. If lands are alleged to be in Kent, they shall be in Gavelkind, if the contrary doth not appear. It has been held that the superior Courts may take notice generally of Gavelkind without pleading, though not of the special custom of devising it, which ought to be pleaded specially. Tenure in Gavelkind abolished in Ireland by 17 and 18 G. 3. c. 49. Its abolition in England is recommended by the real Property Commissioners.

Nov. 21, 1839.

H. T. D.

Our industrious correspondent has not taken a sufficiently comprehensive view of this question. There is ANOTHER principal mode of descent derived from local customs viz. by Copy of Court Roll, estates held under which are in general descendible, according to the Canons of the Common Law.—As for a single instance. In some manors, the widow succeeds as heir to her husband to the exclusion of the issue, or if no widow, the younger brother succeeds, and if no brother, the youngest sister, and neither brother nor sister, the youngest next of kin of the whole and worthiest blood.—See Locke v. Southwood, 3 Mylne and Craig 420.—Locke v. Colman, Id. 430. We shall be glad to see that our correspondent second time takes up the problem, and completely resolves it.—Ed.

Law Reports.

ROLLS COURT—Nov. 14.

NELSON v. BRIDGES AND WOODHEAD.

ORD and TENANT—MINES—PAROL AGREEMENT for a Lease—Where a Lessor by his own act put it out of his power to perform his contract, the subject matter of the contract being destroyed pending the trial of the Court, on a bill filed by the defendant Lessee for specific performance, and in reliance to the Master to ascertain the amount of damage, ordered an action to be brought, the defendant in Equity making admissions, requisites to bring the question of damages before a Court of Common Law.

Defendant Bridges, the owner of certain quarries, entered into a parol agreement with the plaintiff in February, 1833, to grant a demise of part of the land and quarries, in which agreement the plaintiff took possession. Bridges afterwards refused to perform the contract, and brought an action of ejectment against Nelson, who filed his original bill in Equity for a specific performance, and for an injunction to restrain the ejectment. The injunction was refused upon the merits disclosed by the evidence of Bridges. The proceedings in ejectment were then prosecuted, and the action was tried at the Lent Assizes, 1835, and verdict for the plaintiff Bridges. The cause in Equity was brought to a hearing in 1837, and the material facts of the answer being then displaced by the evidence, the Court decreed the plaintiff entitled to specific performance of the contract. Pending these proceedings, the defendant Woodhead entered into possession of the quarries under a license from Bridges, and worked the stone quarry to a considerable extent.

This fact, however, did not appear at the trial of the cause; the consequence was, that the subject-matter of the contract being absent to a large extent, the plaintiff Nelson could not have the benefit of the decree pronounced in his favour, and filed his supplemental bill stating these facts, and praying that it might be referred to the Master to take an account to ascertain what loss and damage the plaintiff had been put to by the conduct of the defendants, and that the defendant Bridges should pay the amount thereof to the plaintiff. The facts above stated appeared by the answers and evidence. It appeared also by the evidence that while Woodhead was working the quarries the plaintiff was well aware of the circumstances, and granted him, for a consideration, a license to go over his land to enable him to work, and appeared further, that Bridges had discouraged Woodhead from working the quarries.

The defendant Bridges by his answer offered to grant to the plaintiff a demise of an adjoining stone quarry, in lieu of the one worked by Woodhead, and went into evidence to prove that the stone was as abundant and of as good quality.

Pemberton and Elmsley for the plaintiff.—This is a parol agreement affecting land on which no action at law can lie (Stat. of Frauds, sec. 4), and this Court alone can carry it into effect. The plaintiff is now deprived of the benefit of his contract by the conduct of the defendants, which he had no power of preventing. The Court having been induced to allow him to be turned out of possession upon the allegation of an answer which was in fact untrue. The lease when granted will bear date and take effect as of the time when it shall be executed. If the plaintiff should proceed at law, he can recover no adequate damages, because the substance of the thing contracted for was gone before his title at law would commence.

Richards and L. Wigram contra.—The agreement, it is true, was originally a parol agreement, but by the decree, declaring the plaintiff entitled to a specific performance, it became perfected and converted into a written agreement. Why, therefore, should not the plaintiff proceed at law upon it? The decree will refer back to the time of the contract, and make the agreement a written agreement in 1834, before the defendant Woodhead had taken any stone. The plaintiff may, therefore, well proceed at law and recover damages. The prayer of the bill is to take an account of the loss and damage sustained by the defendants. A decree to that effect cannot be made against both defendants, for their alleged offences are separate—that of the defendant Bridges not to have performed his agreement, that of Woodhead to have worked the quarry. It is in evidence that Bridges has had no profit of any kind from such working, and Woodhead was a mere trespasser. How, then, can an account of profits be taken against one defendant who has had none, and against another who is a mere trespasser? Besides, the plaintiff cannot be heard to come into Equity for relief when he stood by during the whole time that the defendant Woodhead was working the quarry, and shewed his acquiescence by actually granting him a right of way. The proper remedy for the plaintiff would be to get his license drawn up under the decree made upon the hearing of the cause; such license should be ante-dated, and contain covenants for quiet enjoyment, and other usual covenants, and then he might bring his action. That was the course which the Lord Chancellor intimated his opinion was the proper course in a case of a similar nature. (a)

(a) The case referred to by the learned counsel is Munday v. Jolliffe, not yet reported.

Pemberton, in reply.—It is not the doctrine of Equity that a party is to have incomplete relief in a matter once within the jurisdiction. Are parties to come here to get equitable relief upon a portion of a case, and then be sent to law for damages? Here, besides, damages cannot be had at law, because there is no legal interest antecedent to the damage. Suppose the contract had been for the sale of a quarry, for which a rent was paid; the decree would be that defendant should account for rents. And does not here the value of the stone stand in the place of a rent? How is an action to be brought? The grant will bear date at the time of execution, and will be a grant of the right to work a quarry of which the greater portion is gone. As to the plaintiff's acquiescence, he was turned out of possession upon an answer which was untrue. He could not come to this Court, and had no power whatever to prevent the defendant Woodhead from working. His grant of a right of way is no evidence of acquiescence, for he had no title to interfere with the defendant's working; his acquiescence was, therefore, compulsory.

The MASTER of the ROLLS, after stating the principal facts, said, there was no doubt but that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation, and the question was how compensation was to be made to him for the loss of the possible benefit he might have derived from working the stone of the quarries. It was said at the bar that he might have a remedy at law, by having his legal grant ante-dated, and then proceeding upon the covenants. But it was not necessary for the Court to proceed in that circuitous way, when the matter was once drawn within its jurisdiction.

It was clear that the plaintiff was entitled to relief; but how, was matter of serious consideration. An account of profits would not do, for the defendant Woodhead being discouraged by the defendant Bridges from working actively, had only taken what it was convenient to him to take for his own use. It did not appear whether he had taken any for sale, and it was evident, at any rate, that he had not worked the quarries in the manner in which the plaintiff would, in all probability, have worked them in his trade; the relief certainly sounded in damages; for the plaintiff sought to recover something which was not profit, but an equivalent for the loss of something which might have been gained. The proper course his Lordship thought would be for an action to be brought for damages, the defendants making such admissions of the title of the plaintiff and otherwise, as should be requisite to enable him to have the actual damage sustained by him determined in a court of law. The case stood over for the parties to agree upon the terms of the order. (a)

) It will be perceived that in the foregoing judgment, his Lordship avoided giving any direct opinion upon the jurisdiction of the Court, although it may be inferred from some of his expressions that he admitted it. The point seems to be very unsettled. In Denton v. Stewart (17 Ves. n. 77) the Court assumed the jurisdiction. The case was—parol agreement to assign a lease, partly carried into execution. After the agreement the defendant assigned to another for valuable consideration without notice, and the Court referred it to the Master to inquire what damage had been sustained by the plaintiff, and decreed the defendant to pay such damage as should be ascertained. On the authority of this case, Sir W. GRANT decided (Greenaway v. Adams, 12 Ves. 395), where the purchaser objected to the title, and when the objection was taken, the defendant Adams insisted on her title being good, and gave notice to the plaintiff that if he would not take the title she should sell to another, which she did. The bill prayed a specific performance, and if the defendant could not make a good title, then in the alternative for an issue to try what loss the plaintiff had so sustained or a reference to the Master. The MASTER of the ROLLS intimating his doubts of the jurisdiction were it not for authority, referred it to the Master, expressly on the authority of Denton v. Stewart. The point came afterwards before the same learned judge in a case a little different, Gwillim v. Stone, 14 Ves. 128. In this case the bill prayed that the contract might be delivered up, on the ground of defective title and for compensation for the loss sustained by the plaintiff by the non-performance of the contract. The Court took the distinction, that in the former cases the bill was for specific performance, and in the case before it, alleged from the first that the title was bad, and said it was more proper for an action, the equitable relief being obtained by delivery up of the instrument. And in Todd v. Gee, 17 Ves. 273. Lord ELDON intimated a strong opinion against doctrine of Denton v. Stewart being as a general rule. His Lordship said, giving his final judgment in the case, opinion upon the question which depends on the three cases cited, Denton v. Stewart, Greenaway v. Adams, and Gwillim v. Green, is confirmed by reflection, that even in very special cases it is not the course proceeding in Equity to file a bill for specific performance of an agreement, praying in the alternative, if it cannot be performed, an order for an inquiry before the Master with a view to damages. The plaintiff must take his remedy if he chooses it at law; generally I do not say universally, he cannot sue in Equity."

In a late case again, Blore v. Sutton, 12 M. & W. 237, Sir W. GRANT treated the jurisdiction as doubtful, and put the decision in Denton v. Stewart on the ground of the conduct of the party in voluntarily disabling himself from performing his contract; and in Beckett v. Russell & My. Co. is to the same effect. On the whole, the authorities, though they seem to support the jurisdiction, shew that the Court will exercise it only under very special circumstances.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Nov. 15.

*THE ASSIGNEES OF DRIVER
v. OLDFIELD.*

SPECIAL CASE.

Bankruptcy—TROVER—As to the right of the Assignee of Goods before the Bankruptcy of the Consignor where the Goods are taken into possession after the Bankruptcy.

This was an action of trover brought by the plaintiffs, as assignees of a bankrupt named Driver, to recover from the defendant the value of a quantity of ship's-cabin furniture which had been taken to the bankrupt. The defendant, Mr. Oldfield, was owner of a vessel called the Bolton, trading to the East Indies, and had engaged the bankrupt as her captain, upon the usual terms. Upon the vessel putting in to the Bay, Captain Driver, who was in embarrassed circumstances, went ashore, leaving his first mate, Mr. Fremlin, in command of the vessel. He afterwards wrote to Mr. Fremlin, desiring him to take charge of the vessel for the owner; and he also wrote to the defendant, informing him that he had handed over to him the cabin furniture, &c., towards the discharge of a debt which he owed him. The defendant thereupon wrote to Captain Fremlin to keep possession of the property in question for him. The ship arrived here on the 5th of December, and the defendant took possession of the goods; but two days previously to that Captain Driver committed an act of bankruptcy, and a fiat issued against him on the 6th. Under these circumstances the assignees claimed the goods, they not having come into the defendant's possession until after the act of bankruptcy had been committed. The defendant, on the other hand, insisted that while the goods were in Captain Fremlin's possession he held them as agent for the defendant, and that, therefore, through him, the defendant had possession of them before the act of bankruptcy.

The COURT held that the defendant had, by Captain Fremlin as his agent, obtained possession of the goods before the bankruptcy, and therefore had a right to keep them; consequently the defendant was entitled to judgment.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Nov. 15.

HARRISON v. WARNEFORD.

Joint Stock Companies—LIABILITY of DIRECTORS appointed by the Act of Parliament, notwithstanding they may have sold their shares—PLEADING.

This was an action for arrears of salary claimed by the plaintiff against the defendant, as a director of the West Cork Mining Company.

The plaintiff, it appeared, was in 1834 appointed superintendent of the company's works in Ireland.

The defendant pleaded that he was not a director of the company at the time the action was brought, he having transferred his shares in the company, and thereby, as he alleged, disqualified himself from being a director.

Mr. Baron ALDERSON said, the defendant's plea was a bad plea, as the defendant was appointed a director by the Act of Parliament, and would continue to be a director until 1840, notwithstanding he might have transferred his shares.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

BAIL COURT.—Nov. 6.

POWLET v. THE IMPERIAL BANK OF ENGLAND MANCHESTER.

Joint Stock Companies—Liability of any individual partner to have Execution upon a Judgment awarded against the Company, executed against him, upon a suggestion previously entered upon the Roll under 7 Geo. 4, cap. 46.—FIRST APPLICATION.

Mr. Wightman applied for liberty to enter upon the roll a suggestion that certain persons were partners in the bank in question, under the Joint-stock Companies Act, 7th George IV., cap. 46. The learned counsel stated that, according to the act in question, the action was to be brought against the public registered officers of the companies, and the judgment obtained in any such action was to be a judgment against the company. Execution may, however, according to another part of the statute, be issued against any individual partner in the company. There was no precedent for any suggestion of the present nature, as it had not until now been found necessary to proceed individually against the separate partners of such companies.

Mr. Justice LITLEDALE granted the application, but directed the learned counsel to take a day to consider the exact shape in which the bill ought to be drawn up, as the present was the first proceeding of the kind.

Nov. 19.

EX PARTE TWYNAM.

ARTICLED CLERKS' EXAMINATION—Whether an Articled Clerk can, under particular circumstances, be examined for Practice as an Attorney before the expiration of his Articles.

Mr. V. Lee applied on behalf of Mr. Twynam, an articled clerk, for leave that he might attend the examination, and be examined before the expiration of his articles. Mr. Twynam was desirous of proceeding to New Brunswick to practise. His articles would not expire before the 11th of April, 1840, which was a few days before the commencement of Easter Term. If he was compelled to wait until Easter Term before he was examined, he could not be admitted until Trinity Term, and this would be after the usual vessels for New Brunswick shall have sailed, and he would not then arrive before the winter had set in. By being allowed to undergo his examination now, he would be enabled to be admitted in Easter Term.

Justice LITLEDALE.—He may, I think, be examined under the particular circumstances. forthwith.—Application granted. (a)

(a) But see Ex parte Barker, B. C. Trin. T. 1839. by COLERIDGE J., Archbold's Prac. by Chitty, 24. Ed. 7.—Ed.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.—Nov. 16.

CASE OF WILLIAM SCHULTZ.

ATTORNIES—Whether an Attorney can oppose an Insolvent's discharge for a Bill of Costs, not delivered before the hearing.

Mr. Nicholls appeared to oppose for Mr. C. Boydell, an attorney of the Court, and the only creditor in the schedule. He said that his client had been the attorney of the insolvent in August, 1838, when the insolvent had taken the benefit of the act. Mr. Boydell had sued him for his bill of costs, but did not appear to have delivered his bill of costs before the hearing, as directed by the rule of the Court.

Mr. Woodroffe for the insolvent, contended that, by the rule, Mr. Boydell was prevented from opposing until a bill of costs was delivered.

Mr. Nicholls asked the Court whether the creditor being a judgment creditor did not alter the case?

The learned Commissioner BOWEN said it did not. The Court were resolved to enforce the rule. Mr. Boydell had no locus standi.

The insolvent was discharged.

Nov. 23.

CASE OF JAMES BARTLETT.

FUTURE PROPERTY of Insolvent—Whether a Verdict for debt or damages when recovered shall be considered as subsequently acquired property, and as such belong to the Assignee.

Mr. Cooke applied on the part of the assignee, for a rule calling on certain persons to hold a sum of money, and on the insolvent to show cause why it should not be paid to the creditors. He stated that Bartlett was discharged under the act in February, 1834; he had recovered a verdict for 49*l.*, which had not been paid; and the present application was to obtain that sum for the assignee as future acquired property, under the particular section of the act.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN thought it was a somewhat unusual application to treat a debt or damages recovered as subsequently acquired property.

Mr. Cooke said, by no means. Several cases of the kind had been heard, and granted.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN—Suppose Bartlett takes no notice of our rule, and issues an execution against the person against whom the verdict has been obtained?

Mr. Cooke—Then the form must be altered. We could go against the sheriff. The act provides for such a case, and the Court has more power in such matters than a superior court.

Rule granted.

NEW POSTAGE ACT:

ORDER—Nov. 21, 1839.

AL POST-OFFICE.—In compliance with the order of the Lords of the Treasury, the alterations in the rates of postage will be made on and after the 5th of December the system of charging letters by enclosures is abolished; all letters, therefore, whether General, Foreign, or Colonial, with the exception of local Penny-post letters, and of letters passing through the Dublin and local posts, will be charged by weight, according to the following scale:—

Letters not exceeding half an ounce, there shall be one rate of postage.

Letters above half an ounce, and not exceeding one ounce, two rates of postage.

Letters above one ounce, and not exceeding two ounces, four rates of postage.

Letters above two ounces, and not exceeding three ounces, six rates of postage.

Letters above three ounces, and not exceeding four ounces, eight rates of postage.

Proportion in proportion.

Persons should bear in mind, however, that the first ounce in the annexed scale, when a division is made between the ounce and a fraction of an ounce. A letter, for instance, weighing the ounce weight, is liable to four rates of postage; and a letter weighing a fraction of an ounce is liable to six rates of postage.

This regulation, however, will not alter the mode of charging French rates on letters from or to France, and through France, the present system of charging French rates on letters must continue in force—viz. a single rate for each quarter of an ounce, except the single rate of inland postage on all letters transmitted between places within the United Kingdom, will be the uniform rate of postage, except in those cases where the rate is at present subject to lower rates than are specified, and except in the case of letters transmitted by packet, on which the rate of inland postage at present taken must continue, although the charge must be calculated in both cases by weight, as before mentioned, and not by enclosures.

The inland rate of postage will be taken on letters between the British West Indies and the United Kingdom, or on those between Gibraltar, the Ionian Islands, and the United Kingdom. This last description of letters must, however, be addressed "via Falmouth," or they will become subject to the present inland rate; and they will be forwarded through France, and treated as foreign letters.

As the rate to and from North America already is a uniform rate of one shilling for a single letter, the rate of postage on letters conveyed by packet between the United Kingdom and all the British Colonies (with the exception of letters to the East Indies, which are to be charged when they are sent or received via Falmouth 2s. 6d. as at present), will be a uniform single rate of one shilling, advancing on all letters exceeding half an ounce, according to the scale of weight already laid down.

No penny postage will hereafter be charged upon letters passing through the General Post, except on those which are franked; franks, however, will still be liable to the local rates of a penny or twopence, as at present, when passing through penny posts in the country, or the local posts of London and Dublin.

The additional rates heretofore chargeable on letters conveyed by the route of the Menai and Conway bridges, that of Milford and Waterford, and the additional halfpenny on letters conveyed by mails in Scotland, will be abolished.

No letter which is not franked, or which shall not be either despatched by or addressed to a public department on the public service, shall be forwarded when above the weight of sixteen ounces, with the exception of those from foreign countries or the colonies addressed to the United Kingdom, whether they shall arrive by packet or by private ship, and deeds and parliamentary proceedings when addressed to the Colonies to be forwarded by packet. The letters will be delivered according to their address, but at the rates of postage to which they will be liable by the scale before given. With respect to deeds and parliamentary proceedings, they will be treated according to the existing regulations, and will be charged with the rates they are at present liable to, except where those rates are higher than they would be under the new system. Parliamentary petitions above sixteen ounces within the United Kingdom will be treated in a similar manner. Letters evidently intended to be franked, but which have become liable to postage by wrong date, &c. must be forwarded, even if above the weight of sixteen ounces, but at the rates already laid down.

All letters exceeding the weight of an ounce (with the exception of letters addressed to France) must have the postage paid in advance. Should the postage not be paid in advance, the letters must be charged with double the rates to which they would otherwise be liable.

The charge on letters transmitted by private ship between the United Kingdom and places beyond sea (with the exception of the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and places within the limits of the East India Company's charter) will also be taken by weight according to the scale before given. The single rate of postage on such letters will be eightpence when posted or delivered at the port of departure or arrival, and one shilling when posted or delivered at any other place within the United Kingdom. These rates of eightpence and one shilling will apply also to letters between this country and China.

The rates on letters conveyed by private ship between the United Kingdom and countries comprised within the limits of the East India Company's charter will be the present uniform rate for sea postage of twopence outwards and fourpence inwards for letters not exceeding the weight of three ounces, when posted or delivered at the ports of departure or arrival respectively; beyond that weight a uniform rate of one shilling per ounce will be taken as sea postage. When, however, such letters are posted or delivered at any other place than the port of arrival and departure, they will be liable to the charge of inland postage, calculated according to the new scale of weight, in addition to the sea postage before mentioned.

Letters transmitted by private ships between places within the United Kingdom must be treated in the same manner as General Post letters forwarded by the regular mails between such places, and charged with the same rates of postage according to the scale of weight before laid down. Letters conveyed by private ships between Great Britain and the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man must be treated in a similar manner.

All letters that cannot be forwarded owing to their exceeding the prescribed weight must be sent to the Dead Letter Office in accordance with the existing regulations.

By command,
W. L. MABERLEY, Secretary.

ARTICLED CLERKS APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED ATTORNIES (a) IN HILARY TERM, 1839.

(Continued from p. 63.)

| Clerk's Name and Residence.                                                        | To whom Articled or Assigned.                                                                                                                        |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Green, Charles, Runcorn.                                                                  | Charles Aikin Holland, Northwich and Runcorn.                                                                                                               |
| Gosset, Montague, the younger, George St., Mansion House.                                 | Richard Roy, Lothbury.                                                                                                                                      |
| Gill, James, Liverpool.                                                                   | Robert Frodsham, Liverpool.                                                                                                                                 |
| Goodlad, Godfrey, Brighton.                                                               | William Sargent, Sheffield.                                                                                                                                 |
| Goode, Philip Benjamin, 43, Howland Street; and Cork Street.                              | Philip Goode, Howland Street; assigned to John Pike, Golden Square.                                                                                         |
| Godden, John, 6, St. George's Terrace, Hyde Park North.                                   | Robert Bicknell, Bloomsbury Square; assigned to George Waugh, Great James Street.                                                                           |
| Gell, Alfred, Lewes.                                                                      | Francis Harding Gell, Lewes.                                                                                                                                |
| Gibbs, Thomas Washbourne, 4, Manchester Street, Gray's Inn Road; and Bath.                | Frederick Dowding, Bath.                                                                                                                                    |
| Harrison, George Frederick, 98, Upper Stamford Street; and Leeds.                         | John Atkinson, Leeds.                                                                                                                                       |
| Hellawell, John Beaumont, Huddersfield.                                                   | William Barker, Huddersfield.                                                                                                                               |
| Hanbury, Thomas James, Tonbridge Place, New Road; John Street; and Lamb's Conduit Street. | Thomas Sewell, Newport; assigned to Robert Carr Foster, Gray's Inn.                                                                                         |
| Hawksford, John, Wolverhampton.                                                           | William Manby, Wolverhampton.                                                                                                                               |
| Hume, John Penory, 29, Alsop Terrace, New Road; and 30, Regent Square.                    | Robert Montague Hume, Great Winchester Street; assigned to Edmund Maunde, Great Winchester St.; assigned to W. Willoughby Gunston, Great Winchester Street. |
| Holtby, John, York.                                                                       | William Jackman, York.                                                                                                                                      |
| Humble, George, the younger, Cleckheaton.                                                 | George Teale, Lister, Cleckheaton.                                                                                                                          |
| Hucknall, Alfred, Loughborough.                                                           | William Blunt Fosbrooke, Loughborough; assigned to Joseph Parker, Loughborough.                                                                             |
| Harrison, George, Bishop Wearmouth.                                                       | George Harrison the elder, Bishopwearmouth; assigned to Joseph John Wright, Sunderland.                                                                     |
| Hardisty, Edward Brydges, Hampstead.                                                      | John Swaine Sculthorpe, Great Marlborough Street.                                                                                                           |

(a) Marked * are Common Pleas, the rest are Queen's Bench.

|                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                    |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Derrick Shepard, 32, Throgmorton and Liverpool.                   | William Thompson, Liverpool; assigned to John Burch Lloyd, Liverpool; assigned to William Henry Cotterill, Throgmorton St.                         |
| Mr Tait, 16, Bridge Street, Vauxhall.                             | William Waller, Clement's Inn.                                                                                                                     |
| Thomas, 1, Heathcote Street; and                                  | Benjamin Hope, Wells; assigned to James Beavan Meredith, Heathcote Street.                                                                         |
| , John George, 11, Caroline Street, e Hill, near Leeds.           | John Bramwell, Durham.                                                                                                                             |
| Robert, Arundel.                                                  | William Duke, Arundel.                                                                                                                             |
| John, 12, Coborn Terrace, Bow; and                                | John Anderson Pybus, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.                                                                                                          |
| use.                                                              |                                                                                                                                                    |
| John, Chester.                                                    | John Finchett Maddock, Chester.                                                                                                                    |
| utworthy Owen, 3, Lincoln's Inn                                   | John Orde Hall, Brunswick Row.                                                                                                                     |
|                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                    |
| James, 5, Belgrave Street, South; ; Higher Broughton; and Alders- | John Makinson, Manchester.                                                                                                                         |
| et.                                                               |                                                                                                                                                    |
| is Whincop, 6, Well's Street, Gray's                              | Lewis Weston Jarvis, King's Lynn.                                                                                                                  |
| e; and King's Lynn.                                               |                                                                                                                                                    |
| John, the younger, Deal.                                          | John Mercer, Deal.                                                                                                                                 |
| Wm. 8, Barnsbury Place, Islington.                                | Benjamin Workman, Evesham.                                                                                                                         |
| John, 4, Euston Grove; and Rut-                                   | Edward Robert Porter, New Court; assigned to Thomas Wright Nelson, New Court.                                                                      |
| et.                                                               | Charles Kingdon, Holsworthy.                                                                                                                       |
| Richard, Holsworthy; and 15, Cum-                                 |                                                                                                                                                    |
| reet                                                              |                                                                                                                                                    |
| , the younger, Greenheys, Lanca-                                  | David Law, Manchester; assigned to Joshua Southward, Manchester; assigned to Marmaduke Foster, Manchester; assigned to Francis Dickin, Manchester. |

(To be continued.)

QUESTIONS

THE EXAMINERS TO APPLICANTS FOR ION AS ATTORNEYS AT THE EXAMINA-MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

I. PRELIMINARY.

do you serve your clerkship?
particular branch or branches of law h you have principally applied your-ing your clerkship.
some of the principal law books you ad and studied.

ON AND STATUTE LAW, AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

hat time after service of a writ of sum-must the memorandum of service be d? And what is the consequence of g such indorsement?
defendant keep out of the way to avoid al service of a writ of summons, are any, and what, means by which to an appearance?
l action maintainable in any case in the cause of action constitutes an in-le offence?
what time after the date and issuing of of summons must it be served?

What is the meaning of an appearance secundum statutum?

In what cases must the declaration be filed, and in what cases delivered?

A defendant quits, and altogether gives up his place of residence, after service of the copy of a writ of summons, but before the plaintiff has declared. How do you proceed in the action?

State briefly the difference between a plea in bar,
and in abatement.

What evidence is necessary for the plaintiff on the trial of an undefended action for goods sold and delivered, or on the execution of a writ of inquiry in the like action?

Does an issue in law conclude to the country?
And what is meant by concluding to the country?

By what course of proceeding is secondary evidence made admissible?

What is meant by interlocutory proceedings?

Can the plaintiff issue a fieri facias, after a capias ad satisfaciendum has been executed?

How do you proceed to revive a judgment more than a year old?

When a defendant, having no personal interest in goods in his possession, is sued by two different claimants of such goods, has he any,
and what relief at law?

III. CONVEYANCING.

A, under a power appointed an estate to B. his heirs and assigns, to the use of C. his heirs and assigns. What estate did B. and C. take under the appointment?

A, conveyed his estate to B. his heirs and assigns, to the use of C. his heirs and assigns. What estate did B. and C. respectively take?

State the form of attestation of the execution of a deed, where it is executed by A. under a power of attorney from B.

What are the clauses usually introduced in a mortgage deed?

What constitutes an estate in tail general, and what special?

What is a remainder, and what are the different kinds?

What is an executory devise?

What is a shifting use?

What is an estate in severalty?

What is the distinction between a joint-tenancy, and a tenancy by entireties?

Where infants are mortgagees, how and in what manner is the estate to be reconveyed?

What is the difference between taking an estate by descent and by purchase?

May a term created for raising portions, not assigned to attend, be at any time presumed to have become void, or to have been merged or surrendered? State instances.

Can a lessee for 999 years grant a lease for life? Give a reason for your answer.

If a real estate be purchased out of partnership funds, is it treated as real or personal estate in any and what respects?

IV. EQUITY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

Can a suit be maintained by a plaintiff, residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court?

Can a defendant set down a cause for hearing?

Can a defendant move to dismiss a bill filed for discovery only?

When is a defendant entitled to the carriage of a commission to examine witnesses?

What is the advantage of the prayer for general relief in a bill in Chancery?

What is the distinction between multifariousness and misjoinder as applied to bills in Chancery? and is there any and what difference in their consequences?

To a bill filed by a cestui que trust, is the trustee a necessary party?

What is the rule in equity as to the necessary parties to a suit, and how does it differ from the rule at law?

What effect has the overruling of a demurrer on the future defence of the party filing it?

Will equity relieve against acts performed under mistaken notions of law or of fact?

What is the general rule of equity in granting relief against breaches of covenant?

Does the Court impose any and what terms upon a plaintiff seeking to set aside an usurious contract?

What will amount to fraud in a purchaser not apprising the vendor of any advantage which the latter is ignorant?

To what amount of principal money, or of an annual payment, will the Court of Chancery pay to a married woman or her husband without order? and if the sum in Court exceeds that amount, what is necessary to be done in order to obtain payment thereof?

State the distinction between legal and equitable assets, and the difference in the mode of their administration in payment of debts.

V. BANKRUPTCY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

What is the lowest amount of debt which must be owing to a creditor, or two or more creditors, to found a fiat?

Are any and what members of parliament liable to the bankrupt laws?

If a member of parliament is liable to the bankrupt laws, what proceedings must be taken to make such member a bankrupt?

Is any and what priority allowed to judgment creditors?

What is the course of proceeding in issuing and prosecuting a fiat up to the adjudication inclusive?

If a debtor liable to the bankrupt laws has not committed an act of bankruptcy, how can he be proceeded against in order to make him bankrupt?

What is a scrivener within the contemplation of the bankrupt law?

What is the course of proceeding under a fiat when there is an equitable mortgage by way of collateral security held by a creditor?

What is the effect of a proof of debt by a creditor who has the bankrupt in execution for the same debt?

In case the bankrupt shall have entered into an agreement for the purchase of any estate or interest in land, what course must the vendor pursue in order to obtain a performance of such agreement, or the possession of the property?

What contracts made at any and what time before the fiat, but after the act of bankruptcy are deemed valid?

What is the effect of a certificate with regard to the bankrupt's liabilities?

In what case is the future property of a certificated bankrupt applicable for the creditors under that commission?

Is a bankrupt's certificate a discharge of an annuity payable by him?

ly of two partners be declared bank-whose name or names must actions ght to recover debts due to the part-

AL LAW AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

homicide, and what are its different Give examples of each.

or more magistrates take bail, in any,
r, and which of the cases?

rson committed to prison by magisor under a coroner's warrant, charged ther of these offences, be admitted to nd if so, by whom, and what are the ings necessary to be taken on the ap-of the party to be so admitted to nces are usually tried at the quarter indictment has been preferred, when e prosecutor proceed to trial?

?

ndictment in any, and what, inferior e removed to the Court of Queen's and if so, in what way?

isdiction does the Court of Queen's possess over an order or conviction by of the peace, and what is the mode of ing?

ny and what appeal against the finding roner's jury, imposing a deodand, and he value thereof; and what is the mode eding?

offences is leave given to file a cri-nformation, and what is the mode of ion to obtain it?

proceeding is a criminal information a ite?

the Superior Courts at Westminster ent jurisdiction in granting rules for a l information, or is it confined to any, ich of them?

he mode of proceeding to try the va-of an election to an office of public of damage by persons riotously assem-ave magistrates any summary power to compensation to the party sustaining amage, and to any or what extent; or rty left to his action at law?

indictment for stealing any record, will,
inal legal document, from its place of
is it necessary to prove value or pron such document?

Queen's Counsel be retained to defend cused in a criminal case; and if so, appears that 125 applicants attended this ion; 116 were considered qualified, 14 tponed, for want of a sufficient number ictory answers.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—I confess it was with great surprise that I observed your note appended to my answer in your last number. (a) You there charge me with wilful mystification, by giving a false reference to an authority;
but I beg leave to state, that my authority is cited with perfect accuracy, and that, contrary to your statement, the rule which I have given is to be found according to the reference, viz. Chitty Jun. Contr. p. 275.
You quote Chitty on Contracts, p. 574;
now, the edition of this work that I use,
which I believe is the original edition, does not contain so many as 400 pages. It is clear, therefore, that we must have used different editions; so that you should not judge of what is to be found in my edition by yours, nor of the paging of my edition by that of yours. This at once offers an explanation of the whole matter, so obvious, that I am surprised it should not have occurred to an Editor.

By looking attentively at the MS. answer,
after the words "notice a few of the leading rules for the rescinding of contracts," you will observe the obliterated words "as given by Chitty Jun. on Contr." &c. But as those rules related to a collateral subject,
I feared, lest they would, as there given,
occupy too large a space in your columns, and I accordingly abridged them as they now stand. By so doing, I may, perhaps, have rendered myself liable to the charge you bring against me of mutilation. But, as to that of unintelligibility, (referring to the last three short paragraphs) I leave that with any one who can read.

In justice to Alphonso, as well as to set right those readers who may labour under the mystifying tendency of your part of the note, I trust you will permit this to be published.

ALPHONSO.

We admire the spirit of our worthy correspondent in keeping the field although hit. The very contest, to say nothing of the feeling manifested, shews industry and a desire of knowledge. We invite all such to the field, despite the labour imposed upon us in the strife. With this preface, we have a few words for our friend and subscriber. The date of our book (Chitty on Contracts, Ed. 1834,) is very immaterial, as applied to our observations; which, by reference to chap. 5, s. 6, of that work, will be found confirmed. We do not at any time write hastily, and when we write at all upon the answers to our problems, it is with the intention to benefit the writer, and not to cavil either with words or with him. There is also a reason why we should look after our correspondent, he is a sort of wrangler with his fellow students; nay, he would even wrangle with us—and for this we applaud him;—but, he should therefore be the more careful in his writings, and see that he does not make the same slip that he complains of in others.—ED.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS:

DR. ROBINSON'S MAGISTRATES' POCKET BOOK, or an Epitome of the Duties and Practice of a Justice of the Peace out of Sessions, alphabetically arranged. THIRD EDITION, with considerable alterations and additions, an extensive collection of Forms of Commitment and Convictions, and a copious Index By JOHN FREDERICK ARCHBOLD, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, LONDON: John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers, &c. 194, Fleet Street.

We have not seen a work that we can with greater confidence recommend to the notice of magistrates and their clerks than that before us. As a practical book, none should be without it. The work has received from the Editor many valuable additions and corrections, and in particular a collection of forms of commitments and convictions which the original work had none, and which will render the work more practically useful to magistrates and their clerks, and when the many alterations that have recently been made in the law relative to the duties of justices of the peace, and in the criminal law generally, are considered, work like the present, bringing up all those alterations to the mind's eye in an alphabetical shape, and directing attention to the statute governing every case, must be seen and read to be fully appreciated. A reference to the book will shew its utility, and supply prompt information without the labour of research. The following two first articles is the plan of the work:—

ABDUCTION.

1. Taking away or detaining a woman against her will, from motives of lucre, with intent to marry or defile her—felony. 9 Geo. 4. c. 31. s. 19.

2. Unlawfully taking an unmarried girl, under the age of sixteen, out of the possession, and against the will of her parent or guardian—misdemeanour. Id. s. 20.

ABORTION.

Administering poison, or other noxious thing, or using any instrument or other means, to procure the miscarriage of a woman—felony. 1 Vict. c. 85. s. 6.

SITTINGS AFTER MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

Before the LORD CHANCELLOR, Lincoln's Inn.

|           |      |    |   |   |   |                                                         |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|---|---------------------------------------------------------|
| Tuesday   | Nov. | 26 | - | - | } | Appeals and Causes.                                     |
| Wednesday | "    | 27 | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Thursday  | "    | 28 | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Friday    | "    | 29 | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Saturday  | "    | 30 | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Monday    | Dec. | 2  | - | - | } | First Seal—App. Motions with Appeals & Causes.          |
| Tuesday   | "    | 3  | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Wednesday | "    | 4  | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Thursday  | "    | 5  | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Friday    | "    | 6  | - | - |   |                                                         |
| Saturday  | "    | 7  | - | - | } | Appeals and Causes.                                     |
| Monday    | "    | 9  | - | - |   |                                                         |
|           |      |    |   |   | } | The Second Seal—Appeal Motions with Appeals and Causes. |
|           |      |    |   |   |   |                                                         |

|     |   |    |   |   |   |                                                         |
|-----|---|----|---|---|---|---------------------------------------------------------|
| day | " | 10 | - | - | } | Appeals and Causes.                                     |
| y   | " | 11 | - | - |   |                                                         |
|     | " | 12 | - | - |   |                                                         |
|     | " | 13 | - | - |   |                                                         |
|     | " | 14 | - | - | } | The Third Seal—Appeal Motions with Appeals and Causes.  |
|     | " | 16 | - | - |   |                                                         |
| day | " | 17 | - | - | } | Appeals and Causes.                                     |
|     | " | 18 | - | - |   |                                                         |
|     | " | 19 | - | - |   |                                                         |
|     | " | 20 | - | - |   |                                                         |
|     | " | 21 | - | - | } | The Fourth Seal—Appeal Motions with Appeals and Causes. |
|     | " | 23 | - | - |   | Petitions.                                              |

Before the VICE CHANCELLOR, at Lincoln's Inn.

|    |      |    |   |   |                                                                 |
|----|------|----|---|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
|    | Dec. | 2  | - | - | The First Seal—Motions.                                         |
|    | "    | 3  | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
| ay | "    | 4  | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 5  | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 6  | - | - | Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions and Ditto.                    |
|    | "    | 7  | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
|    | "    | 9  | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 10 | - | - | The Second Seal—Motions.                                        |
|    | "    | 11 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exception, Causes, and Further Directions.  |
| ay | "    | 12 | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 13 | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 14 | - | - | Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions and Ditto.                    |
|    | "    | 16 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions. |
|    | "    | 17 | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 18 | - | - | The Third Seal—Motions.                                         |
|    | "    | 19 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions, |
| ay | "    | 20 | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 21 | - | - |                                                                 |
|    | "    | 23 | - | - | Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions and Ditto.                    |
|    | "    |    |   |   | The Fourth Seal—Motions.                                        |
|    | "    |    |   |   | Petitions.                                                      |

His Honour the Vice-Chancellor will sit at LINCOLN'S INN after Term until the First Seal to hear Motions and Causes by order.

ROLLS' COURT.—Before the Right Hon. the MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

|    |      |    |   |   |                                                                    |
|----|------|----|---|---|--------------------------------------------------------------------|
|    | Dec. | 2  | - | - | Motions.                                                           |
|    | "    | 3  | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions,and Exceptions. |
| ay | "    | 4  | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 5  | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 6  | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 7  | - | - | } Motions.                                                         |
|    | "    | 9  | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 10 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions,and Exceptions. |
| ay | "    | 11 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 12 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 13 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 14 | - | - | } Motions.                                                         |
|    | "    | 16 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 17 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions,and Exceptions. |
| ay | "    | 16 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 19 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 20 | - | - |                                                                    |
|    | "    | 21 | - | - | Motions.                                                           |
|    | "    | 23 | - | - | Petitions.                                                         |

Consent Causes, and Consent Petitions, every Tuesday at the Sitting of the Court.

Business of the Courts.*COURT OF CHANCERY.*Causes.

Burgess v. Thompson—Robins v. Cleaver—Chatfield v. Betts—Ashleigh v. Waugh—Grafton v. Froggatt—Green v. Green—Morgan v. Swill—Thomas v. Thomas—Berwick v. Willett—Roberts v. Evans—Hughes v. Hughes, further directions—Cresswell v. Balfour—Gould v. Ultermore.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.*Short Causes.

Inge v. Inge—Dower v. Gregory—Evans v. Pilkington—Gilbert v. Bennett—Dolman v. Dolman—Horne v. White—Harrison v. Cumming—Cohen v. Waley, further directions and costs—Pritchard v. Morgan, ditto—Protheroe v. May, ditto—Festing v. Allen, ditto.

After which a list of thirteen unopposed Petitions.

After the Petitions.

Horner v. Sayner, to be spoke to—Down v. Brayley, to be spoke to—St. John v. Champneys, exceptions by order.

After which Motions continued.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.*Sittings in Banco.*COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.*Middlesex Special Juries.

Whitehead and another v. Barron—Galloway and another v. Bleadon—Currie v. Allmond—Becke v. Cameron and another.

Middlesex Common Juries.

Doe, dem. Biers v. Cocks—Webster v. Else—Cass v. Smith—Toms v. Hedge, undefended—Dix and another v. Smith, ditto.

The last defended cause is No. 45 on the list.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.*Revenue Causes—Special Juries.

Attorney-General v. Boyne—Attorney-General v. Oliver.

Middlesex Common Juries.

Rose v. Barron—Carter v. Johnson—Spooner v. Mason—Booker v. Staines—Halford v. Chittenden—Goldshede v. Holland—the same v. Caldwell—Dennison v. Barwell—King v. Golborne—Lewis v. Veney.

The last cause is No. 68 on the list.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

DON JUAN.—Do pray find some other no de guerre.—We are afraid of Sparks.—Your answer to Prob. 3. vol. 3. came too late.

S. A. W.—Under consideration.

L. E. X.—If you are admitted an Attorney of the Courts at Westminster by taking out a Town Certificate, you may practice any where so long as you comply with the Rule H. 3 Geo. 3. K. B. and the Rule M. T. 1 W. 4. 8. Ex.

On Dec. 1 will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. III. Part IV.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England" dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This Number will complete Vol. III.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press,

SECOND EDITION,

Shortly will be published, price 18s. cloth bound.

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Law and Political Constitution of the Country at present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is now well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-Field, in the City of London.—Saturday, November 1839.

The Legal Guide.

I.] SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1839. [No. 6.

LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

for the Abolition of Fines and Recovers and for the Substitution of more Modes of Assurance.—[28th Aug. 1833.]

(Continued from p. 67.)

CONSIDERED.—DEEDS OF APPOINTMENT AND SETTLEMENT.—NOT NECESSARY TO HAVE AN INTENTION TO EXECUTE A DEED; IF THE ACT CAN BE DONE ONLY BY THE AUTHORITY. BUT WHERE THE DEED REPORTS TO PASS THE INTEREST, IT MUST BE CONSIDERED SO INTENDED, AND THE DEED EXERCISE AN AUTHORITY.

CONTRAST BETWEEN A TERM IN GROSS AND A TERM TO ATTEND THE INHERITANCE.

Case of Maundrell v. Maundrell(a) before marriage was limited to the husband should, by any will, appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of himself for life, and after decease to the use of his right heirs; question which arose upon the wife's dower against a purchaser, was, whether the power was valid. Sir W. M. R., said,(b) that the power was merely nugatory, and nothing distinct or different from the fee. The fee was clearly in the husband until appointment. In Goodhill v. Brigham,(c) it was held that a power added to the fee was merely void; so the power in this case, followed by a limitation of the fee, must be absorbed in the fee, which includes every power. The reason commonly given why a power may have effect though limited to the owner of the fee is, that he may appoint in a mode by which his legal fee would not entitle him to convey. He gave no opinion upon the sufficiency of that reason; but in this case it was to such uses as he should appoint by deed or will, legally executed, and by those instruments he might have passed the fee, though nothing was said about the appointment. The limitation, therefore, operated purely as a limitation of the fee, and that fee he could only convey subject to her right of dower.

Sir Edward Sugden, in his Treatise on Powers,(d) thus observes upon Goodhill v. Brigham, The devise was to a married woman in fee, with a power superadded for her to dispose of the estate as she should think proper, and as if she were sole. The Court of Common Pleas held this power to be void, as repugnant to the fee before vested in her. We have seen that this decision cannot be

(a) ante, p. 65.

(b) 1. 583.

(c) 1 Bos. & Pull. 192.

(d) Vol. i. p. 110.

relied on. It has never been spoken of with satisfaction. I have seen an opinion of the late Lord Rosslyn's given in the year 1775, where the estate was limited by a fine and declaration of uses to the use of C. M. a married woman in fee, "together with such powers as are hereinafter mentioned and reserved (that is to say), that it should be lawful for her to appoint any new, or other use or uses, estate or estates," &c. in the usual way. The question was, whether the power was well created. He wrote the following opinion:—"The intent of the deed is clearly to give Mrs. M. an option to dispose of her estate, notwithstanding her coverture, and that construction of the words which will give effect to the clear intent of the deed and not destroy it, is certainly the best construction. The fee limited to Mrs. M. is qualified in the very sentence itself, by the powers after mentioned, inserted for no other purpose but to enable her to dispose of that fee, and which are to take effect out of the very estate given to her. The deed would have been more properly drawn if the first use declared had been to such person or persons, and for such estates as she by deed or will should appoint, and in default of appointment to her in fee; but it is exactly the same thing in substance to limit the estate to her in fee, subject to her power of appointment, for whoever claims as heir to her must, by the express terms of the deed, take subject to the power of appointment; and if it is well executed, as in this case it appears to be, the execution of the power defeats the title of the heir."

From this opinion it may be inferred that Lord Rosslyn would not have agreed with the decision in Goodhill v. Brigham had that case come before him, and it clearly shows that he thought an estate might be effectually limited to such uses as a person should appoint, and in default of appointment to the same person in fee. In a case before Lord Knyton he treated it as wholly immaterial in what part of the deed powers are inserted, whether before or after the estates created. (a)

Lord ELDON in Maundrell v. Maundrell, said, the authority of Sir Edward Cleere's case, as well as all general doctrine, seemed to furnish this: that it is not necessary to recite, that he means to execute the power: if the act is one, that he can do only by that authority. Though the form may not at first suggest, that he proposes to exercise it, the purpose of the act makes it necessary to hold, that he did intend it. On the other hand it is in general clear, where a party has both an authority and an interest, and does an act, purporting to mean to pass the interest, he shall be held to intend that, and not to exercise his authority. The tenor of this instrument is not only such as that he may be supposed to intend merely to pass an interest, but peculiarly so; for it recites the power over one estate, and his interest in that estate, and as to that estate expressly in exercise, and by virtue of his power recited, and all other powers and authorities, declares that former conveyance should remain, continue, and be, to such uses, &c.: and then he goes on by lease and release to pass his interest in those estates. Having also this estate, and in it both a power and an interest, does not execute his power as he did as to the other estate, but passes his interest as he did in the other estate. This is not, therefore, the mere ordinary case, but affords the additional inference, that, where he means both to execute his power and to pass his interest, he has done both. It is said, as that, his purpose required him to do so, for two reasons; 1st. He meant the estate should pass free from dower; but then it is objected that there is a covenant against dower. To answer to that is, that it is a sort of surrogage, if the estate is not subject to dower.

(a) Rex v. the Inhabitants of Easington, 4 T. Rep. 177.

udent precaution, lest it should be to dower. There is also an answer Swannock v. Lifford; (a) for in that case is the same covenant against dower. answer, as to the purpose to have it dower, is suggested by the circumstance that all the conveyancers concerned in the preparation of this instrument, thought, having been assigned to attend the case, there was little or no danger of is then said, there being a conveyance of the interest subject still to the exercise of power, this must be taken to be a reservation of the power, as well as a reservation of the interest; otherwise he might, by exercising his power, destroy the interest. It is never to that is, that his power is not destroyed when he passes his whole interest, even though not exercised, is destroyed.

But, if there is any reasonable ground on that, it is purely a legal question which might be disposed of in a case, before a Court of Law. Another point in the same case, upon which Lord Hardwicke expressed a doubt whether it is possible to say, the assignment of the inheritance is necessary from time to time whenever that inheritance is made out of purchase. If it is true, his Lordship added, that the law of the Court should be such at the time by Lord Hardwicke (b), and has been since understood to be so, that must prevail; but it is not to be perfectly satisfied that Lord Hardwicke did consider the law as settled at that time, and that it has since been so understood. The way in which it strikes me is this—it has been long settled, and there is a distinction between a term in gross, and a term to attend the inheritance. Where a term is created for a particular purpose, and that purpose has been satisfied, if the instrument does not provide for the cesser of the term, when that purpose is satisfied the term remains without any object to which it is to be applied, and the beneficial interest in it is a creature of equity, to be disposed of and moulded according to the equitable interests of all persons having claims upon the inheritance. When that proposition is established it seems quite obvious that where the persons claiming subject to the term claim all under contract, whether there is an assignment of the term or not as to those who stand behind. Qui prior est in tempore potior est in jure. And the trustee of the term is a trustee for them, according to their priorities. And in Willoughby v. Willoughby, Lord Hardwicke has mainly intended to establish that there is no difference whether the term was originally expressed to attend the inheritance or not. But when the mode of conveyancing had created terms in many estates, and persons dying, it was difficult to find representatives; and it turned out in fact that a term was existing, it was not known where, and the dealing with the estate became dangerous, as a legal title could not be obtained, therefore it was very early decided, that if A and B advance money innocently, and C bought also innocently, not having notice of each others advances, he who first had the luck to get in the legal estate, had as good a right as any one, and should hold by his legal title the possession against the prior equities. And it was decided in Willoughby v. Willoughby (a) that to place them in that situation he must have a clear conscience and as good a right, and he must either get in the legal estate, or possess himself of the deed creating the term, which Lord Hardwicke admitted would do.

Afterwards came Swannock v. Lifford, Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy established, (b)

(a) 1 Term Rep. 763.

(b) Show. P. C. 69. Pre. Ch. 65.

b. 6.; 2 Atk. 208. by the name of Hill v.

Willoughby v. Willoughby, 1 T. R. 763.

that where a person purchases the inheritance, and there is an outstanding term, he may deal with the trustee of the term, and it is added that the trustee may deal with him, and upon payment to the owner of the inheritance, with full and complete notice of the dowress's title, the trustee who before was trustee for her and her husband having also distinct notice of the title to dower, they may defeat her title. There is a very important difference between the cases of dower and a mesne incumbrance. All Lord HARDWICKE's reasoning in Swannock v. Lifford goes to the difference between persons claiming under contract and under legal title, and he lays down generally, as a principle he should wish to see established, that the legal title should take their chance, and the Court would not interfere even to put dower out of the way. It is clear those cases do not furnish the same question, for Lord HARDWICKE lays down, and there is no doubt that if there is notice in the case of the incumbrance, you cannot deal for the legal title; and Lord HARDWICKE goes much further, that the trustee having notice cannot deal with you. There is, therefore, a clear distinction between the cases. Then the general doctrine, that he who takes from the trustee with notice, is himself a trustee, introduces a difficulty to say, if the trustee, having an estate expressly declared to attend the inheritance, is a trustee for all who have interests in the inheritance, in this sense, that he is a trustee for the dowress and also for him who has the inheritance subject to his wife's right of dower, having distinct notice of her right, and the purchaser also having notice of it, he may by a simple assignment create an estate not subject to the same equities, though only a transfer to another trustee to attend the inheritance.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM VI.

VOL. 3.

WHAT IS AN ESTATE TAIL BY IMPLICATION?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM 3. VOL. II.

Upon what is an action of debt founded?
—For what is an action of detinue maintainable?

I. The action of debt is founded upon a privity of contract either expressed or implied, in which the certainty of the sum or duty appears, and the plaintiff is to recover the sum in numero, and not in damages. But when the damages can be reduced by the averment to a certainty, as to say so much per load for wood, &c. debt will lie. (Bull. N. P. tit. Debt.)

The action of debt is very extensive in its operation, and is sustainable on specialties, records, simple contracts, express or implied, verbal or written, and on statute by a party grieved, or by a common informer. (Bull. N. P. 167.)

II. The action of detinue is maintainable for the recovery of specific chattels only, and not for any real property (Coupledike v. Coupledike, Cro. Jac. 39); and such chattels must be clearly distinguishable from others; so that it would not lie for money, coin, or the like, unless such money or coin &c. was distinguishable by being in a bag or box (Co. Litt. 286; Cro. Eliz. 457); but for all chattels that can be so distinguished an action may be maintained. (See Co. Litt. 286.)

As a general rule to support the action of detinue, the plaintiff must have the absolute or general property in, and the right to, the immediate possession of the goods sought to be recovered. So that it has been said it will not lie where the defendant has taken the goods tortuously; for by the trespass the property in the plaintiff is divested (Co. Dig. title Detinue (D.)); but it would seem from what was said by Vavasor in that case, and also from what was said by Anderson and Warberton in Bishop v. Montague (Cro. Eliz. 824; and see Cro. Jac. 50), that the position cannot be maintained. But a person has only a special property, as a c. may support this action where he takes the goods to the defendant, or takes them out of such bailee's custody. (1 R. 47; 2 Keb. 588.)

If the goods belonged to a femme sole before marriage, it is said the husband cannot bring the action, on the ground that the property of them is in him at the time the action is brought. (Keb. 41; Noy, 1 R. N. P. 50.) And if goods come to the wife before marriage, it is said the action must be brought against the husband and wife. (Co. Litt. 351. C.)

One of the grounds of this action is the detainer; it will therefore follow that it cannot be maintained against any person who is not in possession. If a bailee of goods die, the action cannot be maintained against his personal representative, unless he takes possession. But if after the death of the defendant a stranger takes possession of them, the action will lie against him. (1 R. Ab. Detainer (D.) Nor will it lie against the defendant before any demand he lose them, though if he wrongfully deliver them to another he will continue liable. (Detainer, Pl. 1, 33, 40.)

C. B.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Nov. 28.

WILKINSON v. HARWOOD.

—Cestui que Trust of age, but of full age—PRACTICE as to discharging the executor by final decree upon Bill for account.

Mr. Anderson stated this to be a bill for an account of the rents and profits of freehold lands and the trustees appointed under the will of the mother of Miss Wilkinson for her life. The account was almost of course, but there was one peculiarity in the bill, that it was brought by the next friend of Miss Wilkinson, who, being an imbecile, was of too slow and backward to manage her own affairs.

Mr. Craig, for the defendant, said there was no objection to the account, but as the young lady was of age, and therefore, prima facie, competent to file her own bill, he was only anxious that the decree should be final, and operate as a discharge to his client, who was the representative of the surviving trustee.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, the appointment of a next friend would be a security to the defendant, and there must be the usual decree to account.

Mr. Anderson then presented a petition from Mr. Gooday, the next friend of Miss Wilkinson, praying that the costs occasioned by his intervention on the unsuccessful attempt to sue out a commission of lunacy against her might be allowed him. It also asked the costs of her board, the terms of which had been settled by Colonel Addison as her guardian at £60. a-year. It appeared that while residing at Sudbury her health, appearance, and intellect had much improved.

Mr. Walker, for the father of Miss Wilkinson, suggested that he was justified in attempting to sue out the commission by the evidence of medical men. He now acquiesced in the suit, as he was ready to do in any course which was most likely to promote his daughter's interests.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said he could not allow costs to the father of Miss Wilkinson. It was not enough to show incompetency of mind in a party; there must be other circumstances to render a commission expedient and necessary.

ROLLS COURT.—Nov. 11

EATON v. SMITH.

EXECUTORS—PERSONAL CONFIDENCE—limited bequest—power of one of three Executors who proved the will of a Testator where the other two had not executed a Deed of disclaimer.

This was a Bill to carry into execution the will of John Eaton, deceased, a wheelwright, and was filed by all the children of the testator, excepting John Eaton, who had been made with Smith the acting executor, a defendant. A decree had been made, and an account ordered to be taken. The Master, by his report, stated the balance due from the executor and the available personal estate of the testator. By the will the testator appointed three executors, whom he authorised and requested to carry on his business, and he directed that they should stand possessed of the monies arising from the sale of his property and from his business, upon trust, to divide the same among his children, all of whom he named except his son John. The testator continued, he had purposely omitted the name of his son John on account of his behaviour. He gave him 5*l.* only, and trusted that he would alter his conduct and behave himself towards his brothers and sisters with that kindness and affection that was due to them, and towards his executors with respect; and in case he did so, the testator gave unto his three trustees and executors, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivors, full authority to permit his son John to have an equal share of his estate with his brothers and sisters. The defendant Smith alone proved the will. The testator's business was carried on by his two sons John and George. The business has been well conducted by John, who had been bred to it, which George had not, and yielded a large profit.

Mr. Kindersley, for the defendant Smith, admitted that the business had prospered, and that it had yielded a profit of not less than 33 per cent.

Mr. Girdlestone, for the plaintiff. John Eaton the younger, died in 1828, and another person had been appointed to carry on the business. A state of facts had been brought in before the Master, stating that John Eaton, the son, had demeaned himself well, and that his representatives were entitled to an equal share with his brothers and sisters in the executor's property; but in the affidavit in support of this statement the defendant Smith only stated that he had employed John Eaton to conduct the business.

Lord LANGDALE.—The testator intended that his son John should have an opportunity of redeeming himself.

Mr. Girdlestone.—There were three executors appointed by the testator—two declined to act, but executed no disclaimer. Was it competent for Smith, the sole acting executor under the will, to exercise his discretion on the claim made for John Eaton, the son?

Lord LANGDALE.—It was not a personal confidence, because it was to the executors and to the survivor of them, and to the executors of such survivor.—Order made.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—Nov. 23.

Sittings in Banco.

GOCOCK v. WELLER.

WRIT of CAPIAS — Whether an Insolvent Debtor in prison under a remand, may be detained by a Writ of Capias, without a Judge's Order or Summons, although there might be no apprehension of his leaving the country.

Mr. Ball moved for a writ of capias without a judge's order or summons being previously issued. On Thursday last the defendant was opposed by his creditors in the Insolvent Debtors' Court, and was remanded for seven months for having fraudulently disposed of part of his property. Being in custody at the suit of a friendly creditor, it was feared that the object of the other creditors would be defeated, as the insolvent would be entitled to his discharge at the end of the seven months. But the Act of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. which abolished arrest by mesne process, did not (he contended) include such a case as this, and therefore the insolvent might be detained by a capias without a judge's order or summons, and even though there might be no fear that the insolvent was likely to leave the country.

Lord DENMAN.—What was the reason assigned by the officer for not granting the capias?

Mr. Ball.—That he wished for the direction of the Court.

Lord DENMAN.—Did you mention the case to Mr. Justice Littledale in the Bail Court?

Mr. Ball.—I did, and he wished to have the opinion of the full Court.

Rule granted.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Nov. 23.

NEILSON v. SLEE.

RULE TO COMPUTE—Service where Defendant is abroad—PRACTICE.

Mr. Ogle moved to make a rule absolute to compute principal and interest, due on a promissory note of the defendant, who was the captain of a ship, and had sailed abroad. The writ had been served at his residence, No. 45, Wellclose-square, in September, and an appearance having been entered for him, notice of declaration was delivered to him at the same place on the 24th of October. He then asked for time, and the plaintiff consented to allow him fourteen days to pay the debt and costs, at the expiration of which time a rule nisi to compute was obtained; but on an attempt being made to serve him at his house, it was stated that he was gone abroad, having sailed four days before. A copy of the rule was left with a female servant on the premises, and another copy was stuck up in the Master's Office, it was submitted that this was sufficient service. Affidavit of such service was made.

TINDAL, C. J.—The question is, whether should not have been part of the rule nisi that this should be deemed good service. The rule may be amended in that respect.

Rule refused.

Nov. 25.

OF BARRISTERS FROM THIS COURT.

MR. JUSTICE TINDAL addressed Mr. Rankie as follows:—With respect to the motion made by my brother Wilde on the 10th of term, on the subject of the sole privilege of the sergeants being practising in this Court, notwithstanding the warrant of the Crown under the 1st, we have given the matter full consideration, and resolved on the course we have adopted. Upon the first day of next term I should, owing to circumstances, be out of town on that day, then on another on my return. I shall, if any gentleman of the degree of the coif be present, not fail to move. But at the same time, any gentleman so first passed over shall be at liberty to make any observations as to the propriety of the degree of the coif, to be heard on that day, or if his observations appear to require further consideration, to announce the course he finally adopts, and the reasons on which he is founded.

Nov. 26.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

v. JOHNSON AND OTHERS.

For Rent when a Landlord has a Right to Distrain.

An action to recover the value of a piece of furniture distrained by the defendant.

The case set up was, that the plaintiff had removed the goods in question to the defendant from distraining for the rent. There was considerable doubt upon the evidence whether the rent was due on the 17th of the month, the goods having been removed on the 18th, in the middle of the day, the defendant living at Gravesend.

JUDGE said that it was now settled that unless the rent was actually due and the goods were removed, the landlord had no legal right to follow them.

The court returned a verdict for the defendants, and the learned Judge's direction, found the value of the goods to be 18*l.*, for which sum the plaintiff's counsel leave to move to set aside the verdict, in case the Court above should throw out of a point of law raised by them.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Nov. 15.

Sittings in Banco.

LEE v. HOLLAND.

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY—PRACTICE—Necessity that the Affidavit should allege that the party making it saw the Defendant alive on a certain day.

Mr. Whitmore moved for leave to enter up judgment on a warrant of attorney. In order to prove that the defendant was alive on a certain day, the deponent swore that he "saw" him on that day. The officer of the Court declined to draw up the rule, because the affidavit did not allege that the party making it saw the defendant "alive." But the affidavit went on to state that he verily believed the defendant to be "still alive," which could not be had he not been living when seen some days before.

The COURT thought it better to adhere to the long-established forms used in these cases, and directed the affidavit to be amended before the rule issued.

Sittings in Banco.

Nov. 16.

MARKS v. BENJAMIN.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS—What constitutes a Disorderly House under the Stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36.

This penal action was tried on the 25th of June last (a), and was brought against the defendant as the landlord and occupier of Howard's Coffee House, situate in St. James's-place, Duke's-place, Aldgate, a place much resorted to by members of the Jewish faith, who were in the habit of celebrating their marriage feasts there, keeping the Passover, and also giving public and private balls, concerts, and masquerades, to enforce the penalty of £100. under sec. 2. Geo. II. c. 36. on the plea of the house being kept for public "music and dancing" without a license, and therefore within the terms of the Act a "disorderly house." At the trial, Lord Abinger was decidedly of opinion that the case was not proved, and therefore directed a nonsuit to be entered, but

Mr. Humfrey having obtained a rule nisi for a new trial on the ground that the case ought to have been submitted to the jury, who ought to have found the facts.

Mr. Jervis now appeared in opposition thereto, and argued that the learned Chief Baron was quite correct in withholding the case from the jury, for that the facts proved showed, on the authority of several cases cited by the learned gentleman, that the house did not come within the terms of the Act. In order to constitute a disorderly house within the Act, it ought to be shown that it was kept expressly for the purpose of public music and dancing, and opened at regular and stated times, and that the defendant was aware of the purpose for which it was opened by the parties to whom the room was let out by him.

(a) See Report and ante, vol. ii. p. 152.

Mr. Humfrey submitted, that the facts proved did bring the case within the Act; at all events, it was a case for the jury to say whether the defendant knew of the proceedings. As it was, the learned judge had, on his own authority, told the jury that the house was not a disorderly house within the Act. If the Court were to uphold that ruling without taking the opinion of the jury, they would be deciding as a matter of law that under all the strong facts proved in the case, the house was not within the Act, which would, in fact, be a virtual repeal of the statute.

The COURT, after consideration, made the rule absolute for a new trial, the puisne Barons being of opinion that there was something to go to the jury.

Nov. 26.

Sittings in Banco.

BENNETT v. BECKETT.

RULE to compute against two persons, makers of a PROMISSORY NOTE.—Service—PRACTICE.

This was an action against two parties jointly liable on a promissory note, in which the judgment had been allowed to go by default.

Mr. Addison now moved to make a rule absolute to refer the case to the Master, as usual, to compute the amount of principal and interest due on the note in question; but was desirous of knowing whether the service of the rule nisi on one only of the defendants was enough to entitle him to make his rule absolute against both the defendants.

Lord ABINGER.—That is enough. There is no necessity to serve them both, if they are jointly liable.

Rule absolute.

PREROGATIVE COURT.—Nov. 16.

HOLBY AND WIFE v. MUNNINGS.

REVOCATION of a WILL by alterations and obliterations made by the Testator.

Proving the will of Mr. G. B. Munnings, by Mrs. Ann Rebecca Holby, wife of John Holby, one of the daughters of the deceased, as sole executrix, against the other children of the deceased. The deceased died suddenly on the 9th of February, 1837, a widower, leaving a real estate worth £4000., and personal property of the value of £2000. In March, 1827, his wife being living, and being on terms of affection with all his children, he executed a will, which was attested by three witnesses, and which he enclosed in an envelope, sealed. In April, 1827, his wife died, and having had a quarrel with his son, Thomas Munnings, he made various alterations in his will, cutting off his son with a shilling. He afterwards quarrelled with his other sons, and in September, 1834, he made further alterations in the will, cutting them off with a shilling, and making his daughter Ann Rebecca sole executrix. After his death the will was found in a secret well in his writing-desk, enclosed in an envelope, but not sealed, with the various alterations and obliterations, and the names of the attesting witnesses erased. It appeared that the deceased, prior to his death, had become much displeased with his daughter, on account of her marriage, and had declared that she should not be benefited by his property. The case came on for hearing upon the answers and evidence of the three witnesses. For Mrs. Holby, it was contended that the will, as altered, was an operative will, and not revoked; on the other hand, it was argued that, on the face of the paper, with the alterations and the cancellation of the attestation clause, there was not sufficient to entitle it to probate.

After hearing the Queen's Advocate and Dr. Haggard, for the respective parties,

Sir H. JENNER said, the case was not without difficulty; but he was of opinion that the will was revoked, and that, as far as appeared to the Court, the deceased must be held to have died intestate. It was clear that it was not his intention latterly that his daughter, Mrs. Holby, should have so large a share of his property as was given her by the altered will; and it was equally clear that he did not intend that his sons should have the property that would devolve to them by an intestacy; but it was a choice of difficulties, and the Court was of opinion that the deceased had left undone what he probably intended to do—namely, re-execute the will in the presence of witnesses.

COURT OF THE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

Libel.

(Continued from page 59.)

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—How is it evidence in this cause?

Mr. Stockdale.—It had been published by defendants.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—The costs of the former trial are not evidence in this. The pro of the courts of law in former trials given in evidence, but not printed less to show the animus of the defendant the proceedings of the House of Commons could not be introduced there.

Stockdale.—The defendants themselves no malus animus in this case—that be with the authors; but for what they published they were responsible to the country. They pleaded that they were privileged to publish what the House of Commons ordered. And when they got 1300*l.* costs, what was allowed to him? He spent four years of time and talent, and he was an aged man; he had got only 1*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*; he was a winner—he had beaten the great men who were so highly paid, and there was his reward. He must, however, refer to a consecutive report published by the inspectors of prisons, one of whom was Mr. William Crawford, the other the Rev. Whitworth Russell, Esq. In their report, they complained, they stated that he was the author of a certain book which was found in the rooms of Newgate. It appeared to be written by one Foulger, who had been a ship, and who had had it for the use of the Lord Mayor, and the attention of the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen having been called to the book by the uncourteous language of the inspectors, took it into their consideration. On the opinion of the aldermen the animus went on:—"We now proceed to the mis-statements in the Report of the Court of Aldermen, which we have already shown to be our duty to correct. Of the statements in the inspectors' report relative to the books found by them in the cells through the wards of the prison, the committee thus express themselves:—"Passing over other books particularised in the report, we confine ourselves to the notice of the book mentioned, for the name of which and its contents are left; and the name of Stockdale is mentioned as that of the publisher, and the statement that the book was of a disgusting nature, and the plates obscene is in the extreme. We were prepared to meet with a publication very different from which was handed to us, as being the book referred to by the inspectors. We find it bore the title of the 'Generative System of John Robertson,' and that it was done by permission to the late Dr. Baillie. On a careful examination to be a book, the plates to be purely anatomical, calculated to attract the attention of persons connected with surgical science; and we found from Mr. Cope that it belonged to the prisoner Foulger, who had been captain of a whaler, and who had devoted himself to such studies.' But we deny," said the inspectors, "that the book is a scientific work," and they characterised it as a work of Stockdale's, the obscene publisher. Now, he would not attempt to disgust the Court by the one thousand times more obscene language introduced into the report of these esquire and reverend inspectors of prisons, but he must say that of all the works he had ever read, if he wanted a book with the most obscene expressions, he would take the report. And yet that was the book which the House of Commons threatened, if there were a complaint. He would hand the book to the jury, but he would only read one inferential remark. It was said of one prison, "In this yard the visitors are admitted close to the prisoners, and are separated only by open iron railings, and rarely in the presence of an officer." There was also like evidence in p. 106.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—Was the book of the defendant's publishing?

Mr. Stockdale.—It was published after the former report, and it was bought after the former publication; it was published in 1837.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—So it appears by the type. Can you give us any evidence of the subsequent publication?

Mr. Stockdale did not know whether he could call the defendant's attorney.

The UNDER-SHERIFF did not know whether the defendant's attorney appeared.

Mr. Parkes, who was in court, said that he did not appear as defendant's attorney.

Mr. Stockdale continued. There were doubtless those who could find "sermons in stones, and good in every thing;" but he would refer the jury to pages 106, 107, 136, and 137 of the report of the inspectors, and he would assert that in that book the housebreaker, the highwayman, and other wrong-doers, would obtain a code of instruction in misdeeds, and that those who wished to plunge into disgusting language might, in the books which it was thought necessary to force into circulation in this moral country, obtain a better code of immorality and vice than from any other source. It was well known that by an ingenuity in putting leading questions every one might obtain what answers he pleased. These inspectors put leading questions, and though Mr. Cope, of Newgate, remonstrated, he was obliged to go on; and Mr. Chesterton, of Cold-Bath-Fields, had complained of distinct misrepresentation. He would next refer to what had been published that morning, to show that Messrs. Hansard still continued to pursue the same course that they had hitherto taken in that cause.

The UNDER-SHERIFF could not visit the defendants with anything that took place in the Queen's Bench yesterday on the part of the sheriff. If the plaintiff were damnified by anything the sheriff had done he had his remedy, but it could not injure the defendants unless it were done with their knowledge.

Mr. Stockdale would observe that all the legal talent which the public purse could employ was against him; but his legal right he would have, though they should give a fee to counsel under cover of another party.

The UNDER-SHERIFF had told him before, and must tell the jury, that the defendants could have nothing to do with that.

Mr. Stockdale.—On the first occasion application was made to the House of Commons; on the second cause exactly the same took place; and again, in the present cause, the day before compensation was to be given, another attempt was made to deprive him of his right by a side-wind. He did not know what was strict law, but he knew constitutional law better than both Houses of Parliament. He could not be committed without being brought to the bar, and if the House should usurp such a power under the really proud constitution of this empire, the jury should want no power that he could afford either in their defence or his own. If the House of Commons should dare to attempt such a despotism, they should be met by him at the bar of the House, and he would show them there what he might have shown them, as their equal, if he had not consented to become a partisan, had he not preferred eating bread, and coarse bread it was, to selling the rights of his country. The Sheriff of Middlesex had not nerve, or he never would have truckled to that power, or to any other. He sat in that court as a judge; but the effect of his application to the Court of Queen's Bench would be to deprive the jury of their greatest right under the British constitution. The Attorney-General had stated in the Court of Queen's Bench that his (Mr. Stockdale's) complaints were completely futile, and that he had every power, by petitioning the House of Commons, to obtain redress from the same high court by which the injury had been inflicted. But before he had taken a single step, Lord John Russell had refused to present his petition.

The UNDER-SHERIFF.—Unless the defendants were cognizant of this it could not be stated.

Mr. Stockdale. Before he had taken any steps he did petition, or attempt to petition the House. He might read many applications to Members to present his petition. Every one told him that he would have redress if there were a wrong. Every one said, you have the right to petition, "but I will not present it." And the House would not even appoint an officer to the petitions which Members would not present. And could the jury conceive that any sum which they could give would compensate a man so persecuted? He and his father had spent 30,000*l.* in maintaining the institutions of the country; he was not the one to pull them down; and yet he had been represented to the judges as a man about to fly to America. It was fifty years since his father, defended by the late Lord Erskine, had stood at the bar of the House, and successfully opposed arbitrary power. But there were giants in those days in the House. He would only refer, in continuation, to what had been brought before the Court of Queen's Bench, by his able advocate in the last action; the opinion of Lord Brougham, which was so applicable and so much to the point, that he was sure it would have its due weight with the jury in assessing the damages in the present case. But he ought first to remove a wrong impression which the former verdict had created. His counsel in the hurry had said "whether you give 100*l.* or a farthing, you must give something," and the jury, mistaking the highest sum for the limit of his claim, had given the highest sum that was named, thinking he had asked no more. He had received 100 guineas a-day, and his acquirements entitled him to a larger sum than if he kept a chandler's shop; but it was for the jury to say what damages those talents entitled him to; for a man whose education enabled him to plead his own cause was entitled to more damages than the mere mendicant, whose wants would be relieved by a meal given to him by the Mendicity Society. But even the right of the mendicant was not to be infringed, and in his own case the jury ought not to limit the amount by a mere consideration of pounds, shillings, and pence. Had he not suffered materially? Would the jury, after the charges that had been made against him, entrust him to publish any work? And yet he challenged for his character the fullest inquiry, and only as it came out clear would he ask them to appreciate it. With these prefatory remarks he would read what Lord Brougham said, referring to his (Mr. Stockdale's) case. These were Lord Brougham's words:—"The pretensions, at different times set up by the Houses of Parliament to certain privileges, placing them above the law of the land, are the more familiarly known in consequence of their having of late been brought into discussion by a new and extravagant claim asserted on behalf of the House of Commons to publish libels through irresponsible agents. The natural course of irregular and anomalous power is that it should increase gradually until it becomes intolerable, and create resistance which finally prevails.

(To be continued.)

ARTICLED CLERKS APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED ATTORNIES (a)
IN HILARY TERM, 1840.

(Continued from p. 75.)

| Clerk's Name and Residence.                                                   | To whom Articled or Assigned.                                                   |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Thomas Carr, North Shields.                                                          | John Lowrey, North Shields.                                                            |
| Andrew, Starcross.                                                                   | John Gidley, Exeter.                                                                   |
| William, the younger, 18, Portugal Birmingham, and Manchester.                       | Samuel Danks, Birmingham.                                                              |
| Joseph, 6, Frederick's Place, Old Jewry.                                             | William Stevens, Frederick's Place, Old Jewry.                                         |
| Robert, London; Tewkesbury.                                                          | Lindsey Winterbottom, Tewkesbury; assigned to Edw. Blackmore, 1, Mitre Court, Temple.  |
| John Fitchett, 40, Sidmouth Street; London.                                          | Joseph Wagstaff, Warrington.                                                           |
| William, Bradford, Wilts.                                                            | William Timbrell, Bradford.                                                            |
| Richard, 68, Myddleton Street, Clerkenwell.                                          | William Belton Crealock, 4, Regent Street.                                             |
| Henry William, York.                                                                 | Thomas Walker, York.                                                                   |
| William Henry, Kingston-upon-Hull.                                                   | William Henry Rosser, Gray's Inn Place; assigned to Charles Frost, Kingston-upon-Hull. |
| Alph Allen, 27, Lloyd Square, Penryn.                                                | John Bridges, Red Lion Square.                                                         |
| George, Wells Street, Gray's Inn Road; Ramsgate.                                     | John Mercer, the younger, Ramsgate.                                                    |
| William John, 1, New Court, Middle; and Goudhurst.                                   | Giles Miller, Goudhurst.                                                               |
| Joshua Furness, 1, Manchester Gray's Inn Road; and Halifax.                          | James Stansfeld, Halifax.                                                              |
| William Henry, 51, Manchester Street, Manchester Square; Haverfordwest; Henricet.    | William Evans, Haverfordwest.                                                          |
| es, 27, Tavistock Place, Tavistock Stratton.                                         | Thomas Lediard, Cirencester.                                                           |
| n, William George, Clapham.                                                          | Lawrence Desborough, Size Lane.                                                        |
| William, 12, Upper Kennington                                                        | Beriah Drew, 185, Bermondsey Street; assigned to Geo. Drew, 185, Bermondsey Street.    |
| Samuel Swire, Richmond, Yorkshire.                                                   | Ottiwel Tomlin the elder, Richmond, Yorkshire.                                         |
| hincas, 25, Featherstone Buildings; Melksham.                                        | Henry Goddard Awdry, Melksham.                                                         |
| James Henry George, 13, Little Street; Tiverton.                                     | Clement Govett, Tiverton; assigned to Robert Loosemore, Tiverton.                      |
| William, Skipton.                                                                    | Thomas Brown, Skipton.                                                                 |
| George Harrison, 5, New Boswell Court                                                | William Pybus, Middleton Tyas; assigned to Thomas Henry Dixon, 5, New Boswell Court    |
| Harry Harris, 6, Essex Street, Strand.                                               | John Geare, the elder, Exeter; assigned to Wightwick Roberts, Lincoln's Inn Fields.    |
| Edward, Cheltenham.                                                                  | Joseph Cooper Stratford, Cheltenham.                                                   |
| Frederick Rowland, 4, Warwick Court, London; and 14, St. Thomas Street East, London. | Horatio Hughes, Aberystwith.                                                           |
| Thomas, 58, Pratt Street, Camden and Huddersfield.                                   | William Barker, Huddersfield.                                                          |
| William, 44, Southampton Buildings; Alnwick and Middleton Street.                    | William Dickson, Alnwick.                                                              |
| Thomas, 20, Baker Street, Lloyd Street; Cockerton; and Norfolk Street, London.       | William Rymer, Darlington.                                                             |
| Henry, 34, Percy Street, Bedford Square; London.                                     | John Teesdale, 31, Fenchurch Street.                                                   |
| Great Coram Street.                                                                  |                                                                                        |

(To be continued.)

(a) Marked * are Common Pleas, the rest are Queen's Bench.

GENTLEMEN CALLED TO THE BAR, MICHAELMAS, 1839.

LINCOLN'S INN.—Nov. 19.

Thomas Flowers.
William Daniel Bullock.
Joseph Whalley.
Lumsden Mackeson.
Josiah Heale.

Nov. 22.

Alban Charles Stonor.
Charles Cassidi.
John Todd, jun.
Andrew Bisset.
Roger Wood.

INNER TEMPLE.—Nov. 22.

Richard Ford.
William Atherton.
James William Dacdonald.
George Tickell.
Edward Platt.
John Williamson Fulton.
James Plaisted Wilde.
William Forsyth.
George Taylor.
Robert Thorpe.
William Webster Watson.

John Edward Panter.
Stephen Charles Denison.
George Wilkin.
George Goodin Moulton Barrett.
John Edward Giles.

MIDDLE TEMPLE.—Nov. 6.

Patrick Robert Welch.
Hamilton Gorges.
Rolla Rouse.
Henry Nichols.

Nov. 22.

Matthew Fortescue.
James Vaughan.
Vincent Dowling.
Thomas Hanmer.
Edward Windsor.
Edmund Humphrey Woolrych.
Simon Bristowe.
George Henry Woodward.
John Monk.
John Burmester.
James Jell Chalk.

GRAY'S INN.—Nov. 22.

Richard George Stevens.

ARTICLED CLERKS WHO PASSED THEIR EXAMINATION
MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

| Names.                     | Name and Residence of Attorney to whom articulated or assigned.                                                                                        |
|-----------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Adney, Frederick                  | Henry Mooring Aldridge, Poole.                                                                                                                                |
| Anderson, Thomas Francis          | George Anderson, Ludlow, Salop; assigned to George Pleydell Wilton, 16, Gray's-inn-square.                                                                    |
| Arthur, Edward                    | George Eastlake, Plymouth.                                                                                                                                    |
| Ashford, Robert                   | Henry Scarth, 2, Lyon's Inn.                                                                                                                                  |
| Awdry, Frederick                  | West Awdry, Chippenham, Wilts.                                                                                                                                |
| Baker, John Howard                | Richard Underhill, Birmingham; assigned to William Wills, Birmingham.                                                                                         |
| Bentall, Francis                  | John Coles, 25, Throgmorton-street.                                                                                                                           |
| Bartlett, Robert Henry William    | Samuel Craddock, Shepton Mallet; assigned to Edward Michell, Shepton Mallett.                                                                                 |
| Bartlett, Alfred Durling          | Robert Bartlett, Reading.                                                                                                                                     |
| Beaton, Charles                   | Robert Cook, Bath.                                                                                                                                            |
| Bell, Adam                        | John Law, Manchester.                                                                                                                                         |
| Bircham, Merrick Bircham          | Francis John Gunning, Cambridge; assigned to Frederick Talbot, 47, Bedford-row.                                                                               |
| Bonsall, John George William      | John Thomas Herbert Parry, and John Jones Atwood, Aberystwith.                                                                                                |
| Booth, Charles Brook              | George Holmer, 23, Bridge-street, Southwark.                                                                                                                  |
| Bowden, James (B. A.)             | William Tooke, 39, Bedford-row; assigned to William Ogle Hunt, 10, Whitehall.                                                                                 |
| Boyson, John Robert               | Edward Gatty, 2, Red-lion-square.                                                                                                                             |
| Braithwaite, Francis, the younger | George Rawson, Nottingham; assigned to James Parke, 63, Lincoln's-inn-fields.                                                                                 |
| Briggs, William Sturges           | Thomas Briggs, 55, Lincoln's-inn-fields.                                                                                                                      |
| Brown, William                    | Richard Maychell, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancaster; assigned to William Christopher Chew, Manchester; assigned to William Hugh Myers, Back-king-street, Manchester. |

|                         |                                                                                                                                                                     |
|-------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| James                   | William Pass, Altrincham.                                                                                                                                           |
| John Henry              | Alexander Thompson, Manchester.                                                                                                                                     |
| Thomas William          | George Capron, 9, New Burlington-street; assigned to Thomas Loftus, New Inn.                                                                                        |
| John Hawkey Bingham     | John Smale, Exeter.                                                                                                                                                 |
| th, Thomas Mitchell     | Edward Sykes, Wakefield.                                                                                                                                            |
| Barnabas, the younger   | John Rawlins, Birmingham.                                                                                                                                           |
| Charles John            | John William Fleetwood, Wolverhampton.                                                                                                                              |
| Fred. Wm. Pouget        | John Kelly, Plymouth.                                                                                                                                               |
| r                       | George Simmons, the younger, Truro.                                                                                                                                 |
| Samuel                  | Matthew Rackham, Norwich; assigned to George Frederick Hudson, 23, Bucklersbury.                                                                                    |
| William                 | Meaburn Staniland, Boston.                                                                                                                                          |
| avenport Welch          | John Gidley, Exeter.                                                                                                                                                |
| Richard                 | Robert Loosemore, Tiverton, Devon; assigned to William Henry Clapham, 29, Great Portland-street.                                                                    |
| John James, the younger | John James Coulton, the elder, King's Lynn.                                                                                                                         |
| William Brissett        | Sir George Stephens, Knt., 17, King's-arms-yard, Coleman-st.                                                                                                        |
| Henry                   | Richard Dewes, Coventry.                                                                                                                                            |
| John Reed               | George Frederick Fairclough, Liverpool.                                                                                                                             |
| n                       | William Hazard, Redenall-with-Harleston, co. Norfolk.                                                                                                               |
| Richard                 | Joseph Hayward, Sheffield.                                                                                                                                          |
| n, the younger          | David Davies, 51, Leicester-square.                                                                                                                                 |
| David                   | George Allison, Richmond, county York, and Darlington, county Durham.                                                                                               |
| Edward Falkner          | Frederick Day, Hemel Hemstead; assigned to Thomas Fairthorne, St. Albans; assigned to Thomas Pocock, 59, Bartholomew-close.                                         |
| Frederick               | George Shaw, Bellericay, Essex.                                                                                                                                     |
| gley                    | Frederick Lucas, Louth, Leicester.                                                                                                                                  |
| Thomas Washbourne       | Frederick Dowding, Bath.                                                                                                                                            |
| Edward                  | Robert Gillam, the younger, Worcester.                                                                                                                              |
| John Cree               | John Hull Terrell, Exeter; assigned to Hull Terrell, 30, Basinghall-street.                                                                                         |
| John Beaumont           | William Barker, Huddersfield.                                                                                                                                       |
| n, Grosvenor            | George Hodgkinson, Newark-upon-Trent                                                                                                                                |
| Alfred Catchmayd        | Robert Osborne, Bristol.                                                                                                                                            |
| Beneca                  | William Hughes, 7, George-street, Minories.                                                                                                                         |
| John                    | Robert Heming Parr, Poole,                                                                                                                                          |
| Joseph                  | Thomas Harrison, 5, Walbrook.                                                                                                                                       |
| William                 | Robert Barbor, 122, Fetter-lane; assigned to Francis John Gough, 32, East-street, Red-lion-square; assigned to Richard Nation, 23, Somerset-street, Portman-square. |
| is Porter               | John King, Buckingham; assigned to Thomas Kennedy, 100, Chancery-lane.                                                                                              |
| Frederick               | Charles Salt, Rugeley.                                                                                                                                              |
| rt Paramor              | William Lee, Sandwich.                                                                                                                                              |
| Charles John            | Charles Beare Longcroft, Havant, Herts; assigned to William Bromley, 3, Gray's-inn-square.                                                                          |
| ncis                    | William Lowe, 2, Tanfield-court, Temple.                                                                                                                            |
| l, Henry Robert         | G. Rawson, Nottingham; assigned to Rich. Hole, Leicester.                                                                                                           |
| Samuel                  | Robert Soulthorpe, Peter-gate, Nottingham.                                                                                                                          |
| William, the younger    | Thomas Blackwel Mason, Doncaster.                                                                                                                                   |
| John Fitchett           | Joseph Wagstaff, Warrington.                                                                                                                                        |
| Frederick               | Thomas Metcalfe, 5, Lincoln's-inn.                                                                                                                                  |
| James Arthur            | John Carr, Bedford-row; Arthur William Tooke, Bedford-row.                                                                                                          |
| Richard                 | Matthew Brettingham, Kingsbury, Bungay, Suffolk; assigned to John Chevallier Cobbold, Ipswich; assigned to Alfred Cobbold, 5, Chancery-lane.                        |

Nodes, Stephenson

Oliver, John Bass

Overton, James

Parrott, William

Paxon, Francis

Percival, Andrew

Philips, Charles Frederick

Pilgrim, John Thomas

Plews, Thomas

Polydore, Henry

Preston, Charles

Prothero, Charles

Purvis, Frederick

Riccard, Russell Martyn

Roberts, Frederick Rowland

Robinson, Joseph

Rowland, John Leche

Salmon, George

Salomon, Joseph Constant

Salmon, William

Sharland, George Edward

Sheppard, Thomas James

Slade, James Frederick

Smith, James Knight

Smith, Robert

Snell, George Wells

Sparke, James Bird

Stevens, Charles, jun.

Stone, David Henry

Stone, John

Strick, Edward

Surrage, John

Teale, William

Theobald, John Peter

Thompson, John

Tillett, Jacob Henry

Turner, William Cullen

Tuson, Henry, the younger

Twining, Daniel

Twisden, Thomas Edward

Watson, George Henry

Wight, Thomas

Williams, Edward

Williams, Lewis Walter

Worsley, Jonathan

Yetta, Joseph Muskett

John Oliver Jones, 1, John-street, Bedford-row ; assigned to John Philpot, 3, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury.

Thomas Fowke Andrew Burnaby, Newark-upon-Trent.

John Overton, Fakenham, co. Norfolk.

Robert Southes, 16, Ely-place ; assigned to Edward Augustine Vorley, Stoney-Stratford, Buckingham.

Gustavus Thomas Taylor, 18, Featherstone-buildings.

John Gates, Peterborough.

John James, jun., Newnham ; James Leman, 51, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

Henry Power, Atherston.

Edward Lawrence, 32, Bucklersbury.

Edmund Sambert Newman, Cheltenham.

Isaas Preston, the younger, Yarmouth.

Thomas Phillips, the younger, Newport, Monmouth.

James Wenn, Ipswich ; assigned to John Dyneley, 1, Field-court, Gray's-inn ; assigned to John Coverdale, 1, Field-court, Gray's-inn.

James Edward Jackson Riccard, Southmolton, Devon.

Horatio Hughes, Aberystwyth.

James Jay, Hereford.

William Cooper, Shrewsbury.

Edmund Lloyd, Thornbury.

George Booth, 4, Newman-street, Oxford-street ; assigned to Charles Addis, 10, Great Queen-street, Westminster.

Sturley Nunn, Ixworth ; assigned to Harry Wayman, Bury St. Edmunds.

John Physick, the younger, Bath.

Francis Philip Wingate, East Stonehouse, Devon.

Philip Goode, Howland-street, Fitzroy-square ; assigned to Charles Dodd, Craven-street.

Clement Chadborn, Newnham ; assigned to Thomas Elliott, Newnham.

William Dean, 109, Guildford-street.

William Thaliessen Morgan, Launceston.

Godfrey Goddard, Wood-street ; Frederick Harrison, 34, Bloomsbury-square.

James Dougan, 7, Symond's-inn.

Frederick Nicholls Devey, 34, Ely-place.

Henry John Mant, Bath.

John Williams, Swansea ; assigned to John Jackson Price, Swansea.

Thomas Lyddon Surrage, Sandwich.

Robert Barr, Leeds.

John Theobald, 2, Staple-inn.

Walter Burley, Shrewsbury : assigned to Jonathan Scarth, Shrewsbury.

John Rising Staff, Norwich.

William Ormond, Wantage, co. Berks.

Henry Tuson, Northover, Somerset.

Theed Pearse, the younger, Bedford.

James Partridge, Tiverton, Devon.

Thomas Hodson, Castlegate, city of York.

William Robinson, Dudley.

Peter Warburton, St. Owen's-street, Hereford.

Ambrose Clare, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, and 5, Broad-street-buildings.

Thomas Carthew, Woodbridge, Suffolk.

Nathaniel Palmer, Great Yarmouth ; assigned to Robert Jackson, 41, Bedford row.

NEW POSTAGE ACT.

Direct attention to the Order for the
of Letters within the LONDON DIS-in all letters not exceeding half an ounce, and not being by law specially excepted from the twopenny and penny post transmitted by any twopenny or penny London or Dublin, (and not having rough, or being intended to pass the General Post) there will, on and the 1st day of December last, be charged at a rate of one penny only, provided the postage be prepaid at the time of posting

BUT in case any letter not being by law exempted as aforesaid, transmitted by twopenny or penny post, shall not when posted, or shall exceed half an ounce in weight, the same rate of postage charged as is now payable by Law or will be sent by any such twopenny post exceeding four ounces in weight, the same shall have originally passed or intended to pass through the General in such last mentioned case, not the weight of sixteen ounces, unless authorised by the Order in the London the 22d of Nov. last.

COUNTRY POST,

regard to all INLAND LETTERS. There charged upon all letters not by law specially exempted from postage, and not exceed- an ounce in weight, (not being sent to or from parts beyond the seas)
at a rate of postage of Four-pence, reference, and for every further half-ounce a progressive and additional sum of pence.

we have been informed of the result of weighing of paper of various manufacturers, and it is not one sort in general use, even what is commonly known as the demij paper, of which may not be a sheet (and of the superfine papers no more than an envelope and a full sized seal, which will come under the half ounce, or the rate of postage. The only papers of more than one sheet may be used are the foreign bank post, and the very thin common these must be without an envelope.
The half ounce weight will do but little more than these quantities doubled.

SITTINGS AFTER MICHAELMAS TERM, 1839.

QUEEN'S BENCH.—*Middlesex.

Monday, Dec. 2, and daily, to Friday, Dec.
6, both inclusive.—Common juries.

Saturday, Dec. 7, and daily, to Tuesday, Dec.
10, both inclusive.—Special juries.

London.

Wednesday, Dec. 11.—Adjournment-day.

COMMON PLEAS.—*Middlesex.

Friday, Nov. 29, and daily, to Friday, Dec.
6, both inclusive.—Special juries.

London.

Adjournment-day, Dec. 9.—Common juries.

EXCHEQUER OF PLEAS.—*Middlesex.

Tuesday, Nov. 26, and following day.—Common juries.

Thursday, Nov. 28.—Revenue and Common Juries.

Friday, Nov. 29.—Common Juries.

Saturday, Nov. 30, and daily, to Tuesday,
Dec. 3, both inclusive.—Special and Common Juries.

Wednesday, Dec. 4, and following day.—
Common Juries.

London.

Wednesday, Nov. 27.—To adjourn only.

Friday, Dec. 6.—Adjournment-day and Common Juries.

Saturday, Dec. 7, and daily, to Tuesday, Dec.
10, both inclusive.—Common Juries.

Wednesday, Dec. 11, and daily, to Saturday,
Dec. 14, both inclusive.—Special and Common
Juries.

Monday, Dec. 16, and daily, to Wednesday,
Dec. 18, both inclusive.—Common Juries.

The Court will sit at half-past nine o'clock.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

SESSIONS 1839—40.

Sittings.

1839.

|        |   |   |               |
|--------|---|---|---------------|
| Monday | - | - | November 25th |
| Monday | - | - | December 16th |

1840.

|        |   |   |                 |
|--------|---|---|-----------------|
| Monday | - | - | January 6th     |
| Ditto  | - | - | February 3d.    |
| Ditto  | - | - | March 2d.       |
| Ditto  | - | - | April 6th.      |
| Ditto  | - | - | May 11th.       |
| Ditto  | - | - | June 15th.      |
| Ditto  | - | - | July 6th.       |
| Ditto  | - | - | August 17th.    |
| Ditto  | - | - | September 14th. |
| Ditto  | - | - | October 19th.   |

Business of the Courts.*COURT OF CHANCERY.

Kirkwall v. Flight, by order—Wingate v. Cresswell—Winter v. Boys—Perry v. Jenkins—Jenkins v. the Same—Lewis v. Tipton—Hunter v. Pugh—Purton v. Bicknell—The Same v. Branscomb—Forsyth v. Chard—Martin v. Pellett—Bristow v. Woods, further directions and costs—Liddell v. Taylor, ditto—Bolton v. Malkin.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Short causes and unopposed petitions.

Causes after the Petitions—Harrison v. Bennett, part heard—Ryan v. Hill—Woolwich Ferry Company v. Clarke—Odgers v. Teague, exceptions—Muggeridge v. Muggeridge, further directions and costs—Bonfil v. Purchas, ditto.

ROLLS' COURT.

Attorney-General v. Brooke, part heard—Miller v. Crawford, demurrer—Lewin v. Moline—Franks v. Price, further directions and costs—Evans v. Brown, ditto and petition—Davies v. Hopkins, further directions—Hodgson v. Charlton, ditto—Hopkins v. Hopkins, ditto—Cooper v. Waldegrave, exceptions and petitions—Evans v. Thomas—Peach v. Evans, exceptions, further directions, and costs—Bates v. Bonner, further directions and costs.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Middlesex Common Juries—Scott v. Parker—Bolton v. Shipley—Ward v. Sanderson—Serry v. Levy—The Queen v. Paterson—Bone v. Davy—Bingham v. Stanley—Gadsden v. Allan—Thompson v. Godfrey—Bell v. Mantle—The Queen v. Millett and Gregory—Doe dem Butler v. Tidmarsh—Staniforth v. Robson—Ablett v. Eyre—South v. Shuttleworth—Alexander and others v. North.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Middlesex Special Juries.—Gurney v. Evans—Barrow v. Gardiner.

Middlesex Common Juries.—Fairmaner v. Garwood—Waddell v. Pardy—Toms v. Hedge, undefended—Dix v. Smith, ditto.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Middlesex Common Juries.—Harman v. Layton—Wilkins v. Fell—Johnson v. Winter.

EQUITY EXCHEQUER.

Irving v. Thompson, demurrer by order—Morton v. Hayter, exceptions to certificate—Jackson v. Foord, further directions—Madge v. Riley, ditto.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. B.—S. A. W.—Under consideration.

Communications for insertion in this paper should be sent to the Editor not later than Thursday morning.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

ERRATUM.

Vol. 3, p. 77, 2nd col. last line but one, for "ALPHINOS," read "ALPHONSO."

On Jan. 1, 1840, will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part I.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, in cloth bds. with Table of Contents.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press,

SECOND EDITION,

Shortly will be published, price 18s. cloth bds

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is now well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, December 1, 1839.

The Legal Guide.

.] SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1839.

[No. 7.

LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

1 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

of the Abolition of Fines and Records for the Substitution of more Modes of Assurance.

(Continued from p. 84.)

CONSIDERED.—RULE BETWEEN INCUMBERS, THAT A SUBSEQUENT INCUMBER, WITHOUT NOTICE, AND HAVING AN INTEREST, GETTING IN THE LEGAL POSSESSION BY ASSIGNMENT OF A TERM, OR POSSESSING HIMSELF OF THE DEED CREATING IT, IS NOT AFFECTED.—DOWER.—OUTSTANDING

ELDON, in further considering the case of Maundrell v. Maundrell, would the case stand if the purchaser entered into a contract to sell the estate without contracting for more than to obtain good title, no speciality about dower, the Master's report was in favour of the purchaser upon the ground that a term was outstanding which might be assigned. The Court would make the purchaser take the term, and the trustee might convey, if the Court would not assist them to defeat the dower by requiring another trustee to attend the inheritance. A decision has established that there is no such idle ceremony we must abide by what is the principle that supports such a decision? The question comes to this—Whether, because Lord HARDWICKE has used the terms that are found in that case, importing that an assignment of the term was made, if there has been no assignment, the principle shall not be applied.

Upon the case coming again before Lord ELDON, it appeared that neither the deeds creating nor assigning the term were delivered to the purchaser. There was a mortgage upon the estate at the time of the purchase; and all the title deeds remained in the possession of the mortgagee, and his Lordship in giving his judgment said, upon the whole “I mean to say, for it is impossible to say with confidence there is any great difference in principle upon the case of the dowress, that she stands as an owner of the inheritance contradistinguished from every other owner, so that though notice of the title will protect every other interest in the inheritance it shall not protect her, and nothing shall protect her, but the circumstance that the purchaser has omitted to take an assignment of the term to be attendant upon the inheritance in that very transaction, though the term has in a prior transaction been declared attendant upon the inheritance. But in the case of Swannock v. Lifford, Lord HARDWICKE takes the House of Lords to have so decided upon the ground that in those very circumstances, and that precise case, the Court is bound, not by a principle upon which it can well reason, but by a practice of conveyancers found to be inveterate, that to that length it will go, and that it will not go farther. At least my opinion is, that the ground upon which the Master of the Rolls decided that part of the case is right, and therefore I confirm that."

In the case of Roach v. Wadham, 6 East, 289, which was decided six months before Lord ELDON made his decision, and in which the same point arose, it was erroneously stated that the decree at the Rolls in Maundrell v. Maundrell had been reversed in the House of Lords, and thereupon the counsel on the other side admitted that the power was not merged in the fee, and the Court of King's Bench in delivering judgment took the point for granted. (a)

A woman's dower is now under the absolute dominion of her husband, so that the observations here made do not apply to cases within the Dower Act, but to cases that remain under the old law. Lord ELDON's judgment in Maundrell v. Maundrell may be considered the authority establishing the necessity of an actual assignment of the term to bar the dower of the wife. See 2 Barn. and Ald. 710. 782. And in other cases (not of dower), Lord ELDON observed, that if a purchaser do not get in the satisfied term in some sense, either taking an assignment, making the trustee a party to the instrument, or taking possession of the deed creating the term, that term cannot be used to protect him against any person having a meane incumbrance or charge.

And in a subsequent case (b), when the doctrine again came into question, his Lordship observed this :—the purchaser has got the original title-deed to the term, the Court cannot be satisfied that there is any truth in the assertion that the legal estate was in the person who the adversary says had it. Lord HARDWICKE thought, as you cannot in many cases trace the representative, if the purchaser uses so much diligence as to take possession of the deed, a Court of Equity ought not to compel him to produce that deed to his prejudice. It was not, he said, determined what is the situation of the trustee who makes the assignment. Lord HARDWICKE says the question is not, whether the trustee shall be punished, but whether the purchaser shall hold under the breach of trust. That, he said, was strange doctrine ; and he desired to be understood that he had not made up his mind that the Court would not restrain the trustees from permitting their names to be used. From some saving expressions, he did not conceive Lord HARDWICKE meant to determine, that the trustees, aware of the prior incumbrance, would be safe in making the assignment to a subsequent incumbrancer. One of the greatest difficulties he met with in deciding the case of Maundrell v. Maundrell, was Lord HARDWICKE's expression, that the purchaser would be safe in taking the assignment, if he could get it ; but Lord HARDWICKE would not say, the trustee would be safe. Surely, he added, if the purchaser would be safe, the trustee ought to be so.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM VII.

VOL. 3.

MERGER.

What is it ?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM 13. VOL. II.

BAILMENTS—COMMON CARRIERS.

What is the Common Law responsibility of a Common Carrier, and who shall be considered as such ?

A common carrier is a person who undertakes to transport from place to place, for hire, either by land or water, the goods of such persons as think fit to employ him.

(a) 1 Sugden on Powers, c. 110.

(b) Esparle Knott, 11 Ves. J. 613.

have to consider this subject with the Common Law liability of a carrier, it may conveniently be treated under the following divisions, viz.

1st. What persons come under the denomination of common carrier.

2d. In what cases a carrier is chargeable for loss or injury in his duty.

3d. When his responsibility ceases.

4th. What is his interest in the things delivered to him.

5th. From whom actions against carriers may be brought.

Persons carrying goods for hire, and owners of ships, lightermen, wharfmen, &c. come under the denomination of common carriers: Bac. Abr. vol. ii. A wharfinger, who undertakes to carry goods from his wharf to the vessel in lighters, Morning v. Todd, 1 Stark. 419, and a mail contractor, Coggs v. Lord Raym. 918, are also common carriers.

In respect to a stage-coachman, a person who conveys passengers only, is not a common carrier, Aston v. Heaven, 2 Esp. 659. A hackney-coachman is not liable as a common carrier, unless he receive money for carriage, &c. Upshure v. Aidee, 15 Q. B. 555. Nor is the Postmaster-General a common carrier within the custom of the country, Ex parte Cotton, 1 Lord Raym. 646.

6th. If a man delivers goods to a common carrier to convey them to a certain place; and he loses or damages them, an action upon the contract lies against him, Cro. Jac. 262.

7th. A common carrier, who is offered to carry goods and who hath convenience, refuses to carry them, he is liable to an action in the same manner as an innkeeper who refuses to entertain a guest, or a smith who refuses to shoe a horse, Bac. Abr. Carrier. It is early resolved that if a carrier be offered to carry goods he shall answer the value of the goods, if he hath his hire, which implies an undertaking for the safe custody and delivery of them, which charges him at all events, Co. Litt. 89. 2 Lord Raym. 918.

If a box is delivered generally to a carrier and he accepts it, he is answerable, though the party did not tell him there was money in it; but if the carrier asks, and the other says "no;" or if he accepts it conditionally, provided there is no money in it; in either of these cases the carrier is not liable. Per King, C. J., Tichbourn v. White, 1 Str. 145.

Where a carrier had given notice that he would not be liable for certain valuable articles, if lost, of more than the value of a specified sum, unless entered and paid for as such; and articles of that description were delivered to him by a person, who knew the conditions, but concealed the value, paying no more than the ordinary price of carriage and booking; on a loss, it was holden, that the carrier was neither liable to the extent of the sum specified, nor to return the price actually paid for the carriage and booking. Clay v. Willan, 1 H. Bl. 298.

3rd. The responsibility of a carrier, as such, ceases when the goods have reached their place of destination, and the control of the carrier over them, in the character of a carrier, has terminated. Chitty on Contracts, 383.

4th. A carrier, who hath goods delivered to him, undertakes for his hire to deliver them safely, and he hath the possession of them for no other purpose; yet he hath such a special limited property, that he may bring trover and conversion against a stranger that takes them away, or he may sue the hundred when robbed of them, because he is answerable over in damages to the absolute owner. Co. Litt. 89. 2 Saund. 47.

While the goods are in his custody, he is bound to the utmost care of them; and, unlike other bailees falling under the same class, he is, at common law, responsible for every injury sustained by them, occasioned by any means whatever, except only by the act of God or the king's enemies. 1 Inst. 89.

Dale v. Hall, 1 Wils. 281.

By force of the duty imposed on carriers to convey the goods of the subject for a reasonable reward, to be therefore paid, they have a lien as far as the carriage price of the particular goods, but not to any greater value or extent, Skinner v. Upshaw, Raym. 752, which lien is gone, if a carrier parts with the possession of the goods after the lien attaches.

Lastly. In general, the action against a carrier for the non-delivery, loss of, or damage to the goods must be brought by the person in whom the legal right of property is vested at the time. Therefore where a tradesman orders goods to be sent by a carrier, as at the instant when delivered to the carrier the goods are considered as delivered to the purchaser, and the whole property (subject only to the right of stoppage in transitu and the carrier's lien) vests in the purchaser, he alone can maintain an action against the carrier for any loss or damage to the goods; and this rule holds as well where the particular carrier is not named by the purchaser as where he is, Dutton v. Solomonson, 3 Bos. & Pul. 584, Dawson v. Peck, supra.

As to the rights and liabilities of carriers under particular statutes, see Selwyn's Law of Nisi Prius and Chitty on Contracts.

H.

Imperial Parliament.

LONDON GAZETTE, Tuesday, Dec. 10.

BY THE QUEEN.—A PROCLAMATION.

VICTORIA R.,

Whereas our Parliament stands prorogued to Thursday, the 12th day of this instant December; we, with the advice of our Privy Council, do hereby publish and declare that the said Parliament shall be further prorogued, on the said 12th day of December instant, to Thursday, the 16th day of January next; and we have given order to our Chancellor of that part of our United Kingdom called Great Britain to prepare a commission for proroguing the same accordingly; and we do hereby further, with the advice aforesaid, declare our royal will and pleasure that the said Parliament shall, on the said Thursday, the 16th day of January next, assemble and be holden for the despatch of divers urgent and important affairs; and the lords spiritual and temporal, and the knights, citizens, and burgesses, and the commissioners for shires and burghs of the House of Commons, are hereby required and commanded to give their attendance accordingly at Westminster, on the said Thursday, the 16th day of January next.

Given at our Court at Windsor, this 9th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1839, and in the third year of our reign.

God save the Queen.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Nov. '6.

DE HOUMELIN v. SHELDON AND THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

ALIEN HUSBAND—VENDOR AND PURCHASER—Wife's Estate—Purchase-money arising out of land devised to Trustees for Sale out and out—Cestui que trust, an English woman married to a Frenchman, and domiciled abroad—Whether the property became forfeited to the Crown.

This was a Supplemental Bill, in the cause De Houmelin v. Sheldon, heard at the Rolls on the 10th Nov. 1837, and 28th Jan. 1838, (a) and was filed with the consent of the purchaser, Lord Radnor, to bring the question at issue formally before the Court, and make the Attorney-General a party to represent the Crown.

The original Bill was filed by the Count de Houmelin, a Frenchman, and Frances Maxilde his wife, an Englishwoman and child, to have the will of Mrs. Elizabeth Sheldon established and carried into execution; and by the decree dated the 15th June, 1832, it was declared that the will ought to be established, and the trust carried into execution; and by a subsequent decree dated 16th April, 1835, it was ordered that the estates should be sold with the usual directions.

The facts of the case were these:—Elizabeth Sheldon, by her will dated the 9th day of Oct. 1824, duly executed, devised, and apportioned her estate unto and to the use of Edward Sheldon, James Somerville Fownes, and Richard Samuel White, and to their heirs and assigns forever, upon trust that they should make sale and absolutely dispose of the same to any person purchase, and should convey and assure to the use of the purchasers, their heirs, and should, on payment to the purchaser the purchase-money, give receipts for which receipts were to be effectual to the purchasers, and should discharge being obliged to see to the application or nonapplication thereof. Directed that the trustees should stand of the monies to arise by such sales, after payment of the costs and expenses of the mortgages affecting the estate, the residue in the public funds, or on any other real securities; and to stand upon such monies, funds and securities, after the death of her husband, Charles Henry Sheldon (died in 1826), as concerning one sixth part of the trust, during the life of her daughter, Matilda, the wife of the defendant, the Houmelin; to pay the interest, dividend or annual produce thereof, as the same should be received, into her proper hands, or into the hands of such person or persons as, notwithstanding her coverture, she should from time to time appoint by way of assignment, charge or otherwise, to appoint to receive the same, for her use and subject to the life interest of the said Matilda De Houmelin, in trust for her children (aliens) by her said husband, or son or sons, should attain the age of twenty-one or being a daughter or daughters. In that age or marry, in equal shares if more than one, and if but one such child then born, in trust for such child. And the three sixths were given respectively, in like manner, to the benefit of her daughters, Caroline Margaret Frances, the wife of Maximilian de Astelet, the plaintiff, Lucy Catherine and Elizabeth Emma, the wife of Antoine Deudon, and their respective heirs. And the testatrix directed, that in the event of any of the daughters dying without issue who should live to acquire vested in the husband of each daughter (four of the daughters) should enjoy a life interest, with an annuity for the benefit of Charles Henry if he should be then living, or if he should be then dead, for the next of kin of the said daughter. Four of the daughters married aliens, and three of them had issue, who were also aliens. Six died in 1829. The trustees sold the property of the testatrix, and the Earl of Radnor was the purchaser of that in question, for which he paid the purchase-money into the hands of the Master. It was referred to the Master to inquire whether the plaintiff could make a good title to the property. —The Master, by his report dated the 1st of August, 1838, stated that he was of opinion that the plaintiffs could make a good title, and that such good title was first shewn on the day on which the abstract of title was first delivered. To this report exceptions were taken, and it was objected that interests in land were attempted to be given to the husbands and children of the testatrix's daughters, who were aliens, that such interests could not be held as against the Crown, and consequently that the Crown had a title over which the vendors had no power.

(a) Ante, Vol. 1, pp. 42, 218. Vol. 2, p. 84.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, at the hearing, said, (a) It is obvious that if the trusts be performed as the testatrix intended, the land will remain vested in the trustees till a conveyance is made to the purchaser, and never can be vested in any alien; and that the purchase money, after paying costs and satisfying incumbrances, being invested in stock, the interest of the aliens will be in such stock and not in land. It appears, also, that whether we regard the land or the stock into which the testatrix intended it to be converted, there is at the present time no vested interest in any alien. The vested interests are in English subjects. The interests in aliens are contingent and expectant on the determination of those vested interests. The English subjects in whom the interests are vested are entitled to have the trusts performed; and no claim of the Attorney-General to have secured for the Crown the interests which were intended for aliens, could have prevented the decree for sale. It is not a case in which they being entitled, or the Attorney-General or the Crown being entitled, can exercise an option, and elect that there shall be no conversion. There is a decree for sale: the sale has taken place, and when it is complete the money will be the only property in which the aliens will have any interest. But it is argued, that taking the case as it stood at the death of the testatrix, and as it must remain until the conversion shall be completely made, the land is the source from which the money or stock in the shares of which the aliens are to be interested is to be realized, and that in that respect the aliens have an interest in the land. And as the gift of an interest in land to an alien may be good, and the alien, though capable of taking the gift, cannot hold it for his own benefit but for the Crown: only that it is contended that the Crown has here a right to that interest, and therefore to an interest in the money or stock which is to arise from the sale of the land. In the case of the King v. Holland, reported in Aleyn, p. 14, and in other books, (b) it was the expressed opinion of one of the Judges, though it was not then necessary to decide the point, that an alien could not compel feoffees to execute a use ; and of another of the Judges, that though the King should have the use, yet he could not seize the land itself, but by equity might have a decree for the land ; or, in other words, might in a court of equity compel the trustees to execute the trust for his benefit. This doctrine is applicable to a case in which land is given to a trustee to be held by him in trust for an alien ; in which case the alien takes in the land a permanent equitable interest, which might be attended by inconveniences nearly the same as those which are considered to attend a permanent legal interest vested in an alien. But the same doctrine is not necessarily applicable ; nor do similar reasons extend to a case in which no interest in land was intended ever to vest in the alien, in which the legal estate is vested in the trustees and intended to pass from them to the purchaser, and in which the interest of the alien and his right, if right he has, is only to have the land converted into money, and is so far of a transitory nature that it endures only till the purposes of the donor can be performed by the due execution of the trusts he has created.

(a) See 1 Beav. 89.

(b) 1 Rolles Abridgement, 19 b. Styles, 20, 40, 75, 84, 90, 94.

It has been held, that the disability of an alien to hold lands for his own benefit is not in the nature of penalty or forfeiture, but arises from the policy of the law ; and none of the various reasons on which the Judges have considered the policy of the law relating to aliens to be founded, seem applicable to such a case as this. When the land is converted into money, as the trust intends, no objection in respect of tenure, fealty, or allegiance remains : and it has been considered to be in conformity with the policy of the law that aliens should be interested in the English stocks or funds. The law giving to an alien the right of holding money or stock, and refusing to him the right of holding land, any man desiring to benefit an alien may, if he pleases, sell his land and give the purchase money or the stock which it may produce to an alien, or to a trustee for his benefit. In so doing he would do nothing contrary to the policy of the law ; and it would be singular, if being entitled to do this by himself, he could not accomplish the same purpose by means of another as his agent or trustee, created by deed or will, for the purpose of sale and conversion, because, during the time which may elapse before the conversion can be completed, the alien is by the peculiar doctrine of this Court considered to have an interest in the land which is to be converted, i. e. an interest that the land should be sold to persons who can legally hold it, in order to raise the money which he, the alien, can legally hold. I confess that I am at a loss to understand in what way the policy of the law can be applied, so as to give to the Crown any part of the money which in such a case is intended as a provision for the members of the testatrix's family, though some of them happen to be aliens. The policy of the law in relation to mortmain is subject to considerations so entirely different that they do not appear to me to be at all applicable to the case. The only authority on which the purchaser relies and which appears to me to occasion any difficulty, is the case of Fourdrin v. Gowdey (a) in which Sir John Leach considered a gift of this kind as a gift of land subject to charges and held that aliens could no more "take" an interest in land than the land itself. He must have meant to use the word "hold," instead of the word "take," because it is clear that aliens may take land, though they cannot hold it against the King. But in Fourdrin v. Gowdey the question principally argued related to the effect of letters of denization, and the question which bears upon the point arising in the present case was much less considered. Moreover, there was no estate devised to trustees for the purpose of enabling them to sell and convey, but only a direction to the executors to sell, and the heir-at-law being an alien the real estate could not descend to him, and the circumstances afforded a ground for the decision in Fourdrin v. Gowdey, which does not exist in the present case. Having regard, however, to the expressions which flow from Sir John Leach, and his decision as to the leaseholds in that case, I think that he would probably have considered such an interest as given to the aliens in this case, as an interest which might be claimed by the Crown ; and in that respect, Fourdrin v. Gowdey, if to be sustained, appears to me to be an authority for the exceptions, which are taken to the Master's report in this case. But it is a single case ; in the consideration of it the policy of the law in regard to mortmain seems to have been in some degree confounded with the policy of the law as to alienage, and as upon the most careful consideration of it I am unable to acquiesce in the reasons upon which so much of the decree is applicable to the present case is founded, or to find any others which are satisfactory, I do not think that I ought to be governed by it. It does not appear to me that in respect of the species of interest in land, which is here given to aliens, the Crown is entitled, by its prerogative either to come into equity to have the trust executed, in order that the benefit of it in money or stock may be taken from the persons to whom it was given by the testatrix and secured to the Crown, or to insist that the trust shall not be executed as intended, but that the interests vested in the aliens before conversion shall remain in the same form, and be in that form taken by the Crown, because an alien cannot continue so long as to hold it.

(a) 3 Mylne and Keen, 343.

ceptions were overruled.

ORD CHANCELLOR this day gave his

His Lordship said, the question in it was whether the Crown had any property. His opinion was that the Crown had no right. He would not give any principle of the decision in Fourmyley, by Sir John Leach, as it did not apply here, where the estate is directed to be put out and out—a circumstance which did not apply in that case, where the testator did not direct the land to be put out and out; but there was no objection to the legatee to take the land itself. The facts of this case were very different. If the legatee is entitled to the money produced by the estates, then no debtor or other person is entitled to have his land sold to pay his debts, or if any of his creditors happened to be foreigners, nor could any foreigner enforce a claim against his debtor, in this country, having no property here.

His Lordship said he was clearly of opinion that the Crown had no right to the property. The legatee is to have their costs out of the estate, and the costs of the alien legatees. The costs of the Attorney-General are to be paid out of the general estate.

CHANCELLOR'S COURT.—Nov. 21.

IN RE MRS. TAYLOR.
OF INFANTS BILL, 2 & 3 Vict.
—PRACTICE.—Whether the Court will order substitution of service of the writ on the Husband's Solicitor or at his house or business. (b)*

Bruce made a further application to the Court for an order to substitute service of the writ on Mr. Taylor's solicitor, or at his house or business in London. The application was made on a former day, the wife's counsel then entertained hopes that another attempt to communicate with her husband by letter would prove successful. That attempt was unsuccessful. A letter was written to him on the subject of the wife's conviction of her husband of misconduct to him, and with a view to imputation. The letter was sent to the solicitor's, and copies of it were shown to Mr. Taylor at his house at South Street, the brewery at Limehouse; but no notice had been taken of it, the present application being necessary.

CHANCELLOR said that a sufficient case had been made out by the affidavits produced in support of the application, together with those filed on a former day, previous to the present application, to warrant the Court to order for substituting service of the writ on the solicitor, as prayed.

See ante, p. 22.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—Nov. 29.

Sittings in Banco.

ROBINSON v. MAY.

PROMISSORY NOTE must be absolutely to pay, and not depend upon a contingency.
Special Case.

The defendant had given a note of hand to the plaintiff in the following form:—"Twelve months after date I promise to pay to Messrs. Robinson, Foster, and Co. the sum of £500, to be held by them as a collateral security for any monies now owing to them by Mr. James Malachi, which they may be unable to recover in realizing the securities now held." The question was whether this was a promissory note or not.

Sir W. Follett, on the plaintiff's side, said the ground upon which it was contended that this was not a promissory note was, that a promissory note should not rest upon a contingency. The promise must be absolutely to pay; at all events, payment must not depend upon any contingency. There were several cases in which the fact of payment was itself uncertain, depending on a contingency; but there was a case, Goss v. Nelson, 1 Burrow, p. 226, in which an infant promised to pay when he should come of age, at the same time mentioning a particular day, the 12th of June, 1750. It was objected that this was not a good note, but Lord Mansfield held that it was, the money being made payable on a particular day mentioned in the instrument itself. That was the oldest case, and upon that all the rest were founded. In the present case, also, there was no contingency, because the money was to be paid twelve months after date, and therefore the time was certain. It professed to be given as a collateral security for any monies owing to the plaintiff by a third party, and the question might arise whether the note or the money was to be held as the collateral security pending the recovery of the debts; but, be that as it might, still there would be no contingency of payment of the note at the end of the twelve months, because the parties holding the note could then enforce payment. If, indeed, in the interval the monies due were recovered, that could be pleaded against payment. It was objected that the note was not negotiable; but that did not alter the case, because it was payable to the party receiving the note, and they might enforce payment on all grounds whatever, unless they had actually received the monies due from the third party before the expiration of the twelve months. The wording of the note, by which it was professed to be given as a collateral security, did not make any difference; still there was no contingency of payment twelve months after date. No particular form was necessary to constitute a promissory note.

Mr. Kelly, for the defendant, argued that the note was not a promissory note, for, though it was made payable at twelve months after date, still there was a condition set forth.

The COURT.—We are satisfied that it is not a promissory note.

Sir W. Follett.—My learned friend seemed to rest his case on the statement that the note was to be payable at twelve months after date.

Lord DENMAN.—So did you.

Sir W. Follett.—Suppose it had been to pay £500 at a given time, if the money owing was not paid before?

Lord DENMAN.—We consider it the same as that, on the face of it. It must be taken as a conditional promise, and therefore it cannot be a promissory note. (a)

(a) There must not be a restriction as to what is to be the nature of a payment, as to pay "in three good India bonds," or to "pay so much money, and deliver a horse;" for such are neither bills of exchange nor promissory notes within the 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. See Bull. N. P. 273. Jenvey v. Horle, 2 Lord Raym. 1361, Morris v. Watkins, id. 1362, 1396. Appleby v. Bidille, 1 Strange, 219; and in Sproat v. Matthews, 1 Term Rep. 182, it was held that whether a conditional or an absolute acceptance was a question of law; and in Palmer v. Pratt, 9 Moore, 959, S. C. 2 Bing. 186, it was held that a bill of exchange payable on an uncertain contingency is absolutely void.—

EDITOR.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Nov. 18.

Sittings in Banco.

GINGER v. PEACH.

SUBPENA—PRACTICE—Meditated contempt.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde moved for a rule to show cause why an attachment should not issue against a gentleman for not appearing upon a subpoena. The trial upon which he had been summoned was first on the paper, but he did not attend until a quarter of an hour after the cause had been withdrawn in consequence of his absence. The object of this application was to compel this individual to pay £20, the costs of the day.

Chief-Justice TINDAL.—Should we not have proof of something like meditated contempt?

Mr. Sergeant Wilde said he thought suitors should be protected in such cases.

Chief-Justice TINDAL.—Yes, but the question is, whether you ought to have an attachment. The plaintiff may obtain redress by means of an action.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde proposed that he should take a rule to show cause why the witness should not pay the costs, or, in case of refusal, why an attachment should not issue against him.

Chief-Justice TINDAL.—That will be the best mode.

Rule granted.

Nov. 20.—Sittings in Banco.

HILL v. WHITE.

ATTORNEYS' BILL OF COSTS—Joint Contracts—PRACTICE—PLEADING in ABATEMENT.

This was an action of assumpsit, brought by the plaintiff, who is an attorney, for work and labour done for the defendants, to which the latter pleaded in abatement to the whole cause of action that the contracts in the declaration mentioned were made by them jointly with other parties. Issue was joined upon the plea, but after the cause was set down for trial, the parties agreed to refer it. The arbitrator made a special award, from which it appeared that some of the contracts mentioned in the declaration had been made by the defendants jointly with other persons, but that the remainder had been made by them solely; and he raised the question whether in that state of the facts and the pleading, the plaintiff was entitled to recover.

The case was now argued by Mr. Butt for the plaintiff, and Mr. Gray for the defendant.

The COURT, after a short consultation, decided that the defendant had failed in making out his plea. The old authorities clearly established, that when there were several counts in a declaration, the defendant might plead in abatement to some of them, and in bar to the others, and there was no reason why the same thing should not be done now, when several causes of action were included in one general count, as to some of which the defendants were suable jointly with others, and as to the rest suable alone. Upon the authority of the old cases with respect to declarations with several counts, there was no reason why a plea in abatement should not be divisible in relation to several causes of action contained in one general count—no reason why the defendants might not pray that the writ should abate as to those contracts which they had entered into jointly with other persons. Here the defendants had not adopted that course, but had pleaded in abatement to all the causes of action. They chose to say that all the contracts declared upon had been entered into by them jointly with others. Now the facts, as found by the arbitrator, did not support that plea, because some of the contracts had been made by them alone. Why, then, was the plaintiff to be injured by of the defendant's plea? If the plaintiff failed to prove his plea in part, he failed to prove it at all. The answer given to that was, that the plaintiff ought to have proved it; but there was no reason why a plea was necessary, for the plaintiff, if he had a right to stand upon the facts, was entitled to do so, the defendant having admitted more largely than the facts warranted. There was any case in the books of a plaintiff after a plea in abatement. The plea being found against the defendant, the plaintiff was entitled to the full amount in the declaration.

for the plaintiff.

Nov. 29.

at Nisi Prius.—Special Jury.

WHITEHEAD v. BARRON.

COMPANIES — Liabilities of Partners to the Debts of the Company as to Tradesmen.

An action to recover the price of and other machinery supplied to Kingdom Patent Beetroot-Sugar which the defendant was alleged to have received.

for the plaintiff.—This company was formed in the early part of 1836, and in May in that year they issued prospectuses announcing a capital of £250,000, in shares of £25. each, with a deposit of £12.50. The prospectuses also set forth that the machinery was of the most perfect kind, and stated that the machinery was forwardness. The defendant, who was in Oxford street, applied for some shares on the 31st of that same month of May, and received a letter from the secretary of the company, apprising him that thirty shares had been allotted to him. In the months of September and October following the machinery was completed, and delivered to the plaintiff. The project, however, turned out to be a failure. The defendant never had been a capital of more than £12,000, and only about 1200 shares were distributed, of these there were not above 700 which the deposit was paid. The defendant was glad to dispose of his shares to the directors for 1s. each. It was under these circumstances that the present action was brought against him as a member of the company.

The plaintiff, for the defendant, reprobated the transaction in the strongest terms, as being a fraud and delusion from first to last, and contended that this was in effect the same as saying that the directors, who, being really liable for the loss, had induced them to make the experiment of suing the defendant, as was manifested from the fact that all the documentary and other evidence adduced was supplied by them; they, in all probability, having guaranteed them against the consequences. He contended that the defendant had never been an actual proprietor at all; but, at all events, he had not become a member of the company at the time when the order for the machinery was given by the company, because in the prospectus issued in May, 1836, it was stated that the machinery was in a state of forwardness, whereas the defendant had not had shares allotted to him until the 31st of that month.

The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE said, that the jury would first have to inquire whether, supposing the defendant to have become a proprietor at all, he had become one before the order was given to the plaintiffs for the machinery in question; if they should be of opinion that he had not, it would be unnecessary to enter into the other point, as to whether he was at any time a proprietor in point of law.

The jury said, that they were satisfied on the first point, and returned a verdict for the defendant.

The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE perfectly concurred in the propriety of their verdict, but said he hoped the case would operate as a warning to parties how they engaged in speculations of this kind without first calculating upon the extent of their liabilities, and also to tradesmen how they gave credit to such speculators without first ascertaining the extent of their capabilities.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

IN THE MATTER OF MESSRS. CHAMBERS AND SON, BANKRUPTS.

EQUITABLE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT.—

Right of a Creditor's Assignee (by assignment) to prove his assigned Debt against a Bankrupt's Estate without the concurrence of the Assignor.

Mr. Egan applied for leave to prove a debt standing in the name of the late Lord Langford. He stated that, when the commission of bankruptcy was issued against Messrs. Chambers and Son, they were indebted to the late Lord Langford on the balance of a banking account. His Lordship subsequently assigned his claim, but the debt remained unproved, and hence arose the necessity for the present application.

Mr. Arnold, for the bankrupt's assignees, said, although there was no disposition on the part of his clients to offer objections, yet they were bound to scrutinise every claim set up against the bankrupt's estate; and he contended that the present application could not be granted, as the executor of the deceased nobleman had not joined with the assignee.

Mr. Egan said, the will left by his Lordship was calculated to cause considerable litigation, and that it had not been proved. He, however, maintained that, although an equitable creditor could not take a commission of bankruptcy, yet an equitable as well as a legal claim might be proved under a fiat, and cited Ex parte Williamson, 2 Ves. sen. 249.

Mr. Arnold said, the debt could not be legally recovered unless his Lordship's executor appeared.

Mr. Egan argued, that the assignment was sustainable in equity (Row v. Dawson, 1 Ves. sen. 332; Duke of Chandos v. Tulbot, 2 P. Wms. 608; and Lord Townsend v. Wyndham, 2 Ves. p. 6); that there was no case in which an assignment, especially for a chose in action, operated otherwise than by putting the assignee in the situation of the assignor (Purdew v. Jackson, 1 Russ.); and that the Court possessed an equitable as well as legal jurisdiction, and, consequently, was competent to take cognizance of the claim.

Mr. Commissioner HOLROYD said, the constant practice of the Court had been to require the assignor or his legal personal representative to concur with the assignee.

Mr. Egan said, that Ex parte Lloyd, 1 Rose, 4, tended to establish a different doctrine. There Lord Eldon said, "The assignee has purchased the right of an individual who was entitled to prove, and is, as such purchaser, entitled to his advantages, remedies, and equities, and therefore to prove in his name."

Mr. Arnold maintained that Ex parte Lloyd had been overruled by Ex parte Herbert, 2 Glynn and Jameson, 66.

Mr. Egan replied, Ex parte Herbert decided a very different point, namely, that "a creditor who had proved his debt, and subsequently assigned it, was entitled to sign the bankrupt's certificate:" the distinction between the two cases was obvious from the language of the Lord Chancellor: "I remember no instance," said his Lordship, "where, after a creditor had proved, and subsequently assigned his debt, the purchaser had been admitted to sign the certificate." He contended there was, within the control of the Court, ample evidence to prove the claim: the bankrupts having passed their examination, their accounts were admissible evidence; for the rule in equity was to admit the best evidence which the circumstances of the case afforded, Whitfield v. Faussett, Cas. tempo. Lord Hardwicke. And the deed of arrangement entered into by the chief creditors with the bankrupts and their assignees (whereby £23,000 was secured to Mr. Chambers, sen., as a consideration for submitting to the commission) was also additional evidence. That deed Lord Langford executed at the request of the assignees; they had recognised his Lordship as a creditor, and they consequently were stopped from opposing the proof.

Mr. Commissioner HOLROYD said the deed of arrangement should be produced by the assignees.

Mr. Mayhew said he had it not in Court, but admitted the execution of it by the late Lord Langford.

Mr. Egan then submitted that the evidence which had been elicited afforded sufficient grounds for the exercise of that equitable authority which the Court unquestionably possessed, and which he hoped would be extended to the present case.

Mr. Commissioner HOLROYD was of opinion that proof for the amount which appeared on the bankrupts' books ought to be admitted.

Proof admitted.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN THE COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY.

The LORD CHANCELLOR has directed a Commission of Inquiry, to inquire into the present state of the laws relating to BANKRUPTCY and INSOLVENT DEBTORS, and the administration thereof; and whether it be expedient to make any alterations therein; and particularly whether the several Courts by which they are now administered may not be beneficially united, or so arranged as to co-operate with and assist each other, and by what means the full benefit of such laws may be secured, and the better administration thereof provided for in the country districts.

The Commissioners named are Mr. Justice Erskine, Mr. Commissioner Law, Mr. Evans, Mr. Fonblanque, and Mr. Holroyd; W. Crawford, Esq. M.P., B. Hawes, Esq. M.P., Wynn Ellis, Esq. M.P., Mr. Horsley Palmer, Mr. J. A. Hankey, and Mr. C. J. Glynn.

SPECIAL COMMISSION, MONMOUTH.

Tuesday, Dec. 10.

The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE TINDAL delivered the following Charge to the Grand Jury:—

My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury,—Her Majesty having been pleased that we should be assembled this day, under commission issued not for the holding of an ordinary assize and gaol delivery, but on a special and extraordinary occasion, it has become my duty to lay before you the nature and description of the offences to which those commissions extend, the class and character of the cases which will probably be brought under your investigation, and the law which will apply to such cases respectively. It is not my intention, nor indeed have I the power to detail or comment on the circumstances of each particular case upon which you may be called to inquire. Undoubtedly, it will be most advantageous on the present occasion, where the

, unfortunately, very numerous upon the highest crime which can affect you should receive only a general view of the law, which you may yourselves consider in the circumstances of each individual case, so that you should be embarrassed by the minuteness of detail of the facts in each particular case. By such a course it appears to me, the ends of justice are served with more complete certainty, and greater satisfaction both to yourselves and to the public. Gentlemen, with the very limited knowledge which I possess on the subject, it cannot be expected, neither would it be proper for me to attempt with any minuteness of detail to enter into the history of the case on which has formed the occasion of your convening together at the present time, it is so desirable that you should perform your duty without any hesitation in your minds as to the facts of the case, that I shall content myself with saying more than it is necessary to say for notoriety, that disturbances have taken place within this county of such a character, and of such magnitude as to render it highly probable that several persons have been charged with offences for high treason, and that some of the parties named have taken a share in those offences.

It will, therefore, be my more important duty on the present occasion to call your attention to the charges which will, in all probability, be brought under your investigation, to explain to you the law which defines and limits those several charges; to explain to you what will be necessary to constitute the offence charged by such charge; and to add such observations relating to the nature and extent of the proof as will enable you to come to a just estimate of its weight and sufficiency in the charges brought before you, and to arrive at such conclusion in each particular case as justice and reason require. The offence of high treason, one of the most heinous crimes under which we sit, is in itself generated in its terms and extent. It is defined within it all treasons, misprisions of treason, felonies, and misdemeanours whatsoever, and is the only criminal charge that can be brought before you are those which are connected with the offences above referred to, with respect to which I have already observed, there can be no doubt that presentments for high treason ought to be brought forward, my duty will be, in the first place, to offer you such remarks upon the nature of the crime of high treason as may assist you in the discharge of the important functions you may be called upon to execute. Gentlemen, the crime of high treason, in its own direct consequences, is calculated to produce the most malignant effects upon the community at large; its direct and immediate tendency is the putting down the authority of the law, the shaking and subverting the foundation of all government, the loosening and dissolving the bands and cement by which society is held together, the general confusion of property, the involving a whole people in bloodshed and mutual destruction; and, accordingly, the crime of high treason has always been regarded by the laws of this country as the offence, of all others, of the deepest dye, and as calling for the severest measure of punishment. But in the very same proportion as it is dangerous to the community and fearful to the offender from the weight of punishment which is attached to it, has it been thought necessary by the wisdom of our ancestors to define and limit this law within certain express boundaries, in order, that on the one hand no guilty person might escape the punishment due to his transgression by an affected ignorance of the law; and, on the other, that no innocent man might be entangled or brought unwares within reach of its severity by reason of the law's uncertainty. And accordingly, in the Parliament of the 25th year of King Edward III. an act was passed, entitled "A declaration which offences shall be adjudged treason;" and upon this ancient statute, expounded, and in some degree enlarged, by a statute passed in the 36th year of King George III., stands the law of treason at the present day, so far at least as relates to any of the cases which can by possibility be made the subject of your inquiry. The statute of Edward III. declares it to be treason "when a man doth compass or imagine the death of our Lord the King," (within which designation a Queen regnant is included), "or if a man do levy war against our Lord the King in his realm, and thereof be proveably attainted of open deed by the people of their condition." The statute afterwards declares, "It is to be understood that in the cases above rehearsed, that ought to be judged treason which extends to our Lord the King, and his majesty." By the more recent statute of George III., temporary only at first, but afterwards made perpetual, it is enacted, "That if any person shall, within the realm or without, compass, imagine, invent or devise, or intend death and destruction, or any bodily harm tending to death and destruction, maim or wounding, imprisonment or restraint of the person of the King, or to deprive or depose him from the style, honour, or kingly name of the imperial crown of this realm, or to levy war against His Majesty within this realm, in order by force or constraint to compel him to change his measures or counsels, or in order to put any force or constraint upon or to intimidate or overawe both Houses or either House of Parliament, and such compassings, imaginations, inventions, devices, or intentions, or any of them, shall express, utter, or declare, by publishing any printing or writing, or by any overt act or deed, every person convicted in the manner therein mentioned shall be deemed, declared, and adjudged to be a traitor." Gentlemen, it cannot have escaped your observation that in the statute of Edward the substantive offence of treason thereby declared, affecting the life of the King, and in the latter statute, the substantive offence of the several treasons thereby created, consists in the compassing, intending, devising, and imagining the perpetration of the several acts therein specified, not in the commission of the acts themselves. But inasmuch as the wicked imaginations of men's hearts are known only to the Supreme Being, until they are evidenced to man by outward act, so the former statute has required, that before any one should become subject to the penalties of treason, he shall be thereof proveably attainted "of open deed:" and again by the latter statute it is enacted, that before any one falls within its penalties he shall express, utter, or declare, such his compassings, imaginations, and intentions, by publishing some printing or writing, "or by some overt act or deed." These overt acts, therefore, so required by the statutes, are the means by which the particular treason has been attempted to be carried into effect: they are the instances in which the guilty party has endeavoured to complete the treasonable design: they are the indicia or proof of the treason, not the treason itself. It is obvious, therefore, that these overt acts will be found to vary in each particular case. Where the object of the treason has not been actually perpetrated, combinations and conspiracies to carry it into effect, meetings to propose, to plan, to mature, or to accelerate its completion, the inciting and procuring others to join such combinations, the knowingly making, procuring, or furnishing arms and ammunition, money, or other necessities to insurgents for the purpose of accomplishing their treasonable designs, the administering illegal oaths to bind men to aid each other in such treasonable designs—all these, and many others of the same stamp and character, might be suggested as instances of overt acts of the particular class of compassing or devising to which they apply, within the meaning of both the statutes. And, gentlemen, as the proof of some overt act or acts is absolutely necessary to support the charge of treason, whatever it may be, so must the proof be confined to those specific overt acts which are charged in the indictment, and no other, in order to give the party accused the opportunity of knowing the real charge which is made against him, and to enable him the better to prepare for his defence; for the overt act is the charge to which the prisoner must apply his defence. And still further, with respect to these overt acts, it is to be observed that in favour of the party accused a statute was passed in the reign of King William III. which enacts, "that no person shall be indicted or tried for high treason whereby any corruption of blood ensues, but by or upon the oaths of two lawful witnesses, either both of them to the same overt act, or one of them to one, and one of them to another overt act of the same treason." And various other advantages and privileges have been granted by the Legislature from time to time in favour of persons accused of high treason, which do not belong to persons charged with other offences. Having thus endeavoured to explain to you the nature and property of these overt acts which must be alleged in the indictment, and to what evidence they must be supported, I proceed to call your attention to the different heads or classes of treason which may be laid in the indictment against the accused. It is not improbable that one charge of treason may be laid in the indictment to be the compassing and imagining the death of our Lady the Queen, and various overt acts may be stated in support of it, and perhaps, amongst the rest, the levying war against the Queen in her realm, which hath been held by many decided cases to be an overt act of that species of treason, as well as a substantive treason in itself. But, as there can be no reason to suppose that any direct or immediate intention of injuring the sacred person of the Queen could by possibility be surmised to have existed on the occasion, it will be unnecessary, as it appears to me, to occupy you with any observations on this head of treason.

(To be continued.)

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq., F.R.A., of the Middle Temple; Author of the "Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. In continuation of the Precedents by S. VALENTINE BONE, Esq. Vol. III. AGREEMENTS, COMMERCIAL, DEEDS, LEASES. London: John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet Street, 1839.

We are much gratified in seeing Vol. III. of this ORIGINAL WORK upon CONVEYANCING before us in a complete form. The number included in it, for the present month continuation of COMMERCIAL PRECEDENT, and some very useful forms of the AUTHOR does not as the worker slacken his hand, but continues his task of introducing new forms of precedent to the existing state of the law. Before us a NEW PRECEDENT for a CO-PARTNERSHIP, "a simple form of common agreements in Trade," in which arbitration clauses are so drawn as to prevent the litigation that so frequently occurs among partners, to say nothing of the ruinous expense that inevitably results by which the partners are retarded in taking proceedings against each other, arbitration shall have been refused." In a note to this clause the following:—

"In a general practice a new form, adopted will prevent much of the litigation which frequently occurs among partners, of the ruinous expense that attends it. The author's attention has been drawn to this restraining clause from the note made by Lord Loughborough upon Halfhide v. Fenning (2 Bro. Chan. 140) and Mitchell v. Harris (2 Ves. jun. 264). In the former case there was a similar clause. His Lordship observed—'Parties are not to proceed contrary to the agreement; and it is every day's practice, to do, they cannot proceed contrary to it.' But there is a great distinction between an express agreement that there shall be no suit at law or in equity, and a bare reference to arbitration, and I shall be taken particular notice of."

There must be an express agreement that there shall be no suit at law or in equity, then the parties cannot proceed contrary to that agreement, which is pleaded in bar; but if there be a reference to arbitration only, the reference will be to give damages; it cannot be pleaded in bar to any action or suit: the reason is, because the agreement of parties does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court. Lord Loughborough, in Mitchell v. Harris (antè), had not been furnished with any authority, or even dictum, to show that an agreement to refer, where no reference has taken place, does not stop a court of law; nor has there been any idea of a bill to enjoin a party from proceeding at law, under a notion of giving effect to such a covenant as this, where the parties are proceeding at law.

Lord Hardwicke, in Wellington v. Mackintosh, speaking of a covenant to refer (2 Atk. 569), said the parties might have made such an agreement as would have ousted this court of its jurisdiction.

"Lord Kenyon, in Thompson v. Charnock, 8 Term Rep. 140, observed, it had been decided, again and again, that an agreement to refer all matters in difference to arbitration is not sufficient to oust the courts of law or equity of their jurisdiction.

"Lord Eldon, in Tattersall v. Groote, 2 Bos. & Pull. 131, took a comprehensive view of all the cases. That was an action in the Common Pleas upon covenant between parties, in case of a dissolution of the partnership, to refer all matters relating thereto to arbitration, and one of the parties refused to nominate one. Lord Eldon said, 'There is no instance of such an action as the present having ever been brought in a court of law; and though courts of equity will decree the specific performance of reasonable covenants, where substantial damages cannot be obtained in a court of law, yet no man ever heard of a suit in equity to compel the specific performance of a covenant to refer disputes to arbitration.' In Wellington v. Mackintosh, Lord Hardwicke overruled a plea of covenant to refer matters in difference, which was pleaded to a bill for a discovery. Lord Kenyon, indeed, in Halfhide v. Fenning, supported such a plea; but then the words there were, 'before they brought any suit.' His Lordship said, he thought he did not misconstrue the case of Mitchell v. Harris, by stating that the opinion of Lord Loughborough did not agree with the doctrine laid down in Halfhide v. Fenning. In the discussion of Mitchell v. Harris, the counsel were asked by the Lord Chancellor, if an action like the present had been known in a court of law; and it was admitted that no instance was to be found. It would be difficult to direct a jury upon what rule to proceed in assessing damages in such an action; for non constat that the plaintiff would have succeeded in the arbitration. The covenant, therefore, seems nugatory, or, if not so, yet it cannot be enforced, as tending to exclude the jurisdiction of the courts.'"

The value, to practical men, of the notes in this Work is very great, they are copious—yet to the purpose, and most useful, as leading them to the present state of the Law, upon every point connected with the subject matter of each Precedent—as for instance, upon the clause in a Copartnership deed, providing for a Dissolution of the Copartnership. The Author says—

"When a partnership is, by notice, death, or by any other mode of determination, actually ended, as regards all the partners, no one of them can make use of the partnership estate, in a manner inconsistent with the winding up of the concern. The object of their original association is then terminated, and their power of employing the joint property in the way of trade ceases. The partners cannot create any new obligations; for after a dissolution, nothing remains to be accomplished, except the arrangement of the affairs of the partnership; but until they are settled, the connection between the partners subsists; and in that sense, and until such a settlement takes place, the partnership may be said to continue, and the ex-members of the firm may be sued as existing partners. Lord Eldon, in Ex parte Williams (11 Ves. jun. 5), thus explained the equities, among partners, and the consequences upon a dissolution, with reference to each other and creditors:—

“ ‘ Among partners, clear equities subsist, amounting to something like lien: the property is joint, the debts and credits are jointly due. They have equities to discharge, each of them, from liability, and then to divide the surplus according to their proportions; or, if there is a deficiency, to call upon each other to make up that deficiency, according to their proportions. But, while they remain solvent, and the partnership is going on, the creditor has no equity against the effects of the partnership. He may bring an action against the partners, and get judgment, and may execute his judgment against the effects of the partnership. But when he has got them into his hands, he has them by force of the execution, as the fruit of the judgment; clearly not in respect of any interest he has in the partnership effects, while he was a mere creditor, not seeking to substantiate or create an interest by suit. There are various ways of dissolving a partnership: effluxion of time; the death of one partner; the bankruptcy of one, which operates like death; or a dry, naked agreement that the partnership shall be dissolved. In no one of those cases can it be said that, to all intents and purposes, the partnership is dissolved: for the connection still remains until the affairs are wound up. The representation of a deceased partner, or the assignees of a bankrupt partner, are not strictly partners with the survivor, or the solvent partner: but still, in either of those cases, that community of interest remains, that is necessary, until the affairs are wound up, and that requires, that what was partnership property before, shall continue, for the purpose of a dissolution, not as the rights of the creditors, but as the rights of the partners themselves require; and it is through the operation of administering the equities, as between the partners themselves, that the creditors have that opportunity; as, in the case of death, it is the equity of the deceased partner that enables the creditors to bring forward the distribution. The creditors are not injured by the agreement of partners to dissolve the partnership, and that, from that time, what was joint property shall become the separate property of one; notice of the dissolution being given; as either a consideration is paid, or, which for this purpose is equal to consideration, a covenant is entered into to pay the debts and indemnify the retiring partner, so conceived as not to leave any lien upon the property.—That when the possession of the property is delivered over to the surviving partner, and he goes into the world as a sole trader, he has all the credit belonging to him as such sole trader; having the possession and dealing with mankind, as such.’ His Lordship would not agree that mere dissolution would work all this effect, as that does no more than declare that the partnership is not to be carried on any farther, except for winding up the affairs; and he, who has actual possession, has it, clothed with a trust for the other, to apply the property to the debts; and that will qualify the nature of his possession, so that it cannot be said he has the sole possession of the specific effects or the debts, to bring it within the operation of the statute (22 Jac. 1. c. 19. ss. 10, 11; see Jones v. Gibbons, 9 Ves. jun. 407), which certainly affects debts. His Lordship added that having had occasion lately (see Lady Arundell v. Phipps, 10 Ves. jun. 139) to look into the doctrine from Twyne’s case (3 Co. 80), he thought in modern times a tendency had prevailed to give more effect to the actual manual possession, as evidence of fraud, than Twyne’s case was intended to sanction. But it was enough to say, mere dissolution of partnership, if there be no more, leaves each partner in possession, as trustee for all, to the extent of enabling each to call upon all to apply the partnership effects to the purposes to which they ought to be applied, even if there was no dissolution. But it is the equity of the partners among each other that requires that application; not that of the creditors; for whom, however, a provision thereby necessarily operated, which they could not operate for themselves, unless by action and execution, laying hold of the effects, as they might of the person. See also ex parte Ruffin, 6 Ves. jun. 119.; Peacock v. Peacock, 16 Id. 57.; Wilson v. Greenwood, 1 Swans. 480.; Crawshay v. Maule, Id. 506.

“ The arrangement of the affairs, and winding up of the partnership concern, being the sole object and purpose to be attained after a dissolution, equity will, in all cases, interfere where the conduct of partners is of a description not likely to be attended with such a result. See Harding v. Glover, 18 Ves. jun. 281.; Crawshay v.

Natnoch v. Irving, Gow. App. Mcote v. Hulme, 1 Jac. and Walk. on v. Gaywood (antè). The common property is ascertained, or may insist upon a sale of the same. The rights of the partners are equal; each may require the whole to be wound up by a sale, and a division. One partner has no claim upon a proportion of a specific article, nor upon an exclusive right in it; but only to a general arrangement of the partnership concerns, and for that purpose to produce of the aggregate joint property. (Johnson v. Ryan, 2 Swanst. 565. n.) To separate his share from the bulk of the partnership, nor compel his copartner to accept of a valuation, his interest may be sold. (Crawshay v. Collins, antè; Lingin v. Sin. & Stu. 600.) In Nerot v. Russ, 56.) pending an appeal against a partnership dissolved, and directing the property to be sold, and an account, the COURT, upon motion, suspended the sale, upon the terms of bringing title deeds into the Master's office, and giving security for the value of the effects."

The PRECEDENTS OF LEASES are adapted to every purpose, and have this great advantage that most of them are stated to be under 30 folios; a very useful Table is also added, containing "The CUSTOMS in the several COUNTIES OF ENGLAND, shewing the usual periods of entry, the customary duration of Leases and the Rent days," as applicable to FARM LEASES, which, to COUNTRY SOLICITORS in particular, must be of great use; and we again recommend the Work to general notice.

ARTICLED CLERKS APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED ATTORNIES (a) IN HILARY TERM, 1840.

(Continued from p. 91.)

| Articled Clerk's Name and Residence.                                        | To whom Articled or Assigned.                                                                 |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Isaac Sparks, 30, Kenton Street, Brunswick and Crewkerne.                          | Isaac Sparks, Crewkerne.                                                                             |
| Sturley Nunn, 5, Norfolk Street, Strand: St. Edmund's.                             | Sturley Nunn, Ixworth; assigned to Harry Wayman, Bury St. Edmunds.                                   |
| Timothy Surr, Dorset Place North, Clapton.                                         | Timothy Surr, 80, Lombard Street.                                                                    |
| George Saffery, Thomas, 69, Strand; 9, Fountains, Strand.                          | George Saffery, Market Rasen.                                                                        |
| Henry John Mant, 38, Milk Street; Bath; and Pancras, Cheapside.                    | Henry John Mant, Bath.                                                                               |
| Philip Goode, Frederick, 8, Argyle Street, Regent.                                 | Philip Goode, 44, Howland Street, Fitzroy Square; assigned to Charles Dod, Craven Street, Strand.    |
| Robert Bartlett, m Henry, Chelmsford.                                              | Robert Bartlett, Chelmsford.                                                                         |
| Godfrey Goddard, es Bird, 13, Warwick Court, Holborn.                              | Godfrey Goddard, Wood Street, Cheapside; assigned to Frederick Harrison, 34, Bloomsbury Square.      |
| George Cooke, les, Clifton.                                                        | George Cooke, Bristol.                                                                               |
| Ottiwell Tomlin, well, the younger, 30, Mornington Street, Richmond, Yorkshire.    | Ottiwell Tomlin, the elder, Richmond, Yorkshire; assigned to James Williamson, 4, Verulam Buildings. |
| Robert Barr, m, 98, Upper Stamford Street; and                                     | Robert Barr, Leeds.                                                                                  |
| Walter Burley, John, 19, Compton Street, Brunswick; Shrewsbury; and Castle Street, | Walter Burley, Shrewsbury; assigned to Jonathan Scarth, Shrewsbury.                                  |
| John Beckwith, ert Beckwith, Fishmongers' Hall, London Bridge.                     | John Beckwith Towse, Fishmongers' Hall.                                                              |
| John Rising Staff, o Henry, Norwich.                                               | John Rising Staff, Norwich.                                                                          |
| Theed Pearse, niel, the younger, 43, Southampton Street; and Bedford.              | Theed Pearse, the younger, Bedford.                                                                  |

(To be continued.)

(a) Marked * are Common Pleas, the rest are Queen's Bench.

Business of the Courts.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

In re Griffiths, lunatic petition, by order—Hill v. Gomme, appeal, part heard.

Causes.—Kirkwall v. Flight—Dillon v. Coppin—Mersey v. Mersey, further directions—Rudd v. Sewell—Green v. Milton—Mills v. Hudson—Wartnaby v. Shuttleworth—Rose v. Clarke—Mills v. Baylis—Hodges v. Curzon—Praed v. Richardson.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

His Honour will take a list of sixteen short causes and twenty-four unopposed petitions.

After the Petitions—Illingworth v. Manchester and Leeds Railway, motion, part heard.

ROLLS' COURT.

Attorney-General v. Ironmongers' Company, part heard—Franks v. Price, part heard.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

London Common Juries—Dyer v. Wilkinson—Tebbutt v. Ambler—Reynolds v. Munro—Hodsoll v. Stallebrass—Stephens v. Nash—Williams v. Pittock—Thompson v. Stuart, executrix—Bell v. Francis and others—Fisher v. Chaundy—Addams v. Lewis and others—Bayliss v. Pope—Hastings v. Cooper and others—Hatch and another v. Darby—Smith v. Handcock—Colls and others v. Beesley—Bryant v. Perkins—Thompson v. Coulter.—(The last cause is No. 56 on the list.)

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

London Special Juries.—Gillett and another v. Wilby—The Same v. Chapman.

London Common Juries.—Perring v. Luckin—Christian v. Bennett—Leeds v. Berry—Betts v. Creed—Barwell v. Griffin—Edwards v. Brewer—Wilkinson v. Thompson.—(The last common jury cause is No. 93 on the list.)

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

London Special Juries.—Browne v. Nairne—Green v. Hedges—Robinson v. General Steam Navigation Company—Attwood v. Preston and Wyre Railway Company.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

S. A. W.—3rd communication.

H. T. D.—A. I. H.—J. M.—are all under consideration. Our library table is so full of correspondence, that we must request our friends to exercise some patience before we do them the justice they merit.

ZETA.—Our paper is so liberally supplied with voluntary contributions, that we only need thank you for your communication.

J. E. R.—We would cheerfully adopt your suggestions; but then our London friends would complain. You must not expect a serious public newspaper to be quite so free from errors as a guinea volume. We cannot please everyone, though we endeavour to do so. The irregularity you complain of in the delivery of the Numbers would be at once avoided by ordering them at our Publishers, who send the country edition through the post free every week.

H.—Your letter shall be thought about next week. We fear, however, from the hasty glances we have made, that it does not come within our arrangements.

C. S. D.—Thanks; next week.

On Jan. 1, 1840, will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part I.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S., of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, in cloth bound with Table of Contents.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press, Second Edition,
COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Law and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, December 14, 1839.

The Legal Guide.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1839.

[No. 8.]

WS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries for the Substitution of mortgages of Assurance.

(Continued from p. 98.)

ING POWER OF A TENANT IN TAIL. ECTOR OF A SETTLEMENT.

inery substituted by this statute d tenancy to the Præcipe, which ant in tail to suffer a recovery, remainders, is entirely new to England. It consists in inter-power called the "Protector ent," the nature of which will by taking the Report of the ty Commissioners (a), from l its origin.

of this machinery, and the influenced the Real Property s in introducing it, will be tly plain by the following pas- e first Report. 1 R. P. R. 31, e too broad a principle to esta- enant in tail, whether in pos- remainder, should be enabled to and the remainders over, with- iction; and the giving him tricted power in all cases, might be productive of serious evils by rendering family settlements abortive. Although the rule requiring the concurrence of the person who has the freehold to make the tenant to the præcipe in a recovery, is purely technical, and is liable to many objections, as we have already stated, yet great benefits, which could not originally have been contemplated, when recoveries were first applied to the barring of entails, have resulted from it. It has given parents, who, in family settlements usually have the first estate of freehold, the means of checking any improvident dealings with the property by their children; it has given rise to family arrangements which are usually entered into as soon as the first tenant in tail comes of age, and which generally terminate in a re-settlement of the property, and in continuing it in the family for another generation, and in an immediate provision for the first tenant in tail, and in giving him powers to provide for a wife and children in the life-time of his father; and it has prevented the intention of the original settlor from being defeated, at the will and caprice of the tenant in tail, who may possibly never come into possession. To avoid the evils which have resulted from this rule, and at the same time to preserve the benefits we recommend, that the concurrence of the person having the immediate estate of freehold, should, as seised of that estate, be no longer necessary to enable a tenant in tail to bar the entail

(a) 1 Rep. 31.

and the remainders over ; and that, instead of such concurrence, where, by the deed or will creating the entail intended to be barred, or by any appointment made in exercise of a power contained therein, a beneficial estate, either for life, or years, determinable on life, or of any greater extent, not being a lease on which a rent shall be reserved, shall be limited prior to the estate tail intended to be barred, and shall be subsisting, or where the first beneficial estate shall have devolved upon some person as tenant by courtesy, either at law or in equity, in respect of the estate tail intended to be barred, or of any other estate tail created by the same deed or will, any disposition by the tenant in tail shall be made with the concurrence of the person to whom such prior estate, or the first of such prior estates, if more than one, shall have been limited, or of the person upon whom such prior estate shall have devolved, and that any disposition made without such concurrence shall only bar the estate tail ; and that the concurrence of such beneficial owner shall be equally good and available, notwithstanding he may have encumbered or aliened his estate, or may have become bankrupt or insolvent, and that the concurrence of the first beneficial owner may be signified either by his being a party to the substitute or by a separate deed and without obtaining from him an actual conveyance of his estate. If the concurrence should be signified by a separate deed, we think it advisable that it should not be allowed to the concurring party to impose any terms on the tenant in tail, as the necessity of seeing whether he had complied with those terms would then be avoided. This will not prevent the parent or other beneficial owner from requiring the estate to be settled in a reasonable manner, for the benefit of the family, as he will always have it in his power to do this by keeping back the deed of concurrence until he is satisfied that the estate has been settled in such manner as he has required. If the first beneficial owner should be a married woman, we recommend that her husband should also be a concurring party, and that as she will part with no estate her concurrence should be given without a separate examination, and as if she were a female sole. The deviation from the present rule will not be so great as may at first sight appear ; for, in the majority of cases, the tenant of the immediate estate of freehold, and the first beneficial owner, will be the same person. We have not thought it advisable to require the concurrence of the tenant in dower, for it seldom, if ever, happens that dower is set out by metes and bounds ; and if such an estate does occur, her concurrence would have only a partial operation, as the estate is confined to a part of the lands entailed.

The Act then proceed to give effect to this machinery, and establishes a PROTECTOR of every settlement ; and by Sec. 22, it is enacted That if at any time when there shall be a tenant in tail of lands under a settlement, there shall be subsisting in the same lands or any part of them, under the same settlement, any estate for years determinable on the dropping of a life or lives, or any greater estate (not being an estate for years), prior to the estate tail, then the person who shall be tenant of the prior estate, or the first of such prior estates if more than one, then subsisting under the same settlement, or who would have been so if no absolute disposition thereof had been made (the first of such prior estates, if more than one, being for purposes of this Act deemed the prior estate) shall be the protector of the settlement so far as regards the lands in which such prior estate shall be subsisting, and shall for purposes of this Act be deemed the owner of such prior estate, although the same may have been charged or encumbered either by the owner thereof or by the settlor, or otherwise howsoever, and although the whole of the rents and profits be exhausted or required for the payment of the charges and incusuch prior estate, and although the estate may have been absolutely conveyed by the owner thereof, or by or in consequence of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the owner, or by any other act or deed of the owner; and that an estate by way of mortgage in respect of the estate tail, or of an estate created by the same settlement, shall be deemed a prior estate under the meaning of this clause, and that an estate by way of mortgage or trust to or for the settlor shall be deemed an estate under the same meaning of this clause. Provided always, That where two persons shall be owners, under a settlement, the meaning of this Act, of a share in the sole owner of which estate there has been only one, would in respect of the protection of such settlement of such persons, in respect of the undivided share as he could dispose of, the purposes of this Act be the same as if the owner of a prior estate, and the owner of the other or others of the settlement, were the sole protector of such settlement of such undivided share.

(To be continued.)

LAW OF INJUNCTIONS.

ESSAY I.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF EQUITY TO RESTRAIN PROCEEDINGS IN OTHER COURTS.

S. D. Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

The principle on which Courts of Equity restrain the prosecution of proceedings in other Courts by injunction, is not the person proceeding, and not the act in which such person is proceeding, but the language of an old case, "that the Court will not act upon the Court in derogation of its jurisdiction (as in the case of a writ of prohibition), but admitting the jurisdiction of the Court, think proper, from collateral circumstances, not to suffer the parties to apply and take the benefit of that jurisdiction." (a) Upon this principle, it seems immaterial where or what the Court is in which proceedings are sought to be restrained, provided the party sought to be restrained is amenable to the jurisdiction, and is capable of being acted on by the process of contempt of the Court; and the extension of the jurisdiction of Equity to stay proceedings in other Courts besides Courts of Common Law, and in foreign Courts, as well as in Courts within the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, becomes, when considered in reference to the principle, as rational and intelligible as it is firmly established in practice. Instances of the interference of the Court of Chancery to stay proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Courts is to be found in very early cases. In the one already referred to (b), before Lord Loughborough, a party had long acted under a will, and admitted the validity of the probate in proceedings in Chancery and in the House of Lords, and then sought, without bringing forward any new evidence, to controvert the validity of the will in the Ecclesiastical Court; an injunction was granted to restrain the party from proceeding in the Ecclesiastical Court. And in another case, before the same learned Judge, where a woman of mean circumstances and bad character entrapped an infant ward of Chancery into a marriage, under circumstances amounting to a gross contempt of the Court, and afterwards obtained a decree for alimony in the Ecclesiastical Court, and sentence of excommunication against her infant husband and his guardian, the Court, on a petition being presented by the guardian for a prohibition to restrain proceedings upon the decree and the excommunication, refused the prohibition, expressly admitting the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Court, but held

(a) Sheffield v. Duchess of Bucks, 1 Atk. 6. & 630.

(b) Id.

that having regard to the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery for the protection of its wards, and to the conduct of the wife, the Court had jurisdiction to restrain the wife by injunction from proceeding, and accordingly granted an injunction. (c)

In modern times, injunctions have been granted to restrain proceedings in Courts of various jurisdiction. Thus, in a late case, where a woman had instituted a suit in the Admiralty Court to recover a sum of money for wages as cook of a small merchant-vessel, the owners defended on the ground that she was the wife of the captain. But evidence of this fact could not be obtained until the suit had advanced beyond that stage at which fresh evidence would be admitted in the Admiralty Court. On these facts being verified by affidavit, an injunction was granted to restrain further proceedings in the suit until answer or further order, the defendants paying into Court the sum recovered and the costs in the Admiralty Court. (d)

An attempt was made in Glascott v. Lang (e) to deny the jurisdiction of Equity to restrain proceedings in the Admiralty Court upon a bottomry bond, on the ground that the matter was properly cognizable in the Admiralty Court, which itself acted upon equitable principles, and had power to moderate the amount recoverable upon the bond if the case required it. But the Court held the jurisdiction clear, and said: "Such an instrument, whether it be a bottomry bond or any other species of bond, is a security for money alleged to have been obtained under circumstances which a Court of Equity ought not to give effect to; and the plaintiffs come here asserting their equity to get rid of the obligation, whether as against the possessor or against the property, in the ordinary course of administration of equity in this Court."

This case is further an authority for the position that in order to induce the Court to interfere, it is not necessary that it should find a case which would entitle the plaintiff to relief at all events. It is quite sufficient if the Court finds upon the pleadings, and upon the evidence, a case which makes the transaction a proper subject of investigation in a Court of Equity. (f)

It is now a perfectly settled jurisdiction of Equity to restrain proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court respecting the grant of probate. Thus in a case where there was great presumption of fraud in obtaining the signature of a testator to an alleged will, the next of kin having instituted a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court to recall the probate granted to the alleged executors, a receiver and injunction were granted on the motion of the plaintiff before answer, on affidavit of the truth of the allegations contained in the bill; (g) and it was expressly decided also, in Ball v. Oliver, (h) that the principle on which the Court of Chancery interferes to preserve personal property pending a litigation in the Ecclesiastical Courts, is applicable to cases where probate or administration has been already granted, and the suit is to recall it as well as to cases where no probate or administration has been granted.

The principles on which the jurisdiction of the Court is founded, and on which the exercise of that jurisdiction is regulated, are well explained by the case of Watkins v. Brent. (i) Two questions arose in this case, one, whether the mere fact of there being bond fide litigation in the Ecclesiastical Court as to the grant of probate is ground for the Court to interfere by injunction and receive the property, and another, whether, where the execut

(c) Hill v. Turner, 1 Atk. 516.

(d) Jarvis v. Chandler, 1 Turn. & Russ. 319.

(e) 8 My. & Cr. 451.

(f) Vide the judgment of the Court, p. 455.

(g) Rutherford v. Douglas, 1 Sim. & Stu. 111.

(h) 2 V. & Be. 96.

(i) 1 My. & Cr. 97.

obtained probate has agreed with the plaintiff in instituting a suit to recall such a contract, the validity of the testamentary contract, which the executor claims shall be recalled, is the suit, that is such a case as to require the Court to interfere. The first case decided in the negative, and the second in the affirmative. The Court has decided as no doubt but that, by the rule laid down, if the representation is in conformity with the rule, person has been constituted executor, the Court interferes, not because of the representation, but because there is no proper person to receive the assets. But where the representation has been granted, the case is otherwise. If there has been an adjudication, that a person legally capable of receiving the assets; and then a strong case, of great danger to the property of the plaintiff, litigation, must be made out to require the Court to interfere. And in the second case, although there had been such a representation, the Court was of opinion, that the executor should not be allowed to interfere, because the plaintiff's agreement to let his title be recalled, treated himself as not complete.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM VIII.

VOL. 3.

LIVERY OF SEISIN.

It is necessary—To whom may it be made? How is it made?

EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

TO PROBLEM 4. VOL. II.

Under what circumstances may an action be brought for livery of seisin, when the plaintiff who has entered into a special contract with the person with whom he has contracted, while the plaintiff's own side of the contract remains unperformed?

Question whether a plaintiff can maintain an action on a contract which he has entered into—his own side of the contract remaining unperformed—always turns on the point whether the act to be performed by the plaintiff was to be performed as a condition precedent to the defendant's performance of the contract, I shall first state the rule laid down by Lord Mansfield for determining what will constitute a condition precedent, and which rule applies to either covenants or agreements; and I shall then proceed to state the cases which have determined what is and what is not a condition precedent.

First, then, it has been laid down by Lord Mansfield, that there are three kinds of covenants: "1st. Such as are called mutual and independent, where either party may recover damages from the other for the injury he may have received by a breach of the covenants in his favour, and where it is no excuse for the defendant to allege a breach of the covenants on the part of the plaintiff. 2nd. There are covenants which are conditions and dependent, in which the performance of one depends on the prior performance of another, and, therefore, till the prior condition is performed, the other party is not liable to an action on his covenant. (a) 3rd. There is also a third sort of covenants, which

(a) The two following cases are in accordance with this rule, and serve to illustrate it. Where a defendant agreed to sell plaintiffs a certain quantity of sponge, and plaintiffs agreed to sell defendant a quantity of ochre, to be delivered, free of expense, on or before a certain day, it was held that the delivery of the ochre by that day to the extent of the value of the sponge was a condition precedent to the delivery of the sponge, and that the plaintiffs, not having made such delivery, could not recover for the non-delivery of the sponge. (Parker v. Rowles, 4 Bing. 280; 12 Moore, 529.) So where it was a part of a condition precedent to the claim of a sum of £80, in addition to the purchase-money, for a new house, that the pavement in front of the adjoining houses should be laid down by the 21st of April, it was held that the delay of four days, though occasioned by bad weather, which prevented the workmen from proceeding, was sufficient to prevent the recovery of such claim. (Maryon v. Carter, 4 C. & P. 295.)

are mutual conditions to be performed at the same time; and in these, if one party were ready and offered to perform his part, and the other neglected or refused to perform his, he who was ready and offered has fulfilled his engagement, and may maintain an action for the default of the other, though it is not certain that either is obliged to do the first act. The dependence or independence of covenants, however, is to be collected from the evident sense and meaning of the parties; and however transposed they may be in the agreement, their precedency must depend on the order of time in which the intent of the transaction requires their performance." (Jones v. Barkly, Dougl. 690, 691.)

Secondly. What is, and what is not, a condition precedent.

1st. If a day be appointed for payment of money, and the act for which the payment is to be made cannot be done before the day appointed, then, though the agreement be to pay the money for the doing the thing, yet the action may be brought for the money before the thing is done, because the agreement is positive that the money shall be paid at the day appointed. This rule was laid down by Lord Holt, when his Lordship observed (in reference to an objection that may be taken to it, on the ground of its being unreasonable,) that the bargain of every man ought to be performed as he understood it; and if a person will make such an agreement as to pay his money before he has the thing for which he ought to pay, and will rely upon the remedy he has to recover the said thing, he ought to perform his agreement. (Spiller v. Westlake, 2 B. & Ad. 155; Thorpe v. Thorpe, Salk. 171.) And the same rule holds where no time is fixed for the performance of that which is the consideration of the money or other act. (1 Saund. 320, a.)

2nd. That though a day certain be appointed for payment of the money, yet if the day is to occur after the time in which the consideration ought to be performed for which the money should be paid, the performance of the consideration ought to be averred in an action brought for the money; in other words, that it is a condition precedent, or condition dependent, coming within the operation of Lord Mansfield's second rule as above stated.

3rd. That where the plaintiff's covenant or proviso constitutes only a part of the consideration of the defendant's contract, and the defendant has actually received a partial benefit; and the breach on the part of the plaintiff may be compensated in damages; an action may be supported against the defendant without averring performance by the plaintiff. (1 Saund. 320 b.; Boome v. Eyre, H. Bla. 273; Campbell v. Jones, 6 T. R. 572; 10 East, 295, 556, 563; 3 M. & S. 308; Fothergill v. Walton, 8 Taunt. 576.) But in these cases, it seems necessary to aver in the declaration performance of, at least, a part of that which the plaintiff covenanted to do, or to show that the defendant has otherwise received a partial benefit. (1 Saund. 320, c. d.; 10 East, 295; 6 Moore, 114.)

4th. Where two acts are to be done at the same time, as when A. covenants or agrees to convey an estate, or to deliver goods, on a named day, or generally; and, in consideration of this, B. covenants to pay A. a sum of money on the same day, or generally, neither can maintain an action without shewing performance of, or an offer to perform, or at least a readiness to perform, his part, though it is not certain which of them was obliged to do the first act; and this rule particularly applies to contracts of sale. (1 Saund. 320 d. note 4; 2 id. 352, n. 3, and 108, n. 3; Ramson v. Johnson, 1 East, 203; 8 T. R. 366; 7 T. R. 130; 7 Taunt. 314; 8 Taunt. 62; and see Chitty on Plead. 6th edit. vol. i. p. 324.)

C. E.

Law Reports.

OF CHANCERY.—Nov. 20.

WELLESLEY v. WELLESLEY.

from the Vice-Chancellor.

SEPARATION—Construction of Covenant an Annuity for the separate Wife by charge on real estate—It shall operate on the first estate of the Husband—PRACTICE of Parties—DEMURRER.

An appeal from the decision of the Vice-Chancellor made in this cause (a). The case was brought by the Hon. Mrs. Wellesley (formerly the wife of the late Col. Paterson, her husband) in a separation deed, executed in 1834, against her husband, the Hon. Col. Wellesley, and his eldest son, in and by a deed which the father and son executed on the 1st of December, 1834. By the separation deed Mr. Wellesley covenanted that he would, on the 1st of February, 1835, either by a conveyance of real estate or by an investment in any other manner by the best means then in his power, pay to Col. Paterson, during the life of Mrs. Wellesley, of £1000. a-year, in separate use. The deed also contained a covenant that Mr. Wellesley would pay to Mrs. Wellesley's solicitor £1000. a-year, for her own use, within a year. Col. Paterson, on the other hand, covenanted to indemnify Mr. Wellesley against the debts of Mrs. Wellesley. By the marriage settlement of Mrs. Wellesley, her wife, was tenant for life of certain estates, with remainder to his eldest son and the eldest son on coming of age, and the eldest son on coming of age as tenant in tail male in possession of the said estates. In December, 1834, Mr. Wellesley and his son, who had come of age, executed a deed by which the family estates in Essex, to which they were entitled as tenants in common, were mortgaged to the Amicable Insurance Company for £462,000, the trustees were to receive and to apply the proceeds of trusts for creditors, with an annuity of £1500. a-year for Mr. Wellesley himself, and an annuity of £1500. a-year to Mr. Wellesley to charge the same on the first jointure of £1500. a-year for his wife or any wife he might hereafter marry. As Mr. Wellesley not having performed on the 1st of February, 1835, the covenant made in the separation deed to attach his interest in the said estates for satisfying the covenant, or to exercise his power of jointuring to the said £1000. a-year. There had been a former bill against the trustees of the Amicable Insurance Company, which sought to affect the estates with the covenants. But that bill had been abandoned as soon as the real nature of the arrangement of Dec. 1834, became known to the plaintiff. The trustees demurred for want of equity and for want of parties, and the Vice-Chancellor over-ruled the former demurrer and allowed the latter, with liberty generally to amend. The bill had accordingly been amended, and the trustees had again demurred in like manner as before.

Mr. Wigram, for the trustees, now appeared to support the demurrer, on the ground that the covenant of Mr. Wellesley was a personal one, and contended that the Court would not at once transfer the liability to his lands, as if that could be done for the wife it might be extended to all other creditors, which was contrary to all the rules of the Court. (Freemount v. Dedire, 1 P. Wms. 429.; Ravenshaw v. Hollier, 7 Sim. 3.) He did not deny the liability of Mr. Wellesley, nor that the annuity of £1,000. ought to have been secured long ago. But his clients, who had nearly wound up the trust, objected to being embarked in a suit of indefinite length. A very large sum of money had been raised, and placed in their hands for the payment of debts, but there was nothing in the transaction which was open to any objection. The younger Mr. Wellesley had concurred in giving facility to the arrangement, and the assets of his father had been so marshalled as to disencumber freehold estates, the result of which was, that he had received a full equivalent.

Nov. 22.

The LORD CHANCELLOR called the attention of counsel to the irregularity of the order of the Vice-Chancellor, and of the appeal. There was but one demurrer, but the order was as if made on two demurrers—viz., allowing the demurrer for want of parties; disallowing it on the other ground, want of equity. The demurrer was, in fact, allowed; it must be so taken in point of form and practice. But the Vice-Chancellor in allowing the demurrer gave the plaintiff leave to amend the bill. That was last July. The bill was amended by adding parties, and these parties so added demurred to the amended bill in September last, acquiescing so far in the order to amend what the present motion sought to set aside. His Lordship, for the sake of maintaining the regularity of the practice of the Court, would not now discharge that part of the order. He would give them his opinion to-morrow morning on the other points of the case.

Nov. 23.

The LORD CHANCELLOR gave judgment this morning. The demurrer was put in by two defendants who are trustees of property over which Mr. Wellesley obtained power of charge under a deed executed in December, 1834. The question was whether the demurrer was right. The title made by Mrs. Wellesley, the plaintiff, was under a deed of separation, dated in June, 1834, by which Mr. Wellesley covenanted that he would well and effectually secure to her an annuity of £1,000. on estates of inheritance in England or Wales, or on a competent sum, to be for that purpose invested in the public funds, or by some other means. At the time when this contract was entered into Mr. Wellesley was only tenant for life. By an arrangement entered into between him and his eldest son in December, 1834, Mr. Wellesley obtained a power of jointuring his present or any after-taken wife to the amount of £1,500. a year out of these estates. It was contended in the agreement that this latter deed was to be taken as part of the deed of June, 1834; which was denied on the other side. The bill, after stating the deeds, stated that the demurring defendants were trustees of the deed of December, 1834, giving Mr. Wellesley the power of jointuring, and that he refused to make use of that power to perform the covenant in the deed of June, 1834; and that the trustees, out of the £462,000. to be raised by them out of the estates, were about paying the surplus, after paying debts and discharging the estates, to Mr. Wellesley. The bill stated an acquisition of property by Mr. Wellesley, in 1835, whereby he was enabled to execute his covenant, but that he refused so to do, and that the defendants were trustees of that property. The bill then stated a part performance of the covenant by the purchase of certain lands to secure the payment of it. Now, if it appeared that, at the hearing of the cause, the court had no power to enforce the covenant on the lands, and that it was a mere personal covenant as was argued, in that case the demurrer ought to be allowed. But if the court has power to affect the lands by its decree against Mr. Wellesley, then the trustees were properly made parties to the suit, and their demurrer must be over-ruled. If a party enters into a contract, which he disables himself from performing, the court will compel him to perform it if he shall become able. Should the plaintiff, on the hearing of this cause, obtain a decree of specific performance against Mr. Wellesley, can it be doubted for a moment that this Court will confirm the decree against the lands? If there could not be a doubt the plaintiff must have a decree against Mr. Wellesley for the performance of the contract, and that this Court would make that decree and charge on the lands, the trustees of these lands were properly made parties. His Lordship, after going through several cases that were referred to in the argument, and to other cases in support of his opinion that the contract set forth, and the case stated by the bill, would warrant the Court in making a decree to compel Mr. Wellesley to act in performance of his contract over the lands he had in 1835, of which the defendants were trustees.

(a) Ante, vol. ii. p. 341.

Demurrer over-ruled.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Sittings at Nisi Prius before Lord DENMAN.

RICKET v. EDGINTON.

INNKEEPERS—Their liabilities for the safe custody of Goods of Travellers.

Mr. Erle, for the plaintiff, stated that this was an action to recover the value of certain property committed to the care of the defendant, an innkeeper, by the plaintiff, a travelling linen-draper. It appeared that the plaintiff, on the 13th of December, 1837, went with his horse and cart to the Sturges Castle Inn, near Oxford, kept by the defendant. The cart was put into a barn and locked up. The plaintiff slept in the inn, and on going to the barn the next morning he found it open, and the brother and nephew of the defendant at work in it winnowing. The cart had been drawn out, and on examining it he found that all his goods had been taken away. Search being made, part of his property was found in the houses of the brother and nephew of the defendant, and they were subsequently prosecuted and convicted of the robbery. It appeared from the pleas that the defence was first, that the plaintiff was not in the defendant's house as a traveller; and, secondly, that the barn had been given to him for his separate use, and that he had undertaken all the responsibility of the safe custody. The loss sustained by the plaintiff exceeded £100.

Mr. Cresswell, for the defendant, submitted that there was not that confiding of the property to the defendant which would make him responsible for any loss alleged to be sustained by the plaintiff. The barn was no part of the inn; it was out of the inn, and several yards distant from it; and in order to make the defendant responsible, it should be shown that the goods were confided to him in his inn by the plaintiff in the character of a traveller or guest.

Lord DENMAN observed, that this point might be left to the jury.

Mr. Cresswell submitted that it was merely a question of law, and trusted that the Court would allow him to move to enter a verdict for the defendant on that point before the full Court.

Lord DENMAN said, the learned gentleman might make such a motion, if he could show that there was no ground for going to the jury.

swell then addressed the jury, and that the plaintiff could have no ground of action unless he had unloaded his goods into the inn, and into the custody of the defendant. At the request of a traveller, in whom he had trouble and expense, he permitted his goods in a barn or any detached building, the liability of the landlord was entirely on the plaintiff.

Otherwise, it might as well be concluded that if a person requested permission to lodge in an inn yard for a night, and was damaged by the weather in the morning, he would be liable to make reparation. Witnesses for the defence were called to show that the plaintiff had undertaken to place his goods in the barn, and that the barn was a building from the inn. In cross-examination, it was elicited that there was no other building than the barn in which to place vehicles for the night, and that the key of the barn was in the inn; and further, that the persons who had been convicted of the robbery were being dishonest in the inn, but the inn continued to employ them.

MAN left it to the jury to say whether the goods were in custody of the innkeeper or the plaintiff himself.

Verdict for the plaintiff—Damages £10.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Nov. 28.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

BRIGGS v. GLOVER.

THE BILL OF COSTS.—Whether an action can maintain an action against an attorney for costs incurred in an action in which the plaintiff had received notice not to proceed.

An action brought to recover 116*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* on account of an attorney's bill, the greater part of which was incurred under the following circumstances. A sum of 9*l.* 4*s.* was due to the plaintiff from a Miss Woodcock, as administrator of the effects of her father, who had been an innkeeper at Leicester, where all the goods were lodged. Mr. Glover directed the plaintiff to recover that sum, and proceedings were taken, and a rule was adopted, out of which an action was brought. Before that trial was concluded, a rule was moved for calling on the plaintiff to stay proceedings in it, and the rule was made absolute by the Court, upon payment of the costs. Of the amount now sought to be recovered, 58*l.* were incurred in the management of that rule. Such was the nature of the action now brought; and numerous witnesses were called to prove the facts of the case.

On behalf of the defence it was admitted that the plaintiff was retained as attorney in the claim made on Mr. Woodcock's estate, and that the defendant had instructed Mr. Briggs to proceed till notice of trial was given. After that stage of the proceedings, the defendant directed the attorney to press the matter no further, as he had no hope of gaining. The plaintiff, however, persevered, and application was made to this Court, calling upon Mr. Briggs to stay proceedings. There was, therefore, no ground for charging the defendant with the entire costs of an action that was persevered in against his will. The defendant, however, paid into court 21*l.* 15*s.*, thereby admitting his liability to that amount, but denying that he was responsible for the whole sum now sought. Evidence having been called for the defendant, and Mr. Crowder being heard in reply,

J. ERSKINE said this was an action to recover an amount for work and labour done by the plaintiff as defendant's attorney. With respect to the 58*l.* costs incurred in the rule to stay all further proceedings, his lordship thought that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover one farthing. The defendant himself took part in that application to the Court against his own attorney, in the action arising out of his claim on Miss Woodcock; it would, therefore, be very strange now to call upon him to pay the costs of that rule. The jury could not, therefore, find for the plaintiff upon that part of the case. The next branch of the bill was as costs of the action of Glover v. Woodcock, amounting to 57*l.* The first question would be whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover the costs of that action. It would be for the jury to say whether there had been a positive revocation by the defendant of his retainer to his attorney to proceed in that case, or whether the plaintiff (as defendant represented) agreed to go on with it at his own risk. The remaining sum of 1*l.* 10*s.* in dispute was demanded for services done by Mr. Briggs in an action against a Mr. Hall, but which dropped in an early stage. There was no doubt the plaintiff should have a verdict with damages to that amount at least, as he was undoubtedly entitled to that sum.

The jury returned a verdict for 4*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.*, in addition to the costs in the action against Miss Woodcock up to the 23d of July, when the defendant revoked his retainer—the amount to be settled by the Master, and the verdict to be entered according to the result.

The case occupied the entire day, and was not terminated till near seven o'clock.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Dec. 16.

Sittings at Nisi Prius

SCHWABACHER v. FLEMING.

NECESSARIES for an under-graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge. PLEA, INFANCY.

This action was brought to recover the following bill of particulars :

|                              |     |    |   |
|------------------------------|-----|----|---|
| " Wines (Champagne and Hock) | £15 | 1  | 6 |
| " Cigars and case            | 3   | 1  | 0 |
| " Eau de Cologne             | 0   | 10 | 6 |
| " Liqueurs                   | 2   | 2  | 0 |

£20 15 0"

The plaintiff is a dealer in wines and cigars in Cambridge, and the defendant in 1834 and 1835 was an under-graduate of Trinity College in that university. The goods in question were supplied during the residence of the defendant in lodgings, during two entire terms, and a portion of a third, in the years above-mentioned. He is the son of one of the members for South Hants, and during his stay at college he was attended by a livery servant, and, as a witness said, " kept the first of company in the university."

Evidence of the delivery having been proved,

Mr. Andrews avowed at once that this action was defended by Mr. Fleming, the father of the defendant, who had the spirit and the moral courage to step forward for the purpose of endeavouring, if possible, to put an end to, or at least to check, the reckless system which but too many tradesmen pursued with regard to the supply of goods to minors at college. For this he was quite sure Mr. Fleming deserved, and would receive, the thanks and the gratitude of many an anxious parent, whose hopes and plans for the advancement of his children had been blighted by the system of extravagance too often pursued at the universities. For what did parents send their sons to college? Was it, by patient exertion and persevering industry, to fit them for honourable employment in after life; or was it that they might spend two or three years of the most important period of their lives in idleness and luxurious indulgence? Was it that they might there pursue their course of study in a laborious and thoughtful and honourable manner? or was it that they might pass their nights in drinking expensive wines, and in the idle habits thereby engendered, and their days in consequent languor and inactivity? Look at the plaintiff's bill—expensive wines, liqueurs, eau de Cologne, and cigars! Were they necessities for a youth of 18 at an University? He hoped the result of this trial would convince young men, and the tradesmen who trusted them, that they were not.

GURNEY, B. told the jury that the question was entirely one of fact for them; but at the same time he must say that in his opinion not one of the articles in the plaintiff's bill could be considered as a necessary for an infant. No case had ever been decided which showed that wines of this description or cigars were necessary for a youth at the University.

Verdict for the defendant.

Mr. Baron GURNEY.—In my opinion a most proper verdict. It will have a most beneficial tendency. It is very proper.

Mr. Andrews asked the learned judge to certify that the case was a fit one to be tried by a special jury.

Mr. Baron GURNEY.—Certainly.

SHERIFFS' COURT, LONDON.—Dec. 10.

EWENS v. SLOMAN.

SHERIFF LAW.—Whether a Sheriff's Officer is justified in arresting a party without producing his warrant.

This action was brought to recover compensation from the defendant, a sheriff's officer, for a false arrest. It appeared that on the 3rd of April last, the plaintiff and defendant happened to meet in the banking-house of Messrs. Wright and Co., Henrietta-street, Covent-garden. The defendant, having a writ against the plaintiff, told him that he had such a process against him, and took him into custody. The plaintiff asked to see the warrant. Defendant took his pocket-book from his pocket, but found that he had not the warrant then about him. A clerk of Messrs. Few and Hamilton, solicitors, happening to be in company with the plaintiff, gave it as his opinion that the arrest was illegal. The plaintiff refused, therefore, to submit. A struggle then took place; a policeman was called in; and the parties went to the station-house in Bow-street. On application to the magistrates, they refused to interfere; and the plaintiff was subsequently conveyed to the defendant's lock-up house. On searching the office, it was ascertained there were five other detainers against the plaintiff, who got himself removed by habeas corpus to the Fleet Prison. He then applied to the Court of Common Pleas to be discharged from one of the detainers, he having been at first illegally arrested, the costs of that application being £22. The Court decided that he was entitled to his discharge, and directed the defendant to pay the costs. The plaintiff then applied to the Court of Exchequer to be discharged from another execution issuing out of that Court. The judges refused to discharge him, conceiving that he was properly detained. The costs of that application amounted to £45. 3s. 4d. The plaintiff then applied to the Court of Queen's Bench to be discharged from other executions issuing from that Court. His costs were disallowed, but he was discharged. He now brought his action for the amount of the costs he had been put to in procuring his release.

Prison, as well as compensation. The defendant, by allowing a default, admitted the important fact, for the defendant, contended that the Sheriff of Middlesex, a liability was placed upon him, inasmuch as the parties who had executions against the plaintiff could prove that the defendant was in the plaintiff's company, the sheriff was liable to the creditors of the defendant. There was no malus animus in the sheriff towards the plaintiff. If the defendant was wrong, it was an error of judgment in the exercise of an unpleasant duty. The plaintiff—damages 100 guineas.

COMMISSION, MONMOUTH.
Tuesday, Dec. 10.

(Continued from p. 108.)

It is, therefore, at once to the only point which can apply to the circumstances of the present case—that of levying war within her realm, which, as before, is a direct and substantive branch of the earlier statute, and the bare intending of which, for the purpose of the objects mentioned in the later statute, is treason by that statute. And, the limits and boundaries of this offence, we are not left without lights from the decisions of courts of law in more recent times, and the expositions of those text writers on the subject, who have been held in veneration both by their contemporaries and posterity, amongst whom I shall mention the names of Lord Chief Justice Michael Foster. I shall proceed, I shall call your more particular attention to the instances in which the law has been settled upon this head of treason, and enable you to apply the evidence to the facts which bear to the several indictments. I propose I cannot do better than avail myself, in the most part, of the very words of the text writers upon the same subject. It has been laid down by undoubted authority, that a number of persons assembled together, armed with military weapons, or by dint of numbers or superior force, for any object or matter purely of a private nature, as, for example, to prosecute a quarrel, or to take revenge for some wrong, or to destroy some particular enemy, or to remove some particular nuisance, or to accomplish some end in which the persons assembled together had, or supposed to have, any private interest, such acts of assembly, however the authors of them may be punishable as for a high misdemeanour, do not amount to a levying of war within the statute of Edward III. But every insurrection which in judgment of law is intended against the person of the King, whether to dethrone or imprison him, or to oblige him to alter his measures or government, or to remove evil counsellors from about him—all such risings amount to a levying of war within the statute. So insurrections to throw down all inclosures, to alter the established law and change religion, to enhance the price of all labour, or to open all prisons—all risings in order to effect these innovations of a public and general concern by an armed force are, in construction of law, high treason within the clause of levying war; for, though not levelled at the person of the king, they are against his royal majesty; and, besides, they have a direct tendency to dissolve the bonds of society, and to destroy all property, and all government too, by numbers and an armed force. Insurrections, likewise, for redressing national grievances, or for the reformation of real or imaginary evils of a public nature, and in which the insurgents have no special interest—risings to effect these ends by force and numbers are, by construction of law, within the clause of levying war, for they are levelled at the king's crown and royal dignity. And, accordingly, it was held in the time of Queen Anne, that a large body of men tumultuously rising and assembled together with the avowed purpose of pulling down all the meeting-houses of Protestant Dissenters, and proceeding to pull down several, until prevented by force, brought the parties who were guilty of that act within the branch of the statute of levying war against the Queen. And, in a more recent case, where a riotous multitude, headed by Lord George Gordon, and acting in concert, with the declared design of pulling down or destroying all chapels belonging to those of the Roman Catholic persuasion, proceeded to put that design in force, there was no doubt but that the facts, if proved against the parties accused, amounted to the offence of high treason, by levying war against the king. Gentlemen, an assembly of men, armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, with any treasonable purpose, is a levying of war, although no blow be struck; and the enlisting, and drilling, and marching bodies of men are sufficient overt acts of that treason without coming to a battle or action. And if this be the case, the actual conflict between such a body and the Queen's forces must, beyond all doubt, amount to a levying of war against the Queen, under the statute of Edward, and to the effect of compassing or devising to levy war within the statute of Geo. III., provided the design and object and intention of the parties be such as is specified in that act; and, as has already been adverted to, it is quite unnecessary to constitute the guilt of treason that the tumultuous multitude should appear to be accompanied with the pomp or pageantry of war or with military array. Insurrection and rebellion are more humble in their first infancy, but all such external marks of force will not fail to be added with the first gleam of success. In case, therefore, any indictment for high treason should be founded on the levying of war, or the compassing or intending to levy war against the Queen, you will, in the first place, direct your attention to the evidence which shows the object and motive of the rising, whether it was to effect some general and public end, in which the whole community are concerned equally with the insurgents, such as the introduction of any great change or innovation in the government or the laws of the land by dint of numbers or violence, or whether it was confined to the effecting of any private or local or particular object; and it will be convenient that you should in the next place advert to the overt acts alleged on the face of the indictment; and then determine for yourselves whether they or any of them are proved by two witnesses in the manner before adverted to, one of such overt acts being of necessity to be proved to have taken place in this county, in order to give you jurisdiction. Gentlemen, it may be proper to inform you that, in the case of treason, the law knows no distinction between principal and accessory: all who partake in the treason incur the same guilt, and are liable to the same punishment. The treasonable design once established by the proper evidence, the man who instigated, incited, procured, or persuaded others to commit the act, though not present in person at the commission of it, is equally a traitor, to all intents and purposes, as the man by whose hand the act of treason is committed. He who leads the armed multitude towards the point of attack, and then retires before the blow is struck—he who remains at home planning and directing the proceedings, but leaving the actual execution of such plans to more daring hands—he who, after treason has been committed, knowingly harbours or conceals the traitor from the punishment due to him—all these are equally guilty in the eye of the law of the crime of high treason. Gentlemen, I am not aware that any case will be brought before you where the charge will be that of misprision of treason. If such, however, should be the case, it will be unnecessary to say more upon that species of offence than that it presupposes a treason to have been actually committed by others, and that the person charged with the offence, knowing both the traitors and the treason, but without either himself consenting or being a party to the treason, has refused or neglected to make a full and fair disclosure of such his knowledge within convenient time to a magistrate, or some one in authority. It is sufficient to describe the offence without entering into any further discussion. Gentlemen, it is very possible that bills of indictment may be brought before you charging acts of violence committed by some of the individuals who formed a part of the assembled multitude as felony only, not as treason; for he who shoots, or attempts to shoot or wound another is, as you well know, under certain circumstances guilty of felony, notwithstanding the very same act, when considered with reference to other circumstances, may amount to the crime of high treason. Again, bills of indictment may be preferred against some who participated in the unlawful meeting, but to a less degree, charging them only with the offence of riotously and seditiously assembling themselves together. But with respect to such charges, to gentlemen conversant as you are with the laws relating to offences of that nature, I hold it to be unnecessary to offer a single observation. Gentlemen, I feel I have already trespassed too long upon your attention; but the importance of the subject which I have felt it incumbent on me to discuss, with reference to the just performance of the duties of which you are about to enter, and the rare recurrence (for which we cannot be too thankful) of any occasion which calls for such discussion, must plead my excuse. I cannot, however, conclude my observations without expressing the sincere regret and pity which I feel—not alone I am sure, but in common with yourselves, and with all other men of sound principles—on the occasion of the recent disastrous occurrences. I would add, also, my most earnest hope that it may be found in the result that the great majority of those who may have been involved in the guilt of these transactions have been misled by the arts of wicked and designing men, and have sinned thus through ignorance and blindness, rather than from premeditated guilt; and I can suggest a remedy which can be applied successfully to counteract a state of mind and feeling so unhealthy and diseased, and infecting so large a portion of the community, except the diffusion amongst them of the benefits of religious instruction, and of sound religious education amongst the rising generation; so that as the younger part of the community advance to manhood, they may feel the conviction of the wholesome truth, that they are bound to yield obedience to the laws of their country, not from the terror only which the law inspires, but from a much higher and more binding motive—the fear of the Almighty, and from the thorough belief that “the powers which be are ordained of God.” Gentlemen, in conclusion I entreat you that, in approaching this investigation, you will dismiss from your minds all which you may have heard upon the subject before you entered into this court; and that in the performance of your important office, whilst you will rejoice when the weight of evidence is so light that you can, consistently with your duty, at once erty accused to his liberty and his ill at the same time watch over his jealousy; that you will weigh the right before you with a firm, steady, promising mind, looking to the performance of your duty, and to nothing beside, regardless of all consequences which may result from the performance of it.

NEW OF NEW BOOKS.

and PROGRESS of the LAWS of ENGLAND and WALES, with an account of the History and Customs, Warlike and Legal, of the several BRITONS, SAXONS, DANES and NORMANS, who now compose the BRITISH NATION. BY OWEN FLINTOFF, Esq. M.A. Barrister-at-Law. London: John Richardson, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet-street. 40.

had occasion before to notice in any terms, the first vol. of Mr. Flintoff's Laws of Real Property, and we before us an interesting volume, in a compact form, the origin and progress of the Laws of England, and the customs of our ancestors, the earliest notice of the British islands, from De Mundo, which is general to Aristotle, thence to the invasion of the Saxons, and from thence to the present time. The author says—

"The Britons have any other than a vague and splendid period of Britain's History. The provinces obtained the rights of Roman citizenship. Still less do they sufficiently value the valour of their British ancestors, who bravely withstood the Romans, and whose nations offered but a comparative resistance; and in later times re-generation after generation the hosts of the Saxons."

As to the legal part of the work, the author gives, only tracing the progress of the law to the culminating period of the 14th century, and then descending again to the present time; and in speaking of the Statute in Relief Act and the Reform Bill, the author has traced the history of the House of Lords and the House of Commons. The work is opened by a brief explanation of the divisions of common and statute law; after which we have a concise, but nevertheless elaborate, account of the "origin, history, and customs, warlike, domestic, and legal, of the several nations of Britons, Saxons, Danes, and Normans, who now compose the British nation;" concluded by a short treatise on the ancient and modern laws of this country, in which are introduced many sensible remarks on the recent statutory alterations. In his account of the Britons, whose descent he traces (we cannot say entirely to our satisfaction) through the great Cimmerian nation up to Gomer, the son of Japhet, our author has given us much very curious information respecting their customs, from which it appears that the early inhabitants of this enlightened isle in no very slight degree resembled the present uncivilized tribes of the western world.

The following is the author's description of the simple laws of the ancient Britons, and the remarkable circumstance of many of them continuing unchanged even to the present time, p. 45:—

"If again we turn to their ancient laws, we shall find these also existing to a great degree amongst their descendants. Thus they resembled the Saxons in allowing a homicide to redeem his crime by making compensation to the friends of the deceased, agreeably to the practice which prevailed in the remote Eastern regions, from which their ancestry had travelled, in the use of the trial by ordeal, and by compurgation, which were the chief features of the law as to crimes and punishments, and of its administration. Amongst other principles which we find laid down in the laws of Hoel, is one, that a witness to an accusation must swear that he knew and saw what he swears to, agreeably to the present well-established rule; and another, that the testimony of one man should not be taken. So the husband and wife could not give evidence respectively against one another; nor could the wife be brought forward to give evidence without her husband; the like thing applying in the case of an infant, for whom his father or guardian must have appeared. Although, however, the wife was considered as part of her husband, yet she had certain rights of her own. Thus the wife of the king could dispose of the thirds given to her by the king; and the wife of a freeman could dispose of all her paraphernalia and such like goods; but this did not hold in the case of the wife of a villanus or bondsman. The wife had also a right to all her articles of dress, to which her husband could not lay claim; and it appears she was entitled to a dowry and a present from her husband immediately after the marriage; besides which she received on that occasion an outfit from her own family and connexions—a custom which now remains, it is said, in some parts of Wales. Moreover, on the death of her husband, the wife could claim all his goods except the corn; and if they had lived together until that occurrence, and there was no heir, half of the substance fell to the surviving wife. Similarly, if within seven years of the marriage a separation took place, the wife could claim her dowry and paraphernalia, unless she had voluntarily deserted her home. In this case, however, or in the case of her committing adultery, she lost all her dowry and bridal presents—a practice which has continued, and now exists amongst us.

“Among other customs the origin of those now existing was this, that a person might be called upon to discharge the debts of the deceased, but only in the case of his having inherited property sufficient to satisfy them, or of his having voluntarily become pledge or surety for their payment. It also appears that there were three classes, viz. a foreigner, a noble, and the king, who were not obliged to discharge the debts of the deceased, although his goods fell to them, through failure of heirs. There were also three occasions on which one might have used the property of another without incurring any punishment, viz. either when anything was common between two persons, and one of them consumed it, there being nothing agreed on to the contrary; or when one seized the horse of another in order to carry the alarm of the approach of an enemy; or lastly, when one so acted in order to fetch a priest to a person on the point of death. We may also mention amongst the customs which now exist amongst us, that a person might detain the cattle of another trespassing on his land, and demand compensation for the injury. And so a person might exact a fine or compensation from another who ploughed up his land without his permission.

“There were three things which the law was said not to be able to reach or alter, viz. the purchase of land, effected without fraud and capable of proof; the judgment of the lord deciding according to right; and inveterate custom.”

The author then proceeds to show other parts of the jurisprudence of the Ancient Britons, which still exist principally in their territorial organization, and the tenure of their lands. In noticing the different sorts of crimes recognized by the Saxons' laws, he says,

“The crime of larceny, called by the Saxons Hale, might at one time have been committed by a child ten years old, but afterwards it was not imputed unless the child was twelve years of age; should it have happened that all the family of the offender were privy to the offence they were all punishable by being made slaves of; but where there had not been that privity, the mulct or fine was at one time sixty shillings, at another time one hundred and twenty shillings. Such regard was paid to the character of a wife, and the subjection she was supposed to be in to her husband that when any stolen article was found in the house, and not manifestly in her separate custody, the law considered her as no party to the stealing.”

He concludes by describing the establishment of the Common Law and the Statute Law, and shews the rise and progress of the latter to the present time.

We have now gone through the book, which evinces in all its parts, great industry, considerable talent, and a perfect knowledge of the subject. It were impossible that in a work of this nature, we should not trace some passages of Blackstone, and other familiar learned writers, and the author in his preface (we are glad to see) has candidly admitted the fact. This in itself is a great support to the work—it is the great change that has been worked in the laws in recent times, and their comparison with what the laws were—how they did work, and how the new laws do work—this is what we wish to see constantly brought before the public, and to the profession such information becomes of daily paramount importance. It is to the industry and research of authors such as Mr. Flintoff, that the Profession are indebted for such information. No educated man should be without this book. We pronounce it to merit the attention of every person, whether professional or not, for its historical and legal information, and above all, for the small space in which it is contained, and the price is within reach of all. To students we recommend it as a volume of wholesome and sound instruction that will help them over many difficulties in their legal studies.

ARTICLED CLERKS APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED ATTORNEIES IN HILARY TERM, 1840.

(Continued from p. 111.)

| His Name and Residence.      | To whom Articled or Assigned.                                                        |
|-------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| George, the younger, 15, Ely Place, | George Thomas, the elder, Carmarthen ; assigned to Samuel Walker, 29, Lincoln's Inn Fields. |
| William Edwin, Wells.               | George Twynam, Winchester ; assigned to Benjamin Hope, Wells.                               |
| Edward, Counter Hill ; New Cross    | Archibald Keightley, 43, Chancery Lane.                                                     |
| Thomas Norman, 28, Southampton      | Julius Gaborian Shepherd, Faversham.                                                        |
| Emiah, 164, Fleet Street ; Ryde ;   | William Butt, Ryde.                                                                         |
| et ; and William Street.            |                                                                                             |
| Joseph, 1, Francis Street, Gower    | Peter Williams, Holywell                                                                    |
| ford Square.                        |                                                                                             |
| George, 5, Warren Street, Pen-      | Cecil Proctor Wortham, Buntingford.                                                         |
| is, 11, St. James Place, Hamp-      | William Robinson, Dudley.                                                                   |
| ; Dudley ; and Kingswinford.        |                                                                                             |
| s Call, 115, Bunhill Row.           | Robert Weddell, Berwick-upon-Tweed ; assigned to William Pringle, King's Road, Bedford Row. |
| rd, Carlisle.                       | George Saul, Carlisle, assigned to John Saul, Carlisle.                                     |
| Imund, 11, Great Russell Street,    | Richard Wardroper, the elder, Midhurst ; assigned to Chas. Jas. Palmer, Bedford Row.        |
| m Webb, 15, Cumming Street,         | Charles Henry Webb, Stafford ; assigned to Gay                                              |
| ; Stafford ; and Hampton Street.    | Hiern, Stafford.                                                                            |
| 7, South Molton Street.             | John Whall, Worksop.                                                                        |
| s Francis Sawdon, 87, Fenchurch     | Samuel Spode, Sudbury ; assigned to Francia                                                 |
|                                     | James Osbaldeston, St. Albans.                                                              |
| ohn Richard Lambert, North          | Walter Prideaux, Goldsmiths' Hall.                                                          |
| minster.                            |                                                                                             |
| n, 25, Frederick Place, Hamp-       | Bernard John Wake, Sheffield.                                                               |
| Sheffield ; Eccleston Street.       |                                                                                             |
| Hippolite, Lincoln Chambers,        | James Leman, 51, Lincoln's Inn Fields.                                                      |
| n Fields.                           |                                                                                             |
| George Bancroft, Manchester.        | William Casson, Manchester.                                                                 |
| Muskett, 14, Wakefield Street,      | Nathaniel Palmer, Great Yarmouth ; assigned to Robert Jackson, 40, Bedford Row.             |
| are ; Great Yarmouth ; 8, Mont-     |                                                                                             |
| , South Lambeth ; 5, Warwick        |                                                                                             |

Added to the List pursuant to Judges' Orders.

|                                  |                                                                                  |
|----------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| n, Liverpool.                    | Charles Wood, Manchester.                                                        |
| ; Jennings, 20, Stamford Street. | Frederick Chase, Luton.                                                          |
| ell Martyn, 7, Furnival's Inn ;  | James Edward Jackson Riccard, South Mol-                                         |
| on ; 43, Southampton Buildings ; | ton.                                                                             |
| derick Street.                   |                                                                                  |
| y Edward, 5, York Place, New     | James Wittit Lyon, Spring Gardens.                                               |
| l Little Argyle Street.          |                                                                                  |
| Charles Broadhurst, Ashby-de-la- | Edward Fisher, Ashby-de-la-Zouch ; assigned to William Dewes, Ashby-de-la-Zouch. |
| arwick Court ; Derby.            |                                                                                  |

Notices served at the Master's Office on the 30th October.

|                                  |                                                                                         |
|----------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| the younger, Drummond Street.    | Arthur Philip Groom, Henrietta Street.                                                  |
| les, 5, New Milman, Street ; and | Isaac Preston, the younger, Great Yarmouth.                                             |
| outh.                            |                                                                                         |
| hard, the Younger, 2, Guildford  | Matthew Brettingham Kingsbury, Bungay ; as-                                             |
| l Kersey Priory.                 | signed to John Chevallier Cobbold, Ipswich ; assigned to Alfred Cobbold, Chancery Lane. |

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The accumulated mass of correspondence, books, and articles under which our library-table groans, sets our wits in motion as to the best mode of dealing with the entirety (as a lawyer would say). We really wish to avoid the charge of negligence, for we have many meritorious articles, and our desire is to oblige the writers; but in what way, consistently with our own arrangements for this paper—looking also at its limits, its various requisite matter, and the tastes of all our subscribers (for they are very manifold)—we confess ourselves at present quite at a loss. Nous verrons.

To AUTHORS.—We have also to apologize to authors for our apparent neglect of them and their works. We have not had room; and this is the best, and indeed only excuse we have to make. We will, however, digest some plan, by which a spare corner shall always be found for a REVIEW.

An Observer.—Address “The Editor,” at our publishers’.

S. A. W.—Our industrious correspondent submits for our approval the following proposition:—“That on the last Saturday in every month, we publish a double number at the price of one shilling, for the purpose of working up the arrears of the past month; and that, although it may not be consistent with our pledge, he doubts not but that all our subscribers would readily release us from it.”—We would indeed most cheerfully comply with this suggestion, but that we have very strong doubts to the contrary; at all events, our pledge shall be held by us sacred, and nothing but the unanimous desire of all our subscribers shall induce us to swerve from it.

A. J. H.—We much fear that by extending the size of the aperture to OUR LETTER-BOX, we should open the door to some petty larceny, which our correspondents would not thank us for.—Our publishers will, with every courtesy, receive all bulky communications under the size of a mail-coach, and no questions will be asked.

J. A. M.—Alphonso—R.—S. W.—A. J. H.—S. A. W.—H.—An Observer—GREX AMICORUM—all under consideration.

C. S. D.—Our best thanks for your reports. Your request, dated the 10th inst., should have been noticed before, but it had escaped us—granted.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

On Jan. 1, 1840, will be published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part I.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of “The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England,” dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, in cloth bds with Table of Contents.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Bookseller
194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press, Second Edition,

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is now well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, December 21, 1839

The Legal Guide.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1839.

[No. 9.]

US OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

The Abolition of Fines and Recoveries for the Substitution of mortgages of Assurance.

(Continued from p. 115.)

CTOR OF A SETTLEMENT.

the PROTECTOR of a Settlement estate may be in fee or in equitable, so that it be vested in owner. The act deprives a bare office, or he may be nominated by the settlor.

CTOR is invested with a char- acter and unjust. He is placed ntrol of the Court of Equity, on of which to aid imperfect tenant in tail to alien the estate tail is rigidly excluded. His bsolute—he cannot even com-of trust. His office continues ng he has absolutely conveyed state, or whether it has passed ation of law; still he remains his consent becomes necessary
ail. He may therefore make e pleases to enable the parties attain that end, although he interest himself; and it may so e a Protector has become

Bankrupt, that he may, without any concurrence from his assignees, or being under any responsibility to his creditors, consent that the tenant in tail shall bar a subsequent remainder in tail vested in the bankrupt, and so passed to his assignees, to the prejudice of his creditors.

But this protectorship of a tenant for life after alienation of the life estate will nevertheless be subject to merger, when the office will be at an end. As where the life estate and the estate next in remainder shall be conveyed to the same person, the first estate for life will then merge and become extinct, supposing the two estates to have been legal estates. We shall again notice this subject.

A Tenant by the Curtesy will be the PROTECTOR of a Settlement in respect of any estate tail or prior estate created by it, so that if a feme covert tenant in tail die, and her husband is tenant by the curtesy, he will be the Protector;—if she should die without issue, and there is a remainder in tail in the settlement, he will be the Protector;—but where the estate is settled to the separate use of a feme covert, for such an estate as would give the protectorship of the settlement, then she alone is the Protector, otherwise she and her husband will together be the Protector.

The interpretation to be given to the word “settlement” is defined by sec. 1 to mean an assurance by which lands are entailed or agreed to be entailed; and it should be observed that heretofore a termor could not make a tenant, to the precipe, whereas, under this act, if a person be tenant in tail in possession or in remainder, and has the first estate of freehold or for a term of years determinable on life, he can acquire the fee, an estate for years determinable upon a life constitutes a Protector—not so, a term of years however long not determinable upon life.

Sec. 24. Provided always, That where a married woman would, if single, be the protector of a settlement in respect of a prior estate, which is not thereby settled, or agreed or directed to be settled, to her separate use, she and her husband together shall in respect of such estate be the protector of such settlement, and shall be deemed one owner; but if such prior estate shall by such settlement have been settled, or agreed, or directed to be settled, to her separate use, then and in such case she alone shall in respect of such estate be the protector of such settlement.

Sec. 25. Provided always, That, except in the case of a lease herein-after provided for, where an estate shall be limited by a settlement by way of confirmation, or where the settlement shall merely have the effect of restoring an estate, in either of those cases such estate shall for the purposes of this Act, so far as regards the protector of the settlement, be deemed an estate subsisting under such settlement.

Sec. 26. Provided always, That where a lease at a rent shall be created or confirmed by a settlement, the person in whose favour such lease shall be created or confirmed shall not in respect thereof be the protector of such settlement.

Sec. 27. Provided always, That no woman in respect of her dower, and (except in the case hereinafter provided for of a bare trustee under a settlement made on or before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three) no bare trustee, heir, executor, administrator, or assign, shall be the protector of a settlement.

Sec. 28. Provided always, That where under any settlement there shall be more than one estate, an estate tail, and the person who shall be the owner within the meaning of this act of any such prior estate, in respect of which but for the two last preceding clauses, or either of them, he would have been the protector of the settlement, shall by virtue of such clauses, or either of them, be excluded from being the protector, then and in such case the person (if any) who if such estate did not exist would be protector of the settlement shall be such protector.

Sec. 29. Provides, and be it further enacted, That where already, or on or before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, an estate under a settlement shall have been disposed of either absolutely or otherwise, and either for valuable consideration or not, the person who in respect of such estate would, if this Act had not been passed, have been the proper person to have made the tenant to the writ of entry or other writ for suffering common recovery of the lands entailed by such settlement, shall, during the continuance of the estate which conferred the right to make the tenant to such writ of entry or other writ, be the protector of such settlement.

Sec. 30. Provides, and be it further enacted, That where any person having either already, or on or before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, either for valuable consideration or not, disposed of, either absolutely or otherwise, a remainder or reversion in fee in any lands, or created any estate out of such remainder or reversion, would under this Act, if this clause had not been inserted, have been the protector of the settlement in which the lands were entailed in which such remainder or reversion may be subsisting and thereby be enabled to concur in the barring of such remainder or reversion which he could not have done if he had not become such protector, then and in every

To be continued.)

Vol. 3.

circumstances is a Legacy satisfaction of a Debt?

PROBLEM 17, VOL. II.

its to a Warranty? Shew the abilities of the parties.

is said to be implied, where the general customs annexed to the particular customs affecting particular

Where a publican agrees with a brewer to take all his beer of him, the brewer is bound to supply him with beer of a wholesome quality, Holcome v. Hewson, ante. And this rule would apply to any trade where food is supplied.

In all cases of implied contracts, the following maxims should be remembered—

“Expressio facit cessari tacitum.”

“Expressio eorum quae tacite insunt nihil operatur.”

The notion that a warranty might be implied from the extent of the prices given, has long been exploded. And the case of La Newville v. Nourse, 3 Camp. 351. has decided that a good price is no implied warranty as to the soundness of a horse. But when the terms of a contract are ambiguous, the amount of price may sometimes furnish a clue to the true meaning, Allen v. Cameron, 1 Cr. & Mee. 840.

2nd. An express warranty.

An express warranty has been defined by Buller, J. in Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 59. to be “every affirmation at the time of sale of personal chattels, provided it appears to have been so intended,” and provided the contract be not in writing, and the affirmation merely oral—for in such case the writing is the only evidence of the contract, Pickering v. Dowson, 4 Taunt. 779. A contract cannot be added to by parol evidence, and where there is an express written, (or it seems verbal), warranty the vendee cannot avail himself of representations not embodied therein, and made by the vendor without fraud, Budd v. Faiuinaner, C. P. M. T. 1831. Ms. 5 C. & P. 78.; 8 Bing. 48. S. C.

A warranty must be made either before or at the time of the sale; and if made after it would be void for want of consideration, 3 Bl. Comm. 166.; Fitz. Nat. Brev. 94 c & 96 b. 5. H. 7. 41. 9 H. 653.; 12 H. 4. 1.; 42 Ass. g. 7.; 7 H. 4. 15.

Blackstone, in his Commentaries, vol. 3, 166. has laid down, that a future event cannot be warranted, as, that a horse should be sound two years hence; but see Liddard v. Kain, 3 Bing. 183.; Eden v. Parkinson, Dougl. 705. where the contrary is held.

A sale of goods by sample is in effect warranty, Parkinson v. Lee, 2 East. 314. Palker v. Palmer, 4 B. & Ald. 307.; but has been doubted whether such warranty is express or implied.

No particular form of words is necessary to constitute a warranty: the word “warrant” need not be used. Thus an assertion by the vendor of a horse, in the course of dealing, that the vendee might depend upon it that “the horse was perfectly quiet and free from vice,” was held to be a warranty to that effect, Cave v. Coleman, M. & R. 2. In sales of horses, a warranty is frequently inserted in the receipt for the consideration money, and this obviates the necessity of an agreement stamp, and is evidence of the warranty; for a warranty does not of itself require an agreement stamp as it falls within the exception in the Stamp Act of agreements relating to the sale of goods. But there is a doubt, if the receipt is not stamped, whether such unstamped receipt would be admissible in evidence to prove a warranty. See Gray v. Smith, 1 Cowp. 387; Wise v. Charlton, 4 A. & E. 790.

A general warranty will not extend to defects obvious to the purchaser; as if a horse be warranted perfect, and want an eye or a tail, 2 Bla. Comm. 165, 166. The rule of careat emptor applies in such a case.

A person may give warranty either himself or his agent lawfully authorized. One partner may bind another in the course of his business by a warranty, Sandilands v. Marsh, 2 Barn. & Ald. 678. And a servant may bind his master, if he do not exceed the authority given him, Fenn v. Harrison, T. R. 760.

As connected with this subject, it may be useful to refer the reader to Lord Tenterden's Act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 14. By sec. 6, it is enacted “That no action shall be maintained whereby to charge any person upon, or on the reason of any representation or assurance concerning or relating to the conduct, credit, ability, trade, or any other person, to the intent or such other person may obtain by, or goods upon, unless such an assurance be made in writing by the party to be charged: to debar the vendee from a defence to an action for the price, Grimald v. White, 4 Esp. R. 45. See Baxter v. Butter, 479; Groning v. Wendham, 1 Stark. R. 257; Hopkins v. Appleby, 1 Stark. R. 477; Fisher v. Samuda, 1 Camp. 190.

Where an action is brought by the vendor for the price of goods, the vendee may prove the breach of warranty, and consequent deficiency of the goods, in reduction of the damages, Cormack v. Gillis, cited 7 East, 480; Street v. Blay, 2 B. & Ad. 456.

In executory contracts, as in the case of manufactured goods not completely accepted, the vendee may return the same if deficient, and thereby wholly defeat the action for the price, although a trial of the article has been made by the vendee, Street v. Blay, ante, per Lord Tenterden, C. J.; Poulton v. Lattimore, ante.

A specific chattel, as a horse, if once accepted, (although before discovery of a breach of warranty,) cannot be returned, and the vendee is liable for the price, unless, indeed, the vendor agrees to rescind the contract, which he may do either expressly or by implication, as by keeping and using the specific chattel after its return. And the vendee, having paid the consideration money, cannot (unless the contract is rescinded) recover it back as money paid on a consideration which has failed, but he can sue on the warranty; Street v. Blay, ante; Long v. Preston, 2 M. & P. 262.

Where goods are sold by sample, they may be refused, or, if received, returned within a reasonable time, if not agreeable to such sample, Id.; but not after the exercise of any acts of ownership, in which case the vendee may sue for the breach of contract, Parker v. Palmer, 4 B. & Ald. 387. In sales by sample, the contract may be rescinded if the vendor refuses to allow the vendee to inspect the whole of the goods in bulk, after a sample given, Lorymer v. Smith, 1 B. & C. 1; 2 D. & R. 23. S. C.

to debar the vendee from a defence to an action for the price, Grimald v. White, 4 Esp. R. 45. See Baxter v. Butter, 479; Groning v. Wendham, 1 Stark. R. 257; Hopkins v. Appleby, 1 Stark. R. 477; Fisher v. Samuda, 1 Camp. 190.

Where an action is brought by the vendor for the price of goods, the vendee may prove the breach of warranty, and consequent deficiency of the goods, in reduction of the damages, Cormack v. Gillis, cited 7 East, 480; Street v. Blay, 2 B. & Ad. 456.

In executory contracts, as in the case of manufactured goods not completely accepted, the vendee may return the same if deficient, and thereby wholly defeat the action for the price, although a trial of the article has been made by the vendee, Street v. Blay, ante, per Lord Tenterden, C. J.; Poulton v. Lattimore, ante.

A specific chattel, as a horse, if once accepted, (although before discovery of a breach of warranty,) cannot be returned, and the vendee is liable for the price, unless, indeed, the vendor agrees to rescind the contract, which he may do either expressly or by implication, as by keeping and using the specific chattel after its return. And the vendee, having paid the consideration money, cannot (unless the contract is rescinded) recover it back as money paid on a consideration which has failed, but he can sue on the warranty; Street v. Blay, ante; Long v. Preston, 2 M. & P. 262.

If a bill of exchange have been given in payment, and an action is brought thereupon, the vendee cannot defend such action pro tanto on the ground of a deficiency in the quality or value of the goods, and in such a case must bring a cross action for breach of contract; but he may in toto, if he can shew a total failure of consideration. Morgan v. Richardson, 1 Camp. 40 n.; Tye v. Gwynne, 2 Camp. 346; Obbard v. Beetham, M. & M. 483; Archer v. Bamford, 2 Stark. 175; Spiller v. Westlake, 2 B. and Ad. 155.

In an action upon a warranty nominal damages are recoverable, although, upon a re-sale of the goods, the vendee may have acquired a profit, Street v. Blay, per Parke J. ante. J. A. M.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY, Dec. 16.

RUSHTON v. COBB.

APPEAL FROM THE VICE-CHANCELLOR.

LEGACIES.—Wherever a Legacy is given to a person under a particular character which he has falsely assumed, and which alone can be supposed the motive of the bounty, the law will not allow him to avail himself of it, and therefore he cannot demand his legacy.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Vice-Chancellor, affirming the validity of two legacies of £2,000. and of £500., bequeathed to Lady Fanny Campbell, by the late Mr. Cobb, an attorney, of Margate. The circumstances of the case are peculiar. In the year 1829, Lady Fanny Campbell, the widow of the late Major-General Sir Neil Campbell, married a Mr. Rushton. The marriage was a private one, few of their friends knew it; Lady Campbell did not take her husband's name, and in about two months she was deserted by her husband, and has never since seen him. Lady Campbell shortly afterwards went to Margate, where she became acquainted with Mr. Cobb, an attorney residing there. The intimacy was so close, that he appears to have even meditated a proposal of marriage, but from some cause unexplained that proposal was not made, and Lady Campbell having left Margate, received in 1834, a letter from a Mr. Wright, announcing the death of Mr.

Cobb, and the bequeathing of the legacies in question. The interest of the two thousand pounds was to go to trustees to be paid so long as Lady Campbell continued unmarried; and if she married, then the trustees were to recal the bequest. The five hundred pounds were given absolutely, subject to the payment of any warrant of attorney that Mr. Cobb might hold at the time of his death. It was shortly afterwards discovered that Lady Campbell had a second husband, Mr. Rushton, who was still alive, and resident in Sierra Leone, and it was also discovered that there was a warrant of attorney for £389. among the papers of Mr. Cobb. Under these circumstances, the executors refused to pay the legacies, and on a bill being filed, the Vice-Chancellor at the hearing decreed against them. The appeal was against the whole decree.

Mr. Wakefield supported his Honour's order and argued that identity of person was all that the law required, and that as Lady Campbell had not put any fraud on Mr. Cobb, and could have had no idea that she would be remembered in his will, there was nothing to affect the validity of the bequest. According to the civil law an covenant affecting marriage or intended to prevent marriage was always struck out of a will, and the Courts of equity adopted this rule of the Courts of civil law, and gave effect to them. Several cases of this description were to be found in the books, and they, therefore, contended that the gift was good, and the condition annexed to it bad in law and equity. With respect to the warrant of attorney, it bore on the face of the evidence of having been cancelled.

The LORD CHANCELLOR in giving judgment said, the question regarded the validity of two different legacies left by Mr. Cobb, a gentleman of property, who formerly resided at Margate, by his will, to Lady Fanny Campbell. His executors, the defendants in the cause, resisted the payment, insisting that the plaintiff had no good title, the legacies having been left to her by the name of Campbell, and in the supposition that she was a widow, whereas, in fact, she was then married to her second husband, Mr. Rushton, and it was in that character she sued for the bequests in the will. One of the bequests was of a sum of £500. absolutely, and the other was of a sum of £2,000. while she, the legatee, remained single and unmarried. There was no proof that she assumed the character of being single with a view to impose on the testator; and his misapprehension of the real state and condition of the legatee did not make the legacy void. His lordship would apply as a test to this case, the words of Lord Alvauley in Kennell v. Abbott, 4 Vesey, 302: (1)—“That wherever a legacy is given to a person under a particular character, which he has falsely assumed, and which supposed the motive of the bounty, not allow him to avail himself of it, he cannot demand his legacy." notwithstanding her marriage with, still called herself Lady Campbell, representation to the testator. But that she assumed in some degree before that she had not married again, proved by the evidence; and at all assumed character was not alone the testator's bounty. There were such as "Standen v. Standen," in which it was held that a wrong description of a legatee does not destroy their legacies. The same rule applies to legacies of this kind, must be that the assumed character was the bounty of the testator's bounty. There was in the evidence in this case that the legatee was much attached to this legatee. His condition did not make the difference. As to the other part of the case, directed the interest and dividends of the legacy to be paid to her as long as she should be single and unmarried. It was argued that this was not a condition subsequent, but a condition precedent. There were many cases in which it was held that notwithstanding conditions of that kind imposed by testators, the legatees took the legacy absolutely, as in the case of "Murples v. Maddock," in 1 Maddock, 590. The testator was attached to Lady Campbell, but there was no reason to believe his attachment would be affected if he had known of her marriage. The Chancellor was right in declaring her entitled to the legacy, and though it was a difficult case, the correct judgment in favour of the legatee and His Lordship would not put the expense of the legacy dismissed with costs.

A question arose upon the will of Catherine, who supposed herself to be married to Edward Lovell, with whom she had contracted a marriage. It appeared that she was a married man at that time, but she was in fact a single woman, and the will was a gross fraud as to her. She was in the will in execution of the power given by the articles executed before the supposed marriage, and not as if she was a single woman, by which it was provided "to my husband, Edward Lovell." She afterwards died, leaving Edward Lovell surviving her. Upon the questions in that case arose.

The first question was, whether this legacy of £150. was or was not a legacy, which Edward Lovell could claim under the circumstances, that it was given to him as the husband of the testatrix, though he did not possess that character. Lord ALVANLEY, M. R. said, he thought it a case rather novel in its circumstances, and that scarcely had afforded any decision in the law of England; though there were some dicta in the civil law that seemed to bear upon the point.

It was argued at the bar by Mr. Wooddson that the books of the Common Law were barren upon such questions; that Swinburne collected the authorities from the Civil Law and that in the Digest (Book xxxv. tit. 1. b. 72. s. 6.) this rule is laid down:—" Falsam causam legate non obesse verius est; quia ratio legandi legato non cohæret; sed plerumque doli exceptio locum habebit si probetur alias legaturus non fuisse." The Code (Book vi. tit. 42. l. 227.) says, "Fidei commissum ejus qui reliquerat penitentid probata successorum numquam præstare compelluntur," and that the word "probata" is rendered "probable," which is the true sense; not "demonstrated."

Lord ALVANLEY thought the passage cited from the Code did not much apply, and that the meaning of the passage cited from the Digest was, that a false reason given for the legacy is not of itself sufficient to destroy it; but there must be an exception of any fraud practised, from which it might be presumed the person giving the legacy would not, if that fraud had been known to him, have given it. That from a book of great authority seems to be the principle of the Civil Law. His Lordship continued. The question is whether, according to the law of England, that can apply to a case like the present, and whether the law will permit a man, who obtains a legacy in such a manner, to have the benefit of it. I have not been able to find anything that bears any very decisive analogy to this, but upon general principles I am of opinion, that it would be a violation of every rule that ought to prevail, as to the intention of a deceased person, if I should permit a man availing himself of that character of husband of the testatrix, and to whom, in that character, a legacy is given, to take any part of the estate of a person whom he so grossly abused, and who must be taken to have acted upon the duty imposed upon her in that relative character. I desire to be understood not to determine, that, where from circumstances not moving from the legatee himself, the description is inapplicable, as where a person is supposed to be a child of the testator, and from motives of love and affection to that child, supposing it his own, he has given a legacy to it, and it afterwards turns out that he was imposed upon, and the child was not his own, I am not disposed by any means to determine, that the provision for that child should totally fail; for circumstances of personal affection to the child might mix with it: and which might entitle him, although he might not fill that character in which the legacy is given. My decision, therefore, totally avoids such a point. Neither would I have it understood, that if a testator, in consequence of supposed affectionate conduct of his wife, being deceived by her, gives her a legacy, as to his chaste wife, evidence of her violation of her marriage vow could be given against that. It would open too wide a field. But this decision steers clear of that point. This is a legacy to her supposed husband, and under that name. He was the husband of another person. He had certainly done this lady, the grossest injury a man can do a woman, and I am called upon now to determine, whether the law of England will permit this legacy to be claimed by him. Under these circumstances I am warranted to make a precedent, and to determine that wherever a legacy is given to a person under a particular character, which he has falsely assumed, and which alone can be supposed the motive of the bounty, the law will not permit him to avail himself of it; and therefore he cannot demand his legacy, upon the principle I have mentioned from the Digest, and that ought to govern courts of justice, his lordship was of opinion the legacy could not be claimed.

A case* something like this occurred, which took up so much time before the Lords Commissioners, upon an application for a writ de ventre inspiciendo, against a woman who had lived with Mr. Fellowes, and had made him believe she had been brought to bed of several children; which he was weak enough to suppose his. It was not a question, whether they were his children. But there were no such children. She had shown him children as her's, which were not her's, and he gave legacies to them, as her children by him. It was held that they were not entitled. There two things were wanting. The testator was not merely deceived as to their being his children, but he was deceived as to the other ingredient of the character in which he gave them the legacies; for they were not the children of that woman.—

Editor.

COURT OF REVIEW.—Nov. 23.

FIAT AGAINST WILLIAM MARSTON.

JOINT STOCK BANKING COMPANIES.—Liability of Shareholders to the Debts of the Company—Death, Bankruptcy, or Sale of Shares does not affect the identity of a Partnership established under the Joint Stock Banking Act, 7 Geo. 4, c. 46.

This was a petition of Charles Marston, praying that a proof made by John Whittenbury under this fiat, dated August 19, 1839, might be expunged, and that a substitution of assignees might take place, the choice having been turned by the debt now impeached. The bankrupt was a member of the Imperial Bank of England, the Northern and Central Bank of England, and the North of England Bank, all established under the Joint-stock Banking Act, 7 Geo. IV. c. 46. The bankrupt was one of the registered officers

* Ex parte Welles, 4 Bro. C.C. 90.

Bank, which stopped payment in favour of which he had paid up all due on his shares. At a meeting under this fiat, Mr. Whittenbury gave for £3,047, on a debt due bankrupt and other members of the certain bills of exchange which were assigned. The proof was admitted by the assignees, for the purpose of enabling them to vote in the choice of assignees, and to retain control over the bankrupt's cer-

lardon and Bacon, in support of which they urged the following points:—1st. That a creditor of a banking company, until judgment recovered under the powers given by the public registered officer, cannot assert such a creditor asserting a right to the 62d section of the Bankruptcy Act, created by the dissolution of the firm, or of the bankruptcy of members. 2d. That an affidavit of debt in this case was defective, but insufficient to support the order, and no evidence of notice of the bills of exchange. 4th. That on a previous fiat against a member of the company, a second fiat ought to have been made by the same Commissioners as the first, and not by a different one, as to the same assignee.

The learned judge said this was one among many melancholy proofs of the danger of joint-stock companies entering into joint-stock companies. They were likely to be ruined for the debts of the company, and the creditors endangered thereby in the bankruptcy. The ancient law of the protection, but it had been broken through the current of unforeseen evils let in. In the case before the Court, it left much to be desired. He (Sir J. Cross) was of opinion that joint-stock banking companies had been created by the 62nd section of the act, sueing or affecting the whole company, and not the companies under the statute holding out as joint-stock companies with ordinary firms. The respondent had only an ultimate interest in the event of a surplus; but had an interest under the 62nd section to come in as one of the assignees and question of creditors. It was contended that the operation of the 62nd section applied only to subsisting partnerships, and not to the authority of the Vice-Chancellor in Morris v. Desormaux, Mont. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854. 855. 856. 857. 858. 859. 860. 861. 862. 863. 864. 865. 866. 867. 868. 869. 870. 871. 872. 873. 874. 875. 876. 877. 878. 879. 880. 881. 882. 883. 884. 885. 886. 887. 888. 889. 890. 891. 892. 893. 894. 895. 896. 897. 898. 899. 900. 901. 902. 903. 904. 905. 906. 907. 908. 909. 910. 911. 912. 913. 914. 915. 916. 917. 918. 919. 920. 921. 922. 923. 924. 925. 926. 927. 928. 929. 930. 931. 932. 933. 934. 935. 936. 937. 938. 939. 940. 941. 942. 943. 944. 945. 946. 947. 948. 949. 950. 951. 952. 953. 954. 955. 956. 957. 958. 959. 960. 961. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. 967. 968. 969. 970. 971. 972. 973. 974. 975. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980. 981. 982. 983. 984. 985. 986. 987. 988. 989. 990. 991. 992. 993. 994. 995. 996. 997. 998. 999. 1000. 1001. 1002. 1003. 1004. 1005. 1006. 1007. 1008. 1009. 1010. 1011. 1012. 1013. 1014. 1015. 1016. 1017. 1018. 1019. 1020. 1021. 1022. 1023. 1024. 1025. 1026. 1027. 1028. 1029. 1030. 1031. 1032. 1033. 1034. 1035. 1036. 1037. 1038. 1039. 1040. 1041. 1042. 1043. 1044. 1045. 1046. 1047. 1048. 1049. 1050. 1051. 1052. 1053. 1054. 1055. 1056. 1057. 1058. 1059. 1060. 1061. 1062. 1063. 1064. 1065. 1066. 1067. 1068. 1069. 1070. 1071. 1072. 1073. 1074. 1075. 1076. 1077. 1078. 1079. 1080. 1081. 1082. 1083. 1084. 1085. 1086. 1087. 1088. 1089. 1090. 1091. 1092. 1093. 1094. 1095. 1096. 1097. 1098. 1099. 1100. 1101. 1102. 1103. 1104. 1105. 1106. 1107. 1108. 1109. 1110. 1111. 1112. 1113. 1114. 1115. 1116. 1117. 1118. 1119. 1120. 1121. 1122. 1123. 1124. 1125. 1126. 1127. 1128. 1129. 1130. 1131. 1132. 1133. 1134. 1135. 1136. 1137. 1138. 1139. 1140. 1141. 1142. 1143. 1144. 1145. 1146. 1147. 1148. 1149. 1150. 1151. 1152. 1153. 1154. 1155. 1156. 1157. 1158. 1159. 1160. 1161. 1162. 1163. 1164. 1165. 1166. 1167. 1168. 1169. 1170. 1171. 1172. 1173. 1174. 1175. 1176. 1177. 1178. 1179. 1180. 1181. 1182. 1183. 1184. 1185. 1186. 1187. 1188. 1189. 1190. 1191. 1192. 1193. 1194. 1195. 1196. 1197. 1198. 1199. 1200. 1201. 1202. 1203. 1204. 1205. 1206. 1207. 1208. 1209. 1210. 1211. 1212. 1213. 1214. 1215. 1216. 1217. 1218. 1219. 1220. 1221. 1222. 1223. 1224. 1225. 1226. 1227. 1228. 1229. 1230. 1231. 1232. 1233. 1234. 1235. 1236. 1237. 1238. 1239. 1240. 1241. 1242. 1243. 1244. 1245. 1246. 1247. 1248. 1249. 1250. 1251. 1252. 1253. 1254. 1255. 1256. 1257. 1258. 1259. 1260. 1261. 1262. 1263. 1264. 1265. 1266. 1267. 1268. 1269. 1270. 1271. 1272. 1273. 1274. 1275. 1276. 1277. 1278. 1279. 1280. 1281. 1282. 1283. 1284. 1285. 1286. 1287. 1288. 1289. 1290. 1291. 1292. 1293. 1294. 1295. 1296. 1297. 1298. 1299. 1300. 1301. 1302. 1303. 1304. 1305. 1306. 1307. 1308. 1309. 1310. 1311. 1312. 1313. 1314. 1315. 1316. 1317. 1318. 1319. 1320. 1321. 1322. 1323. 1324. 1325. 1326. 1327. 1328. 1329. 1330. 1331. 1332. 1333. 1334. 1335. 1336. 1337. 1338. 1339. 1340. 1341. 1342. 1343. 1344. 1345. 1346. 1347. 1348. 1349. 1350. 1351. 1352. 1353. 1354. 1355. 1356. 1357. 1358. 1359. 1360. 1361. 1362. 1363. 1364. 1365. 1366. 1367. 1368. 1369. 1370. 1371. 1372. 1373. 1374. 1375. 1376. 1377. 1378. 1379. 1380. 1381. 1382. 1383. 1384. 1385. 1386. 1387. 1388. 1389. 1390. 1391. 1392. 1393. 1394. 1395. 1396. 1397. 1398. 1399. 1400. 1401. 1402. 1403. 1404. 1405. 1406. 1407. 1408. 1409. 1410. 1411. 1412. 1413. 1414. 1415. 1416. 1417. 1418. 1419. 1420. 1421. 1422. 1423. 1424. 1425. 1426. 1427. 1428. 1429. 1430. 1431. 1432. 1433. 1434. 1435. 1436. 1437. 1438. 1439. 1440. 1441. 1442. 1443. 1444. 1445. 1446. 1447. 1448. 1449. 1450. 1451. 1452. 1453. 1454. 1455. 1456. 1457. 1458. 1459. 1460. 1461. 1462. 1463. 1464. 1465. 1466. 1467. 1468. 1469. 1470. 1471. 1472. 1473. 1474. 1475. 1476. 1477. 1478. 1479. 1480. 1481. 1482. 1483. 1484. 1485. 1486. 1487. 1488. 1489. 1490. 1491. 1492. 1493. 1494. 1495. 1496. 1497. 1498. 1499. 1500. 1501. 1502. 1503. 1504. 1505. 1506. 1507. 1508. 1509. 1510. 1511. 1512. 1513. 1514. 1515. 1516. 1517. 1518. 1519. 1520. 1521. 1522. 1523. 1524. 1525. 1526. 1527. 1528. 1529. 1530. 1531. 1532. 1533. 1534. 1535. 1536. 1537. 1538. 1539. 1540. 1541. 1542. 1543. 1544. 1545. 1546. 1547. 1548. 1549. 1550. 1551. 1552. 1553. 1554. 1555. 1556. 1557. 1558. 1559. 1560. 1561. 1562. 1563. 1564. 1565. 1566. 1567. 1568. 1569. 1570. 1571. 1572. 1573. 1574. 1575. 1576. 1577. 1578. 1579. 1580. 1581. 1582. 1583. 1584. 1585. 1586. 1587. 1588. 1589. 1590. 1591. 1592. 1593. 1594. 1595. 1596. 1597. 1598. 1599. 1600. 1601. 1602. 1603. 1604. 1605. 1606. 1607. 1608. 1609. 1610. 1611. 1612. 1613. 1614. 1615. 1616. 1617. 1618. 1619. 1620. 1621. 1622. 1623. 1624. 1625. 1626. 1627. 1628. 1629. 1630. 1631. 1632. 1633. 1634. 1635. 1636. 1637. 1638. 1639. 1640. 1641. 1642. 1643. 1644. 1645. 1646. 1647. 1648. 1649. 1650. 1651. 1652. 1653. 1654. 1655. 1656. 1657. 1658. 1659. 1660. 1661. 1662. 1663. 1664. 1665. 1666. 1667. 1668. 1669. 1670. 1671. 1672. 1673. 1674. 1675. 1676. 1677. 1678. 1679. 1680. 1681. 1682. 1683. 1684. 1685. 1686. 1687. 1688. 1689. 1690. 1691. 1692. 1693. 1694. 1695. 1696. 1697. 1698. 1699. 1700. 1701. 1702. 1703. 1704. 1705. 1706. 1707. 1708. 1709. 1710. 1711. 1712. 1713. 1714. 1715. 1716. 1717. 1718. 1719. 1720. 1721. 1722. 1723. 1724. 1725. 1726. 1727. 1728. 1729. 1730. 1731. 1732. 1733. 1734. 1735. 1736. 1737. 1738. 1739. 1740. 1741. 1742. 1743. 1744. 1745. 1746. 1747. 1748. 1749. 1750. 1751. 1752. 1753. 1754. 1755. 1756. 1757. 1758. 1759. 1760. 1761. 1762. 1763. 1764. 1765. 1766. 1767. 1768. 1769. 1770. 1771. 1772. 1773. 1774. 1775. 1776. 1777. 1778. 1779. 1780. 1781. 1782. 1783. 1784. 1785. 1786. 1787. 1788. 1789. 1790. 1791. 1792. 1793. 1794. 1795. 1796. 1797. 1798. 1799. 1800. 1801. 1802. 1803. 1804. 1805. 1806. 1807. 1808. 1809. 1810. 1811. 1812. 1813. 1814. 1815. 1816. 1817. 1818. 1819. 1820. 1821. 1822. 1823. 1824. 1825. 1826. 1827. 1828. 1829. 1830. 1831. 1832. 1833. 1834. 1835. 1836. 1837. 1838. 1839. 1840. 1841. 1842. 1843. 1844. 1845. 1846. 1847. 1848. 1849. 1850. 1851. 1852. 1853. 1854. 1855. 1856. 1857. 1858. 1859. 1860. 1861. 1862. 1863. 1864. 1865. 1866. 1867. 1868. 1869. 1870. 1871. 1872. 1873. 1874. 1875. 1876. 1877. 1878. 1879. 1880. 1881. 1882. 1883. 1884. 1885. 1886. 1887. 1888. 1889. 1890. 1891. 1892. 1893. 1894. 1895. 1896. 1897. 1898. 1899. 1900. 1901. 1902. 1903. 1904. 1905. 1906. 1907. 1908. 1909. 1910. 1911. 1912. 1913. 1914. 1915. 1916. 1917. 1918. 1919. 1920. 1921. 1922. 1923. 1924. 1925. 1926. 1927. 1928. 1929. 1930. 1931. 1932. 1933. 1934. 1935. 1936. 1937. 1938. 1939. 1940. 1941. 1942. 1943. 1944. 1945. 1946. 1947. 1948. 1949. 1950. 1951. 1952. 1953. 1954. 1955. 1956. 1957. 1958. 1959. 1960. 1961. 1962. 1963. 1964. 1965. 1966. 1967. 1968. 1969. 1970. 1971. 1972. 1973. 1974. 1975. 1976. 1977. 1978. 1979. 1980. 1981. 1982. 1983. 1984. 1985. 1986. 1987. 1988. 1989. 1990. 1991. 1992. 1993. 1994. 1995. 1996. 1997. 1998. 1999. 2000. 2001. 2002. 2003. 2004. 2005. 2006. 2007. 2008. 2009. 2010. 2011. 2012. 2013. 2014. 2015. 2016. 2017. 2018. 2019. 2020. 2021. 2022. 2023. 2024. 2025. 2026. 2027. 2028. 2029. 2030. 2031. 2032. 2033. 2034. 2035. 2036. 2037. 2038. 2039. 2040. 2041. 2042. 2043. 2044. 2045. 2046. 2047. 2048. 2049. 2050. 2051. 2052. 2053. 2054. 2055. 2056. 2057. 2058. 2059. 2060. 2061. 2062. 2063. 2064. 2065. 2066. 2067. 2068. 2069. 2070. 2071. 2072. 2073. 2074. 2075. 2076. 2077. 2078. 2079. 2080. 2081. 2082. 2083. 2084. 2085. 2086. 2087. 2088. 2089. 2090. 2091. 2092. 2093. 2094. 2095. 2096. 2097. 2098. 2099. 2100. 2101. 2102. 2103. 2104. 2105. 2106. 2107. 2108. 2109. 2110. 2111. 2112. 2113. 2114. 2115. 2116. 2117. 2118. 2119. 2120. 2121. 2122. 2123. 2124. 2125. 2126. 2127. 2128. 2129. 2130. 2131. 2132. 2133. 2134. 2135. 2136. 2137. 2138. 2139. 2140. 2141. 2142. 2143. 2144. 2145. 2146. 2 standing the protest of Dr. Spry, took forcible possession of one of the pews, by locking it up with a padlock.

Dr. LUSHINGTON.—The sole question for the Court to decide is whether the libel, taking the facts stated therein to be true, is or is not an admissible plea. Before I speak more particularly of the contents of the first article (pleading the right of the incumbent by the common law), I will state my notions of the rights of a rector or vicar in an ancient parish church, this being a new church built by Act of Parliament, and substituted in lieu of the ancient parish church. I apprehend the rector would be entitled, according to the common law of the land, to the chief seat in the chancel, whether he be endowed rector or spiritual rector only, unless some other person be in a condition to prescribe for it for himself from time immemorial; and that the Ecclesiastical Court, in the exercise of its ordinary authority, would allot to him such right, and protect him against the disturbance of it. Whether, under any circumstances, the rector or any one else can properly be displaced from a pew, except by the churchwardens, and how far churchwardens could interfere, of their own authority, with a possessory right, are questions upon which I do not mean to enter. It was the opinion of Lord Stowell that they could not do so, without reference to the ordinary; perhaps later cases, and the necessity of the times, may have extended that power, and it may be competent for them to act without any authority of the ordinary previously conferred.

Now, it is contended on behalf of Dr. Spry, that, from the facts stated in the libel, he has a possessory title; and I certainly am of that opinion. But the right is pleaded in an inconvenient manner; and I am not prepared to assent to the statement of the law, as laid down in the first article, without some qualification. The decision of this point may not be of any great importance with regard to the present case, but it is of importance that the Court should not admit this as an averment of law capable of being substantiated. The term "Minister incumbent" may be of doubtful interpretation; but, if it be intended to include perpetual curates, I should have great difficulty in assenting to the proposition that the family of a perpetual curate has a common law right to sittings in the church. A perpetual curate, as in the case of The Duke of Portland v. Bingham (1 Hag. 157.) may be a mere stipendiary curate, the impropriation being in strange hands; for the monasteries had cure of souls, and performed the duties of the church by stipendiary curates, and, since the suppression of the monasteries, the impropriator might have the complete incumbency. It was not till 1756 that Lord Hardwicke interfered to protect the rights of curates, but these were not common law rights so that if it be meant to say that a curate is to be protected in his title to sittings for his family by common law rights, as existing from the time of Richard II., I should have great difficulty in assenting to such doctrine.

Addams, D.—The common law of the church—not from time immemorial—the right to pews did not commence till the reformation.

The COURT.—If it be the common law of the church, I have another view of the case. Supposing he had such right, how would it be enforced? By the medium of the ordinary, who would allot a sitting. Suppose a case of the alteration of a church, where the pew of the rector is taken down, he would appeal to the ordinary, who would allot a pew. But I cannot say he has a common law right to any pew at all. I think, therefore, that the first article had better be omitted. Looking to the facts as they stand in the libel, I have no doubt whatever that if this was a case of possession in an ancient parish church, Dr. Spry would have such a possessory right as it would not be competent to the vestry clerk, or any individual to molest or disturb. The question, therefore, is whether from the peculiar circumstances of the parish, the ancient law is altered, and the vestry clerk is invested with competent authority so to interfere with the possessory right? Now to be sure that a vestry clerk alone should have such authority would be an extraordinary anomaly. It is not indeed contended that a vestry clerk has any such right, but it does not appear that he acted under the orders of the vestry, and it will be time enough to give my opinion whether the vestry have such power or not when I am called upon to decide the question. It is alleged in the libel that Dr. Spry was dispossessed by the vestry clerk, and nothing appears in the libel to induce me to believe that the legislature invested him with authority to disturb possessory rights in the church. But it is evident that I shall have to decide very different questions, and it may be expedient that I state my view of what the questions are. First, to what extent the ordinary jurisdiction of this court is ousted by private Acts of Parliament. Secondly, whether the vestry have a right to let all the pews except such seats as are to be appropriated to the poor. Thirdly, if they have such right, whether they can displace with or without cause, and whether I have or have not, as the Act stands, to judge of their conduct and determination. Lastly, as Dr. Addams has argued that Dr. Heslop was in possession of the pews, by what he denominates a common or ordinary right, whether in point of fact such a right exists or not. As the case stands, I have no doubt of the admissibility of the libel excluding the first article, and I shall it with a further slight alteration

 "were or were purported to be,
 as they had authority to do so"
 being to save the rights of the in-the former expression not being licit. I wish to be distinctly un-the observations as to the rights of tes are made only ex majore cau- ot mean to give any opinion as to its may be if the question arose.(a)

THE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX.

OCKDALE V. HANSARD.

Libel.

(Continued from page 50.)

of Parliamentary privilege to over-nd erect a tyranny on its ruins, seems story to have become so apparent, was soon provided to impede its s; and we accordingly find that s pretensions were advanced, and ed, on the part of the two Houses, re afterwards obliged to abandon.
 with the power of issuing what eased, and taking whatever steps their collective capacity, the one period held, and were suffered to hold, that their members were extraordinary immunities as private they were not only free from all bts, but their servants were set the law, and every Member's the privilege of sanctuary, which ed to royal palaces. So there are ances of the Commons deciding property between their members and punishing the latter, without any disputing the title of Members; a despotic, absurd, and barbarous, ably be matched in the history of mbly in the civilized world. But her extravagant claims, although within the last seventy or eighty ince been silently abandoned, and,
 freedom from arrest for debt, dividual members, no privilege is id the walls of Parliament, except of the two Houses themselves in e capacity. Even the extravagant Houses have begun to be restrained er bounds than they acknowledged ent times; but of late years, espehe controversy arising out of Sir lett's publication in 1810, a dis-seemed to be once more spreading high-privilege doctrines; and some men have professed themselves their champions, as if they thus furthered the cause of popula rights. The accession of power gained by the democratic part of the constitution by the late Reform, has increased this inclination to stickle for extreme rights, and in 1831, a new and unheard of claim was asserted by some Members of the Lower House to be free from the jurisdiction of courts of justice in offences of a very grave nature, namely, those contempts which obstruct the whole course of justice. Mr. Long Wellesley, in 1831, raised a privilege question with the Court of Chancery: he had been ordered by a decree of that Court, affirmed afterwards on appeal in the House of Lords, to give up the custody of his infant children, wards of the Court; he violated the order, took away the infants from those appointed to take charge of them, and removed them beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, to France. He came into court when asked to attend, and declared that he refused to bring them back, or give them up. The Lord Chancellor immediately committed him for contempt to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms. Mr. Long Wellesley moved for his discharge: the question was rested upon his privilege as a Member of Parliament; some members of the House took it up, a committee was appointed, precedents were searched for, and a report was made that there was no such privilege.

 This attempt of Mr. Wellesley, and of those who supported him in the House of Commons, thus signally failed. But the circumstances of its meeting with any support was sufficiently striking, and seemed to show that there existed a disposition to revive antiquated claims of privilege, and even to carry the pretensions of of immunity from the laws of the country, on the part of the Members of Parliament, farther than they had ever, in the worst times, been pushed. Accordingly, the defeat of 1831 did not prevent a renewal of the conflict; for, in 1836, Mr. Lechmere Charlton, being a suitor in the Court of Chancery as well as a Member of the House of Commons, grossly insulted, first a Master in Chancery, and then the Lord Chancellor, both acting in their judicial capacity, and when committed to the Fleet for his offence;
 as a matter of course threw himself upon the protection of the House, whose privileges he counted to be violated in his person. The usual notification of his imprisonment had been made to the Speaker; a form always observed by way of testifying respect for the House, and accounting for the imprisoned Member's absence.
 It is, indeed, a form which would be observed were a Member committed by a magistrate for robbery: nor, it may be observed, is there a single argument ever urged in favour of privilege which would not serve as a pretence for allowing all the Members of both Houses to rob and murder with impunity on the highway." In another part his lordship says, "A resolution having been taken in 1836 to publish for sale the papers of the Commons, and in the genuine spirit of retail dealing to give 'the trade,' as it was with technical felicity of phrase termed, the benefit of a discount, the parliamentary shop-keeper was found selling libels against the character of individuals. An action was brought for published slander, and the defendant set up the authority of the House as his protection against answering for the wrong committed. The eminent judge before whom the question was raised performed his duty as faithfully and as firmly as might have been expected from him who had at the bar and in the senate made the name of Denman illustrious for uncompromising integrity and unflinching defiance to the favours of power. He who had so often scorned the assaults of authority, which was lawful in its constitution, although perverted to purposes of oppression, might well be supposed incapable of abating one jot of his resistance, when the threats proceeded from the perpetrators of a lawless usurpation. He bravely told the Commons that the law he was sworn to administer knew of no privilege to commit crimes, and he drove the party to another defence. On that defence he prevailed; but new actions being brought, the House of Commons again appointed a committee to inquire, and an elaborate report was produced and adopted by the House, a report which has ever since been the laughing-stock of all rational men for the absurdity of its conclusions, the illogical texture of its reasonings, the self-destructive inconsistency of its successive positions, and even the gross inconsistencies of its singularly unhappy and scarcely grammatical diction. It, however, asserted plainly enough one pretension, and that was the right of the House to make whatever law it chose for itself upon all subjects, and to assume, by a simple vote of its own, any right whatever. It further declared all who disputed its resolutions, or acted, judicially or otherwise, in opposition to its claims, to be guilty of breach of privilege. Nothing, certainly, could be more high, or more mighty, or more uncompromising than the tone of these resolutions. But it was soon found to be a tone of so loud a pitch, that it could not be sustained above eight-and-forty hours; for after that short interval of triumph of bluster and of brag had elapsed, the gentle and more easily maintained note of submission was sounded. The Lord Chief Justice had in the meanwhile declared in the House of Lords, that he should utterly disregard the monstrous pretensions set forth in the resolution, and when the question arose in the Commons next day, what course should be taken with the actions brought against their libel-seller it was deemed expedient to forget, suddenly and entirely, the famous resolutions of the day before yesterday, and to direct that the Attorney-General should appear and defend the actions in the Court of Queen's Bench; thus submitting the question of their privileges to the decision of that Court with which they were in open conflict, and which but two days before they had pronounced "guilty of a contempt if it dared to entertain the question." It was all very well to say that the defendants were not responsible for the acts of the House; but suppose they should lend themselves to the act of a housebreaker, it would be no answer to say, "We are not responsible, you must look to Mr. So-and-so." An officer might order his inferior officer, and in times of difficulty the inferior officer would be liable to be shot if he did not obey his superior; but even the private in a regiment could not be authorised to commit a murder or robbery, even if his superior officer told him to do it. And it would be for the jury to say that the present defendants were not to be justified in an illegal act, however high might be the power by which they were ordered. All orders, being legal, must be executed; but if the orders were illegal, the defendants became nominally responsible, although in fact those who gave the orders should be liable for them. The defendants would not do it unless they were indemnified; and the money that should pass to-morrow would be probably put into their hands before they paid it, or at any rate as soon as they produced the receipt. The fact was, that he was contending against the Treasury purse and the Commons' representative of the United Kingdom. He had a right to expect from the jury, in the words of a great statesman, "indemnity for the past and security for the future;" then, and then only, would he be able to remain in the service of those whose services he had well and faithfully performed.

(To be continued.)

ARTICLED CLERKS' EXAMINATION.

Serjeants' Inn Hall, before LITLEDALE, J. PATTESON, J. COLERIDGE, J. and Mr. BARON ALDERSON.

Dec. 17.

In the matter of the Petition of an UNSUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE at the last Examination.

Rule H. 6 W. 4. In case any person shall be dissatisfied with the refusal of the examiners to grant a certificate to a candidate, testifying his fitness and capacity to orney, he shall be at liberty to mission by petition in writing to to be delivered to the clerk of Chief Justice of the Court of h, upon which no fee or grae received, which application rd in Serjeant's Inn Hall, by three of the Judges (a).

the petition stated—

itioner, having complied with the
the government and direction of seeking admission to practise as w, on or about the 19th [18th] ber, instant, offered himself for ex-hereupon, he was examined by the
as to his proficiency in the several v and equity :

itioner, subsequently to his said received a letter from Mr. Maugham, to the Incorporated Law Society, petitioner that he had been reaminers, [or rather the examiners, swers insufficient, could not sign of fitness to be admitted :]

itioner was ignorant of the grounds on, and felt assured, that if their d confer upon him the benefit of is given by the provisions of the rs, the petitioner would be fully etent, by his answering, to prove n to practise as an attorney :

itioner, from the effects of severe reat nervous timidity during the mination, underwent such examinry unfavourable circumstances ; but ly and anxious to submit himself nation as to their lordships should itioner's diligence and good con-appreciated by his late master, as n to procure for the petitioner a sional employment upon the peining his certificate from the ex-h appointment he will be deprived nt of his certificate being withheld ster Term :

itioner, entertaining the greatest he Examiners, nevertheless craved himself of his privilege of appeal ships against the decision of the aminers.

ce LITTLEDALE said, the Judges opinion that the examiners had come to a correct conclusion ; but, that as the party had been unwell at the time of the examination, if the examiners from kindness to him, thought proper to examine him next term, they would recommend the Court to dispense with the term's notice. But it must be understood that this was merely from a consideration of the peculiar circumstances of the case, and should not be drawn into a precedent in favour of persons who did not sufficiently prepare themselves for the examination. The Judges wished it to be known also that they considered this application as an appeal upon the examination which had taken place, and that they would not examine the party themselves.

The applicant entreated the Judges to allow him to be examined before next term, on account of the loss he would sustain by the delay, and the injury to his health ; stating that his object was not so much to get admitted next term, as to pass his examination.

The Judges said if the examiners would out of kindness take another examination of him at any time convenient to them during the vacation, the party might be admitted the first day of term.

The secretary of the examiners suggested to their Lordships to consider whether the examiners had any power to proceed on the examination except during the last ten days of term according to the Rule of Court.

Mr. Justice PATTERSON and Mr. Baron ADDERSON were understood to say, that the examiners might proceed during the vacation, and certify their opinion to the Court ;
the Judges, however, would not press the further examination upon them, but leave it entirely to their discretion

We understand that the Examiners will hold an early meeting on the subject.

NEW POSTAGE ACT.

A TREASURY MINUTE, DEC. 26, 1839.

My Lords read the minute of the 23d of August, proposing to receive communications from the public with reference to the letter stamps named in the Act 2 and 3 Victoria, cap. 52, and offering certain rewards for the same.

The communications (more than 2,600 in number) received in consequence of this minute have for a long time occupied the attention of their Lordships. Many of them display much ingenuity. They are highly satisfactory, as evincing the interest taken by men of science and by the public in general in the measures now in progress for the reduction of postage, and they have afforded much useful information with reference to the details of the new arrangements. Upon full deliberation, however, their Lordships do not think it will be advisable to adopt any one of the specific plans proposed, without modification and combination with other arrangements.

After the best consideration my Lords can give the subject, and with the view of awarding most fairly between the parties, my Lords have decided not to give the specific sums mentioned in their minute of 23d August, but have selected four communications which are the most distinguished either for originality or for completeness, and from which my Lords have derived the greatest service, and decided to award the sum of £100. to each. The authors of these four communications are as follows, the names being arranged alphabetically, viz. :—Messrs. Bogardus and Coffin (who have acted together), Mr. Benjamin Cheverton, Mr. Henry Cole, and Mr. Charles Whiting.

My Lords next proceed to take into consideration the several points enumerated in the Minute of the 23d of August, and the suggestions connected therewith which occur in the communications already referred to.

Their Lordships, upon full consideration, have decided to require that, as far as practicable, the postage of letters shall be prepaid, and to effect such prepayment by means of stamps. Their Lordships are of opinion that the convenience of the public will be consulted, more especially at first, by issuing stamps of various kinds, in order that every one may select that description of stamp which is most suitable to his own peculiar circumstances; and with a view of affording an ample choice, their Lordships are pleased to direct that the following stamps be prepared :—

First. Stamped Covers.—The stamp being struck on pieces of paper of the size of half a sheet of 4to. letter paper.

Second. Stamped Envelopes.—The stamp being struck on pieces of paper of a lozenge form, of which the stationers and others may manufacture envelopes.

Third. Adhesive stamps, or stamps on small pieces of paper with a glutinous wash at the back, which may be attached to letters either before or after they are written; and Fourth. Stamps to be struck on paper of any description which the public may send to the Stamp Office for that purpose.

The paper for the first, second, and third kinds of stamps to be peculiar in its water-mark or some other feature, but to be supplied to government by competition.

My Lords direct that the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, and the Commissioners of Excise, should receive the official directions to take the necessary steps in conjunction with the Board, and with the Postmaster-General, for the preparation of the stamps herein enumerated.

Although the necessary experiments and investigations which have been conducted under the direction of this Board are already far advanced, my Lords fear that a considerable time will be required for completing the preparation of the dies, plates, and machinery (much of which is unavoidably of a novel construction), necessary for the manufacture of the stamps; and being desirous of affording to the public with the least possible delay the full advantage of the intended reduction in postage, their Lordships propose at once to effect such reduction.

On the use of Stamps, however, my Lords have fully decided; they will be prepared with the least possible delay, and when ready due notice will be given of their introduction.

Having, therefore, communicated with the authorities of the Post Office, my Lords are pleased to direct that on the 10th day of January next the following arrangements shall come into operation :—

The scale of weight already established for General Post letters to be extended to the London district and other local post letters.

The charge on all letters passing between one part of the United Kingdom and another, whether by the General Post or the London district or other local post, to be one penny per single rate.

Such postage to be prepaid—if not prepaid, to be charged double on delivery.

Letters between the United Kingdom and the Colonies to be charged, if conveyed by packet and not passing through France, at the rate of one shilling per single rate; and if conveyed by private ship, at the rate of 8d. per single rate, in whatever part of the United Kingdom they may be posted or delivered.

Letters between the United Kingdom and foreign countries (those passing to or from or through France excepted) to be charged as follows :—

If conveyed by packet, and posted at the port of departure, or delivered at the port of arrival

ited Kingdom, the present packet ted or delivered in any other part Kingdom, 2d. per single rate, in present packet rates, unless where shall now exist, in which case age to continue.

by private ship, 8d. per single er part of the United Kingdom
sted or delivered.

to Foreign Letters to and from ssing through France, my Lords ending such modifications as may into the treaty with that country, of the charge for packet and inland not exceed that rate which is now a letter to and from London; no
g made in cases where the charge ent treaty shall be less than such ed rate.

ng reductions do not apply to let-France between the United King-Mediterranean, Egypt, and the East will continue to be charged as at een the United Kingdom and fo-will continue to be subject to the is with regard to prepayment as at urne states to the Board her Ma-hat such measures may be taken to her Majesty's privilege of frank-rds may consider advisable for the

and in conformity with the other ch they may lay down with regard re pleased to direct, that from and of January next, the privilege of parliamentary and official, shall votes and proceedings of the Im-

nt. or of the Colonial Legislatures Majesty's colonies, if sent in the quired by law, to be charged as er passing from one part of the om to another, or between the om and the colonies, provided they rough France, or to the East In-
outh,—

eding 2 oz. in weight, 1 penny.
g 2 oz., and not exceeding 4 oz.,
e.

n additional penny for every addi-es, without limitation as to weight;
be the same whether prepaid or ships, however, consider it will be ne Postmaster-General should be cases where it may appear neces-

, to postpone the despatch of parliamentary proceedings for twenty four hours—their Lordships being aware that the greatest inconvenience frequently has arisen from the very large influx of heavy parliamentary papers. And their Lordships are therefore pleased to call the Postmaster General's attention to this point with a view of his making such regulations as may be required.

The privileges now attached to addresses to her Majesty—to parliamentary petitions—to newspapers, and to the letters of soldiers and sailors engaged in service abroad, to remain unaltered, except that a soldier's or sailor's single letter will be interpreted to mean a letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight.

If any privileged letter or other article become liable to the full letter rates of postage, such rates to be charged according to the scale of rates herein established for letters. The treble duty to which newspapers in certain cases become liable to be calculated according to the same scale.

All privileges except those already enumerated to cease.

The following are exceptions to the regulation which restricts the amount of weight to 16 oz.

1. Parliamentary proceedings as already named.
2. Addressesto her Majesty, and parliamentary petitions.
3. Letters and packets received from or addressed to places beyond the limits of the United Kingdom.

4. Letters and packets, addressed to or despatched by the Government Departments, or such officer as may now have the privilege of franking by virtue of his office. And

5. Deeds, if transmitted under such regulations as the Postmaster-General may consider necessary to prevent abuse of the privilege.

In consideration of the reduction now made in the postage of ship letters, and the probable increase of such letters, the master's gratuities will be reduced to 2s. 6d. per 100 for all letters, newspapers, and other packets conveyed between one part of the United Kingdom and another.
At the same time gratuities of one penny per letter or packet, and one halfpenny per newspaper, will be given to the masters of ships trading to the East Indies, on the same conditions as those now applying to other ship letters and papers.

With reference to the arrangements herein made, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man are to be considered as parts of the United Kingdom, and the Ionian Isles and Honduras as British colonies.

My Lords are of opinion that the whole of these arrangements should apply to all letters and packets posted within the United Kingdom, or

Instruct the Postmaster-General to make arrangements for carrying to the general revenue the fees for late letters, at the same time submitting for the consideration of this Board any cases for compensation which he may consider necessary.

A. G.—J. A. M.—R.—J. M.—all under consideration.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing
29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Co Garden, in the County of Middlesex ; and Publ
by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-V in the City of London.—Saturday, December 28,

The Legal Guide.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1840.

[No. 10.]

US OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

*the Abolition of Fines and Reco-
for the Substitution of more les of Assurance.*

(continued from p. 131.)

CTOR OF A SETTLEMENT.

ECTOR of a SETTLEMENT is dehe statute—First, who shall be
; Secondly, how he shall give

Thirdly, it provides for the rotector being under disability;
nables the settlor to appoint a d, Fifthly, the jurisdiction of Equity is excluded from all he acts of the protector done in this statute.

, 30—quoted in our last—makes hat in all entails created on or st December, 1833, intended rred, it should be ascertained immediate freehold of the land
ke manner as was heretofore ascertain in whom the legal ested, so as to make a good recipe for suffering a common inst whom the writ was brought dant, as the actual tenant of the that if the tenant in tail had the immediate freehold, it was he should procure the concurrence of the person who had it, in order, by a recovery, to bar an entail.

We noticed in our last the despotic character with which the protector of a settlement, tenant for life, is invested; and we observe that Sir Edward Sugden, in the last edition of his “Vendors and Purchasers,” (a) in commenting upon sec. 30, says that provision does not extend to future cases:
therefore, if tenant for life, or for years determinable on his life, with remainder to his sons in tail, with remainder or reversion to himself in fee, were to sell and convey the life interest and the remainder or reversion, he would still be the protector, and could,
at any time during the continuance of the life interest, consent to a statute-deed of disposition by the tenant in tail, which would bar the remainder or reversion; or, in other words, he might in substance re-sell the remainder or reversion to the tenant in tail, for he may make what bargain he can with the tenant in tail, and a covenant with the purchaser not to exercise his power of consenting would be simply void. This operation of the statute should not be lost sight of in practice.

This protector may nevertheless be excluded by the settlor; as we shall show as we proceed with the statute. Where there is a plurality of owners, each owner, by sec.
23, is constituted sole protector in respect of his disposable share of the estate.

(a) Vol. 2, p. 281.

Sec. 32 enacts, That it shall be lawful for any settlor entailing lands to appoint, by the settlement by which the lands shall be entailed, any number of persons in esse, not exceeding three and not being aliens, to be protector of the settlement in lieu of the person who would have been the protector if this clause had not been inserted, and either for the whole or any part of the period for which such person might have continued protector, and by means of a power to be inserted in such settlement to perpetuate, during the whole or any part of such period, the protectorship of the settlement in any one person or number of persons in esse, and not being an alien or aliens, whom the donee of the power shall think proper by deed to appoint protector of the settlement in the place of any one person or number of persons who shall die, or shall by deed relinquish his or their office of protector; and the person or persons so appointed shall, in case of there being no other person then protector of the settlement, be the protector, and shall, in case of there being any other person then protector of the settlement, be protector jointly with such other person: provided nevertheless, that by virtue or means of any such appointment, the number of the persons to compose the protector shall never exceed three: provided further nevertheless, that every deed by which a protector shall be appointed under a power in a settlement, and every deed by which a protector shall relinquish his office, shall be void unless inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery within six calendar months after the execution thereof: provided further nevertheless, that the person who but for this clause would have been sole protector of the settlement, may be one of the persons to be appointed protector under this clause, if the settlor shall think fit, and shall, unless otherwise directed by the settlor, act as sole protector, if the other persons constituting the protector shall have ceased to be so by death or relinquishment of the office by deed, and no other person shall have been appointed in the place.

Sec. 33 provides, That if any person, protector of a settlement, shall be lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, and whether he shall have been found such by inquisition or not, then the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, or the Lord Keeper, or the Lord Commissioners for the custody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, for the time being, or other the person or persons for the time being intrusted by the King's sign manual with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of persons found lunatic, idiot, and of unsound mind, shall be the protector of such settlement in lieu of the person who shall be such lunatic or idiot, or of unsound mind as aforesaid; or if any person, protector of a settlement, shall be convicted of treason or felony, or if any person, not being the owner of a prior estate under a settlement, shall be protector of such settlement, and shall be an infant, or if it shall be uncertain whether such last-mentioned person be living or dead, then the Majesty's High Court of Chancery shall be the protector of such settlement in lieu of the person who shall be an infant, or whose existence cannot be ascertained as aforesaid; or if any settlor entailing lands shall in the settlement by which the lands shall be entailed declare that the person who as owner of a prior estate under such settlement would be entitled to be protector of the settlement shall not be such protector, and shall not appoint any person to be protector in the stead, then the said Court of Chancery shall be the protector of the settlement as to the lands in which such prior estate shall be subsisting, be the protector of the settlement during the continuance of such estate; or if in any other case where the estate shall be subsisting under a Settlement prior to an estate tail under the same settlement, and such prior estate shall be sufficient to qualify the owner thereof to the settlement, and there shall by time to be no protector of the

to the lands in which the prior subsisting, the said Court of all, while there shall be no such d the prior estate shall be sub-e protector of the settlement as provides, That if at the time when actual tenant in tail of lands ement, but not entitled to the reversion in fee immediately the determination of his estate desirous of making under this tion of the lands entailed, there ector of such settlement, then such case the consent of such ll be requisite to enable such in tail to dispose of the lands e full extent to which he is authorized to dispose of the ch actual tenant in tail may, consent, make a disposition

t of the lands entailed, which d against all persons who, by estate tail which shall be vested e claimed by, or which but for act or default would have been might have been claimed by, aking the disposition at the aking the same, shall claim the provides, that where an estate tail en converted into a base fee, in long as there shall be a proteclement by which the estate tail

the consent of such protector site to enable the person who een tenant of the estate tail if not been barred to exercise, as in respect of which there shall ector, the power of disposition contained.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM X.

VOL. 3.

DAMAGE FEASANT.

Describe what it is. What kind of thing is capable of being damage feasant?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM XXVI.

VOL. 2.

SOCAGE TENURE, DESCRIBE WHAT IT IS.

Socage (socagium à soca, a plough) is a tenure by which tenants held their lands to plough the land of their lords, with their own ploughs, and do other inferior services of husbandry at their own charge, which slavish tenure was afterwards, by the mutual agreement of lord and tenant, turned into the payment of a sum of money yearly, and from thence it was called Liberum Socagium, or Free Socage: whereas, the other was termed Villanum Socagium, or Villain Socage.(1) Free socage was a tenure of freehold, by a certain rent, for all services, and to pay upon the death of the ancestor a double rent for a relief, and to be free from wardship, &c. And Socage was a tenure of so large an extent, that Littleton tells us the lands in England which were not held in knights' service, were held in socage. It seems, the lands were divided between these two tenures, and as they were of different natures, so the descent of these lands was in a different manner; for the lands held in knights' service descended to the eldest son, but those in villain socage equally among all the sons; and if there was but one messuage or tenement, the eldest son was to have it, paying the rest the value, &c. Littleton, 117.
When the tenant holdeth of the lord by certain services, for all manner of services, it is socage. If a man hold by fealty only such service, is tenure in socage. And tenure by petit serjeantry and in burgage, are but socage tenure in effect. But grand serjeantry, holden of the King and Frankalmoign, which is a spiritual service, is not in socage, Litt. 177, 118, 160.; 1 Just. 86. The tenure of Free Socage is likewise called common socage. And all tenures are adjudged and taken, to be for ever free, turned into free and common socage, Stat. 12.; Car. 2, c. 24. Having thus attempted to give a brief outline of Free Socage, I shall now proceed with Villain Socage. Villain (villanus from vilain, i. e. vilis) signifies a man of servile or base condition, a bondman or servant. Of these bondmen, or villains, there were two sorts in England, one termed a villain in gross, who was immediately bound to the person of the lord and his heirs, and the other a villain regardant to a manor, being bound to his lord as a member belonging and annexed to a manor, whereof the lord was owner. And he was properly a pure villain, of whom the lord took redemption to marry his daughter, and to make him free, and whom the lord might put out of his lands and tenements, goods, and chattels, at his will, and chastise, but not maim him; for if he maimed his villain he might have appeal of mayhem against the lord, as he could bring appeal of the death of ancestor against his lord, or appeal for a capital offence done to his wife, Bract. Lib. 1, c. 6. Some were villains by title or prescription, that is to say, that all their blood had been villains regardant to the manor of the lord time out of mind, and some were made villains by their confession in a court of record. Though the lord might make a manumission to his villain, and thereby infranchise him: and if the villain brought an action against his lord, other than an appeal of mayliem, &c. and the lord without protestation made answer to it, by this the villain was made free. Villain estate was contradistinguished to free estate by the statute 8 H. 6, c. 11.

And the villain were such as dwelt in villages, and of that servile condition that they were usually sold with the farm to which they respectively belonged, so that they were a kind of slaves, and used as such. Villenage is derived from villain, and was a base tenure of lands or tenements, whereby the tenant was bound to do all such services as the lord commanded, or were fit for a villain to perform. The division of villenage by Bracton was into Prorum villenagium & quo præstatur servitium incertum et indeterminatum et villenagium socagium, which were to carry the lord's dung into his fields, to plough his ground at certain days, sow and reap his corn, &c. and even to empty his jakes, as the inhabitants of some places were bound to do, though afterwards turned into a rent, and that villanous service excused. Every one that held in villenage was not a villain or bondman, for tenure in villenage could make no freeman villain unless it were continued time out of mind, nor could free land make a villain free, Bract. L. 2, c. 8. Copyhold tenures seem to be sprung from villenage, F. N. B. 28. And the slavery of this custom hath been long ago taken off, for we have hardly heard of any case in villenage since Crouche's case in Dyer's Rep. There are not properly any villains now, and the title and tenure of villenage are abolished by the statute of Car. 2.

S. A. W.

(1) From which have sprung the present Copyhold tenures, by copy of Court Roll at the will of the lord, and though they are in general still said to hold their estates at the will of the lord, yet it is such a will as is agreeable to the custom of the manor; the customs whereof are preserved and evidenced by the rolls of the several courts baron in which they are entered, or kept on foot by the constant immemorial usage of the several manors in which the lands lie. And as such tenants had nothing to shew for their estates but these customs and admissions, in pursuance of them entered on the rolls, or of such entries witnessed by the common law (12 E. R. 62). Evidence may come to be called tenants by reputation of the custom of a manor; Court Roll, and their tenure itself that in default of sons, the eldest daughter; and in default of daughters, the eldest sister, and in case of the death of all the descendants of the eldest daughter or sister, the descendants of the other daughters or sisters respectively, of the person last seized, should take, is proper to be left to the jury, of the existence of such a custom, as applied to a great nephew (the grandson of an elder sister), of the person last seized, although the instances in which it was proved to have been put in use, extended no farther than those of eldest daughters and eldest sisters, and the son of an eldest sister (Doe d. Foster v. Sisson, 12 E. R. 62). The existence of such custom in adjacent manors, seems to be no evidence of the custom in the particular manor (Ib). Copyholds descending by custom to all the children equally of the tenant last seized, one of the parceners may maintain ejectment on his single claim for his own share (Roe d. Raniper v. Lansdale, 10 East's Rep. 39). The customs of manors as to descent are very various. In some manors it is according to the custom of Gavelkind; in others according to that of Borough English; in others according to the rule at common law. The words of descent may also vary in the same manor, and it is not competent to a person to alter the customary mode of descent (Co. Litt. 27.; Rob. Gav. 92.; 2 Walk. Cop. 45. 4th ed.) The distinction between Custom and Prescription is to be borne in mind, the former being always local, the latter personal. The proof of a custom lies upon him who alleges it, and a series of entries in the Court Rolls is the best and most direct evidence of a custom (3), 2 Wat. Cap. 48. (4th ed.)

H. T. D.

EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM 3, VOL. III.(1)

ged by your permission to occupy the Legal Guide in answering the of this Problem. Copyholds descending to the rules of the Common Law, as there are contrary customs of manors, but such customary inheritances are not to be assets to charge the heir in fee, &c. (4 Rep. 22. Kitch.). A year of copyhold lands which by the Common Law shall be in the hands of an executor, (1 Vent. 100.) Copyholders hold their estates free being created by custom, which is not to title of dower, (4 Rep. 24). Copyhold inheritances have no collateral issue, which do not concern the descent, and make them assets, or whereof a husband is tenant in fee, &c. (Cro. Eliz. 361.). Copyhold may be an estate tail on copyhold custom, with the co-operation of the common law. 2. And as a copyhold may be created by custom, so by custom the tail may be taken off by surrender. Where by custom a descent of copyhold may be made to the rules of common law, the custom shall be construed strictly; and where there is a custom within a manor, all shall descend to the eldest sister; and if there is neither a son nor daughter, the descent shall extend to an eldest niece; but if there is such son, daughter, and sister, they shall descend according to the

p. 63.—Ed.

the statute 3 and 4 W. 4, c. 106, ss. 1, 9, the rule as to the exclusion of the half blood is applied to lands of this tenure.—Editor.

(3) All customary modes of descent, except common law customs, as Borough English and Gavelkind, must be established by proof. See Doe dem. Foster v. Sisson, 12 East. 62.—Ed.

ON THE LAW OF INJUNCTIONS.

ESSAY I.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY TO RESTRAIN PROCEEDINGS IN OTHER COURTS.

BY C. S. D. Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

(Concluded from p. 117.)

There are several instances of injunctions to restrain proceedings in Scotland and Ireland. (a) And in Lord Portarlington v. Soulby, (b) where the action was brought in Ireland, the question of jurisdiction was elaborately discussed. Lord Brougham said, that the Court had jurisdiction, not upon any ground of superintending authority residing in the Court of Chancery over courts in Ireland, but on the ground that the defendants were within the power of the Court, and "the jurisdiction," said his Lordship, "is to stay the defendant from proceeding, not to stay the foreign court from exercising its jurisdiction." His Lordship observed in the course of his judgment, "In truth nothing can be more unfounded than the doubts of jurisdiction. That is grounded, like all other jurisdiction of the Court, not upon any pretension to the exercise of judicial and administrative rights abroad, but on the circumstance of the person of the party on whom this order is made being within the power of the Court. If the Court can command him to bring home goods from abroad, or to assign chattel interests, or to convey real property locally situate abroad; if, for instance, as in Penn v. Lord Baltimore, (c) it can decree the performance of an agreement touching the boundary of a province in North America; or as in the case of Toller v. Carteret, (d) can foreclose a mortgage in the Isle of Sark, one of the Channel islands, in precisely the like manner it can restrain the party within the limits of its jurisdiction, from doing any thing abroad, whether the thing forbidden be a conveyance or other act in pais, or the institution or prosecution of an action in a foreign court." (e) Upon the same principle the Courts of Equity have, under circumstances, restrained parties within their jurisdiction from proceeding in other foreign courts. In a very late case by Lord LANGDALE, M. R. (f) the defendants in equity had instituted proceedings in the Court of Demerara, involving, in the opinion of the Court, questions regarding the law of Holland, and also the law of England, and further questions of account which could only be taken in this country. Under these circumstances his Lordship restrained the defendants from prosecuting proceedings in Demerara, putting, however, the plaintiffs on terms to submit to and carry into effect any order which the Court might think fit to make in respect to the proceedings in Demerara.

In Jackson v. Leaf, (g) a doubt was expressed by the Court, whether the Court of Chancery will enjoin a party from proceeding in another court of equity. In that case several legatees had instituted a suit in the Exchequer for the administration of the testator's estate, and pending that suit, some of the residuary legatees filed their bill in Chancery and obtained a decree. On motion made by the executor, the defendants in Chancery, to restrain the other legatees from proceeding with the suit in the Exchequer. An order was made by consent of the plaintiff in the Exchequer that the p

(a) Wharton v. May, 5 Ves. 71; Beauchamp v. Marquis Huntley, Jac. 546; Harrison v. Gurnen, 2 Jac. & W. 563; Campbell v. Houlditch, cited by the Court in Lord Portarlington v. Soulby, 3 My. & K. 108.

(b) 3 My. & K. 103.

(c) 1 Ves. sen. 444.

(d) 2 Vern. 404.

(e) See Lord Portarlington v. Soulby, p. 108.

(f) Bunbury v. Bunbury, 1 Beavan, T. 18, vol. 2, p. 387.

(g) 1 Jac. & W. 229, per Lord Eldon, p. 232, see the note of the learned reporter.

the Exchequer should be stayed, the plaintiff in the Exchequer should be restrained from commencing any other action in any manner, touching the legacies or claims of the testator. They were to go in under the decree in Chancery, and be paid their costs of the Exchequer suit up to the time of their having notice of the decree in Chancery, and their costs of the motion for a decree. It is, however, settled that the Court will not exercise jurisdiction to restrain a plaintiff from bringing a bill in Chancery and afterwards filing a bill, and the executor or administrator second directly, and a decree is made in it is competent for the executor or administrator to restrain the first from proceeding when a creditor is thus restrained. The course is to pay him the costs incurred prior to his having notice of the decree. (h) The point doubted in Lif arose, and was determined in Earl of Ormonde. (i) In that case, suits in England for the enforcement of the trusts of the will of the testator had states in England and Ireland, and a decree had been made in those courts, and the plaintiff was restrained from carrying on a suit in England, and other creditors in Ireland, and the Court in the English suits, and allowed out of the estates in the English suits, up to the time when he had notice of the decree; but he was ordered to pay the costs of the application for the injunction; and he was aware of the decree, and having come in and proved under it, he was ordered to have put the plaintiff in the English suits, to the expense of making the application. In Harrison v. Gurney, the case was the same in nearly every respect, as the above case, and a similar order was made generally, where a suit has been instituted in equity, involving inquiries into claims against the estate of a party to the suit, and such claims have been put in course of investigation, the Court will not allow an action to be brought upon them, but will consider them as properly within its jurisdiction; thus, in a creditor's suit, the usual decree having been made, and no claim of any debt or damages brought in, the Master made his report. The cause was heard on further directions, and the executors paid in their balances. Afterwards the lessor of the testator brought an action against the executors for breaches of covenant. The Court granted an injunction to restrain the plaintiff at law from going on with his action, saying, "It might be ascertained by the Master as well as it could by a jury, when any breach of covenant had been committed, and what was the amount of the damages." (l)

A party, against whom a decree had been made, may be restrained by special injunction from bringing an action, for it is an infringement of the rules of the Court to bring an action while the Court is working out a decree, and where a proceeding is before the Court, and the Court has full power to do justice, a party ought not to resort to any other tribunal. (m) If there be delay in the Master's office in working out a decree, the party complaining should apply to the Court for leave to bring an action, and the Court may under circumstances, direct such action to be brought. (n)

Although a solicitor may undoubtedly originally bring an action to recover his costs for business done in a suit in equity, yet if he refers it to the Master under an order of this Court to tax his costs, he thereby admits

Earl of Ormonde, Jac. & W. 229, and Paxton v. Leach, 5 Ves. 520. and W. 544

(h) 2 Jac. & W. 563.

(i) Sutton v. Mashileo, 2 Sim. 513.

(m) Frank v. Hasnett, 2 M. & Re. 618.

(n) Ibid.

the jurisdiction of this Court to enforce payment of the taxed bill by process of contempt, and the Court will not allow him after the bill has been taxed to proceed in his action.<sup>(o)</sup>

Under this division of the subject, fall to be considered, the cases in which the Court will restrain proceedings in any other Court against the acts of its officers; that a power should be vested in any Court to deny an inquiry into a wrong committed under its ordination, or by its officers, by any tribunal but itself, may appear to many an anomaly in the organization of justice in a free state. But however this may be, it is well settled upon authority that, where the process of the Court of Chancery has been either issued irregularly, or being regularly issued, has been irregularly executed, the Court has jurisdiction to restrain the party who has been taken under such process from bringing an action at law against the person executing it, and to draw to itself the conclusion of the case, and will refer it to the Master to consider what will be a reasonable satisfaction to the party suffering.<sup>(p)</sup>

In Aston v. Heron, the principle on which the Court of Chancery proceeds, in respect of this branch of its jurisdiction, was elaborately discussed by Lord Chancellor Brougham. His Lordship admitted, on the authority of Baily v. Devereux, and Frowd v. Lawrence, and May v. Hook, that the Court has undoubted jurisdiction to exclude (o) Walton v. Johnson, 2 Sim. 456.

(p) Frowd v. Lawrence, 1 Jac. & W. 665.; Bailey v. Devereux, 1 Vern. 269, and 1 Jac. & W. 660.; May v. Hook, 1 Dic. 629, and 1 Jac. & W. 663.; Frowd v. Lawrence, was a case of an attachment irregularly issued, which had been set aside with costs, and afterwards the defendant commenced an action against the plaintiff and the Sheriff for false imprisonment; and another against the plaintiff for maliciously suing out the attachment. Lord Eldon, on the authority of the two preceding cases, granted an injunction, restraining the proceedings at law, and observed, that "though the jurisdiction was very strong, he was not at liberty to give it up."

all other jurisdiction in every thing relating to its process, not only preventing any Court from judging whether or not its orders were regular, but from examining into the regularity of their execution, and not only preventing such examination, but shutting out redress at any hands but its own, where a wrongful act is admitted to have been done under colour of obeying its commands. But his Lordship laid down the following distinction, that where the title of the officer of the Court is questioned, the Court has no choice, and cannot give up the jurisdiction. But where the process has been irregularly used, there it is matter of discretion with the Court whether it will decree to itself the examination of the matter, or leave it to other tribunals, and is not bound to exclude concurrent jurisdiction. And he said the Court would require a case to be made against the officer of the Court, to induce it to leave the matter to be examined elsewhere. On these principles the order in Aston v. Heron,<sup>(q)</sup> was grounded. The case was—A receiver had been appointed by the order of the Court, and levied a distre upon a tenant of the estate of which he was a receiver. The tenant brought an action of trespass against the receiver and bailiff, and on a bill to restrain these proceedings, Sir L. Shadwell, V. C. granted an injunction, and afterwards refused to dissolve it. A motion was then made before Lord Brougham to discharge the order of the V. C. refusing to dissolve the injunction. It did not appear by the affidavit what acts of the receiver were irregular, but they consisted merely of a vague and general declaration that he had put in the distress irregularly. On this state of circumstances Lord Brougham held that the Court should exercise its jurisdiction, and he accordingly refused to dissolve the injunction with costs.

C. S. D.

(q) 2 My. & K. 390.

Law Reports.

S' COURT.—Dec. 16.

ADDIS v. CAMPBELL.

Amending Bill after Replication—Affidavits not positive, or pledged whether allowed.—Whether defendant file an affidavit to oppose a bill, pledged to belief.

The bill was by the heir at law, of the suit was to set aside a deed of the year 1818, by the father of the father of one of the defendants. It alleged that the transaction was against the plaintiff's father, and the father of the defendant Crook real and personal estate claimed to thereout. The bill was filed in four years after the plaintiff had attained majority. The answer of the executor of the father, filed in August, 1838, he died seized of some real and personal estate, but denied knowledge of its value, and that the real estate was encumbered with mortgages. The bill was amended in January. The cause was in a state to be set on before the long vacation of the year 1839, an application was made to the Master for leave to withdraw replication and file fresh amendments. The application was heard on an affidavit by the plaintiff and his counsel stating that they had in July, 1838, and been informed for the first time that the father of the defendant Crook had, before his death, made a voluntary conveyance and assignment of all his real and personal estate to his brother. But the affidavit was to the belief of the plaintiff whether the fact was true. On this the Master refused to allow the amendments; and the present application was made in the nature of an appeal from the Master's order. A further affidavit was now produced, which had been produced in the Master's office, in which the plaintiff swore to the belief of the plaintiff of the new facts on which his bill was founded.

Mr. Pemberton and Mr. Piggott for the plaintiff supported an order for the amendment of the bill, and that if Crook the father had in his lifetime made a voluntary conveyance of his estate to his brother at his death, there would be assets to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff, and that there was not any explicit averment in the answer produced in the Master's office, of the plaintiff, yet there was enough in the answer to show the truth of the fact, and the plaintiff was entitled to make amendments, the very object of which was to interrogate the defendant Crook as to that fact. At any rate the plaintiff in the affidavit now produced swore distinctly to his belief.

Mr. Roupell for the defendants said, that there was not any evidence at all before the Master that the plaintiff believed the truth of the new facts which he sought to introduce by way of amendment. That the cause had been ripe for hearing before the long vacation, and the plaintiff ought not now to be allowed to retard the hearing, when possibly he was perfectly aware that the facts alleged were wholly untrue. For he merely swore that he had heard and been informed, and that allegation was perfectly consistent with the supposition that he had no belief whatever. As to the affidavit now produced, he contended that his client ought to be allowed to file an affidavit in reply.

Mr. Pemberton in reply as to the point of now delaying the cause, said, the cause had been delayed so long by the tardiness of the defendants in answering, that the plaintiff could do nothing till October, 1839, and referred to the various dates to shew that the plaintiff had amended and taken all other steps as rapidly as he could.

Lord LANGDALE, M. R. said he thought he must make the order. The demand was made against the defendant alleging fraud, and it was important to make out assets when compensation to the plaintiff depended on that. Assets were denied by the answer, but it was alleged by the bill that there were real assets, which would be available if it could be proved that there had been a voluntary conveyance by Crook the father to the defendant shortly before his death. Now that fact it was proposed to introduce by amendment. The plaintiff ought not, undoubtedly, to be permitted to do that unless he pledged his belief; and if the case had been before the Court in the state in which it was before the Master, the Court must have refused the application. But the plaintiff had, at a late period it was true, sworn to his belief, although he did not do so before the Master. The defendant could not be allowed to file an affidavit in opposition to the plaintiff's last affidavit, because although the defendant might displace by affidavit the truth of the fact sworn to, he could not by any affidavit displace the truth of the plaintiff's averment that he believed the fact.

Order made, the plaintiff paying the costs.

Dec. 23.

ATTWOOD v. BANKS AND OTHERS.

Act for abolishing Arrest for Debt, sec. 8.—Affidavits in Bankruptcy—Jurisdiction of the Court.

Mr. Pemberton moved for an injunction to restrain the defendants from taking any proceedings to obtain a fiat of bankruptcy against the plaintiff, and also upon a demurrer to the bill for want of equity, and to the jurisdiction of the court. The plaintiff, in 1836, carried on the business of a manufacturer of glass, soap, and alkali, and in the same year he took in Mr. E. Banks as his partner in the glass and alkali works, and Mr. C. Augustus Tulk as a partner in the soap works alone; and in August, 1836, the plaintiff took into partnership with him, in the glass works only, Mr. Anthony Hart Hart, another defendant, who is the brother-in-law of Mr. Tulk. Accordingly, draft articles of partnership were prepared, under which the plaintiff and Messrs. Banks, Tulk, and Hart, were to bring in £12,000. each as capital, and the new firm was to discharge the whole of the debts and liabilities of the business which had been previously carried on, and were to become jointly entitled to the whole of the profits of the business as well as to the stock in trade, including the manufactories. During the progress of the business, the partners kept accounts with the firm of Sir Matthew White Ridley and Co., to whom they became indebted for accommodations and advances in money to the amount of £33,640., for securing the payment of which the plaintiff deposited policies of assurance and various title deeds and other assurances and securities of great value. In consequence of some differences, the firm of Sir M. W. Ridley and Co., on the 26th of April, 1839, made an affidavit of debt, and gave a notice under the provisions of the late Act for the Abolition of Arrest, requiring payment of what was due to them. Under this it was arranged that the plaintiff should retire from the business concerns, and leave them to Messrs. Banks, Tulk, and Hart; and, accordingly, an agreement was made, dated the 27th of April last, which declared that the partnership was dissolved from that day, and it was agreed that the partnership property should be transferred by the plaintiff, and that the accounts as against him should be considered as settled, and that the plaintiff should be indemnified from all the partnership debts, and that mutual releases should be given. In making this arrangement the partners had no power to bind the firm of Sir M. W. Ridley and Co.; but, upon being applied to, they signed a memorandum, whereby they agreed to confirm the within written agreement, so far as the Northumberland and Durham District Bank was concerned, which was, in effect, accepting the security of the continuing partners, and discharging the plaintiff. For carrying this into effect proper deeds were to be made. The bankers, consequently, took no proceedings under the notice they had given for payment of what was due to them. But, while attempting to carry the agreement into execution, question arose between the plaintiff and his late partner who refused to acknowledge, as a partnership debt, a sum of £2000., which was due to Mr. Hadley, and which was secured by a note of the plaintiff and his brother, and had been adopted by the partnership; interest had also been paid on this debt. There was also another sum of £800. due to Mr. Ware; this, the plaintiff insisted, was a debt due from the soap business and was also adopted by the firm, and entered such in the books. The continuing partner, however, denied these statements, and denied that they formed any portions of the debts of the partnership, and refused to pay them. Dispute also arose as to what was and what was not partnership property. The plaintiff had taken in his own name the lease of some property near Gatehead. This the continuing partners claimed. In this state of things the plaintiff filed his bill on the 22nd of September last for a specific performance of the agreement, but the defendants in order to determine the question thought better to make the plaintiff a bankrupt, and the defendants, Sir M. W. Ridley and Co., at the instigation of Messrs. Banks, Tulk, and Hart, took steps to make him a bankrupt; and Mr. Boyd, one of the firm, made an affidavit, and gave a notice of payment of their demand under the Act for the Abolition of Arrest, which if not complied with in 21 days, became an act of bankruptcy. The plaintiff immediately filed a supplemental bill stating these facts, and asked that any further proceedings might be stayed. This, it was insisted, must be granted, as the firm of Sir M. W. Ridley and Co. had agreed to release the plaintiff, and also on the ground that the commissioner must grant the fiat on the mere legal force of the statute being complied with, and without being able to inquire into the merits.

Lord LANGDALE said, that this was an application of the first impression which arose out of the statute which had been passed for the abolition of imprisonment for debt in certain cases. It appeared that in April, 1839, the plaintiff was engaged in business at Newcastle as a glass and alkali manufacturer with Messrs. Tulk and Banks. The partners became largely indebted to Sir Matthew White Ridley and Co. to the amount of £33,640., and in this state of things the partners did not agree, and Messrs. Tulk and Banks became desirous of getting rid of the plaintiff, and to effect this proceedings under the new law were suggested, by which all the parties might be made bankrupts. This was a rapid mode of proceeding, and accordingly affidavits were made and notice was given. In consequence of this the plaintiff was obliged to retire, and on the 27th of April he gave up the whole of the joint property to the other partners, in consideration upon themselves the whole of the which had been incurred by the parties was not considered a sufficient and could not be available against them, and upon being applied to, Sir John Ridley, Biggs, Boyd, and Co., agreed, stating that "We do not confirm the within written agreement of the Durham Branch Bank of this is concerned." The plaintiff acquiesced the whole of the partnership the continuing partners and no disputes had arisen, there would be an end of the question; but respecting the property, and also liabilities, and in consequence of these, did not proceed to carry the agreement among themselves. In this was the plaintiff, in September last, praying for a specific performance of it, and by his bill offering on his part that was necessary for that purpose, that the defendants might exonerate themselves from liabilities. During these discussions W. Ridley and Co. thought that it as if they had not confirmed the agreement and had not agreed to accept the liabilities of the continuing partners, and they re-commenced proceedings which they had commenced in April; and in November last one of the partners of the firm of Sir M. W. Ridley & Co. made a fresh affidavit, and gave evidence for the abolition of arrest in bankruptcy with a view to make the plaintiff a creditor of the footing of the debt which was due by the agreement. It appeared, however, there was some error in the proceedings, and fresh renewed proceedings were taken in November. The plaintiff filed a bill stating these facts, and asked that he might be restrained from taking any further proceedings. His Lordship did not think an injunction could be sustained on any ground, unless it were on that of jurisdiction. The statements showed an unjust attack on the debt in violation of the agreement. Even if a new law passed, it could hardly be that attempts would not be made to carry out the intentions in a manner which must give satisfaction of the first impression. There was, no doubt that this Court had the power to prevent an unconscionable mode of proceeding. Where the plaintiff had been obliged to give up the joint property, and to lose the benefit of the means of payment, was it not for the defendants to proceed, when in such an unprotected state? It does not concur in the argument that this Court had not any jurisdiction, because the Bankruptcy Court had jurisdiction. That Court had no power to interfere in the present case; it could only give such security as might be recovered for damages in an action at law. It was said, if the parties were allowed to go on, and proceed so far as to obtain a fiat, then the Bankruptcy Court would be capable of considering whether there was a good petitioner's debt. But was that a reason why the defendants were to be allowed to proceed so far as to sue out the fiat? He concurred in the statement that there never was such a state of things before; but the only question was, whether the Court, having regard to the agreement and the debt, would prevent the defendants from suing out the fiat? Of this he had no doubt; but the only difficulty was the framing the order. He thought, however, it must be to restrain the defendants from taking any steps whereby, or in consequence, the plaintiff might be deemed, under the provisions of the Act for the abolition of arrest, &c. to have committed an act of bankruptcy, by not paying, compounding for, or securing the debt, which was due to the defendants in April last. If, however, they were kept out of their debt by collusion, they would be entitled to relief.

NEW POSTAGE ORDERS.

London Gazette Supplement, Friday, Dec. 27, published Saturday, Dec. 28, 1830.

This Supplement presents to the public a Treasury warrant, signed by Lord Melbourne, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Mr. Wyse, for regulating the rates of postage to be charged on and after the 10th of January inst. With the exception of being wholly silent on the subject of the rewards awarded to the projectors or inventors of improvements or alterations in our Post-office system, and also with regard to the use (formerly suggested) of stamps, the warrant follows in perfect strictness the terms of the original Treasury minute, known some time since (a). It appears also that the Lords of the Treasury adhere to the impost of an additional charge for postage upon all letters directed to, or coming from, parts beyond the seas, in their transmission between any part or parts of the United Kingdom. So much for the "uniformity" of the system.

(a) See ante, vol. 2, p. 319.

GENTLEMEN APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED SOLICITORS OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY, AT THE ROLLS' HOUSE, CHANCERY LANE.
AFTER HILARY TERM, 1840.

| Names and Residence.                                                                              | To whom Articled.                            |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------|
| Henry Cook, Kingston-upon-Hull.                                                                          | Thomas Thompson, Kingston-upon-Hull.                |
| Augustus Manning, the younger, 8, Hertford Street, May Fair; and Chalk Hill House, Kingsbury, Middlesex. | Jonathan Norman Dalston, Hertford Street, May Fair. |

The following Extracts from the ORDERS of the MASTER of the ROLLS, relating to the Admission of Solicitors to practise in the Court of Chancery may at this time be of some service.

Order, 27 July, 1836.

That every person who has not previously been admitted an attorney of the Common Law Courts shall, before he be admitted to take the oath required to be taken by persons applying to be admitted as solicitors as aforesaid, undergo an examination touching his fitness and capacity to act as a solicitor of the said Court of Chancery; and that four of the sworn clerks of the Court of Chancery, and twelve solicitors of the same Court, to be appointed by the Master of the Rolls, on the twenty-eighth day of July in this present year, and on the first day of Easter Term in every succeeding year, shall be examiners for the purpose of examining and inquiring touching the fitness and capacity of every such applicant for admission as a solicitor; and that any five of the said examiners (one whereof to be one of such sworn clerks) shall be competent to conduct the examination of such applicant; and that one of the Masters in ordinary of the said Court of Chancery shall be present and preside at the said examination, and shall, or shall not, take part in the said examination, as he shall in his discretion think fit; and that if the said examiners, or the major part of them, shall be satisfied of the fitness and capacity of the applicant to act as a solicitor, then the said examiners, or the major part of the said examiners, shall give him a certificate, under their hands, testifying such fitness and capacity; and the said Master shall sign the said certificate, in testimony of his having been present and presided at the said examination; and such certificate shall be in force until the end of the term next following the date thereof, and no longer, unless the time shall be specially extended by order of the Master of the Rolls.

That the examiners so to be appointed shall conduct the said examination under regulations to be first submitted to, and approved by, the Master of the Rolls.

Order, 28th July, 1836.

That every person applying to be admitted solicitor of the High Court of Chancery, pursuant to the said orders, shall, within the first seven days of the term in or as of which he is desirous of being admitted, leave, or cause to be left, with the secretary of the Incorporated Law Society at the hall of the said society in Chancery Lane for the inspection and consideration of the examiners, his articles of clerkship duly stamped and also any assignment which may have been made thereof, together with answers in writing to the several questions hereunto annexed, signed by the applicant.

That every person applying for admission shall also, if required, sign and leave, or cause to be left, with the secretary of the said society, for the inspection and consideration of the examiners answers in writing to such other written or printed questions as shall be proposed by the said examiners touching his said services and conduct. And moreover, that every person applying for admission shall, if required, procure the attorney or attorneys, solicitor or solicitors, with whom he shall have served his clerkship, as aforesaid, to answer, either personally or in writing, to the questions touching the services or conduct of the applicant, unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the said examiners, or the major part of them, that he is unable to procure the said attorney or attorneys, solicitor or solicitors, to attend or answer any such questions as aforesaid.

That every person so applying shall also attend the said Master and examiners at the Rolls House, at such time or times as shall be duly appointed for that purpose, and shall answer such questions as the said examiners shall then ask there, in the presence of one of the Masters of the High Court of Chancery, put to him, by written or printed papers, touching as well the matters hereinbefore mentioned, as also touching his fitness and capacity to act as a solicitor.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

nted to be held in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honourable THOMAS AN, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, in and after Hilary Term,

| IN TERM.   |         |                    |         |
|------------|---------|--------------------|---------|
| Middlesex. |         | London.            |         |
| . . . . .  | Jan. 13 | Thursday . . . . . | Jan. 30 |
| . . . . .  | Jan. 16 |                    |         |
| . . . . .  | Jan. 29 |                    |         |

| AFTER TERM. |        |                  |        |
|-------------|--------|------------------|--------|
| Middlesex.  |        | London.          |        |
| . . . . .   | Feb. 1 | Monday . . . . . | Feb. 3 |

will sit at eleven o'clock in Term, in Middlesex; at twelve in London; and in both ne after Term.

g causes will probably be postponed from the 13th and 16th of January to the ays; and all other causes on the lists for the 13th and 16th of January will be taken y until they are tried.

causes only will be taken on January 29th.

ded as well as undefended causes entered for the Sitting on Jan. 30th will be tried on : Plaintiffs wish it, unless there be a satisfactory affidavit of merits.

ding over with Judgment of the Term in Middlesex will be taken on the 1st of

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

nted in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honorable Sir NICOLAS CONYNG- L., Knight, Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at West- and after Hilary Term, 1840.

| IN TERM.   |         |                     |         |
|------------|---------|---------------------|---------|
| Middlesex. |         | London.             |         |
| . . . . .  | Jan. 17 | Wednesday . . . . . | Jan. 22 |
| . . . . .  | Jan. 24 | Wednesday . . . . . | Jan. 29 |

| AFTER TERM. |        |                  |        |
|-------------|--------|------------------|--------|
| Middlesex.  |        | London.          |        |
| . . . . .   | Feb. 1 | Monday . . . . . | Feb. 3 |

e Court will sit at ten o'clock in the forenoon on each of the days in Term, and at precisely on each of the days after Term.

in the list for each of the above Sitting Days in term, if not disposed of on those days, y adjournment on the days following each of such Sitting Days.

y the 3rd of February, in London, no causes will be tried, but the Court will adjourn y.

EXCHEQUER OF PLEAS.

isi Prius in Middlesex and London before the Right Honourable JAMES Lord Chief Baron of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, in and after Hilary Term,

| IN TERM.           |         |                               |                             |
|--------------------|---------|-------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Middlesex.         |         | London.                       |                             |
| . . . . .          | Jan. 16 | 1st Sittings . . . . .        | Monday . . . . . Jan. 20    |
| ent (if necessary) |         | 2nd Sittings . . . . .        | Tuesday . . . . . Jan. 28   |
| . . . . .          | Jan. 17 | By adjournment (if necessary) |                             |
| . . . . .          | Jan. 22 |                               | Wednesday . . . . . Jan. 29 |
| ent (if necessary) |         |                               |                             |
| . . . . .          | Jan. 23 |                               |                             |
| . . . . .          | Jan. 24 |                               |                             |

| AFTER TERM. |        |                  |        |
|-------------|--------|------------------|--------|
| Middlesex.  |        | London.          |        |
| . . . . .   | Feb. 1 | Monday . . . . . | Feb. 3 |

(to adjourn only)

The Court will sit during Term at ten o'clock.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

AN INTRODUCTION TO CONVEYANCING, and the History, Nature, Incidents, and Titles of LEGAL ESTATES, by OWEN FLINTOFF, Esq. A.M., Barrister-at-Law. London: John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet Street. 1840.

We have already noticed the first volume of this elementary work, (a) and we spoke of the Author's plan in approving terms; but we were quite unprepared for the present volume, which the Author has published separately, although forming part of the Second Volume of his LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

The author says in his Preface it was necessary, according to the plan laid down, to treat in the first place of Legal Estates historically, so that the reader might understand their nature and origin, before proceeding to consider such points as more immediately concern the legal student and practitioner.

The work before us is founded on the second volume of Blackstone's Commentaries, in which the author has judiciously made such alterations as the modern state of the Law has occasioned. The most valuable appendage to this work is the notes which have been collected with much industry and care, and to a student who is reading up, will be found of essential service. We take from p. 112, the following description of an estate of inheritance in fee simple, as an example, and refer our readers for the sake of comparison to 2 Blacks. Comm. p. 107.

The fee-simple or inheritance of lands and tenements is generally vested and resides in some person or other, though divers inferior estates may be carved out of it. As if one grants a lease for twenty-one years, or for one or two lives, the fee-simple remains vested in him and his heirs, and, after the determination of those years or lives, the land reverts to the grantor or his heirs, who shall hold it again in fee-simple. Moreover the mere possession of land, if unexplained, is prima facie evidence of the estate of the pos-essor being in fee-simple; (b) so that it will constitute sufficient ground for maintaining an action of trespass against an unlawful intruder. (c) Yet sometimes the fee may be in abeyance, that is (as the word signifies) in expectation, remembrance, and contemplation in law, there being no person in esse in whom it can vest and abide, though the law does not allow of such abeyances except where the original creation of estates requires them, or where the consequences of estates do in congruity require them (d), and considers the fee as always potentially existing and ready to vest whenever a proper owner appears. Thus, in a grant to John for life, and afterwards to the heirs of Richard, the inheritance is plainly neither granted to John nor Richard, nor can it vest in the heirs of Richard till his death, for nemo est hæres viventis; it remains, therefore, in waiting or abeyance during the life of Richard. (e) This is likewise always the case of a parson of a church, who hath only an estate therein for the term of his life; and the inheritance remains in abeyance. (f)

The word "heirs" is necessary in the grant of a donation, in order to make a fee or inheritance. For, if land be given to a man for ever, or to him and his assigns for ever, this vests in him but a fee estate for life. (g) This very great nicety about the insertion of the word "heirs" in all feoffments and grants in order to vest a fee, is plainly a relic of the feudal strictness: but which, we may remember (h), it was required that the form of the donation should be punctually pursued; or that, as Cragg (i) expresses it, in the words of Baldus, "donationes sunt stricti juris, ne quis plus donasse præsumatur quam in donatione expresserit." And therefore as the personal abilities of the donee were originally supposed to be the only inducements to a gift, the donee's estate in the land extended only to his own person, and subsisted no longer than his life, unless the donor, by an express provision in the grant, gave it a long continuance and extended it also to his heirs. But this rule is now softened by many exceptions. (k)

In the first place, it does not extend to devises by will, in which, as they were introduced at a time when the feudal rigour was apace wearing out, a more liberal construction is allowed; and therefore, the devisee will take a fee-simple where

(b) 4 Taunt. 17. 547. 5 Taunt. 326.

(c) Harper v. Charlesworth, 4 B. & C. 574.

(d) Sheffield v. Ratcliffe, Hob. 338. See also Withers v. Iseham, Dyer, 70 b; Machell v. Clark, 2 Ld. Raym. 781.

(e) Co. Litt. 342.

(f) Litt. s. 646. See vol. i. p. 34<sup>a</sup>.

(g) Ibid. s. 1. Perk. 243.

(h) See p. 48. See also 1 Plowd. Com. 25 b.

(i) L. 1. t. 9, s. 17.

(k) Co. Litt. 9, 10.

(a) Vol. 1, pp. 271, 303.

appears on the part of the testator greater estate than for life, and at not to limit an estate tail. (l) So will pass by a devise to A for ever (m), the fee being tantamount to words of gift or to him and his assigns for ever; fee-simple (o), or to him and his assigns for ever; or to him and his blood (q), or to him and his assigns for ever; or "to do what he will with the land for his own use, and to give the same to whom he pleases" (t), or "to do the same as he will" (u), or "to do the same without any prior estate limited to a person shall appoint." (v) will also pass by such expressions as: to "A and his house" (w), to "A and his stock" (x), to "A and his possession" (y), to "A and his family" (z), to "A's estate" (a), to "A for life and afterwards to his heirs" (b), to "A and his heirs" (c), to "A or his heirs" (d), to "A and his heirs for ever" (e), to "A and his heirs for ever" (f), to "A and his heirs for ever" (g), to "A for life, and after to his next of kin" (h), to "A and his legal representatives" (i), to "A to dispose and employ the land and her son at her will and pleasure" (j), to "A (the testator's heir at law) for ever by her without molestation, death without issue that she shall do at her will and pleasure," she (k), to "A to do therewith or to dispose thereof at his will and pleasure" (m), to "A to give, sell, or do therewith at his pleasure" (n), to "A to dispose of for payment of all my just debts" (o), to "A to be at his discretion" (p), to "A to give to his children," or "to make provision for his children" (q), to "my wife to be divided and disposed of to my children" (r), that "all my children shall share equally in all my property" (s), to "A for life, and after her decease I devise all my lands, tenements, and hereditaments not disposed of to B" (t), to "daughters equally; if one die before the other, then one to be heir to the other" (u), to "A in fee to B to hold in the same manner" (x), to "A and his heirs of Greenacre for his part, and to B of Whiteacre for his part" (y), to "trustees of my freehold, copyhold, and all my personal estate, after payment of certain legacies and annuities" (z), to A B and C D in trust to pay the rents to testator's nieces. (a)

Besides the instances already given, a fee simple will also pass to the party intended to be benefited by devises of the testator's "estate," where that word is not narrowed by the context of the will, (b) when it not only carries the real estate (c) but also the fee, although no words of perpetuity are added. (d) Thus the devise of "all the testator's estate, interest, or property in any land" carries the fee as do also the expressions, "All the rest of his estate or of his effects both real and personal," (e) or "all the residue of his real estate," (f) or "all the rest and residue of his estate," (g) or "all that his estate," (h) or "all his estate and effects," where the intention is apparent, (i) or "all that his estate he bought of M.," (j) or "all his estate, to such uses as he shall appoint," (k) or "all his temporal estates," (l) or "all his testamentary estate," (m) so the devise of the testator's estate, at or

55. Denn v. Slater, 5 T. R. 337.

129, 1 Bro. C. C. 147.

57. Gilb. Dev. 18.

194, Moore, 853, 1 Rol. Abr. 308.

834.

pl. 9.

36.

250, 251, Webb v. Herring, 1 Rol.

ewell v. Perkins, 2 Atk. 103, Goodtitle

ils. 7, 1 Inst. 9 b, 2 Cro. 416, 3 Cro.

p. 659, 1 R. A. 835. But whether a his posterity gives a fee or estate tail,

General v. Bamfield, 2 Freem. 268.

283.

v. Nenny, 3 Ves. 470.

33 b, 17 Ves. 261.

Bla. 461, 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 290, pl. 7

General v. Bamfield, 2 Freem. 268.

261.

5 Ves. 167, 17 Ves. 261, 3 East, 172,

M. & S. 126.

832, Skin. 563, 1 Vent. 215.

13, 4 T. R. 89.

15, Plowd. 286, 289.

515.

v. Towers, 1 Eden, 149.

1841-1845, 5 Ves. 403, Fearn P.W. 144.

vid. 5 Ves. 403. But see 15 Ves. 532.

vid. 3 Bro. C. C. 324, 1 Cox, 250.

7, Bendl. 11. pl. 9.

(l) 2 Wils.

(m) 6 Mod. 111, 1 Leon. 283.

(n) 1 Leon. 156, 2 Wils. 6.

(p) 1 Leon. 158.

(q) W. Kely, 6.

(r) 2 Vent. 285, Carth. 50.

(s) Co. Litt. 9 b, 1 Eden, 143, Amb. 363, 9 E.

(t) Co. Litt. 9, 0.

(u) 2 Brod. & B. 623.

(v) Doe v. Hurrell, 5 B. and Ald. 21.

(w) Barnes v. Patch, 8 Ves. 606, Wils.

worthy, 9 Ves. 142.

(x) 7 East, 268, 3 Ves. and Ben. 102.

18 Ves. 195, 2 Dougl. 763.

(y) Holdfast v. Martin, 1 T. R. 411, E.

son, Cowp. 209, 4 Taunt. 176, 3 Ves.

(z) 1 Ves. 10, Pr. Ch. 364, 3 P. W.

659, 1 Wils. 383, 2 Ld. Raym. 122.

(a) 4 Mod. 90, 3 ibid. 22, 1 T. R.

(b) 2 Lev. 91, 6 Mod. 101.

9 Ves. 137, 7 East, 250, 1 T. R.

Show, 328.

(c) 9 Ves. 143.

(d) 3 P. Wms. 294, Ca. 100.

(e) 2 H. Bla. 444, 3 Bro. C. C.

264. See as to "all a my

Swan, 201.

A fee simple will also pass by devises such as these : " of whatsoever else I have not disposed of,"(u) of " all my lands not before devised,"(v) of "all my concerns,"(w) of " all I am worth,"(x) of " all my worldly substance,"(y) of " all my real property,"(z) of all my property both personal and real for ever,"(a) of " all my property whatever and wheresoever,"(b) of " all my right in B.,"(c) of " all my interest in the estates of A.,"(d) of " all my right, title, and interest,"(e) of " my inheritance in W.," or " my inheritance therein," or to three persons " as trustees of inheritance for the execution of my will,"(f) of " all my goods, chattels, and personal estate together with my real estate,"(g) of " all the residue and remainder of my effects both real and personal,"(h) of "all that my remainder,"(i) or "whole remainder,"(j) of " all that my reversion."(k)

(k) 2 Ves. 48. But see 1 Vern. 65. contra.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, January 4, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1940.

No. 11.

REAL PROPERTY.

Index

三 万 里 江

Business of Firms and Rec- ords Satisfaction of mem- bers

~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ ~~XXXXX~~ ~~X~~

It is observations upon the fact that the
... on 10. 11, which
... in the non-...
... of a ... and ...
... the ... or by the
... the owner of the ...
... the ... provided the
... in ... in possession.
... for making the
... in the ... The
... in the single
... being within the
... and purporting to
... the ...
... requiring id-
... to any
... the ... is
... of the non-involvement
... and ... Suppose
... for life ... to
... B. purchased
... of A's life ...
... and then converted to a
... and suffered a recovery.

but the bargain and sale (a) of the commissioners which could operate only from the time of enrolment) was not enrolled till after the conveyance from the assignees; the recovery would be bad, for, as the case would be that of a deed, not being a bargain and sale within the Statute of Enrolments, nor purporting to make the tenant, no assistance could be derived from the provision in question. Nor does this provision appear to do more than enlarge indefinitely the time for enrolment. The provision relative to the non-concurrence of the legal owner will be readily and justly appreciated by all who have had any experience in titles derived under recoveries. One example will suffice:—Lands are limited to the use of A. for the life of B., upon trust for B., with remainder to C. in tail, with remainder over; B. conveys to a tenant to the mortgage, and C. suffers a recovery, which of course is void for the want of the legal freehold: but as B., who conveyed to the tenant, was beneficially entitled to an estate of freehold in possession, the recovery is made valid by the act. It may possibly be doubted whether the act has contemplated the case where A., the legal freeholder, is a conveying party to the deed for making the tenant, but owing to some informality (as the want of a lease for a year, or livery on a freehold): he does not effectually convey: it is conceived, however, that this case would fall within the words, "in consequence of any person in whom an estate at law was outstanding having omitted to make the tenant." But, it is clear, that a recovery, void for want of an effectual legal conveyance, by a person seised at law for his own benefit, is not aided by the statute. Thus if lands were limited to the use of A. for life, with remainder to B. in tail, with remainder over, and A. convey by release, without a lease for a year, or by a feoffment, without livery, in order to make a tenant to the præcipe, and B. suffered a recovery, which of course was void, the act would not make the recovery good; and it would avail nothing that the conveyance by A. was sufficient to pass his interest in equity. The instances were very numerous in which, from ignorance or inadvertence, the concurrence of persons seised of the immediate legal freehold as trustees or mortgagees, was omitted to be procured; and cases have occurred in which it was a point of great nicety whether the legal freehold was outstanding in trustees or not, and in which recoveries were suffered either in the confidence that the legal freehold was not outstanding, or on the speculation that such might be the result of a judicial decision. Thus, in a late case, estates of great value were devised to trustees in terms which rendered it questionable whether they took the legal fee, or only the legal freehold for the life of A., who was made beneficial tenant for life, with remainder to B. in tail, with remainders over; A. alone (the trustees being adverse) conveyed to a tenant to the præcipe, upon which a recovery was suffered by B.;—if the trustees took the legal fee, then the entail and remainders, as well as the estate for life, were equitable, and were well barred by the recovery; if they took only the legal freehold the recovery was bad, and the person in possession would probably have been evicted from these large possessions, but for the intervention of the legislature, which, by the provision in question, remedied the defect, or rather supplied the total want of title. (a)

Sec. 36 enacts, That any device, shift, or contrivance, by which it shall be attempted to control the protector of a settlement in giving his consent, or to prevent him in any way from using his absolute discretion in regard to his consent, and also any agreement entered into by the protector of a settlement to withhold his consent, shall be void; and that the protector of a settlement shall not be deemed to be a trustee in respect of his power of consent; and a Court of Equity shall not control or interfere to restrain the exercise of his power of consent nor treat his giving consent as a breach of trust.

Sec. 37 provides, That the rules of equity in relation to dealings and transactions between the donee of a power and any object of the power in whose favour the same may be exercised, shall not be held to apply to dealings and transactions between the protector of a settlement and a tenant in tail under the same settlement, upon the occasion of the protector giving his consent to a disposition by a tenant in tail under this act.

Sec. 38 provides, That when a tenant in tail of lands under a settlement shall have already created or shall hereafter create in such lands, or any of them, a voidable estate in favour of a purchaser for valuable consideration, and shall afterwards, under this act, by any assurance other than a lease not requiring enrolment, make a disposition of the lands in which such voidable estate shall be created, or any of them, such disposition whatever its object may be, and whatever may be the extent of the estate intended to be thereby created, shall, if made by the tenant in tail with the consent of the protector (if any) of the settlement, or by the tenant in tail alone, if there shall be no such protector, have the effect of confirming such

(a) Hayes' Introduction to Conveyancing, 134.

ite in the lands thereby disposed ll extent as against all persons whose rights are saved by this t the time of making the dispo-hall be a protector of the settle-ch protector shall not consent ition, and the tenant in tail shall such consent be capable under nfirming the voidable estate to t, then and in such case such all have the effect of confirming e estate so far as such tenant in n be capable under this act of e same without such consent :
ays, that if such disposition
e to a purchaser for valuable
, who shall not have express voidable estate, then and in e voidable estate shall not be against such purchaser and the ing under him.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM XI.

VOL. 3.

LAW OF EVIDENCE.

struments of a private nature.—
D or WILL is given in evidence hat is the general rule of

EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

TO PROBLEM IV. VOL. II.

ses may an action be brought by has entered into a Special Con-the person with whom he has while the plaintiff's own side of remains unperformed?

es of independent mutual con-mises, each party may maintain against the person with whom he ed, without performing his own ontract.

All contracts are either—

1st. Dependent upon a condition precedent.

2nd. Concurrent.

3rd. Independent.

As to their performance :—

1st. Conditions precedent.

A condition precedent is an act to be performed by one of the parties to a contract, before the liability on the part of the other is to accrue. As if A. promise to do, or to abstain from doing, a certain act, in consideration of the antecedent performance of some act on the part of B., the promise of
A. depends upon a condition precedent.
See Thorpe v. Thorpe, Lord Raym. 662; Salk. 171, which is a leading case on this subject.

2ndly. Concurrent Acts.

Where concurrent acts are to be performed by both parties at the same time, neither can maintain an action against the other, without performance of his part of the contract, or offering to do so. Ranson
v. Johnson, 1 East, 203.

“As, if two men agree, one that the other should have his horse, the other that he will pay £10. for it, an action does not lie for the money, until the horse be delivered.”
Per Holt, C. J. in Thorpe v. Thorpe, ante.

3rdly. Mutual independent Promises.

From the observations already offered on the subject of Independent Mutual Covenants, Conditions Precedent, and Concurrent Acts, it will be seen that in the two latter cases neither party can bring an action against the other without performing or offering to perform his part of the contract.

But this is not the case in mutual independent contracts, or promises, for in such case either party can maintain an action independently of the contract being performed on his own side, and the reason for this rule appears to be, That in all cases of mutual contracts, the mere promise and not the performance thereof, is the consideration,

—and to decide “Whether one promise be the consideration of another, or whether the performance, and not the mere promise, be the consideration, must be gathered from and depends entirely upon, the words and nature of the agreement.”—Per Lawrance, J., in Glazebrook v. Woodrow, 8 T. R. 373, and see Hob. 106.

In Martindale v. Fisher, 1 Wils. 88, the declaration stated, it was agreed that a race should be run between a horse of the plaintiff, and one of A.B.’s, and in consideration that the plaintiff had agreed to deliver to the defendant a quantity of cloth, the defendant agreed to pay a sum of money in case A.B.’s horse should beat, and then averred that A.B.’s horse won the race. After verdict for the plaintiff, an exception was taken in arrest of judgment, because it was not averred in the declaration that the cloth was delivered to the defendant; but the Court over-ruled the exception, and observed, that this was an action founded on mutual promises, and therefore it was not necessary for the plaintiff to make an averment of the delivery of the cloth; and DEXTER, J. took this distinction, “Where a plaintiff declares, that in consideration that he would deliver to the defendant a piece of cloth, he, the defendant, should pay a sum of money for it, an averment of the delivery of the cloth is necessary; but if the plaintiff state an agreement, and then state, that in consideration of such agreement, &c. in that case an averment is not necessary.”

A covenant by one party to assign his interest in a house, and the other to pay a sum of money, is a mutual and independent covenant, Trench v. Trenwin, 1 Lord Raym. 125.

Where a covenant goes only to part of the consideration on both sides, and a breach of such covenant may be paid for in damages, it is an independent covenant.

But where the mutual covenants go to the whole consideration on both sides, they are mutual conditions, and the performance must be averred, 1 Ventr. 147.; Duke of St. Albans v. Shore, 1 H. Bl. 270.

In the case of positive agreements, an action may be brought by either party before performance. And the following rule was laid down by Holt, C. J. in Thorpe v. Thorpe, ante:—

“If a day be appointed for payment of the money, and the act for which the money is to be paid cannot be done, before the day appointed, then, though the agreement be to pay the money for the doing the thing, yet the action may be brought for the money before the thing done, because the agreement is positive, that the money shall be paid at the day appointed,” and agreeably to this is 48 Ed. 2, 3, cited in 7 Co. 10 b. Ughtred’s case, though the case is put there more generally. To the same purpose are 1 Ventr. 147, Large v. Cheshire; 1 Sams. 320, Pordage v. Cole; and see the note (C) by Serjeant Williams.

Lastly. The rules which are contained in these cases are clear and indisputable, but the difficulty lies in their application to each particular case.

Where there are several covenants, promises, or agreements which are independent of each other, one party may maintain an action against the other for a breach of the covenants, &c. without averring or proving a performance of the covenants, &c. on the plaintiff’s part.

But where the covenants, &c. are dependent, it is necessary to aver and prove performance on his part, to entitle him to an action for breach of the covenants on the part of the defendant’s.

The contracts or promises are construed to be—dependent or independent of each other according to the intention and meaning of the parties, and the good sense of the case, and technical words should give way to the intention, 1 Term. Rep. 645.; Hotham pany, 6 Term. Rep. 668.; and ment of Lord Mansfield in King-

eston, Dougl. 690.; and Durn-Willes' Rep. 157.

J. A. M.

Law Reports.

OF CHANCERY.—Dec. 24.

EX PARTE PARKER.

FROM THE COURT OF REVIEW.

—Act for Abolishing Arrest Sec. 8.—PRACTICE.—Validity of an appeal from an order of the review. It appeared that on the 22d affidavit of debt was made, on the 2d a fiat issued, and on the 10th a second issued, the first having been set aside for want of prosecution. All affidavits were by different persons, and the Court of Review held the second fiat good; bankruptcy having been completed by the first.

It contended that the second fiat having been issued within two months, and moreover it was not sued out by the party who had made the affidavit.

The complainant supported the order of the review.

CHANCELLOR said, it was permitted that the fiat need not be issued by the party who made the affidavit. The act of bankruptcy was complete, and the fiat was properly issued within two months, and were held invalid, any creditor had the power of destroying the effect of bankruptcy by filing an affidavit of discovery within the time to expire. The Court of Review was right, and the party might be prosecuted.

CHANCELLOR'S COURT.—Dec. 21.

BARTON v. SMITH.

ANSWER after AMENDMENT of Bill of Defendant to set forth announcement to that set out in his An-original Bill.

In application made by the plaintiff the defendant, Samuel Smith, to pay into the Bank of England the sum of £335. 18s. 4d. in the name of the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery. The plaintiff filed her bill on June 17, 1839, alleging therein that one Thomas Harrild, by his will, bearing date the 28th of February, 1828, gave and bequeathed unto his son, Robert Harrild, a defendant thereto, and his son-in-law, Samuel Smith, another defendant, all his property upon trust, that they would pay all his just debts, testamentary and general expenses, and after the same were duly paid and satisfied, should divide the residue into three parts, one-third to go to the defendant, Samuel Smith, in right of his wife, who was a daughter of testator; one-third to the defendant, Robert Harrild, and the remaining one-third was to be divided between the three children of a deceased daughter. The testator died in August, 1829, without having altered or revoked his will. After the proving of the will, the defendant Samuel Smith acted alone in the execution thereof, and the bill prayed an account. The defendant, Samuel Smith, alone put in an answer, from which it appeared that the complainant, Jane Barton, upon the death of her parents, went to live with the testator, and upon his death (she being only 12 years of age, and having no place to go to except the workhouse) the defendant, Samuel Smith, took her into his house, and boarded her, clothed her, and educated her, when she was well enough to go to school (for during the greater part of the time it appeared she was under the care of a physician), from the month of February, 1829, to the month of August, 1836, at which time

the complainant left him in a very abrupt manner, giving no reason for her so doing, and only a notice of five minutes; and he submitted that such boarding, &c. with fees to the physician, and expences of medicine, and also expences of a journey to Margate, whether she went by order of her physician, was an ample set off against the small demand of complainant (£37. 6s. 6d.), and he also in his answer set forth a schedule as prayed, giving an account of all moneys received by him and paid by him on account of all monies owed by the said testator, but omitted to give an account of all the legacies he had paid. On the 25th of November last, complainant obtained an order to amend her bill, which she did on Dec.
5, and made her brothers defendants, and also added a further interrogatory, whether the debts, funeral and testamentary expences and legacies of the testator, had been fully paid. On Dec.
14th, the defendant Smith put in an answer to the amended bill, and stated, that he had paid all the legacies, except that of the complainant, against which he had a lien, and that the legacies had discharged him.

Mr. Wakefield now applied to have the sum of £335. 18s. 4d. (admitted by the first answer to be in the hands of the defendant Smith after the debts and funeral expences of the testator had been paid) paid into Court, contending that the second answer could not alter the purport of the first.

Mr. Jacob, for defendant Smith, contended, that as the complainant had altered her original bill, she had released the defendant from his first answer, and that he was entitled to set forth another schedule to his second answer.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, he could not order the defendant to pay into Court the sum mentioned in the original bill, as the complainant had amended her bill the defendant was entitled to set forth another schedule, and also considering the small sum that she would be entitled to (provided the defendant could not prove his lien), would be consumed in paying the money in and taking it out of Court, and therefore the motion must be dismissed, but the costs to abide the event of the hearing.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Nov. 14.

Sittings in Equity, before Lord ABINGER.

SLOMAN v. KELLY.

GAMBLING—PRACTICE—As to sufficiency of ANSWER, where the Defendant would be liable to pains and penalties on making an admission that the money was lost at play.

Mr. Simpkinson, for the plaintiff, stated that Mr. Kelly, the defendant, had brought an action against the plaintiff in the Court of Exchequer to recover the amount of certain checks and I O U's which he had received from Mr. Sloman, but which that gentleman had refused to pay, or permit his banker to pay. Soon after the action had been brought, a bill was filed in this court, setting forth that the documents above referred to were obtained without sufficient consideration, and praying the court to grant an injunction to restrain Kelly from proceeding with the action-at-law which he had brought. The bill further stated, that in the month of October, 1838, the plaintiff in the present cause had occasion to visit Herne Bay, where he met the defendant Kelly, who resided and carried on business in Clifford Street, Bond Street, where he kept a coffee-house called the Lounge, at which billiards were played; that he kept cards, dice, &c., and that his house was frequented by gamblers; that on the 5th of October, 1838, the plaintiff, the defendant, Captain Polhill, Mr. Holt, Mr. Decane, Mr. Farris, and several others, dined at the Pier Hotel, Herne Bay; that a great deal of wine was drunk upon the occasion; that Mr. Sloman was much affected by the wine he had taken, and that Mr. Kelly remained perfectly sober; that at the suggestion of the latter, cards and dice were introduced; that they played at hazard, at which game plaintiff lost money to a large amount, when defendant supplied him with the means of continuing his play, and further losses ensued to the amount of £700. for which he gave checks and I O U's; that Sloman had reason to believe he had been duped; that he therefore called at his bankers and requested the checks given to Kelly might not be paid. The defendant in the present cause, in bringing his action in the Court of Exchequer, set forth in the declaration that the documents above referred to were in part for money lent, and in part upon accounts stated and settled. In his answer the defendant admitted that he kept the coffee-house called the Lounge, in which there were only two billiard-tables; he admitted that on the occasion of the dinner above-mentioned he was present at the Pier Hotel, Herne Bay; that much wine was drunk; but contended that it took considerable effect upon himself, and none whatever upon the plaintiff; that the money for which he brought an action against Mr. Sloman was not money lost at play, but money borrowed of him at different times by that gentleman. To this answer exceptions had been taken and the matter now came before the Court to determine whether or not the answer was sufficient. It was contended that the defendant was bound to give a full and explicit answer, seeing that it would not subject him to any pains and penalties.

Mr. Therry, on the other side, said that it would subject him to pains and penalties. He could not be called on to give an answer to points, which answer, if given in the affirmative would subject him to the charge of being guilty of two acts contrary to law—the one, illegal gaming—the other, renewing post dated checks for some of the checks were dated on the 9th of October; there was not one of the I O U's before date subsequent to the time set forth in the bill. A defendant in equity stood in a situation similar to that of a witness; he could not be called upon to state anything that might have the effect of criminating himself.

Lord ABINGER observed, that the defendant had said enough in his answer to prevent its being read against him. A defendant might decline to answer upon certain points; but if he answered at all, why not answer fully?

Mr. Therry contended that the present was an exception to the general rule.

Lord ABINGER.—The defendant is not bound to say that the money was lost at play; but having stated that it was money lent, he should have stated the time when, the place where, and the persons in whose presence the transaction took place. As a year had elapsed, he would not ver in the affirmative, subject himself l penalties.

is allowed.

NEGATIVE COURT.—Dec. 4.

ON AND ANOTHER v. CLARKE.

ACT, 1 Vict. c. 26. s. 9.—Whether attestation is sufficient when made in the room in which the Testator was at the curtains of which were closed used, Mr. Patrick Perse, of Bromplied in June last, having executed whilst confined to his bed of the ill-h he died, he gave directions to his Rev. Mr. Fitzpatrick (his residuary prepare a codicil increasing the legacy rvant. The codicil was prepared by rick, who brought it to the testator om: the bed stood with the foot fire-place; the curtains were drawn s, but closed at the foot; two small n the room, one at the foot of the er at the bed-side. Mr. Fitzpatrick, ence of the legatee, the nurse, and testator's footman, read over the coy to the testator, who approved of it ence and hearing of all those per-signed it in their presence, though ot actually see the testator sign his was standing by the fire, and the ne bed were closed at that part. Mr.

attested it in the presence of the tesen being intimated that White should e codicil, Mr. Fitzpatrick again read e presence and hearing of the testa-ite attested it in the room upon the e foot of the bed, the curtains resed, though the testator might not m do so. The question was, whea valid attestation within the mean-act, which requires that the witld attest the execution in the "pree testator.

zen's Advocate contended that the
as not in the presence of the tes-that the allegation ought to be reprimd facie the witness was not (as orough expressed it in Wright v.
Man. & Selw. 194) "within the organs of sight," (a) that the judges g the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2.
lowed a constructive presence where might see the witnesses sign their in adjoining room. Casson v. Dade, Ca. 98; Shires v. Glasscock, 2 Salk
r. Winchelsea, 3 Russ. 441.
ams contended that the attesting witness being in the room, and signing the will which had been previously read over and executed by the testator, was a proper act; that fraud was not charged, and that in the cases which had been decided in other courts, it was held that a constructive presence would be sufficient to establish a due attestation, even under the Statute of Frauds.

Sir H. JENNER held that the allegation must be admitted, and that if a fraud was not alleged.
the proofs were complete, and the will and co-diciil would be entitled to the probate of the court.
The last paper was signed in the room where the deceased was, he being perfectly cognizant of what was going forward. Primd facie such an execution was good, if there was not fraud, and in this case such was not alleged. The whole question turned on the meaning of the word "presence." It is said that the requisites of the act have not been complied with, inasmuch as White did not actually see the testator sign his name; but I should be of opinion, under the words of the act, without referring to the cases which have been cited, that the witness being in the same room was present, the object of the act being to prevent fraud being practised upon the deceased by the substitution of another paper.
It is pleaded, in some degree, that the testator might have seen White sign the paper; and I am of opinion that the paper being attested at the foot of the bed, after its being twice read over, the testator knowing what was going on,
this is a sufficient attestation in the presence of the testator. The cases decided under the Act of Charles II. (the Statute of Frauds) did not immediately bear on the point now before the court.
In the case of the Duke of Roxburgh, (Todd
v. Winchelsea, ante,) and others noticed, the attesting in an adjoining room, where the testator might see the act, was held good. Here the act took place in the same room where the testator was. In Casson v. Dade (b) this doctrine was carried to a great extent; for there the testatrix, having gone to the office of her solicitor to execute her will, retired to her carriage to execute it, the witnesses attending her. After having seen the execution, they returned to the office to attest it, and the carriage being accidentally put back, it was sworn by a person in the carriage, that the testatrix was thereby placed in a situation, whence, looking through window, she might have seen the witnesses test the will in the office; and it was delivered to her in the carriage by the who told her that they had attested it.
In this case it was held that, constructively, attested in her presence, which was length. In the other cases, which upon their own peculiar circumstances of constructive presence was not requisites of the Statute of Frauds. The object of the act is to prevent fraud, and fraud might be committed in the very room of the deceased, by the attestation being done in a corner of it. But here there can be no suspicion of fraud, for the drawer of the will is the residuary legatee, who will be a sufferer to the extent of the addition the codicil makes to the legacy, and the legatee himself was present. I am of opinion, as far as my impression goes of the true construction of the act, that where a paper is executed by the deceased in the same room where the witnesses were, who attest in the same room where the testator was at the time, they do attest it in the presence of the testator, though he may actually see, or could not see them sign; so that if the facts pleaded can be established, I must pronounce for the validity of the paper.

The Queen's Advocate said, after the expression of the opinion of the Court, the executors would take probate.

(a) In that case, it was proved that the testator lay in bed when he executed the will; that the head of his bed was placed against a partition, which separated the bedroom from another room. The door of each of these rooms opened into the same passage; and the night-chair was placed between the testator's bed and the door of his bedroom, very near to the door. After the testator had signed the will, there being no table in his bedroom, the witnesses retired to the other room, and wrote their attestation at a table, which stood before the fire-place of that other room, and the doors of both rooms were open. While the witnesses were retiring for that purpose, with the will, into the other room, the testator called to his attendant, who was in the room, using an expression which he commonly used when he required his assistance, to help him to the night-chair; but there was no further proof of his going to the night-chair.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., said—It is not necessary that a deviser should actually see; but the question is, whether he must not be in such a situation that he might see the witnesses attest. I am old enough to remember the decision of Casson v. Dade (see n. (b) upon that point; and afterwards went to view the office, through the window of which it was proved that the testatrix, who sat in her carriage when the will was attested in the office, might have seen what was passing there. In favour of attestation it is presumed that, if the testator might see, he did see. But I am afraid, that if we get beyond the rule, which requires that the witnesses should be actually within the reach of the organs of sight, we shall be giving effect to an attestation out of the deviser's presence; as to which the rule is, that where the deviser cannot by possibility see the act doing, that is out of his presence.—Ed.

(b) In this case the testatrix ordered her will to be prepared, and went to her attorney's office to execute it. Being asthmatical, and the office very hot, she retired to her carriage to execute the will, the witnesses attending her; after having seen the execution they returned into the office to attest it, and the carriage was accidentally put back to the window of the office, through which, it was sworn by a person in the carriage, the testatrix might see what passed; immediately after the attestation, the witnesses took the will to her, and one of them delivered it to her, telling her they had attested it; upon which she folded it up and put it into her pocket. The Lord Chancellor inclined very strongly to think the will well executed, and the case of Shires v. Glasscock, 2 Salk. 688.; 1 Eq. Abr. 403, was relied upon to that purpose. Mr. Arden pressed much for an issue; but, finding the Lord Chancellor's opinion very decisive against him, declined it. See Eccleston v. Petty al. Speke, Carth. 80; Comb. 156; 1 Show. 89; Hob. 222. Broderick v. Broderick, 1 P. Wms. 239. Machell v. Temple, 2 Show. 288. Davy v. Smith, 3 Salk. 395. In Shires v. Glasscock, the testator had desired the witnesses to go into another room, several yards distant, to attest it, in which there was a window broken, through which the testator might see them. Et per Cur. The ired attesting in his presence, to reading another will in place of

It is enough if the testator is not necessary that he should them signing; for at that rate ould but turn his back or look d vitiate the will. Here the in the view of the testator; he seen it, and that is enough. tator being sick should be in bed, ain drawn.—ED.

DEBTORS' COURT.—Jan. 4.

ABRAHAM HENRY CHAMBERS.

Asking Imprisonment for Debt, JURISDICTION of the COURT as to a person to Newgate for con- not filing his Schedule after a had obtained a VESTING ORDER.

had obtained a vesting order in the insolvent had neglected to file as required by the 1 & 2 Vict.

roffe said he was instructed by Mr. n, solicitor, of Bank-buildings, apply for a rule calling on Mr. show cause why he should not be the common gaol of the county in dwelling, for a contempt of Court bedience to the order to file his

COMMISSIONER asked where Mr. s confined.

roffe.—In the Fleet Prison, where or some time.

MISSIONER.—What power have we an order, as to commit him to the

I thought the question had been another case.

roffe said he was not aware the been decided. It had been argued a man named Jeremiah Board, (a) many years in the Fleet Prison. ould, perhaps, allow him to read the Mr. Wilton, in which the urgent he application was stated.

remarked that, in the case men- arned friend denied, on the part of the prisoner, the power of the Court to take the man out of the custody of the warden.

Mr. Woodroffe.—I appeared for Mr. Brown, the warden, and not for the prisoner. The Court will grant a rule on the affidavit I have in this case.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER ordered the affidavit of Mr. Wilton to be read.

Mr. Woodroffe proceeded to read the affidavit. It set forth that a vesting order was made on the 19th December last, and Mr. Chambers had been called upon on the same day, by a rule, to file his schedule within fourteen days.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—When was he required?

Mr. Woodroffe.—On the 19th December.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—We are very quick here; hardly a fortnight has elapsed. We should give a man "breathing time."

Mr. Woodroffe.—We show that Mr. Chambers has, since he has been in prison, received £2000, and has control over £23,000 more.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—He has only had fifteen days' notice. It is rather sharp.

Mr. Woodroffe.—It is sixteen days, sir. Will the Court permit me to state the case?

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER, after consulting Mr. Commissioner Bowen on the subject, asked to what prison it was sought to commit Mr. Chambers?

Mr. Woodroffe.—To the common gaol of the place—Newgate, according to the words of the act. We come to this Court, which we say is more potent than that of Bankruptcy. The matter has now been in agitation since 1825.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—Don't you think this may stand over until next week, giving the party further time?

Mr. Woodroffe.—We say he has control over £23,000, and we come to a more efficient Court than the one in which it has been since 1825.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER thought the Court had no power to grant the application; at all events, it had better be made some days hence.

Mr. Woodroffe said the Court could, under the act, make an order for the commitment of Mr. Chambers to Newgate, or any other prison, for contempt, and it might be lodged at the gate, in case he should settle with his creditors and go out of custody; then he could be taken on the warrant.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—That is another question. You had better move next week.

Mr. Woodroffe.—Perhaps the Court will allow me to move the latter end of next week.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—When you like.

SITTINGS IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY, HILARY TERM, 1840.

Before the LORD CHANCELLOR, at Westminster.

|           |      |    |   |   |                                                |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday  | Jan. | 11 | - | - | Appeal Motions and Causes from the last Paper. |
| Monday    | "    | 13 | - | - | Petitions.                                     |
| Tuesday   | "    | 14 | - | - | } Causes from the last Paper, and Appeals.     |
| Wednesday | "    | 15 | - | - |                                                |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | Appeal Motions and Appeals.                    |
| Friday    | "    | 17 | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                          |
| Saturday  | "    | 18 | - | - |                                                |
| Monday    | "    | 20 | - | - |                                                |
| Tuesday   | "    | 21 | - | - |                                                |
| Wednesday | "    | 22 | - | - | } Appeal Motions and Causes.                   |
| Thursday  | "    | 23 | - | - |                                                |
| Friday    | "    | 24 | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                          |
| Saturday  | "    | 25 | - | - |                                                |
| Monday    | "    | 27 | - | - |                                                |
| Tuesday   | "    | 28 | - | - |                                                |
| Wednesday | "    | 29 | - | - |                                                |
| Thursday  | "    | 30 | - | - | } Appeal Motions and Causes.                   |
| Friday    | "    | 31 | - | - |                                                |

Such days as his Lordship is occupied in the House of Lords excepted.

Before the VICE-CHANCELLOR, at Westminster.

|           |      |    |   |   |                                                 |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|-------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday  | Jan. | 11 | - | - | Motions.                                        |
| Monday    | "    | 13 | - | - | Petition Day.                                   |
| Tuesday   | "    | 14 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and     |
| Wednesday | "    | 15 | - | - |                                                 |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | Further Directions.                             |
| Friday    | "    | 17 | - | - | Motions.                                        |
| Saturday  | "    | 18 | - | - | } Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions and General |
| Monday    | "    | 20 | - | - |                                                 |
| Tuesday   | "    | 21 | - | - | Cause Paper.                                    |
| Wednesday | "    | 22 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and     |
| Thursday  | "    | 23 | - | - |                                                 |
| Friday    | "    | 24 | - | - | Further Directions.                             |
| Saturday  | "    | 25 | - | - | Motions.                                        |
| Monday    | "    | 27 | - | - | } Short Causes, Unopposed Petitions and General |
| Tuesday   | "    | 28 | - | - |                                                 |
| Wednesday | "    | 29 | - | - | Cause Paper.                                    |
| Thursday  | "    | 30 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and     |
| Friday    | "    | 31 | - | - |                                                 |

Before the MASTER OF THE ROLLS, In and After Hilary Term, 1840, at Westminster.

|           |      |    |   |   |                                                |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday  | Jan. | 11 | - | - | Motions.                                       |
| Monday    | "    | 13 | - | - | Petitions in General Papers.                   |
| Tuesday   | "    | 14 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions |
| Wednesday | "    | 15 | - | - |                                                |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | and Exceptions.                                |
| Friday    | "    | 17 | - | - | Motions.                                       |
| Saturday  | "    | 18 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions |
| Monday    | "    | 20 | - | - |                                                |
| Tuesday   | "    | 21 | - | - |                                                |
| Wednesday | "    | 22 | - | - | } and Exceptions.                              |
| Thursday  | "    | 23 | - | - |                                                |

|      |   |   |                                                                 |
|------|---|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| " 24 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| " 25 | - | - |                                                                 |
| " 27 | - | - |                                                                 |
| " 28 | - | - |                                                                 |
| " 29 | - | - | } Petitions in General Paper.                                   |
| " 30 | - | - |                                                                 |
| " 31 | - | - |                                                                 |

AT THE ROLLS.

Feb. 1 - - Short Causes, after swearing in the Solicitors.
s, Consent Causes, and Consent Petitions every Tuesday at the Sitting of the Court.

OF JOHN FROST FOR HIGH TREASON.

it sufficient for the purposes of to record the summing up of the JUSTICE TINDAL to the jury, embrace the facts and the law. will not allow of our doing so in , and its importance quite pre- iving an abridgment; we shall, nclude it as occasion shall serve.

compelled to adopt the same iving the judgment of the Court Bench in Stockdale v. Hansard. first blamed for doing so, as space in so many numbers, but usion (the correctness of the re- universally acknowledged, and t NO OTHER JOURNAL or paper had ) we were highly commended for . It is an excellent essay for our n not only the Law of Libel, but ivileges claimed by the House of ief Justice TINDAL thus addressed Gentlemen of the jury,—The charge prisoner is, that, having broken his ue allegiance which he bore to his reign, he had levied war against the r realm. The indictment itself con- specific counts, stating in a different ground of accusation against the pri- it appears to my mind that it would rass than enlighten you if I read the to you, for first or last it must come sion which you have heard so much r or not, under the circumstances f offence of levying war against the Queen in her realm has been established. Gen- tlemen, as to the first part of the indictment, it is formed upon the ancient statute of Edw. III. which contains the very clause of levying war. The two other counts are upon a more modern statute, which has, to a certain extent, explained the former, and made certain overt acts specific grounds of treason. Taking it, therefore, as a substantive charge against the prisoner, it is that of levying war against the Queen in her realm. I shall propose shortly to state to you that which appears to me to be the law upon this subject, to which your minds must be applied when the facts are passing in review before you. The ancient statute of 25 Edward III. declares the offences which constitute high treason, and declares that when a man do levy war against our Lord the King in his realm, or be adherent to the King's enemies in his realm, giving to them aid and comfort in the realm or elsewhere, and thereof be properly attainted of open deed by the people of their condition, he shall be guilty of treason. That is one ground upon which, if a party be accused, and the case proved against him, he shall be deemed guilty of treason. The same statute goes on to mention, that it is to be under- stood that in the case above rehearsed, that ought to be judged treason which extends to our Lord the King and his royal majesty, meaning the levying of war. It may not be for the pur- pose of immediately assaulting the Sovereign, but against the royal authority as by law esta- blished. This being the state of the law, if we look merely at the words contained in the Act of Parliament, that of "levying war against the King," it would seem at first to confine itself to those ancient instances in which war was carried on where there have been rivals contending for possession of the throne. All those long wars that took place between the houses of York and Lancaster were treated by the party who hap- pened to be seated on the throne as acts of trea- son. Those were literally and properly levying war in the widest sense of the word. In more recent times, not within our recollection, but within reach of report and tradition, thus wars took place by the friends of the Pretender coming into the realm—an offence which would literally and completely fall within the description contained in the statute of levying war against the King; and if the statute were confined to levying within that sense, that unless there were armies advancing with generals at their head, and conflicting for the possession of the throne, a case of this sort would be clearly not within the statute. The statutes have been explained by learned judges in all ages, so as to meet the exigencies that have occurred during many reigns of monarchs that would have been subversive of the public weal, if not redressed, although they did not amount to an actual levying of war in the more specific sense of the term. I cannot do better than read the exposition of a most learned person, whose authority is regarded with great veneration—I mean the exposition of these terms, which is in the treatise by Sir Michael Foster. That learned judge states—“Every insurrection, which in judgments of law is intended against the person of the King, whether to dethrone, or to imprison him, or to oblige him to alter his measures, or government, or to remove evil counsellors from about him; all such risings amount to a levying of war within the statute.” And he goes on a little lower to distinguish between insurrections of persons armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, merely for some local or private purpose, from some general public purpose affecting the State: he says,—“So insurrections to throw down all inclosures, to alter the established law, and change religion, to enhance the price of all labour, or to open all prisons; all risings in order to effect these innovations of a public and general concern by an armed force, are, in construction of law, high treason, within the clause of levying war; for though not levelled at the person of the King, they are against his royal majesty; and, besides, they have a direct tendency to dissolve the bonds of society, and to destroy all property and all government, too, by numbers and an armed force. Insurrections, likewise, for redressing national grievances, or for the reformation of real or imaginary evils of a public nature, and in which the insurgents have no special interest; risings to effect these ends, by force and numbers, are, by construction of law, within the clause of levying war, for they are levelled at the King's crown and royal dignity. And, accordingly, it was held in the time of Queen Anne, that a large body of men, tumultuously rising and assembled together, with the avowed purpose of putting down all the meeting-houses of Protestant Dissenters, and proceeding to pull down several, until prevented by force, brought the parties who were guilty of that act within the branch of the statute of levying war against the Queen. And in a more recent case, where a riotous multitude, headed by Lord George Gordon, and acting in concert, with the declared design of pulling down or destroying all chapels belonging to those of the Roman Catholic persuasion, proceeded to put that design in force, there was no doubt but that the facts, if proved against the party accused, amounted to the offence of high treason, by levying war against the King.” Gentlemen, I will trouble you with no further authority, except from Sir Matthew Hale, which I do for the purpose of pointing out the same distinction, because one part of this case may have some bearing upon it, and perhaps, so far as it goes, in favour of the prisoner at the bar. He says—“If men levy war to break prisons, to deliver one or more particular persons out of prison wherein they are lawfully imprisoned, unless such as are imprisoned for treason, this, upon advice of the judges, upon a special verdict found at the Old Bailey, was ruled not to be high treason, but only a great riot (1668); but if it were to break prisons, or deliver persons generally out of prison, this is treason.” So that, gentlemen, the rule of law may be laid down in a few words, by stating that there must be an insurrection, there must be force accompanying that insurrection, and it must be for an object of a general nature. But if all these be found to concur in any individual instance, it is quite sufficient to constitute a levying of war. The question, therefore, for your determination will be whether, when the facts are brought fresh to your recollection which, in the course of this long investigation, have been proved, you can say that the acts imputed to have been done by the prisoner at the bar amount to the levying of war in the sense I have explained to you, or whether they fall short of that, and amount to no more than a grievous insurrection or riot, accompanied with great danger to the community. Unless the case reaches the point to which I have first called your attention, it does not amount to high treason, but merely to a grievous riot and insurrection. The Attorney-General, in stating the case on the part of the Crown, said he should be able, by evidence he should bring before you, to show that the prisoner had brought down to the town of Newport a very large number of persons armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, the object being to take possession of Newport, to break down the bridge, stop the mail, the non-arrival of which at the usual hour was to operate as a signal for revolt to the people of Birmingham and Manchester, and that the charter would then be proclaimed the law of the land. And the learned counsel who summed up the case on the same side proceeded nearly to the same extent, omitting, with great propriety, one point in the outline—namely, that which related to the grhment of Chartism, no evidence given to that effect. The Solicitor said that the plan of the prisoner was to raise bands of armed people, with intent to take Newport, to exercise power over the magistracy, and raise a rebellion within the kingdom. Now, no doubt whatever, that if the proved by either of those learned persons to your satisfaction, the case does establish a crime and guilt of high treason. It is your duty, watching the evidence, to see that the acts of the party and the intent of the accused went to the extent stated by the learned counsel for the Crown. For the learned counsel who appeared for the prisoner, as I think with great propriety, is not bound of necessity to show the object or meaning of the acts done. The charge against him must, he said, be proved by those who make the charge. He is not bound to receive evidence admitted against him, nor is he bound to show at all in any way the object or design was. Undoubtedly, that is true. The case must stand on any proof that occurs on the part of the Crown, except in so far as it contradicts the evidence given by the prisoner. The evidence must rest on the evidence given by the Crown.

It is not an unreasonable thing, in all investigations both civil and criminal, that if there is a certain appearance which involves a party in a state of suspicion, it is by no means unreasonable that he should, for his own sake and what the circumstances were, if possible, reconcile the suspicious appearances with his innocence. And therefore the learned counsel, though entering his protest against the necessity required to make any such case, state that the case of the prisoner was innocent, that is, so far as the crime of treason was concerned. He said, what was at issue was neither to take the town nor attack it, who were there through an accident, but to make a demonstration of the strength of those called Chartists, for the purpose and design of inducing the magistracy to procure the liberation of three prisoners convicted of some political offence, and in Monmouth gaol, or, at all events, to obtain a mitigation of their treatment. If the outcome by the officers of the Crown is filled with evidence, there can be no doubt but that the person accused amounts to high treason. If, on the other hand, the evidence amounts to no more than the description given by the learned counsel for the prisoner, although it would be a grievous offence, as involving the safety, security, and perhaps the lives of many persons in the town of Newport, but being deficient in the main ingredient of levying war against the Queen within her realm, it would not amount to more than a very aggravated misdemeanour, and on this indictment, upon that state of facts, the prisoner would be entitled to an acquittal. You are, therefore, gentlemen, most dispassionately to weigh the whole evidence, and say on what side the scale of justice ought to preponderate. I had intended, gentlemen, at one time, to have selected the evidence and placed it in apposition as it related to the different parts of this transaction, for undoubtedly there is a considerable portion of it not in dispute between the parties; but I have, on reflection, thought it safer in a case of such deep importance to the prisoner at the bar, as well as to the community, that I should rather follow the evidence in the course in which it was given in court, offering upon it such comments and observations as, from time to time, may occur and appear to me suitable, bringing your minds afterwards back to the exact question which you will have to determine on this momentous occasion.—[The Lord Chief Justice then commenced reading the evidence of the various witnesses who had been examined, which it is unnecessary, and would be impossible for us to repeat at length. We can only pretend to give such general references as will render the comments intelligible.]

(To be continued.)

NEW POSTAGE ORDERS.

General Post Office, Dec. 1839.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

On and after the 10th of January next, the single rate of inland postage on all letters except those between the United Kingdom and the colonies and foreign countries, will be the uniform single rate of one penny.

The scale of weight at present in force for General Post letters will be applicable in future to local penny post letters, and those passing through the local posts of Dublin; the regulation, therefore, which restricts the weight of these letters to four ounces is abolished, and they will be subject in future to the same rules and the same charges as General Post letters. The postage, however, on all letters (whether local or General Post letters) between places in the United Kingdom, must be paid in advance: should the postage not be paid in advance, the letter will be charged with double the rate to which they would otherwise be subject. Parliamentary proceedings are an exception to this regulation.

The uniform single rate on all letters conveyed by packet between the United Kingdom and the British colonies and possessions, will be one shilling, with the exception of letters between the United Kingdom and Malta, the Ionian Islands and India, when passing through France, the rates on which remain unchanged. Letters, therefore, intended to pass at the reduced single rate of a shilling, between these three last mentioned places and the United Kingdom, should be addressed via Falmouth.

Foreign letters, when transmitted by packet, will be liable to the single rates of packet postage from Falmouth, Dover, and London, as given in the table below, if posted or delivered at the port. If posted or delivered at any other place in the United Kingdom, they will be subject to the additional single rate of two-pence as inland postage.

Letters, however, between France and the United Kingdom, and also those in transit through France, will be an exception to this rule; the British charge on such letters will be the uniform single rate now taken from London, except in those cases where the letters are at present subject to a less charge than the sum specified. This last provision also applies to letters between the United Kingdom and Belgium, the rates on which, where lower than the sum specified, will not be increased.

Letters, also, between the United Kingdom and the United States of America, and between the United Kingdom and Spain, via Falmouth, form a further exception to this rule. No inland postage, therefore, will be taken on letters between the United Kingdom and France, and those in transit through France, or upon those between the United Kingdom and the United States of America, or upon those between the United Kingdom and Spain, via Falmouth.

The single rate on all foreign and colonial letters, except in those cases where a lower rate is now taken, when conveyed by packet, will accordingly be as follows:—

By Falmouth Packets.

|                                      | Packet Rate from Fal-mouth |    | Inland Postage, if not posted or delivered at the Port |     | Total Single Rate |    |
|--------------------------------------|----------------------------|----|--------------------------------------------------------|-----|-------------------|----|
| Between the United Kingdom and       | s.                         | d. |                                                        | d.  | s.                | d. |
| Lisbon - - - -                       | 1                          | 7  | -                                                      | 2   | 1                 | 9  |
| Spain (by Falmouth Packet) - - -     | 2                          | 2  | -                                                      | Nil | 2                 | 2  |
| Greece and Egypt -                   | 2                          | 3  | -                                                      | 2   | 2                 | 5  |
| Madeira - - - -                      | 1                          | 8  | -                                                      | 2   | 1                 | 10 |
| Brazil - - - -                       | 2                          | 7  | -                                                      | 2   | 2                 | 9  |
| Buenos Ayres, Chili, and Peru - - -  | 2                          | 5  | -                                                      | 2   | 2                 | 7  |
| Hayti - - - -                        | 1                          | 3  | -                                                      | 2   | 1                 | 5  |
| La Guayra, Mexico, & Cuba Carthagena | 2                          | 1  | -                                                      | 2   | 2                 | 3  |

|                               | s. | d. |         | s. | d. |
|-------------------------------|----|----|---------|----|----|
| United States - -             | 1  | 0  | - Nil - | 1  | 0  |
| Gibraltar - - -               |    |    |         |    |    |
| Malta - - - -                 |    |    |         |    |    |
| Ionian Islands - -            |    |    |         |    |    |
| British North America - - - - | 1  | 0  | - Nil - | 1  | 0  |
| Bermuda - - - -               |    |    |         |    |    |
| Honduras - - - -              |    |    |         |    |    |
| British West Indies           |    |    |         |    |    |
| India, via Falmouth    |    |    |         |    |    |

By Dover Packets.

|                                                                                             | Packet Rate from Dover                  | Inland Postage, if not posted or delivered at the Port | Total Single Rate |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|
| Between the United Kingdom and                                                              | s. d.                                   | d.                                                     | s. d.             |
| Belgium - - - -                                                                             | 1                                       | 4                                                      | 2 - 1 6           |
| France - - - -                                                                              | Uniform British Rate to Calais of - 0 1 |                                                        |                   |
| *Switzerland, via France - - -                                                       | Uniform British Rate of - - - * 1 2     |                                                        |                   |
| *Germany, via France - - -                                                           | Ditto                                   | ditto                                                  | * 1 4             |
| *Spain, Portugal, Italy, Turkey, &c. via France - -                                  | Ditto                                   | ditto                                                  | * 1 7             |
| (Except in those cases where the present charge is less.)                                   |                                         |                                                        |                   |
| Turkey, Greece, and Mediterranean, via Marseilles, if addressed by French Packet - - | Uniform British & French Rate of 2 3    |                                                        |                   |
| India, via Marseilles, if addressed by French Packet -                               | Ditto                                   | ditto                                                  | 3 5               |
| India, by Monthly closed Mail, via Marseilles - -                                    | Ditto                                   | ditto                                                  | 2 8               |
| Malta, Ionian Islands, and Alexandria, by monthly closed Mail, via Marseilles        | Ditto                                   | ditto                                                  | 1 8               |

* N. B. These rates do not apply to letters intended to be paid to particular places of destination, which must be charged with the uniform British rate of 10d. in addition to the postage from Calais, stated in the printed lists with which the Postmaster is furnished.

By Packets from London.

|                                    | Packet Rate from London | Inland Postage, if not posted or delivered at the Port | Total Single Rate |
|------------------------------------|-------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|
| Between the United Kingdom and     | s. d.                   | d.                                                     | s. d.             |
| Holland - - - -                    | 1                       | 4                                                      | 2 - 1 6           |
| Germany, Denmark, Sweden, & Russia | 1                       | 8                                                      | 2 - 1 10          |
| Heligoland - - -                   | Uniform Rate of 1 1     |                                                        |                   |

a uniform rate on letters between the Kingdom and places beyond sea, when conveyed by private ship, will be 1d. in what the United Kingdom they may be delivered. This rate must be taken between the United Kingdom and the &c. when conveyed by private ship. on between these and other classes having been abolished.

to be understood that the single postage given in the above instructions is only to letters not exceeding half weight. The charge for postage exceeding half an ounce will advance to their weight, in accordance with weight and number of rates at pre-tion, as laid down in the instructions of 1st November last. It must, however, be in mind that this scale does not reach rates on letters to and from through France, as the present system of French rates on such letters is in force, viz. a single French rate of an ounce exclusive.

will be permitted hereafter to send letters free of postage; Members, however, House of Parliament will be entirely, free of charge, petitions addressed to the House of Parliament, provided they are in covers, or in covers open at the not exceed the weight of six ounces. Her Majesty will likewise go free of ates and proceedings in Parliament charged at the following rate between the United Kingdom, and between the Kingdom and the colonies when connected, but not through France nor to the Colonies:—

|                                                       |   |            |
|-------------------------------------------------------|---|------------|
| weight not exceeding two ounces                       | - | 1d. |
| weight exceeding two ounces not exceeding four ounces | - | 2d. |
| weight exceeding four ounces not exceeding six ounces | - | 3d. | on in proportion. No additional charge made upon them if the postage is advanced.

on newspapers and letters of soldiers will remain unaltered, with the exception, that the privilege now given to sailors' letters will be restricted to which they shall not exceed half an ounce.

and packets exceeding sixteen ounces, with the exception of those mentioned below, cannot be forwarded to the Colonies, but must be sent to the Dead Letter Office, according to the present regula-

The following are the exceptions to this rule: Parliamentary Petitions, and Addresses to her Majesty.

Parliamentary Proceedings.

Letters and Packets addressed to, or received from, places beyond sea.

Letters and Packets to and from Public Departments, and to and from Public Officers now franking by virtue of their office.

Deeds, if transmitted under such regulations as the Postmaster-General may consider necessary.

By Command,
W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

General Post Office, Dec. 17, 1839.

Morning mails are now despatched from London to Southampton, Portsmouth, and Cheltenham, at nine a. m., conveying letters and newspapers for the following towns:—

Basingstoke, Benson, Burford, Cheltenham, Farnham, Godalmin, Gosport, Guildford, Henley, Horndean, Maidenhead, Nettlebed, Northleach, Oxford, Petersfield, Portsmouth, Reading, Southampton, Winchester, Windsor, Witney.

The boxes at the branch offices, Charing Cross, Old Cavendish Street, and the Borough, will be open for the reception of newspapers until half-past seven, a. m., and for letters until eight, a. m. At the General Post Office and the Branch Office in Lombard Street the boxes will close for newspapers at a quarter before eight, a. m., and for letters at half-past eight, a. m.

By Command,
W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

INSTRUCTION TO ALL POSTMASTERS.

General Post Office, December 20, 1839.

In consequence of the great increase of letters containing coin, it has become necessary, in order to prevent the total interruption of the service, to discontinue the system which has hitherto prevailed of entering the addresses of such letters, and taking receipts for them on delivery to the owners.

The practice, therefore, of entering such letters as money letters will cease on and after the 1st of January, 1840; after which time, parties having occasion to transmit small sums in cash are recommended to make use of the Money Order Office, where they will incur no risk; while those who may desire to remit bank notes, or drafts payable to bearer, are requested to cut them in half, sending each half, if possible, by two different posts. In the case of bank notes, or bank post bills being sent, the numbers, dates, and amounts should be carefully taken.

Money orders for sums under £5. are granted by every post town upon every other post town.

in the United Kingdom on application at the various offices.

By Command,
W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

General Post Office, Jan. 1, 1840.

Parties having occasion to transmit through the post, packets which do not contain letters, are requested not to enclose articles which have hard or sharp edges, or which may be of a brittle nature, as in the first case the seals of the letters in the mail bags may be broken and the letters mutilated, while in the second, the articles themselves will probably be injured in the operation of stamping.

Bottles containing liquid should not be transmitted through the post office, as they must be broken by the friction of the mail coaches, even if they should escape injury from the stamp, when the most serious consequences to the mails may be experienced, from the addresses, and, in many instances, the writing of the letters being thereby entirely effaced.

By Command,
W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

General Post Office, Jan. 6, 1840.

On and after the 10th instant, the boxes at the receiving houses in London will be closed for the receipt of General Post letters at 5 p. m.

The boxes at the branch offices at Charing Cross, Old Cavendish Street, and the Borough, will be closed at 5 45 p. m.

The boxes at the branch office in Lombard Street, and at the Post Office in St. Martin's-le-Grand, will be closed for the receipt of such letters at 6 p. m. Letters will, however, be received at the last-mentioned office till 7 p. m. on payment of a penny for each letter, and till 7 30 p. m. on payment of a fee of 6d. There is no alteration with respect to newspapers.

By command, W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

Post Office Regulations, Jan. 10, 1840.

A letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight may now be sent from any part of the United Kingdom to any other part, for one penny, if paid when posted, or for two-pence if paid when delivered.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s. to be paid in advance.

We have no need to make any alteration in this Notice by reason of the NEW POSTAGE REGULATIONS, which are all fully and officially detailed in this paper. Our Country Subscribers will continue to receive it as heretofore, Postage Free, without any further charge.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. H. D.—A Student.—A. L. Manchester.—D. A. W. Bristol.—W. N.—C. T.—Lector—all under consideration.

S. A. W.—We have attended to your communication, as we had a minute of the case:—in your next, insert the name of one solicitor in the cause. Our other correspondents on such subjects send us their names, which guarantee the communication being correct.

*Just published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly,
Vol. IV. Part I.*

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents, which have all been worked upon, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—manuring—also the law relating to MINING LEASES.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. 1 & 2, £1.10s. London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press,

SECOND EDITION,

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, January 11, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 18, 1840.

[No. 12.]

WS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

& 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

*the Abolition of Fines and Reco-
for the Substitution of more des of Assurance.*

(Continued from p. 163.)

CTOR OF A SETTLEMENT.

TO SUPPORT CONTINGENT REMAINDERS.

EE, having the first immediate freehold, will be protector of a made before the 28th August, 1833.
settlement containing a limita-10 years, if he should so long live, der to trustees during the life of t to preserve contingent remain-remainder to the first and other tail, the trustees would be pro-settlement during the life of A., concurrence would be necessary the first tenant in tail to make disposition. And, by the 36th protector shall not be deemed respect of his power of consent, of Equity shall not control or strain the exercise of his power or treat his giving consent as a st.
e has made great alterations in cting the duties of trustees to preserve contingent remainders; see sections 15, 22, 40, 27, 31, and 36. The latter section, nevertheless, has reference to the old law, which establishes the doctrine we have asserted at the head of this article. To expound this law in a clear and satisfactory manner, we think the judgment of the Judges on a writ of error in the House of Lords, from a Judgment in the King's Bench, delivered by WILLES, C. J., in *Smith d.

Dormer v. Packhurst*, will best assist us.
In that case, Mr. John Dormer, in the year 1662, upon the marriage of his eldest son, John Dormer, made a settlement of his estate; and, after limiting an estate to son, John Dormer, and the heirs of his he limited as follows:—"And, in default such issue, to the use and behoof of R.
Dormer, one of the brothers of the John Dormer, for the term of 99 years, he shall happen so long to live: and
and after the death of the said R.
Dormer, or other sooner determination, the estate limited to him for 99 years, to use and behoof of T. S. and J. R. and heirs, during the life of the said R.
Dormer, upon trust to preserve the congent uses and estates hereinafter from being defeated and interrupted, that purpose to make entries and actions, as the case shall require;
permit the said Robert Dormer assigns to receive the rents and profits of said estate during the term of his

after the end or other sooner determination of the said term, to the use and behoof of the first and every other son of the said Robert Dormer in tail male;" with remainder, in the same words, to Fleetwood, another brother of the said John Dormer; remainder to Peter, another brother; and the last remainder to Eusebe, the father of the lessor of the plaintiff, for 99 years, if he should so long live; remainder to the trustees, in the like manner as in the limitation to Robert Dormer, and to the first and every other son of Eusebe Dormer in tail male. Robert Dormer had one son, Fleetwood, and when he came of age, Robert and his son Fleetwood levied a fine to make a tenant to the præcipe and suffered a recovery, in which Fleetwood was vouched; the son died without issue, then Robert Dormer died, leaving no other son, but four daughters. Fleetwood and Peter both died without issue, and Eusebe being dead, his son, the lessor of the plaintiff, and the nearest surviving remainder man, made his actual entry within five years, and being so seised demised to the plaintiff, &c.

The two questions proposed by the House of Lords to the Judges were, first, whether the remainders limited to the first and every other son of Eusebe were good remainders in their first creation; and secondly, whether the fine and recovery suffered by Robert Dormer and his son barred these remainders.

Before proceeding to the questions, his Lordship laid down some general rules and maxims of the law, with respect to the construction of deeds; first, it is a maxim that such a construction ought to be made of deeds, ut res magis valeat quam pereat, that the end and design of the deeds should take effect rather than the contrary.

Another maxim is, that such a construction should be made of the words in a deed, as is most agreeable to the intention of the grantor, the words are not the principal things in a deed, but the intent and design of the grantor; we have no power, indeed to alter the words or to insert words which are not in the deed, but we may and ought to construe the words in a manner the most agreeable to the meaning of the grantor, and may reject any words that are merely insertible: these maxims are founded upon the greatest authority, Coke, Plowden, and Lord Chief Justice Hale, and the law commend the astutia, the cunning of Judges in construing words in such a manner as shall best answer the intent; the art of construing words in such a manner as shall destroy the intent may shew the ingenuity of counsel but is very ill becoming a Judge.

Having laid down these maxims, his Lordship said: In this case the intention of the party cannot be doubted, the grantor manifestly intended to continue the estate in his name and blood as far as he could by the rules of law; the law will not admit a perpetuity, but the intention of the party, so far as is consistent with the rules of law, ought to be observed.

It was said that the intention of the party by appointing trustees to preserve the contingent remainders, was only to preserve the estate till there was issue of Robert Dormer and that they were not meant to preserve the distant remainders; but if this had been the case, how came Robert Dormer not to be made tenant for life; for even though he had been tenant for life, the trustees could have preserved the remainders till his son came of age: but the plain intent was making him tenant for 99 years only, was to prevent him and his son from barring the estates in remainder without the joining of the trustees, the effect of which is, that they could not be barred without the consent of the trustees during the life of Robert Dormer, which is going as far as the law will permit.

The objections to the limitations to the first and other sons of Eusebe, &c. were the first, that the commencement of the estate and to the first son was at the nd consequently the latter limiid; secondly, that the limitations stent, and therefore void; and where there is an estate limited

-junctives which cannot stand cause if one happens the other in such case it shall take effect but the settlement shall rather to be void.

first, we are clearly of opinion, ation of the estate to the truse first son, &c., commenced at s: in support of the first objecid that an estate limited dpring other, to commence at his death, is certain; but when the deed says, or other sooner determiterm for years, this manifestly encement of the estate to the e determination of the term, happen not only by effluxion of y take effect by surrender, or veral ways, in the lifetime of er or Eusebe.—And we are of the estate to the trustees might
; but the estate to the first son, t commence till the death of e fathers.

by my Lord Coke, that the ough it is more properly apm for years, yet may mean an and it is plainly, in this deed, ense. The trustees are to per-ormer, &c. to receive the profits
m of his life; and the estate is not to commence till the sooner determination of the leh, by referring the relative to tent, must mean the term of his e words sooner determination, he estate for life, these are inay be rejected, they were pro-in currente calamo, or by cedent; and if the precedent Reformation, when there was a civil death as well as a natural, by entering into religion, it might then have a meaning.

As to the second point, since we are of opinion that there was a different commencement of the estates limited to the trustees and the issue in tail, there is no inconsistency.

As to the third, it is highly absurd, and,
against reason, and I think, against law too;
but in support of this, the case of Camberford
v. Birch, 2 Lev. 157, was cited by the defendant's counsel; there the settlement was with a proviso, that in case none of the brothers or sisters of A., or any of the children, be living, then immediately, or after a term of 21 years ended, to the use of B. C. and D., his brothers successively in tail male, remainder to the plaintiff. A. died without issue, B. and C. died without issue male, but B. had issue a daughter, and A. himself had sisters living; this the Court held to be one sentence, and a condition precedent, that none of the brothers or sisters of A. or any of their children be then living, and which as it had not happened, all the remainders were void, and judgment for the defendants; and it was not at all determined on the necessity there was that the remainders should take effect on both disjunctives; but that case does not come up to the present, for it was never intended that the remainder should vest on the death of Robert Dormer, but as appears by the express words, on a determination of the estate for 99 years before his death, and such a construction as the defendant's counsel contended for, would destroy not only the remainder to Eusebe, but every one of the remainders limited by the deed, except the remainder to John Dormer and his heirs; and the words of a deed must be extremely strong, which would induce us to construe all the limitations in the deed to be void. We therefore are of opinion, that the limitations to the first and every other son of Eusebe, were good remainders.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM XII.—VOL. 3.

SCINTILLA.

What is the doctrine of Scintilla?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM VIII.
VOL. III.

LIVERY OF SEISIN.(1)

When is it necessary?—To whom may it be made?—and how?

Livery is the essential and operative part of the Conveyance by Feoffment, and until livery (when necessary), no estate passes.

Livery of seisin must be had and made in all cases where any estate of fee simple, fee tail, or for a man's own life is made or granted in writing, or word, in the country of any lands or tenements corporeal, where the person granting them has the lands or tenements in possession, (2) Littl. sec. 59.; Shepp. Touchst. 210.; Prest. Abst. 1, 291.

To lease for years, with or without deed, no livery is necessary, but where an estate of freehold or inheritance, as for life in tail or in fee expectant on the term is limited, livery must be made, and that to the lessee, otherwise no estate passes to those in remainder, Littl. sec. 60. For the livery could not be made to the remainderman, the lessee being in possession. And if the lease be made to two without deed remainder to another in fee, and livery is made to one only in the absence of the other, the livery is good to vest the remainder; but if a feoffment be made to two and their heirs, without deed, and the livery be made to one only in the name of both the livery is void as to the absentee; but good if the feoffment be made by deed, Co. Litt. 49, b.

If lands be granted to a man for a term of two years, and upon condition performed that he shall have the inheritance, if the grantee enter before livery and perform the condition, yet he shall only have the term Littl. sec. 349. But see Preston's interpretation in Shepp. Touchst. 210, where it says—if there be a deed, the fee will arise.

As to the situation of the fee in feoffment on condition, whether it be in abeyance, the feoffor, or in the feoffee, and whether breach of condition the feoffor may re-enter there have been contrary decisions and opinions. The better opinion seems to be, that a reversion is left in the feoffor, and that he may re-enter, Littl. sec. 350.; Co. Litt. 21 b. et seqq. Butler's note, 216 a. Doc and Student, b. 2, cap. 20 and 23, where the opinion of an implied condition of re-entry is entertained, see also cap. 21.

When an estate is conveyed under power, no livery is necessary, nor in an exchange; and if a house or land belongeth to an office, by a grant of the office by deed the house or land will pass. As if a house and chamber belong to a Corody, by grant of the Corody the house or chamber passeth. A freehold may by custom be surrendered without livery, Co. Litt. 49 a.—see Vin Abr. Feoffment.

Livery must be made to the feoffee, the feoffor, or to the attorney appointed by deed (3) of the feoffee, by the attorney of the feoffor, also by deed appointed; and livery must be made and taken in the time of the feoffor and feoffee, for the power expires with the life of the donor of the power. And the power must be strictly pursued, as if a letter of attorney be given to make livery to J. S. Capellano, the attorney cannot make livery to J. S. unless he be a Chaplain, 4 H. 6. 1. b. But such non-compliance would not vitiate the feoffment.

—Before the Statute of Frauds, if the feoffment was not by deed, livery could only be made available for the benefit of the person to whom it was made. All persons may receive livery of seisin, except those disabled by law; but those so disabled, as m ants, &c. may make and receive attornies. And livery to one in of many, if the feoffment be by od. Tenant in common may re- of his companion, but joint te- not. And livery must in all cases the immediate grantee. must be made either on the land view of the land, and the feoffor possession; for that purpose, in se,—

L. Doe, the feoffor, sets about make the people in, go out; er pretence of some balloon,
being wonders in the moon."

Conveyancer's Guide, 169.

akes the key of the house, or a land, and holding the key or turf same to the feoffee, saying, "I key or turf to you in the name this house, &c. to hold to, &c. to the form and effect of this )which is then produced, and after- memorandum of the livery is in- attested by the witnesses present. re delivery of the charter of feoff- the name of seisin of the land, is Inst. 48, a.; but such delivery r declaration is insufficient. Ibid. sion of a tenant is considered the of the lessor, and the possession at sufferance will be no obstacle. ry is made in view, the feoffor give you yonder house, enter and sion." But livery in view cannot y attorney. 1 Inst. 49, a. And ill pass till the feoffee has entered hed as near as possible, and claims the claim must be made in the the feoffor. (5) ere are several pieces of land in , livery of seisin of one in the l, or of one according to the deed, fficient for all, if all be in the ossession and out of lease. But in divers counties, or in the same county, and they be not in the grantor's possession or in lease, contra Shep. Touchst. 212.

Feoffments merge all powers except powers collateral; since the Statute of Uses this mode of conveyance is rarely used.

Formerly feoffment and livery of seisin passed the fee by right or wrong, but now they will only operate to pass what the feoffor can lawfully convey. 5 Dowl. & Ryl. 161. A. J. H.

(1) LIVERY OF SEISIN (so technically called) is the ceremony of delivering upon the land, in the presence of witnesses, a detached portion of the soil, or some other symbol, a solemn investiture, which, while the art of writing was rare, supplied the only evidence of the transaction, and which, although written evidence was afterwards required by the Stat. 29. Car. 2. c. 3. (Frauds), still continued to be the essence of the conveyance, which was a FEOFFMENT, and by which land still passes. Practitioners, however, should use great caution in adopting this mode of conveyance, and should not rely too much upon the power and character given to this species of conveyance in the old authorities for experimental operations or delusive speculations; as for instance, by the skin of parchment transforming a term into a fee, &c. See Doe v. Lynes, 3 Barn. & Cress. 388; Doe v. Hall, 2 Dowl. & Ry. 38.—Ed.

(2) One reason why freehold interests cannot be made to commence in futuro is, because they cannot at Common Law be made without livery of seisin, which being an actual transition of the land must take effect in presenti, or not at all. See 2 Black. Com. 314.—Ed.

(3) If made under a power of attorney contained in the deed itself, it is not necessary that it should be made on the day of the date of the deed; for the power may be well executed afterwards. Doe d. Heale v. Rashleigh, 3 Barn. & Ald. 158.—Ed.

(4) In making livery of seisin no particular form of words need be observed. Doe d. Barnett v. Stock, Gow. 178.—ED.

(5) Livery of seisin is not rendered void by the fact of a child having remained on the premises at the time, even though such child were the descendant of a party having title, unless the child was placed there for the purpose of representing that party. Doe d. Reed v. Taylor, 2 Nev. & Man. 508; 5 Barn. & Adol. 575.—ED.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.

STOCKDALE V. HANSARD.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL called the attention of the House to a subject, which, he regretted to say, must take precedence even of the consideration of her Majesty's speech—the state of the proceedings in the last action of Stockdale v. Hansard.

Mr. Hansard's petition was then read at the table, after which LORD JOHN RUSSELL observed, that the matter could not be suffered to remain where it stood, a levy having been made of between £600. and £700. There were different courses open to the House. That which he thought most consistent with their dignity was, that they should resort to the ancient mode of commitment; or they might direct the printer to defend all actions; or they might abandon their privilege of publishing to the world, and confine their publication to the use of members; or they might settle the whole matter by introducing a bill. But no one would say that they, the grand inquest of the nation, ought to continue their present practice of publication, and leave their publisher liable to suits. He would move, therefore, that Stockdale, the sheriffs, and some other parties connected with the action, should attend to-morrow at the bar.

SIR EDWARD SUGDEN warned the House to consider the consequences to which they were about to commit themselves. He took a short but comprehensive review of the law, and showed that the cases in which the courts of Westminster Hall had held themselves excluded from discussing the privileges of the House were cases in which there had been a commitment in execution. He adverted to the absurdities which their present assertion of exclusive judicature would involve. If the Queen's Bench had decided in favour of the privilege, the privilege would not thereby have been necessarily established; for even then the plaintiff could have appealed to the House of Lords, who might have overruled the privilege, and would at all events have taken cognizance of it. And how could the House commit the sheriffs? Having authorized a plea in these actions, it had admitted that the judges were bound to decide that plea; and if the judges were bound to pronounce a decision, the sheriffs were bound to follow it.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL supported the motion. If the House allowed the Queen's Bench to try such an action, they must allow every petty court in England to try it, every county court, every court of requests, every manor court. (?) In this third action, however, the judges had not interfered: the judgment had gone by default; so that the sheriff was the only party to be fixed with responsibility. A plaintiff, who had brought an action against a messenger for taking away his umbrella in the House of Lords, was summoned to the bar of the House, together with the judge of the court of conscience where the action had been tried; and the House of Lords had compelled him to forego the points of his judgment. (The plaintiff's attempt to retain his umbrella was an obstruction to the business of the House; and it is clear that the privilege of either House extends to prevent all such obstructions, and, of course, to prevent all proceedings against the officers whose duty it is to get those obstructions removed.)

LORD MAHON thought it safer to rely on the uniform decisions of the judges than on shifting majorities in the House of Commons. It did not follow, even if the House possessed the privilege now claimed, that there was a necessity for thus asserting it. The reporting of the debates was an undoubted breach of privilege; but the House were not accustomed to commit the reporters.

MR. CRESSWELL said that it was a mistake to treat the sheriff as the only officer in question upon this third action; the judges were concerned in it, for the sheriff had applied to them, and they had declined to give him the protection he had asked. The House had originally admitted the jurisdiction of the Queen's Bench, but now, because the decision was against them, they denied that jurisdiction. If this publication was protected, it was not by privilege of Parliament, but by the general rule of law which sanctions bond fide communications to any party on a subject in which he has an interest. The only precedent for the interference of either House of Parliament with an action was the case of the umbrella; but that was an action for a thing done in the House. Commitments, indeed, have been upheld by the courts; but that was because commitments are judgments; and it is of the nature of a judgment to be irreversible except by a tribunal of appeal.

SIR ROBERT PEEL took a short retrospect of the facts, and then enlarged upon the unreason leaving the officer of the House exactions for obeying its orders. He privilege an essential one, of public only for the use of the members, but of their constituents. There might, for instance, to address the Crown in royal of a judge on the ground of Surely the people ought to be made with that ground. It was true that the session of the House was imperfect—that the session. Is not its cessation a tolerably strong proof that it did only to obviate obstructions? But, not advised, he was ready to take the course proposed by Lord John Russell.

Mr. KELLY opposed the assertion of privilege, to secure indemnity to the printer. Officers were sincere in their allegations. The Court of Queen's Bench had decided erroneously, and they try the question by a writ of error.

LORD J. RUSSELL cited from Lord Denning, in Stockdale v. Hansard, some of the former decisions, which tended to confirm the opinions even of the judges have been always uniform, and sometimes have been under the excitement of the time. When they were tolerated, questions might be raised by the admission of strangers during any session which involved imputations on individuals in the Duke of York's case. The Lords had asserted the privilege, and the House of Commons.

The question is divided—

286 | Noes . . . 167

Majority . . . 119

RUSSELL then moved that, on Friday, the day by whom the writ had been executed, the Sheriff attend at the bar of the House, and bring with him the warrant under which he acted.

Mr. KELLY hoped that the noble Lord would support his motion that the sheriff do attend at the bar, bringing with him all the writs, orders, rules, and other authorities under which he acted in the case.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL thought it quite unnecessary to make any order requiring the production of writs or other documents in the case.

That officer, as a matter of course, would bring with him all that might be wanting for his own justification. It was not the business of the House to make any order upon the sense of his own interest, and of what might be done by himself, would lead the Sheriff, as a matter of course, to bring with him to the bar of the House all that might be wanting to exonerate the course which he himself had

Mr. KELLY said, that the observations which he had just heard from the learned Attorney-General formed an equally good argument for the production of the warrant as against the production of the writs. Why call upon the inferior officer to produce his authorities if they were not prepared to call upon the superior functionary to produce his authority likewise? He hoped that they were prepared to face the real grounds upon which the proceeding rested. He hoped that they would not flinch from dealing with the Sheriff in the matter, and examine into the grounds upon which he went. They were afraid of the judges awhile ago, now they were afraid of the writs. The House, he trusted, would not sanction a demand for the warrant; that they would, in fact, reject the motion for producing the warrant, or else let the Sheriff produce the writs, and then say whether they were prepared to call upon the Sheriff to answer to the House of Commons for doing that which he could not fail to do—namely, to yield obedience to the injunctions of the Court of Queen's Bench. Surely, when the Sheriff, or any one acting under him, was brought to the bar of that House, and asked why he had taken a certain course, and done certain acts, he ought to receive previous notice to bring with him the documents necessary for the purpose of explaining and vindicating his conduct.

Mr. KELLY said, he should move an amendment to the effect that the Sheriff do attend at the bar of the House, and bring with him all writs, orders, rules, and other authorities under which he acted in this case.

LORD J. RUSSELL concurred with his Hon. and Learned Friend the Attorney-General, that there was no necessity for calling upon the Sheriff to bring with him those authorities, at the same time he did not feel it to be absolutely necessary to refuse agreeing to the proposition for their production. He wished, however, to extend the motion to the Under-Sheriff, and include all notices amongst the documents which the Sheriff was to bring.

A motion was then agreed to, directing that the Sheriff and Under-Sheriff do attend at the bar of the House to-morrow, bringing all writs, rules, orders, and notices, received by them in the case.*

* The question lies in a narrow compass. Is the House of Commons or the law to govern England? There ought to be no confusion—it is a question between the House of Commons and the law as adverse parties. It is nothing to tell us that the House of Commons has privileges, and that as far as these privileges have been exercised and acquiesced in, either by the tribunals of the country, or by the other branches of the legislature, these privileges are a part of the general law. We admit all this; but we deny that it applies to the case now under consideration. In that case the House claims to create a new privilege, that is, to make an addition to the laws of its own mere authority. Let this power be conceded to the House, and it becomes exclusively the legislature, and its orders must be recognised by the courts of justice as laws of plenary authority. Indeed, this is the very thing at present demanded.—Standard.

Law Reports.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.—Dec. 2.

NEWLANDS v. HOLMES.

SEPARATE USE of MARRIED WOMEN. (a)

Mr. JACOB (with Mr. Bethell) moved to dissolve an injunction awarded on the 28th of November against Mr. Samuel Paynter, the Sheriff of Surrey, to restrain him from executing any process issued out of the Court of Queen's Bench in an action brought against the plaintiff by the defendant Holmes, either against the leasehold premises, No. 19, West-square, Southwark, or the goods and chattels therein, in respect of any claim against the husband of the plaintiff. The defendant, Holmes, having recovered £200 damages at the summer assizes, in an action of trespass against William Newlands, the plaintiff's husband, entered up judgment on the 25th of November, and issued a writ of execution to the Sheriff of Surrey, whereupon Mrs. Newlands filed the present bill, which stated that her father, John Peter Reina, by his will, bearing date the 3d of October, 1833, bequeathed to her by the name of Mary Sarah Reina, all his property whatsoever, and appointed her sole executrix, and thereby specifically directed that any property he might have given or should give to her should not be liable to the interference or controul, in any way, of any person or husband she might be married to, or liable to his then present or future debts, but that her receipt alone should be a discharge for all the money or effects he might give or leave to the plaintiff; and that she should dispose of the same by her will and testament as she pleased, notwithstanding her coverture; that she proved the will on the 23d of October, 1833, and intermarried with William Newlands on the 20th of November following, and that she had continued ever since to reside with him in the house No. 19, West-square, which, with the furniture, plate, &c. therein, formed part of the property bequeathed to her by her father. The bill then stated that she had not, at the time of her marriage with Newlands, or at any time since the death of her father, any property except that which she took under his will, and that all the goods and chattels in the house (which were separately set forth), were either a portion of the testator's property, and subject to the trusts of his will, or had been purchased out of the income of her separate estate, and therefore she submitted that her husband was a trustee for her of all such legal estate and interest as she had in the lease-hold premises, and the goods and chattels therein to her separate use. The affidavits in support of the present motion to dissolve the injunction stated, among other things, the witness's belief that a settlement of £6,000 bank stock was made upon Mrs. Newlands at the date of her marriage. If this were true, the fact ought to have been stated to the Court when the injunction was applied for. (The settlement was handed to his Honour.) The learned counsel then contended this being the case of a gift to a woman absolutely, and she being also executrix, there was no ground for drawing any distinction between legal and equitable ownership. Had the legal ownership been in trustees, had the marriage been before the death of the father, or had the bequest been to a married woman, the case would be different. The marriage amounted to an unqualified gift to the husband, and there was no contract or stipulation to limit the effect of the gift; on the contrary, there was a stipulation as to a portion of the property, that it should be settled, and the necessary presumption was, that as to the rest, the husband's marital right should prevail. The present case was precisely the same as "Massey v. Parker," (b) and must be governed by that case until the question was decided otherwise.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR did not call upon the counsel who supported the injunction to address the Court, but said he thought the point very simple. If a man married a woman who had personal chattels prima facie at law, the act of marriage constituted a gift to the husband of those chattels. If the wife had a term of years either legal or equitable, the law said during coverture the husband might assign the term if he pleased, and if he survived the wife, he took it as a gift by marriage, and was not obliged to administer to her for the sake of constituting the term in him in virtue of the wife. If he died in her lifetime, the term survived to her. With respect to choses in action, they remained in the wife during coverture, unless the husband during coverture reduced them into possession. But his Honour always understood that a father might make a gift to the separate use of his child, being a daughter; and in this case it appeared very plain to him that the testator expressed an intention that there should be a trust for the separate use of his daughter, although he had not so fully worked out that intention as he might have done. For, having given the property to his daughter and appointed her sole executrix, he specifically directed that any property he might have given or should give to her, should not be liable to the interference or controul in any way of any person or husband she might be married to (which

(a) See Editor's letter to the Lord Chancellor ante, vol. I. p. 225; see also id. pp. 22, 38, 69, 143, 167.

(b) 2 Myl. & Ke. 174.

an inaccurate expression this gentleman, because he imagined she might be a person who might not be her husband to his then present or future at her receipt alone should be a disbursement of the money or effects he might give the plaintiff, and that she should disburse the same by her will and testament as notwithstanding her coverture. His Lordship held, that when the testator died, the daughter proved the will, she certainly became the absolute owner of all the property of a personal nature the father gave her, and when she married she did not give to her husband the complete disposal of all the personal property. The question was whether, when she married a woman who took the property under such a bequest as this, she necessarily subject the marital right and powers which he acquired by the executrix to that trust, that was the Honour should say) by the will on the testator gave to his daughter. His Lordship could not but think, until he was informed of a higher authority, that the husband, by marrying the executrix, did, though he himself with legal rights and legal powers, subject to that trust which was affixed to the property. The marriage settlement had not been called to the notice of the Honour had read it through, and was solely confined to a sum of £6,000. which was admitted to have been part of the father's estate. It was not a settlement of Bank Stock to the separate use of the wife in the same manner in which she took the property; but, on the contrary, it appeared to be a reduction and limitation of the property, as the cestui que trust of her property she had over it; for the stock was put into the names of three persons as trustees for her separate use for life, and if she happened to survive her husband, it was to be hers absolutely; but if her husband survived her then she had no power of disposition otherwise than by a testamentary will, and so much as she did not dispose of should belong to her husband. It was by the constitution of the settlement that the husband was let in to participate for his share in the Bank Stock, to the prejudice of the intention of those rights the wife had under the father's will. If there were express words in consideration of the settlement that the husband should become absolute owner of all the wife's other property, then there would be a relinquishment of her rights over the property; but the settlement was not as to that, and he thought it would be a new thing to say that where the husband derived a benefit from the wife's property and gave her no benefit, and nothing elsewhere was said or treated of except what related to the wife's property, it should ipso facto give the husband all the property not contained in the settlement. He could not but think, the true construction of the father's will and the settlement taken together, the wife did stand in this position, viz that the husband, so far as he had any right under the marital power, had that right as trustee for his wife, and therefore he thought the chattels were not seizable in equity, though they might be at law, and that the motion to dissolve the injunction must be refused, without costs.

APPEAL.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Dec. 5.

The above decision of the VICE CHANCELLOR was appealed from on the ground that the decision was wrong, as it left the defendant without any security for his debt until the decision of the cause.

Mr. Jacob appeared for the defendant in support of the appeal, and submitted that at all events the Vice-Chancellor's order must be varied, as there ought to be some restraint on the plaintiff from disposing of the property pending the suit.

Mr. Wigram supported the Vice-Chancellor's view of the case, and contended that the will of the father gave the property to the separate use of the plaintiff, his daughter, and on her marrying Mr. Newland afterwards, there was an implied, though not an express contract, to respect the disposition of the property as made by the lady's father.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said the question in this and in two other cases, which were waiting for his judgment, were questions of the greatest difficulty and importance, and whichever way they should be decided, several other decided cases must be overruled. The two cases referred to, Tullett v. Armstrong, and Scarborough v. Borman, were for some time under his consideration, and he would dispose of them before Christmas. Until that decision he would avoid giving any opinion on the question of "separate use." In any view, however, of the subject, the Vice-Chancellor's order in this case ought not to be allowed, as it gave no security for the protection of the property, but, on the contrary, the order continuing the injunction left the defendant (who was the claimant) without any security for his debt, which could not be right. The plaintiff must either go before the Master and give security for the property to be forthcoming when the cause shall be decided, or pay the amount of the judgment, debt, and costs into court. In either case the sheriff, if in possession, will retire, or if he is not in possession he will be restrained from taking it.—Injunction dissolved.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Nov. 14.

Sittings in Banco.

SALMOND v. ROLLIN.

WRIT of SUMMONS—Irregularity—PRACTICE

Mr. Thomas moved to set aside service of a writ of summons, on the ground of irregularity. The objections were two. First, the writ of summons did not say whether the defendant was to appear in the Court of Exchequer or the Exchequer of Pleas, the former being the equity side, the latter the common law side of the court, so that the defendant would not know where to make his appearance.

Mr. Baron GURNEY.—Does your client swear that in his affidavit?

Mr. Thomas.—No, he does not; but it is so stated in my instructions.

Mr. Baron PARKE.—It all depends upon the form given by the act of Parliament, and that is, "in our court of —," without stating any court. As, therefore, no precise form is given by which to designate this Court in particular, I think it is sufficient. You will take no rule therefore.

Mr. Thomas.—There is another objection to this writ which my client wishes me to bring under the notice of the Court, and that consists of the omission of the letter "d" in the word "and," in the form given by the statute.

Mr. Baron PARKE.—I don't think you can make anything of that either.

Rule refused.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE'S CASE.

Act for Abolishing Arrest for Debt, sec. 89.

Mr. Cooke applied to the Court under the 89th section of the act, for a rule calling on the Sheriff of Middlesex to hold and retain the sum of £600. paid as the damages against Messrs. Hansard into the hands of the sheriff, and for a rule on Stockdale to show cause why that sum, or such portions as the court should think fit, should not be paid into the hands of an assignee, to be appointed, for the benefit of the creditors. The schedule was in court for the inspection of the learned Commissioners, and it would appear that Mr. Stockdale was discharged under the act, in January, 1831, and that his debts remained unpaid. He made the application on the part of Mr. Samuel Chamberlain, coach-builder, in Great Newport-street, who, he believed, opposed on the bearing. The court was aware that it was not necessary for an assignee to make the motion, none had been appointed, and a creditor was authorised to make the application.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—Who is the creditor? Mr. Cooke.—Mr. Samuel Chamberlain.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—I see in the schedule he is a creditor for 13 guineas.

Mr. Cooke read the affidavit of Mr. Chamberlain, which set forth that Mr. Stockdale was discharged in 1831, and no assignee appointed. That deponent had been informed, and believed that the said Stockdale had obtained a verdict with £600. damages, in an action for libel against Messrs. Hansard, of Lincoln's Inn fields, and that £600. with costs, under a writ of fieri facias, had been paid into the hands of the Sheriff of Middlesex, where it now remained. Deponent, therefore, applied that a rule should issue on the said sheriff to hold and retain the money until further order; and also on the said sheriff and the said Stockdale to show cause why it could not, or a portion, be paid for the benefit of the creditors inserted in the schedule.

Rule nisi to be granted.

COURT OF THE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

Libel.

(Concluded from p. 140.)

Mr. STOCKDALE then proceeded to observe.—He had a right also to impress upon the jury what influence wealth might effect in such a case as this. It had been insinuated that it was only briefless barristers and scamping attorneys who would lend him support; but supposing him to be so supported, it would not matter. It might be that there were briefless barristers who deserved briefs; and it was now the interest of the bar to vindicate its high character, and merely to advocate that cause which paid the best, but to maintain that character which Lord Mansfield had so well described as "ornamented most by the brilliant gem of truth." But supposing bribery had been employed to buy up the cause from under him, and to make him stay away where would have been the dignity of the bar where the rights of this country? Up to the present time, precisely the same case as his own had not occurred; but there was one case of disturbed times which, though mentioned in judgment, had been studiously kept from light. That was the case of a man than whom one more profligate, more wicked, more obscure or more villainous had never existed in the country—he alluded to John Wilkes, who, when it suited his convenience, fled the country; use—the great question of general warrants could not come on for years. The general warrants had been exercised by Lord Halifax and the Treasury; the same Treasury, he would repeat, “able iteration,” as Falstaff had it, by of Whigs too, for it was a strong the attacks on the liberties of the been made by the Whigs. On the 1763, Wilkes was committed to the general warrant, and remained there and it was to be remarked that the ed against him had been up to that ly exercised in similar cases. On June he commenced his action for false imprisonment; but as soon as e fled the country, and was outlawed. ever, from his (Mr. Stockdale’s) y, he had remained at home pur- if he would be sent for, though he at a prison was, and its privations. choose to bring his action till the ommons’ committee had made its had said “that it had been so it had not time to report,” when, had nothing to report, and wished ne chapter of accidents. He read the Morning Chronicle, and before on the same day the action was re Parliament was prorogued; and essrs. Hansard were informed, in eir own letter, that the action was use, in contempt of the former ver- tinued to sell the libel against him. tempt he was determined to push his try the question before Parliament f the House had sent immediately, e been taken: he remained at home, have been committed to the Tower, or to the custody of the sergeant-at- the House knew well that there their end. The House, however, would must come to the bar of the House, d come if he were asked; but they ommit him without learning from his were stepping beyond their power, oever their officer might be, as soon eleased, he would bring his action or the assault and false imprisonment ough them. Still the real offender . The monkey used the paws of ke the chesnuts out of the fire, and, d, he would but catch naves do work with, called a fool.”

“The tool

rs themselves would not get into the ose who even now bought their seats noyed at what he had said that day; een done before, members would get use, make again those false assertions for which they had already begged the pardon of the judges, and say, “Here you cannot hurt me.” Unless the jury should give emphatic damages that day, they would not show what might be done in a court of justice by an unflinching course, and by a reliance on the constitution of the country; nor would the poor man see that, without disturbance, if injustice had been rendered by the highest, the poorest might obtain his right. In the case of Wilkes, in 1771, it was pleaded that verdicts had already been obtained; but he laid his damages at £20,000, and got £7000, although avowedly there was not a more profligate man in morals and religion, for he was a recorded atheist; and that verdict was given seventy years ago. In the present case, the defendants had not attempted to impeach his character; and if they could, would they not have done so? In the Queen’s Bench, though nothing had been dropped by the judges in favour of his character, nothing had passed against it, and when the chief officer of the law alluded to it, he was reprovved by the Chief-Justice, who said that it was indeed a novel practice to hear so high a functionary introduce into the argument on such a legal case the “Memoirs of Harriett Wilson,” or any other memoirs; all of which, if published by him, would, however, bear the closest examination, and, to a mind not previously polluted, would present a better argument on morality than many sermons. The House might discover that before it committed, it must permit him to expose at the bar of the House that which would suffuse cheeks that were never suffused before, and they would learn that instead of the plaintiff starting for America, he was ready and willing to fight his own battle and the battle of his country. He trusted that the jury would give due weight to the facts before them. In his ignorance of the practice of pleading, he might have stated that which he would not be allowed to prove, but he possessed the means of proving it; he wished that the verdict should be given deliberately. but that it should be given without doubt; that they would arrive at it from the facts, and the facts alone; but he trusted that it would be that the plaintiff in this cause had damages to £50,000.

No further evidence was tendered.

The UNDER-SHERIFF, in summing up, said that the plaintiff sought at the hands of the jury damages for a publication made by the defendants, and which he read from the record. That libel the defendants confessed that they had illegally published, and there was no doubt that the plaintiff was entitled to their verdict. He would only call their attention to the oath which they had taken, diligently to inquire, to assess the damages, and a true verdict give according to the evidence. Great observation had been made, and indeed they could not shut their eyes to the fact, to proceedings that had taken place in other places touching a suit similar to this; and it was stated that they were all in jeopardy by proceeding with their duty in this cause. All his life had been spent in courts of justice; he had there learned the law of the land, and he hoped that for a long time there would in England exist judges to whom they should look for the construction of the law. All were bound to obey the law, and, if any difficulty arose, to whom were the Queen's subjects to go? To the Courts of Westminster Hall; and so long as men of learning were selected by the Queen, and paid by the public, it was to them, and to them alone, that her Majesty's subjects, high or low, must resort for an exposition of the law under difficulty. It had been intimated that there was some fear in the public office of the Sheriff of Middlesex; but he assured the jury that there was no doubt, no apprehension; the sheriff did not fear the execution of the process of the Court; but he informed the Court that he had received intimation that the execution might be and was impeached by another power. The sheriff thought it right to intimate this to the Queen's Bench; but he hoped that so long as the laws were to be obeyed, nobody would fear to execute the laws of the land. If they were to be hereafter punished by a power stronger than what he conceived to be the law of the land, they must take the consequences; but if physical force were employed against those who expounded the law, it would be a state of unhappiness in this country which he hoped never would be seen. It was clear that the defendants had published this work after a verdict had been already obtained against them for the same matter. In ordinary cases, a party persisting in doing that which was a subject of wrong, particularly with a knowledge that it was wrong and after the verdict of a court, aggravated the damages; it was for the jury to say whether, in this peculiar case, the circumstances had been aggravated on the part of the defendants. Mr. Stockdale did not impute to the defendants any malus animus; he described them as the agents of other persons, and he said that they were indemnified; but of that there was not a tittle of evidence: there was no evidence that they would be reimbursed by any legal mode the damages that should be awarded. It was for the jury to say what damages the plaintiff had sustained. They were not sitting there to punish the defendants as an expression of an opinion on any matter not before them; they ought not to travel out of the record; and they ought not to give one farthing more or less, except the damages the plaintiff had actually sustained, with the view of any expression of an opinion on any question not before them. It was not their place to give any opinion on any question other than that of the plaintiff; they ought not to travel out of the record, but they were to say what damages the plaintiff had sustained. That question was peculiarly in their breast. He would carefully abstain from any intimation as to the amount; it was no part of his duty: it was for them to do as they thought right: but this he would advise them—that whatever damages the plaintiff had fairly sustained—without reference to, or the fear of any consequences—to give fairly. He had spent many years in courts of justice; he had had many opportunities of watching the judges of the land, and he had always found that those who had watched them respected them.

A jurymen inquired whether the book complained of by the inspectors was before them?

The UNDER-SHERIFF replied, that the book was not put before them. It would have been better if the plaintiff had put the book before them, and if they thought that Mr. Stockdale had not put it in because it would influence the verdict, undoubtedly that would affect the damages which they would be likely to give. It was one of the matters for the jury to consider, that he did not produce it. There was one point on which an observation had been made and a paper produced. The plaintiff said that he had been paid 11s. 4d. and that that was all he had in the former cases; but, looking at the paper, he found the item “Sheriff, for damages and costs, £290. 14s. The costs were included with the damages, and it ought not to be said that the plaintiff received only 11s. 4d.

Verdict—Damages £600.

Michaelmas Term, 1839.

Mr. Platt applied and obtained a rule against the Sheriff to return the writ, and on the 23d of November a fieri facias was issued against the defendant's goods, and lodged at the Sheriff's office, Red Lion-square. On the 25th of the same month the Sheriff was served with a Judge's order to return the fieri facias; and, in obedience thereto, he returned on the 29th “that he had caused to be seized divers goods and chattels of the defendant's, which remained in his hands unsold, for want of buyers.” On the 2d of December the plaintiff issued a writ of venditioni exponas, requiring the Sheriff to sell the defendant's goods, whereupon he directed his warrant to Hemp, the officer, and Mr. Crook, an auctioneer, of Snow-hill, was engaged to dispose of them by public auction. Messrs. Parkes and Preston, in the mean time, served the Sheriff with a written notice, reminding him that if he proceeded to a sale, he would be amenable for the consequences of a breach of parliamentary privilege, to which document was formally annexed a copy of the resolution passed by the summons, declaring that they possessed of publishing parliamentary reports. In December the Sheriff was served with a Judge's summons for him to writ of venditioni exponas, and on parties attended before Mr. Justice at his chambers, in Sergeant's Inn, Lordship was pleased to grant the Sheriff's petition of time, and stayed the return.

By the Sheriff determined to sell the defendant, and Mr. Crook accorded the auction to take place at one of the defendant's premises, in Lincoln's Inn. On the evening previously, however, the goods in execution were disposed of by the Sheriff for £695. to Nicholas Winsland.

The writ of venditioni exponas was then issued by the Sheriff, pursuant to Judge Little, with the following indorsement:

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD AND OTHERS.

Text.—I hereby certify and return that, in pursuance of this writ, I have caused to be sold the goods and chattels of the within-mentioned defendant, and every part thereof, for the best price I could obtain, and I leave the said money arising from the sale before the Queen, at Westminster, to the within-named John Joseph Stockdale, who is within commanded."

William Evans and John Wheelton,

On the 10th of this month Stockdale took out a writ, directing the Sheriff to show cause why he should not pay over the debt and costs, and on the 21st it was part heard, and on the 28th further hearing until Monday last, the 5th of January. At the time appointed the Sheriff and Mr. Watson attended to show cause against the summons; when, in consequence of the plaintiff being unable to produce a Judge's interference under similar circumstances, Mr. Justice Little refused to order on the subject.

QUEEN'S BENCH.—Jan. 11.

The plaintiff moved for a rule to show cause why the Sheriff should not pay over to the plaintiff the money which he had received as the proceeds of the levy. Mr. Stockdale, as well as his counsel, had made application for the payment of the money, but, in each instance, the Sheriff refused to hand it over. The present motion, therefore, was, that the Sheriff having received the money, and so having refused to obey the intent of the rule of the Court, should be ordered to pay the money over by a rule of that Court, in order that the plaintiff might be able to take such proceedings in the event of a further refusal against him for a breach of duty as he might be advised.

Lord DENMAN. — Take a rule to show cause. (a)

(a) See Report of the proceedings in the House of Commons in this case, ante.

TRIAL OF JOHN FROST FOR HIGH TREASON.* CHIEF JUSTICE TINDAL'S ADDRESS.

(Continued from p. 173.)

Upon the evidence of the first witness, Simmons, when the first allusion to Frost occurred, as having directed the tumultuous assemblage, and in various ways, to "go towards the town, and show yourselves to the town," the learned Judge observed, that it would be found from other testimony that what was passing at this moment gave rise to that direction of the prisoner. But taking the words by themselves, "Let us go towards the town, and show ourselves to the town," there was nothing in the mere purpose of going towards the town and showing themselves to the town savouring of or at all amounting to an attack on the town itself. Strictly considered by themselves, they amounted only to a display of themselves to the town—nothing more. The jury must, however, take their construction as well from the words themselves as from the circumstances by which they were accompanied, and of those by whom the prisoner was then surrounded. Unless it was shown by clear and conclusive evidence that something deeper than their natural interpretation was intended, the jury must give to them their natural and fair meaning only. If they were used in their real sense, the words would undoubtedly not import a criminal meaning. In the evidence of the same witness, the words "turn round to the front" occurred, as spoken by Frost to the mob; upon which the learned Judge observed that the meaning of those words fell far short of any direct attack on the Westgate Inn, or those who were found there. It was only by reference to the surrounding circumstances, which happened there at that time, that the jury could form any conclusion as to what the intention was. Unless it clearly appeared by evidence, of which there could be no reasonable doubt that they had another meaning distinct from their natural signification, undoubtedly it would be their duty to give to them the natural sense only which the words themselves imported. From the evidence of Waters it appeared that Frost was seen in front of the inn immediately before the firing commenced. The same witness stated that he afterwards heard some hundred volleys, an expression which was no doubt exaggerated, perhaps from the excitement and confusion of the moment, if indeed the witness did not mean shots instead of volleys. But the difference in that respect between this and other witnesses was not so material. In his cross-examination he stated that there were prisoners at the Westgate Inn. Upon this the learned Judge observed, that on the part of the prisoner it was alleged that the object of this attack on the Westgate Inn was entirely unconnected with any design on the soldiers. They never saw the military there, it was said, till after the firing commenced, and they knew not they were there: but simply for the purpose of rescuing certain prisoners committed by the magistrates during the night preceding the tumult. If there had been no other evidence against the prisoner at the bar except the fact of the conflict that took place between the soldiers and the mob led on by the prisoner, it would certainly be very important to see that they had no knowledge the soldiers were there at all, and that they had an object perfectly distinct from the general one of attacking the soldiers and taking the town. They wanted nothing but to rescue certain prisoners. But that is not the whole of the case that will be laid before you. The learned judge then read the evidence of Rees, the boy who was called with Coles to speak to what took place as to the mob being ordered to march when within a short distance of Newport. The account of this witness varied slightly from that which was given by Coles, but the variance was very immaterial where boys were the one telling what he had heard, and the other what Frost had said. So far as it was material for the jury to know whether Mr. Frost was aware that there were soldiers at the Westgate, it was not material whether this boy gave a true account or not. The boy went on to say, that one of the party said, "We will have the Westgate." Now, this was important, in order to consider what was the state in which the Westgate then was, and whether he spoke in reference to that place as being then in the possession of the soldiers, or whether it was consistent with the object they had of releasing the Chartist prisoners who had been taken there during the night. That fact might have been communicated to them, and some one or other might then have said, "We will have the Westgate," but without there being any other treasonable design than that of rescuing the prisoners who were taken in the course of the night. They must weigh the evidence on both sides, and see how far it was consistent with an intention on the part of Frost and Jack the Fifer, they being aware of the soldiers then being at the Westgate, to go there in order to take possession of it whilst so guarded, or simply for the purpose of rescuing the prisoners, whom they thought were there placed in custody.

(a) Sentence of DEATH was passed in the usual form in cases of high treason, on Thursday last, upon John Frost.

(To be continued.)

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,—I beg to draw your attention to a very material error contained in S. A. W.'s answer to Problem 26, Vol. II. of the "Legal Guide."

The error I allude to will be found in p. 148, Vol. III. of the "Legal Guide," and consists in an erroneous extract from the 12 Car. II. c. 24.; S. A. W. stating that "All tenures are adjudged and taken to be for ever free, turned into free and common socage; Stat. 12 Car. II. ch. 24." Now, if you or S. A. W. will have the goodness to refer to that statute, you will see that the alterations effected by it were not, nor ever have been, so extensive as stated by S. A. W.; for the statute enacts, "That all sorts of tenures held of the King or others be turned into free and common socage, SAVE only tenures in frankalmoigne, copyhold, and the honorary services (without the slavish part) of grand serjeanty."

I would also draw your attention to the way in which this problem is answered. The problem itself runs thus: "Socage Tenure.—Describe what it is." The answer is, for the most part, occupied in giving a description of what that tenure originally was. Surely S. A. W. was not warranted in thus answering the question; and probably more than one other person's answer to that problem—and which consisted in describing what that tenure is at the present day—has been rejected to make room for the insertion of S. A. W.'s description of what that tenure was originally.

In conclusion I beg to say, that the above

ve not been made by reason of answered that identical pro- d that answer, as I presume from earance in the columns of your ving been rejected; nor do I least partiality to the learned he above work; but I imagine answer was inserted without con- at the Problem only required a of socage tenure at the present order to prevent a recurrence r kind, and in justice to myself er correspondents, I have been write the foregoing letter, and am time,

Your's most obediently,

C. B.

need only repeat our entire satis- seeing this sort of discussion. ondents cannot, in justice, charge ith partiality towards any parti- n, or with want of courage in up any particular correspondent ws have pronounced his errors.

quite correct.—The Problem is ed, and it NOW REMAINS OPEN for

NOT RECEIVED the Answer C. B. at us.—Ed.

VIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

ND COMMERCIAL DAILY REMEM- for 1840, containing an Ana- the Statutes passed 2nd and 3rd &c. London: Published by d Duncan, 9, Fleet Street.

ful, convenient, and cheap Diary nbrancer, we recommend this vo- ry professional man. The infor- ontains is spread over 145 pages, o seven parts.

-Law.—Almanack — Holidays at Offices—Quarter Sessions—Abridg- Stamp Act, with Practical Instruc- and other Public Offices—Law Officers and Residences—Inns of Court—Circuits of the Judges—Central Criminal Court—Police Magistrates—Courts of Request—Record Of- fices—Registries of Deeds—Patent Office— Commissions—Perpetual Commissioners under Abolition of Fines and Recoveries' Act—Town Clerks—Clerks of the Peace—Clerks to Magis- trates—Solicitors to Public Departments—Se- cretaries, Clerks, and Solicitors to Public Com- panies, Institutions, &c.—County Coroners for England and Wales—Vestry Clerks, Metropo- litan—Clerks to Boards of Guardians, and Soli- citors to Governors of Poor and Vestries—Di- rections of Writs, &c.—Cinque Ports and De- pendencies.

Part II.—Commercial.—Directors, &c. of the Bank of England and India Company—Fire and Life Insurance Companies—Gas Light and Water Companies—London Fire Engine Estab- lishment—Society for the Protection of Life from Fire—Bankers in London—Country Bank- ers—Transfer Days, &c. at the Bank, South Sea and India Houses—Army and Navy Agents— Public Notaries—Mail Coaches—Cross Mails —Falmouth and Liverpool Post Office Packets —Rates of Parcels from Inns—General and Twopenny Post Office—Railways—London Newspapers.

Part III.—Administration.—The Royal Family of Great Britain—Ministry, &c.—Her Majesty's Household—Commissioners for Af- fairs for India, and Woods and Forests—Kings and Queens of England from the Conquest— British Ministers Abroad—British Consuls Abroad—Foreign Ministers and Consuls in England—Modes of Address used in Writing to Persons of various Rank—Members of the House of Peers and Town Residences—Officers of the House of Peers—Members of the House of Commons and Town Residences— Officers of the House of Commons—Principal Club Houses—Lord Lieutenants—Ministry for Ireland—English, Irish, and Colonial Bishops, &c.

Part IV.—Revenue.—Commissioners of Cus- toms, Excise, Stamps, and Taxes.

Part V.—Tables.—Assessed Taxes—Annuity Table—Table of Interest at Four and Five per Cent.—Table to cast up Expenses—Table to Calculate Wages—Weights and Measures— Hackney Coach Fares.

Part VI.—Colonial.—Governors of British Colonies.

Part VII.—Parliamentary.—General Index to the Acts of the last Session, alphabetically arranged—Analysis of the 97 Acts passed in the 2nd and 3rd Victoria—Table of Local and Per- sonal Acts, and concludes with THE DIARY.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Sittings in Equity before LORD ABINGER in Hilary Term, 1840.

|           |         |   |   |                                                         |
|-----------|---------|---|---|---------------------------------------------------------|
| Monday    | Jan. 13 | - | - | Petitions and Motions.                                  |
| Wednesday | " 15    | - | - | Causes.                                                 |
| Saturday  | " 18    | - | - | { Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, and Further Directions. |
| Tuesday   | " 21    | - | - |                                                         |
| Saturday  | " 25    | - | - | { Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, and Further Directions. |
| Wednesday | " 29    | - | - |                                                         |
| Thursday  | " 30    | - | - | Causes.                                                 |
|           |         |   |   | Petitions and Motions.                                  |

NEW POSTAGE ORDERS.

Continued from p. 176.General Post Office, Jan. 7, 1840.

On and after the 10th instant, the boxes at Lombard-street, for the receipt of Foreign letters, on Tuesday and Friday nights, will be closed at 10 p.m.

At the Post-office in St. Martin's-le-Grand, they will be received after 10, and up to 11 p.m. on payment of a fee of one penny, and after 11 up to 11 30 p.m. on payment of a fee of 6d. The box and the window will be closed at Lombard-street immediately after the striking of the clock.

At the chief office, no letter will be received at the window after the clock has struck the hours above-mentioned, except on payment of the stated fees, and the window will be finally closed immediately after the clock has struck 11 30 p.m.

By Command,
W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

General Post Office, Jan. 6, 1840.

On and after the 10th instant, Deeds above the weight of sixteen ounces will be permitted to be forwarded by post, if sent open or in covers open at the sides, so that it may be clearly ascertained by postmasters that the packets transmitted are deeds. There will be no objection to their being tied up with string and sealed, in order to prevent inspection of the contents, though they must be open at the sides, that it may be seen they are entitled to the privilege.

By command, W. L. MABERLY, Secretary.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s.

We have no need to make any alteration in this Notice by reason of the NEW POSTAGE REGULATIONS, which are all fully and officially detailed in this paper. Our Country Subscribers will continue to receive it as heretofore, Postage Free, without any further charge.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. B. is answered.

S. A. W.—Take notice of C. B.'s letter.

D. S.—O. L.—T. W. T.—A. D.—H. M.—A Subscriber.—J. C.—all under consideration.

A Constant Subscriber from the commencement of this Journal.—To both your questions. Certainly not.

Just published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part I.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. 1 & 2, £1. 10s. London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

In the Press,

SECOND EDITION,

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, January 18, 1841

The Legal Guide.

.] SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 1840. [No. 18.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

pretensions, at different times, set the Houses of Parliament to charges, placing them above the law, are the more familiarly known instances of their having of late been in discussion by a new and extraordinary, asserted on behalf of the Commons, to publish libels through their agents. The natural course of this anomalous power is, that it increases gradually until it becomes insupportable and create resistance which it overthrows. The tendency of Parliamentary privilege to overthrow all law, and to establish an unbearable tyranny on its ruins, is in our history to have become manifest, that a check was soon provided to its further progress; and we accordingly find that in former times pretensions advanced, and generally allowed, by both of the two Houses, which they were afterwards obliged to abandon. Notwithstanding the power of issuing what orders they pleased, and taking whatever steps they thought fit in their collective capacity, they were at one period held, and were by the Judges to hold, that their members were clothed with extraordinary powers as private individuals; they were exempt from all arrests for debts, but their servants were set equally above the law, and every Member's house enjoyed the privilege of sanctuary, which is now confined to the Royal Palaces. So there are repeated instances of the Commons deciding questions of property between their Members and strangers, and punishing the latter, without any hearing, for disputing the title of Members; a proceeding so despotic, absurd, and barbarous, as cannot probably be matched in the history of any other assembly in the civilized world. But these and other extravagant claims, although acted upon within the last 70 or 80 years, have since been silently abandoned, and, excepting the freedom from arrest for debt enjoyed by individual Members, no privilege is claimed beyond the walls of Parliament, except for the acts of the two Houses themselves in their collective capacity. Even the extravagant claims of the Houses have begun to be restrained within narrower bounds than they acknowledged in more ancient times; but of late years, especially since the controversy arising out of Sir Francis Burdett's publication in 1810, a disposition has seemed to be once more spreading in favour of high-privilege doctrines; and some men have professed themselves their champions, as if they thus furthered the cause of popular rights. The accession of power gained by the democratic part of the constitution, by the late Reform, has increased this inclination to stickle for extreme rights, and in 1831 a new and unheard of claim was asserted by some Members of the Lower House to be free from the jurisdiction of Courts of Justice in offences of a very grave nature, namely, those contempts which obstruct the whole course of justice. Mr. Long Wellesley, in 1831, raised a Privilege question with the Court of Chancery: he had been ordered by a decree of that Court, affirmed afterwards on appeal in the House of Lords, to give up the custody of his infant children, wards of the Court; he violated the order, took away the infants from those appointed to take charge of them, and removed them, beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, to France. He came into Court, when asked to attend, and declared that he refused to bring them back, or give them up. The Lord Chancellor immediately committed him for this contempt to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms. Mr. Long Wellesley moved for his discharge; the question was rested upon his Privilege as a Member of Parliament; some Members of the House took it up, a Committee was appointed, precedents were searched for, and a Report was made that there was no such Privilege. This attempt of Mr. Wellesley, and of those who supported him in the House of Commons, thus signally failed. But the circumstance of its meeting with any support was sufficiently striking, and seemed to show that there existed a disposition to revive antiquated claims of Privilege, and even to carry the pretensions of immunity from the laws of the country, on the part of Members of Parliament, farther than they had ever, in the worst times, been pushed. Accordingly, the defeat of 1831 did not prevent a renewal of the conflict; for, in 1836, Mr. Lechmere Charlton, being a suitor in the Court of Chancery, as well as a Member of the House of Commons, grossly insulted, first a Master in Chancery, and then the Lord Chancellor, both acting in their judicial capacity; and when committed to the Fleet for his offence, as a matter of course threw himself upon the protection of the House, whose Privileges he counted to be violated in his person. The usual notification of his imprisonment had been made to the Speaker; a form always observed by way of testifying respect for the House, and accounting for the imprisoned Member's absence. It is, indeed, a form which would be observed were a Member committed by a magistrate for a robbery; nor, it may be observed, is there a single argument ever urged in favour of Privilege which would not serve as a pretence for allowing all the Members of both Houses to rob and murder with impunity on the highway.—A Resolution having been taken in 1836 to publish for sale the papers of the Commons, and in the genuine spirit of retail dealing to give ‘the trade,’ as it was with technical felicity of phrase termed, the benefit of a discount, the Parliamentary shopkeeper was found selling libels against the character of individuals. An action was brought for the published slander, and the defendant set up the authority of the House as his protection against answering for the wrong committed. The eminent Judge before whom this question was raised performed his duty as faithfully and as firmly as might have been expected from him who had at the bar and in the senate made the name of DENMAN illustrious for uncompromising integrity and unflinching defiance to the favours of power. He who had so often scorned the assaults of authority, which was lawful in its constitution although perverted to purposes of oppression, might well be supposed incapable of abating one jot of his resistance, when the threats proceeded from the perpetrators of a lawless usurpation. He bravely told the Commons that the law which he was sworn to administer knew of no Privilege to commit crimes, and he drew the party to another defence. On that defence he prevailed; but new actions being the House of Commons again appointed a committee to inquire, and an elaborate report was produced and adopted by the House. The report which has ever since been the main stock of all rational men for the support of its conclusions, the illogicality of its reasonings, the self-destructive character of its successive positions, and the gross inconsistencies of its sin-happy and scarcely grammatical. It, however, asserted plainly its pretension, and that was the right to make whatever law it chose upon all subjects, and to assume, by the vote of its own, any right whatsoever. It further declared all who disputed its pretensions, or acted, judicially or otherwise, in opposition to its claims, to be guilty of Contempt of Privilege. Nothing, certainly, more high, or more mighty, or more imposing than the tone of these Resolutions. But it was soon found to be a mere puff and a pitch, that it could not be maintained above eight-and-forty hours; for a short interval of triumph of bluster; had elapsed, the gentle and maintained note of submission.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

1. The Lord Chief Justice had previously declared in the House of Commons that he should utterly disregard the pretensions set forth in the Resolutions. When the question arose in the next day, what course should be taken in the actions brought against their Lordships, it was deemed expedient to forgo, and entirely, the famous Resolution of the day before yesterday, and that the Attorney-general should defend the actions in the Court of Common Bench; thus submitting the question of Privileges to the decision of the Court, with which they were in open conflict, which but two days before they had pronounced guilty of a contempt if it entertained the question. — Lord

JUDGMENT pronounced by the CHIEF JUSTICE of NEWFOUNDLAND in the Chambers, Aug. 13, 1838, upon the application of EDWARD KEILLY, to be discharged from custody under the Writ of Habeas Corpus, he having been committed by the Speaker's Warrant for an alleged Breach of Privilege.

This was an application by the prisoner to be discharged, under a habeas corpus, from the gaol of this town, to which he had been committed by virtue of a warrant to the sheriff from the Speaker of the House of Assembly of the island, for an alleged breach of the privileges of the House. The questions, therefore, which present themselves to my mind are—1st, what are the privileges of the House of Assembly? 2dly, Have they the power of punishing summarily for a breach of their privileges by imprisonment? And 3dly, if it cannot be clearly shown that they have such power, whether the warrant in the present case is a legal and valid document for the detention of the prisoner?

As to the first question, I am given to understand that the House of Assembly here assume to themselves the privileges of the Imperial House of Commons, and claim to exercise the like powers of punishment for a breach of those privileges, and that upon this plea they have exercised the power of punishing the prisoner on the present occasion. This, therefore, leads me, in the first instance to examine briefly into the nature and origin of the privileges and powers of the Imperial Parliament, and more especially those of the House of Commons, before inquiring for the authority upon which those privileges and powers are claimed for the House of Assembly.

Every one who has sufficiently read the history of our mother country, well knows that anciently the two Houses of Parliament sat together, and formed what then and after their separation was, and still is, called the High Court of Parliament, — a court of the remotest antiquity, of the highest dignity, and of the most unlimited power and authority within the realm. Its laws, customs, and usages, which Sir Edward Coke and all the old writers style the lex et consuetudo Parliamenti, were from the earliest times held and considered to be part of the law of the land, and in that respect a part of the common law; and at the time of the separation of the two Houses, which was as early as the 49th of Henry III. the privileges enjoyed and the functions uniformly exercised by each branch of the Legislature were, in the opinion of Lord Ellenborough, by a formal act at the time of their separation, statutely assigned to each.

If not the whole, the greater part, therefore, of these laws, customs, and usages are coeval with the common law. They have from time to time been expressly altered and varied by acts of the Legislature for that purpose, and are to be found in the "rolls of Parliament," in "precedents and records," and "continual experience of the customs of Parliament."* It therefore appears, that the law of Parliament was not originally one uniform code, but has been added to, and altered from time to time; that many of the powers and privileges of the two branches of the Legislature have at various times been doubted, resisted, and debated, and have been exercised only upon their being clearly ascertained to be a part of the ancient and undoubted usage and custom of Parliament. But the House of Commons have never claimed, nor has any one been hardy enough on their behalf to claim, the power by their own resolution of making that a privilege which before was no privilege. Neither are their privileges arbitrary and undefined, vague and uncertain, but where doubts arise are discoverable by "examining the records of Parliament," and inquiring "what was claimed and allowed in similar instances in former times," precisely in the same manner as the common law is constructed by the judges of the several courts of law. It does not precisely appear at what time the House of Commons first convicted for contempt, as in the nature of a breach of privilege; and Mr. Hatsell mentions that up to the time of Henry the Seventh, the Commons had never proceeded as for a breach of privilege upon their own authority.† It is now, however, and indeed always has been, clear law, that the House of Commons does lawfully possess the power of commitment for contempt, as in the nature of a breach of privilege—a power recognized by statute as having been anciently exercised by them—equally applicable to the House of Lords, for they are one and the same in this respect—the grand council of the realm divided into two different parts, and carrying with them those powers which they collectively exercised before their separation. Upon a habeas corpus, therefore, to discharge one committed by the House of Commons for contempt, it has been adjudged and decided in satisfaction of that part of Magna Charta which directs that no man shall be imprisoned but by the lawful judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land, and of the 28th Edward III., that no man shall be taken or imprisoned without being brought in to answer by due process of the law, that the lex et consuetudo Parliamenti—the law of Parliament—is part of the law of the land, equally with the common and statute law.

I come now to the most important consideration—namely, does the House of Assembly of this island possess the powers and privileges acknowledged as belonging to the House of Commons, and more particularly the power of punishing summarily by imprisonment for a breach of privileges, as in the present instance? Upon this point let us look at the origin of our local Legislature. It is, as is well known to all of us, but some five or six years since it first commenced to exist, by virtue of a commission from his Majesty to the governor of the colony, empowering him to convoke general assemblies from among the inhabitants of the island, who, in conjunction with the governor and council, were to make laws and ordinances for the good government of the colony, not repugnant to the acts of the Imperial Parliament. But is there in this charter contained any thing which erects the House of Assembly of the island into a body with the same power and authority, and possessing the same rights and privileges as the Imperial House of Commons? There is not. Is there a statute or act of the Imperial Parliament which defines their rights, powers, and privileges, and declares them to be, within their jurisdiction, equal in power with the House of Commons? There is none. Whence, then—by what authority, and from what source, do they derive the power which they have exercised on the present occasion? I am given to understand that it is by analogy to the House of Commons and Assemblies of other British colonies—that because the House of Assembly is the representative branch of the local Legislature, it is therefore necessarily invested with all the privileges and powers acknowledged to belong to the House of Commons, as well as the customs and usages of the Houses of Assembly of other colonies. I myself have heard not only this doctrine, but that even of the power of inflicting corporal punishment, broadly asserted by members of the House of Assembly. Let us examine into this colony is one of those provincial establishments, the constitution of which, according to Blackstone, "depends on the respective commissions issued by the Crown to the governors and the instructions which usually accompany these commissions, under the authority of which provincial assemblies are constituted, with power of making local ordinances not repugnant to the laws of England." So far, then, the assembly is not equal in power, even within the colony, to the Imperial Parliament, to which, as well as all other legislatures in the Queen's dominions, is subordinate, whose constitution is as yet liable to alteration by the sovereign power which granted it, and whose existence may,

* Lord Coke, 4th Inst. 50.

† 1 Hat. 51.

Parliament, at any time be terminated. The House of Assembly does neither by conjunction with the council form a report; neither do the Council and together, nor does either separately part of Judicature; nor does it possess of impeachment—one of the highest of the House of Commons, which may commit even for a crime in order to punishment. The House of Lords, as is the highest court of record, and supreme appellate jurisdiction within the island, but does the Council of this island—another branch of the Legislature—in the same or whatever exercise analogous powers? The powers and privileges claimed to be the House of Assembly on the present should, for the like reason, apply to the Council, from its analogy to the House of Lords. It is true there are here three branches of the Legislature, in imitation of the British Parliament, and somewhat similar forms in the passing of bills are observed; but this it is absurd to talk of analogy, as there is no resemblance of origin, constitution, or powers. Indeed, it is not long since the British Government, upon view of the American Parliament which the Legislature had assumed to itself, disallowed the title as wholly inconsistent; and if under the name of Parliament the House of Assembly might have claimed to exercise the powers of the Imperial Parliament, this the British Government has prevented them doing.

I will refer as conclusive upon this the opinion of Lord Camden—a lawyer of great learning and ability, who was Solicitor-General, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Lord Chancellor of England—who it is well known favoured popular rights during the war of the revolted Americans, and sided with colonial pretensions. He speaks of the exercise of rights by the colonial legislatures supported by arguments drawn from the exercise of the like rights in the House of Commons, he says—"The constitution of the Houses (that is, the House of Assembly and the House of Commons) differ fundamentally in respects; our House of Commons has its own laws, the lex Parliamenti; the legislatures in the colonies are regulated by respective charters, usages, and the common law of England, and will never be allowed those privileges which the House of Commons is entitled to justly here, upon principles which either can nor must be applied to the legislatures of the colonies." And again he speaks of the disposition of the Lower House not to grant themselves any privilege which the House of Commons enjoy here, his lordship (Lord Baltimore) should resist all such attempts, where they are unreasonable, with firmness, and should never allow any encroachments to be established on the weight of that argument singly; for I am satisfied that neither the Crown nor the Parliament will suffer those assemblies to erect themselves into the power and authority of the British House of Commons."

Let us now inquire into the legality of exercising the power of punishing summarily by imprisonment for contempt, as in the nature of breach of privilege, upon the ground that a similar power is exercised by the legislatures of other colonies. The constitutions of these colonies, as has been shown, are not alike, but depend upon the terms of the respective commissions under which they were granted, and indeed those of the old American colonies were greatly dissimilar to each other. In some of them the councils at least were courts of record, possessing various powers of judicature; but if in any of them (Nova Scotia for instance) the power of punishing by imprisonment for breach of privilege is exercised by the House of Council, it is not necessarily because the House of Assembly exercises the same power, nor of any inherent right in the Assembly to exercise such power. It may then be that in such colony they originally enacted and declared by a law what the rights and privileges of the several branches of the Legislature were, and conferred upon them the power of punishing summarily for a breach of those privileges. The most probable foundation for the exercise of such a power is long practice not questioned in the first instance, and after lapse of time and repeated exercise grown into usage, and recognized perhaps by the courts of law. If so, such power became to be, as regards such colony, in some respects part of the law of the land. But will any one say that such an usage can be pleaded as having any force in this colony, and that if it have ever grown into law in the colony where it obtains, it can be said to be the law of the island a whit more than their statute of distribution, or for the release of a dower, or any other act of the local Legislature of such colony can be held to be in force as the law of this island?

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM XIII.—Vol. 3.

WRIT OF SUMMONS.

Describe this Writ? What are the requisites of this process and the proceedings to compel an appearance where the defendant can be served?

* Chalmers's Opinions.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM V. VOL. III.

FIERI FACIAS.

What is this writ? When, where, and how, is it executed? What sort of property may be taken and how disposed of?

The answer to this Problem may for the sake of perspicuity be more conveniently divided into four parts.

Firstly, The writ of fieri facias is a judicial writ of execution which lies where the judgment is for debt or damages recovered in the Queen's Courts, by which writ the Sheriff is commanded to levy the debt and damages of the goods and chattels of the defendant; see F. N. B. 152. This writ, though mentioned in the Stat. of H. 2 and 13 Edw. 1. c. 18, is a writ of execution at common law, and is called a fieri facias, because the words of the writ directed to the Sheriff are quod fieri facias de bonis et catallis, and from these words the writ takes its denomination, Co. Litt. 290 b.

Secondly, This writ may be sued out as soon as final judgment is actually signed, but not before; (Stamp v. Kinsey, 2 Shaw, 494.) And it may be sued out at any time within a year and a day after the judgment is signed, (Simpson v. Gray, Barnes. 197.) It may be directed to any sheriff or returning officer, in England, (Price v. Jackson, M. & Selw. 442.) It may also issue into Wales, and directed to the sheriff of the county, see 11 G. 4. & 1 W. 4. c. 70, s. 13. It may also be issued into the county Palatine of Lancaster. 2 Saund. 193; but it must not be directed to the Sheriff of the county, but to the Chancellor or his deputy, (Bracebridge v. Johnson, 3 Moore, 237.) As regards the County Palatine of Chester since the 11 G. 4. & 1 W. 4. c. 70, s. 13, it is directed to the sheriff of that county; and this writ cannot be executed in any other county than that to the sheriff of which it is directed, and if it is required to have execution of the goods of the defendant which are in a different county from that in which the venue of the action was laid, it must be a testatum.—(See Archb. Pr. 6 Ed. by Chitty, 577.)

Thirdly, It may be executed at any time before it is returnable, and even at any time on the day on which it is returnable, if made returnable on any particular day (Maud v. Barnard, 2 Burr. 812.) Although it was formerly holden that it must have been done before the rising of the Court on the return day, and not afterwards (Dyke v. Blackstone, 2 Ld. Raym. 1449), it may be executed either by day or night (2 Ord. 436.); and on any day except Sunday; and the same sheriff who begins the execution of the writ must end it, although he go out of office before the sale, (Clerk v. Withers, 1 Salk. 323.) The sheriff may enter the house of the defendant, when the outer-door is open, to seize the goods of the defendant, and this though his goods may not be there, if there is reasonable ground for suspecting that there were goods of the defendant there (Semayne's case, 5 Rep. 92.); and he may also enter the house of a third person to execute this writ, if the defendant's goods be actually there; otherwise he cannot, (Johnson v. Legh, 1 Marsh, 565.) But the sheriff cannot break open any outer-door (Buckingham v. Francis, 11 Moore, 40) of the particular dwelling-house in order to execute the writ of execution (Semayne v. Gresham, Moore 668.) But even if the sheriff exceed his duty by breaking open the outer-door, this would not vitiate the execution, but render the sheriff liable to an action of trespass. 5 Co. 93 a.

Fourthly, By the writ of fieri facias the sheriff has authority to seize and sell all the personal chattels belonging to the defendant he can find, (3 Co. 12.) And if the defendant die after execution is sued out, the writ may, it seems, notwithstanding be executed on the goods in the hands of the 3 Wils. 899. And corn growing, as to the executor, may be seized, see, M. T. 702. Before the passing of 2 Vic. cap. 110, the sheriff could not take money found in the defendant's house (9 East, 48.), or bank-notes (see v. Criddle, M. T. 1807, K. B.) Execution could have been taken in execution of a writ which could not have been sold, as in Francis v. Nash, T. T. 3. But since the passing of this act, the sheriff is empowered, under the 12th of the act, by virtue of the writ of fi fa, to seize and take any monies or securities (whether of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or of any other bankers,) and any cheques, promissory notes, bonds, or other securities for money, due to the person against whose effects the writ of fi fa shall be sued out. The sheriff, in execution of the writ enters the premises, and remises in which the defendant's goods are, and by seizing part in the name of the plaintiff, is a good seizure of the whole (see ries, 1 L. Raym. 724.) He then appoints a valuer to make an inventory of the goods, and to remove and sell them. The sheriff is not to keep the goods himself and satisfy the plaintiff his debt (Noy, 107), nor to deliver them to the plaintiff in satisfaction, as may be done on an elegit (see Sampson, 2 Vent. 95). But they are not good if the defendant do not immediately satisfy the plaintiff for the debt, costs, and damages.

J. M.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—January 22.

FRANCHISEMENT OF COPYHOLDS.

THE LORDS said, in pursuance of a message from the House of Commons, that he had given, he had to lay on the important measure which had been passed last year, viz. a measure for the enfranchisement of copyhold tenements. It was his intention to refer it to a committee upstairs, and on making that motion to-morrow he would state the points upon which this bill differed from that of last year.

The Bishop of EXETER said, that as this was a measure which would affect in some degree ecclesiastical property, he hoped the House would have an opportunity of considering it.

Lord BROGHAM.—Certainly; the bill will be printed to-morrow.

The bill was then read a first time, and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Jan. 17.

PETITION OF MESSRS. HANSARD.

John Joseph Stockdale was examined, also William Hemp, the sheriff's officer, who produced the warrants directed to him by the sheriff.

Wm. Evans and John Wheelton, Esqrs., Sheriff of Middlesex, were also examined, and produced the following notices:—

Westminster, 21, Great George-street,
14 Nov. 1839.

Stockdale v. Hansard and Others.

Gentlemen,—We beg to recall your attention to the notice and the copy of the resolutions of the House of Commons annexed, and with which you were served on the 4th inst. As since that service, and notwithstanding the same, you have thought fit to execute a writ of inquiry, we give you notice, on behalf of the defendants, not to return the said writ, nor deliver the same to the plaintiff, nor take any further proceedings under it; and we warn you that in the event of any such further proceedings being taken by you in this cause, your conduct in that respect will be represented in due manner to the House of Commons.

We are, Gentlemen,

Your obedient servants,

(signed) PARKES & PRESTON,
Solicitors to Messrs. Hansard.

To the High Sheriff of the County of Middlesex, his Under-sheriff, the Deputy Under-sheriff, and to all other persons whom it may concern.

21, Great George-street, Westminster,
4 Nov. 1839.

Stockdale v. Hansard and others.

Sir,—The defendants having received notice that a writ of inquiry of common right in this cause will be executed on 12th November inst. we beg to inform you that we have been directed to appear on that day.

behalf of Messrs. Hansard, to give you notice, that this action is brought for the alleged publication of certain papers by order or under the authority of the House of Commons, of whose resolutions, in relation to publications by its authority, we send you copies on the other side, and we at the same time warn you, that in the event of your being a party to any proceedings relating to the execution of the above writ of inquiry, your conduct in that respect will be represented in due manner to the House of Commons, and that you will become amenable to its authority, as expressed in the said resolutions.

We are, sir,
Your very obedient servants,
PARKES & PRESTON,
Solicitors to Messrs. Hansard.

The High Sheriff of the County of Middlesex.

Resolutions of the House of Commons, 30th May, 1837.

" 1. That the power of publishing such of its reports, votes, and proceedings as it shall deem necessary or conducive to the public interests, is an essential incident to the constitutional functions of Parliament, more especially of this House, as the representative portion of it."

" 2. That by the law and privilege of Parliament this House has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction to determine upon the existence and extent of its privileges, and that the institution or prosecution of any action, suit, or other proceeding, for the purpose of bringing them into discussion or decision before any court or tribunal elsewhere than in Parliament, is a high breach of such privilege, and renders all parties concerned therein amenable to its just displeasure, and to the punishment consequent thereon."

1st August, 1839.

" 1. That Messrs. Hansard, in printing and publishing a Report and Minutes of Evidence on the present state of the Islands of New Zealand, communicated by the House of Lords to this House on the 7th of August, 1838, acted under the orders of this House, and that, to bring or assist in bringing any action against them for such publication, would be a breach of the privileges of this House."

" 2. That Messrs. Hansard be directed not to answer the letter of Charles Shaw, mentioned in their petition, and not to take any step towards defending the action with which they are threatened in the said letter."

*Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields,
28 Nov. 1839.*

Gentlemen,—A writ of fieri facias in the suit of John Joseph Stockdale against us being executed by you on our premises, as printers of the House of Commons, notwithstanding the notice you have already received of the resolutions of the House of Commons to the contrary, and you being now in possession of our types and presses, and other property, and threatening to levy thereon to the amount of £618. 15s., with other costs, we hereby give you formal notice of the resolutions of the House of Commons, in relation to publications by its authority. We enclose you copies of those resolutions, and we warn you that, in the event of your further promoting or carrying on such proceedings, or persisting in the sale of our effects, your conduct in that respect will be represented in due manner to the said House, and that you will become amenable to its authority, as expressed in the said resolutions.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servants,
(signed) JAMES HANSARD,
LUKE G. HANSARD,
LUKE JAMES HANSARD.

To the High Sheriff of the County of Middlesex, his Under-sheriff, the Deputy Under-sheriff, to William Hemp, Bailiff, and to all other persons whom it may concern.

N.B.—Annexed to this letter were contained the resolutions of the House of Commons, dated 4th November, 1839.

Stockdale v. Hansard.

London, Great Turnstile, 14th Dec. 1839.

Gentlemen,—We have caused you to be served with several communications in this cause, giving you notice that this action is brought in violation and contempt of the privileges of the Commons of the United Kingdom in Parliament, and warning you against acting in aid and furtherance of such breach of privilege, as you would thereby render yourselves liable to censure and punishment by the House of Commons; and notwithstanding you have altogether disregarded such notice and warning, and acted in defiance thereof, we deem it right to repeat such notice and warning, and to require you to desist from making the sale which you have advertised of our property, and to give you further notice that if you persevere in making such sale, complaint will be made to the said House against you, and all others concerned in aiding you therein: and further, we require you not to part with the proceeds of any sale which it fit to make; and we warn you that hereafter be required to restore to us the defendants; and we intimation to be made to you, that it in parting with such proceeds (think fit to do so) at your peril, knowledge of the probable consequence. We beg again to hand you the resolutions of the House of Commons to this action, and the substance thereof, and to direct your serious attention thereto. By searching the Journals and Reports, you may satisfy yourselves of the copies we hand to you. We are, Gentlemen,

Your obedient servants,
 (Signed) JAMES HANSARD,
 LUKE G. HANSARD,
 LUKE J. HANSARD.

Sheriff of the county of Middlesex, the Deputy Under-sheriff, the Deputy Under-sheriff, William Hemp, Bailiff, to Mr. John Joseph Stockdale, Auctioneer, and to all other persons to whom it may concern.

Annexed to this letter were the resolutions of the House of Commons, 4th Nov. 1839.

William Evans and John Wheelton, Esqrs. in.

SPEAKER.—I am desired by the House of Commons, that if you have any thing to submit to the House, the House is ready to hear you.

Mr. Evans.—We certainly wish to have an opportunity to express that if, in the discharge of our painful duty, we have done anything which has incurred the displeasure of the honorable House, we certainly deeply regret it.

Mr. Evans and Mr. Wheelton were ordered to withdraw.]

20th January.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That it appears to this House that execution has been levied in the cause of Stockdale v. Hansard, to the amount of £640. by the sale of the property of Messrs. Hansard, in contempt of the privileges of this House, and that such money now remains in the hands of the Sheriff of Middlesex:”—(Lord John Russell:—) Amendment proposed, to leave out the word “that,” to the end of the question, and to add the words “it appearing that an action has been brought against Messrs. Hansard and others, for the recovery of money by them, under an order of this House, in contempt of the privileges of this House, and that such money now remains in the hands of the Sheriff of Middlesex, and that such execution has been obtained and execution issued by due course of law against the said James Hansard and others in such action, it is expedient that the said James Hansard and others be indemnified against all costs and damages by them sustained in respect of such action; and that in case any action or actions being hereafter brought for the publication of any papers under the order of this House, the Attorney-General be instructed to defend such action, and to report thereupon to the House.” instead thereof:—(Mr. Kelly:—) Question put, “That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:”—The House divided—ayes 205, noes 90.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That the said Sheriff be ordered to refund the said amount forthwith to Messrs. Hansard:”—(Lord John Russell:—) Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word “That” to the end of the question, in order to add the words “John Joseph Stockdale be called to the bar of this House,” instead thereof:—(Capt. Boldero:—) Question proposed, “That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:”—Amendment, by leave, withdrawn.—Main question put:—The House divided—ayes 197, noes 85.

Motion made, and question proposed, “That William Evans, esquire, and John Wheelton, esquire, Sheriff of Middlesex, having been guilty of a contempt and breach of the privileges of this House, be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attending this House, and that Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly:”—(Lord John Russell:—) Whereupon, motion made, and question put, —“That this House do now adjourn:”—The House divided—ayes 86, noes 189.

Motion made, and question put,—“That William Evans, esquire, and John Wheelton, esquire, Sheriff of Middlesex, having been guilty of a contempt and breach of privileges of this House, be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attending this House, and that Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly:”—The house divided—ayes 195, noes 94.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That Thomas Burton Howard do attend this House this day:”—Whereupon, motion made, and question put,—“That this House do now adjourn:”—The House divided—ayes 39, noes 113.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That it appears to this House that execution in the cause of Stockdale v. Hansard, has been levied to the amount of £640. by the sale of the property of Messrs. Hansard, in contempt of the privileges of this House, and that such money now remains in the hands of the Sheriff of Middlesex:”—(Lord John Russell:—)

Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word "That" to the end of the question, in order to add the words, "it appearing to this House that an action has been brought against James Hansard and others, for the publication by them, under an order of this House, of certain papers containing libellous matter upon John Joseph Stockdale, and that judgment has been obtained and execution issued by due course of law against the said James Hansard and others be indemnified against all costs and damages by them sustained in respect of such action, and that in case of any action or actions being hereafter brought for the publication of any papers under the order of this House, the Attorney-General be instructed to defend such action, and to report thereupon to the House," instead thereof:—(Mr. Kelly:)—Question proposed,—“That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:”—

PETITION OF JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE.

The Petition of John Joseph Stockdale, humbly sheweth, That your petitioner is a prisoner in the custody of your Serjeant-at-Arms, by your order, made, as your petitioner believes, under an erroneous impression, induced by answers elicited from your petitioner to questions calculated to criminate your petitioner, without a subsequent opportunity (afforded to others) of remarks in vindication or explanation of said petitioner's conduct.

Your petitioner therefore humbly implores your honourable House to allow your petitioner further examination and statement, by which it must appear to the satisfaction of your honourable House, that your petitioner never contemplated, nor has been guilty of, any breach of the privileges of your House.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE.

Prison Cell, House of Commons,

18th January, 1840.

21st January.

Question put:—The House divided; ayes 205, noes 90:—Main question put and agreed to.

Resolved—That it appears to this House that execution in the case of Stockdale v. Hansard, has been levied to the amount of £640. by the sale of the property of Messrs. Hansard, in contempt of the privileges of this House, and that such money now remains in the hands of the Sheriff of Middlesex.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That the said Sheriff be ordered to refund the said amount forthwith to Messrs. Hansard:—(Lord John Russell:)—Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word "That" to the end of the question, in order to add the words "John Joseph Stockdale be called to the bar of this House," instead thereof:—(Capt. Boldero:)—Question proposed, "That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:—Amendment, by leave, withdrawn.—Main question put:—The House divided—ayes 197, noes 85.

Resolved—That the said Sheriff be ordered to refund the said amount forthwith to Messrs. Hansard.

Ordered—That Will. Evans and John Wheelton, esquires, Sheriff of Middlesex, be now called to the bar, and that Mr. Speaker do communicate to them the said Resolutions of this House.

Sheriffs called in.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That William Evans and John Wheelton, esquires, Sheriff of Middlesex, be forthwith brought to the bar, and discharged:—(Mr. Kelly:)—Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word "That" to the end of the question, in order to add the words "the order of the day for resuming the adjourned debate upon the question (20th January) 'That William Evans, esquire, and John Wheelton, esquire, Sheriff of Middlesex, having been guilty of a contempt and breach of the privileges of this House, be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attending this House, and that Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly,' be now read," instead thereof:—(Lord John Russell:)—Question put, "That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:—The House divided—ayes 99, noes 210.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That William Evans, Esq. and John Wheelton, Esq. Sheriff of Middlesex, having been guilty of a contempt and breach of the privileges of this House, be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attending this House, and that Mr. Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly:—(Lord John Russell:)—Whereupon, motion made, and question put, "That this House do now adjourn:—The House divided; ayes 86, noes, 189:—original question again proposed:—Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word "Middlesex" to the end of the question, in order to add the words "be allowed until the meeting of the House this day, to give their answer whether they will pay the money to Messrs. Hansard, pursuant to the order of this House," instead thereof:—(Sir Matthew Wood:)—Question proposed, "That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:—Amendment, by leave, withdrawn:—original gain proposed:—debate arising:— turned till this day.

That William Evans and John Esqrs. Sheriff of Middlesex, do attend this day.

That Thomas Burton Howard do attend this day.

That Thomas France, Esq. do attend this day.

Made, and question proposed:—
William Evans and John Wheelton, ruff of Middlesex, be forthwith
the bar, and discharged:—(Mr.

Amendment proposed, to leave out ord "That" to the end of the queser to add the words "the order of resuming the adjourned debate question [20th January], "That Wil-Esq. and John Wheelton, Esq. She-lessex, having been guilty of a con-breach of the privileges of this committed to the custody of the Arms attending this House, and

Speaker do issue his warrant according read," instead thereof:—(Lord all:—) Question put, "That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the House divided: ayes 99, words added:—main question, as it, and agreed to.

d; debate resumed:—

again proposed,—"That William and John Wheelton, Esq. Sheriff

x, having been guilty of a contempt of the privileges of this House, be to the custody of the Serjeant-attending this House, and that Mr.

issue his warrant accordingly:—

ing; motion made, and question
"That the debate be further ad-this day week:—motion, by leave,

—question put:—the House di-

195, noes 94.

That William Evans, Esq. and elton, Esq. Sheriff of Middlesex, guilty of a contempt and breach leges of this House, be committed ody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attend-use, and that Mr. Speaker do issue accordingly.

22nd January.

or attendance of Thomas France,
nd discharged.

or attendance of Thomas Burton
nd;

Burton Howard called to the bar;
g asked:—"Are you the attorney se of Stockdale v. Hansard?"—and on being objected to:—

Burton Howard withdrew:—

Motion made, and question proposed, "That Thomas Burton Howard be again called in,
and that question be put to him:"—question,
by leave, withdrawn.

Motion made, and question proposed, "That Thomas Burton Howard do attend this House this day:"—whereupon motion made, and question put, "That this House do now ad-journal:"—the House divided; ayes 39, noes

113:—original question put, and agreed to.

Ordered, That Thomas Burton Howard do attend this House this day.

Ordered, That the petition of Messrs. Hansard be taken into further consideration this day.

22nd and 23rd January.

Motion made, and question proposed,—
"That the order of the day for the further consideration of the petition of Messrs. Hansard

[presented 16th January], stating the progress and result of the action of Stockdale v. Hansard, be now read:—Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word "That," to the end of the question, in order to add the words,

"Copies of the warrants issued by Mr. Speaker for the commitment of John Joseph Stockdale, William Evans, esquire, and John Wheelton, esquire, Sheriff of Middlesex, be forthwith laid before this House," instead thereof:—(Mr.

Thomas Duncombe:—) Question proposed,
"That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:—Amendment and motion, by leave, withdrawn.

Ordered—"That copies of warrants issued by Mr. Speaker, for the commitment of John

Joseph Stockdale, William Evans, esquire, and John Wheelton, esquire, Sheriff of Middlesex, be forthwith laid before this House."—(Mr.

Thomas Duncombe.)

Mr. Speaker acquainted the House that copies of the said warrants were upon the table.

Order read, for further consideration of the petition of Messrs. Hansard [presented 16th

January], stating the progress and result of the action of Stockdale v. Hansard.

Motion made, and Question proposed,—
"That Thomas Burton Howard be now called to the bar:—Amendment proposed, at the

the end of the question to add the words "for the purpose of being forthwith discharged from further attendance on this house:—

Question put, "That those words be there added."—The House divided—ayes 92, noes

210.—Main question put, and agreed to.

Thomas Burton Howard called in and examined, and then he withdrew; and being again called in, and further examined, stated, that, if he had incurred the displeasure of the House, he deeply and honestly regretted it.—

And being asked if he had any further statement which he wished to make to the House, stated, that if he could in stronger language apologize for any displeasure which he might have justly incurred, he would do it; and then he withdrew.

23rd January.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That Thomas Burton Howard be discharged from further attendance upon this House:”—(Lord John Russell:)—Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word “Howard” to the end of the question, in order to add the words, “having been guilty of a contempt and breach of the privileges of this House, and having expressed his regret at having incurred the displeasure of this House, be now called to the bar of this House, and reprimanded by Mr. Speaker:”—(Mr. Attorney-General:)—Question put, “That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question:”—The House divided—ayes 68, noes 178.—Words added:—Main Question, as amended, put, and agreed to.

Thomas Burton Howard accordingly called to the bar, and reprimanded by Mr. Speaker, as followeth:—

Thomas Burton Howard, I have to acquaint you, that the House has come to the following resolution:—

“That Thomas Burton Howard having been guilty of a contempt and breach of the privileges of this House, and having expressed his regret at having incurred the displeasure of the House, be now called to the bar, and reprimanded by Mr. Speaker.”

In pursuance of this resolution, I have further to acquaint you, that, whilst acting in the capacity of attorney to Mr. Stockdale, you caused a writ of inquiry to be executed, and a levy to be made upon the goods of Messrs. Hansard. You did that deliberately and advisedly, after having, according to your own admission, received notice of the resolutions of this House. I have to admonish you, that conduct of this description is a high contempt of the authority of this House, which ought justly to be visited with its severe displeasure.

The House, however, having taken into its consideration the contrition which you have expressed, are disposed to deal leniently with you for this offence. I am directed by the House to reprimand you, and I reprimand you accordingly.

Ordered, nemine contradicente, that what has been now said by Mr. Speaker, in reprimanding Thomas Burton Howard, be entered in the journals of this House.

Motion made, and question proposed,—“That John Joseph Stockdale be forthwith called to the bar, and reprimanded and discharged:”—Whereupon, motion made, and question proposed, “that the other orders of the day be read,” and withdrawn:—Original question withdrawn.

Law Reports.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—Dec. 21.

Special Jury.

THE MERCERS' COMPANY v. HUDSON.

OBSTRUCTION TO LIGHTS. (a)

This action was brought to recover compensation for damage done to the plaintiffs' property in King's-arms-yard, Moorgate-street, by the erection of a new frontage towards the street so high as to obstruct the light and air from coming to the property in the rear. The defendant held from the City of London a lease of a slip of land running along Moorgate street, on which a clause in the lease had obliged him to raise the frontage complained of, which is but seven feet in depth at one end, and tapers away to two feet at the other. The issues to be tried were, first, that the new building obstructed the light, to the injury of the property behind; second, that it traversed the right to the ancient lights.

Mr. Nicholson, who occupies the premises of the Mercers' Company as a warehouse, was called, and deposed that the obstruction of the light had not been so material as to cause any inconvenience to him in carrying on his business.

Mr. Nicholson's shopman, on the other hand, deposed that the diminution of light had been very considerable.

Lord DENMAN, in summing up, said that to entitle the plaintiffs to a verdict, it was necessary that the obstruction should be proved to have been so material as to cause inconvenience. Nothing more had been proved than that at present there was somewhat less light than there had been at former time, but whether the light had been diminished by the new building was for the jury to determine.

The jury found for the defendant on the first issue, and for the plaintiffs on the second.

Sittings in Banco.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

JUDGMENT OF THE COURT upon the Rule obtained by the Plaintiff to show cause why the Sheriff of Middlesex should not pay over to him the amount of the Levy made upon the Defendant's goods, and sold under the Writ of Execution issued in this cause.

Lord DENMAN.—This is a rule, calling

(a) See Smith v. Elger, ante, Vol. II. p. 340.

is to show cause why the money which was levied by them in a case of the plaintiff, against several defendants of the plaintiff, should not be paid over to the plaintiff. In that action, which was for libel, a judgment by default before last Michaelmas term, in which a writ of inquiry was issued, the jury assessed damages to a very great amount. On that the Sheriffs were returned the writ. They said they could not pay. A writ of venditioni exponas issued, to which the return was, that the defendants found buyers, had proceeded to a sale, and had the money in their hands ready to pay in such manner as the Court might direct. This was in December. An application had been previously made to my brother Littledale, with a view to nothing but the convenient discharge of his duty by the Sheriff, had given a return of the writ. An application was made to my brother Patteson for an order for payment of the money. We have conferred with him as to his reasons for refusing to make the order, and they turn entirely upon the late rules, which do not give the Judge at chambers to make an order, which must, therefore, be made by the Court, consequently, referred the plaintiff to the Court. To that Court the plaintiff has come, and now to pronounce judgment, whether he is to have this rule made absolute, and to have the damages and judgment, to have that judgment by due course of law. To prevent him having the fruits of that judgment—Nothing that I can perceive. I do not know, though I may infer, that the House of Commons disapproves of the law as laid down by the House in the former case. If that be so, for reasons I most deeply lament it, but the House of Commons on a point of whatever manner the House may think fit, is not entitled in coming to that opinion, is not entitled for preventing the court of law from pronouncing judgment, or preventing the judges from enforcing those judgments upon those of their fellow-subjects who are lawfully entitled to the benefit of them. Resolutions have been passed by the House of Commons on this subject. The first declared that the Sheriff, by levying execution, had exposed himself to the displeasure of the House; but it had been cited to show that the mere incurring the displeasure of the House was any excuse to a Sheriff for not obeying a writ directed to him in the ordinary course of the administration of justice. It was the resolution that the Sheriff had committed a contempt, but as nothing is stated in the allegation of contempt is founded, and the plaintiff possessed no means of ascertaining whether a contempt was committed or no. The second of the resolutions directed the money to be paid to the defendant, but he was at a loss to know how a resolution of the House of Commons could prevent any party from obtaining the rights to which he was entitled by law. The Court certainly must feel for the Sheriffs who were placed in so distressing a situation; but the Court could not prevent the legal consequences of the execution, except upon the production of a legal excuse. If the Sheriffs had returned to the writ, that they were prevented by the order of the House of Commons from paying the money, that return would be taken into consideration, and would probably be considered by the Court to be a bad and insufficient return. As the case stood at present, there seemed no reason at all why they had not paid over the money as soon as it had been received. With regard to the third resolution, by which the Sheriffs were committed to custody and deprived of their liberty, he made no comment upon it except in as far as it was connected with this rule; and in relation to that subject he should only say, that it was very possible that the Sheriffs may be in custody, and yet the plaintiff entitled to have the right which he claimed under the rule. If any discretion had existed in him upon the decision of this question, and if the liberation of the Sheriffs from their present distressing situation were to be at all dependent upon the result of the present application, he should long pause before he made the rule absolute, and thereby exposed them to further inconvenience. But he could not presume that injustice would be done to the Sheriffs by any other body, and even if unfortunately it should be otherwise, that would constitute no ground why the due course of law should be interrupted, and this writ not have its full and proper execution. The order upon them to refund the money had been made, and had been followed already by its consequences, and the making of the present rule absolute could therefore make no difference as to that point. It had been said by Mr. Kennedy that there was no precedent for such a rule as the present. But the reason why there was no precedent was, that unless in very special circumstances, the Sheriff never puts the plaintiff to the necessity of making such an application. In such a case the Court has no discretion. Its duty arises out of the relation between it and its own officer, who himself declares that he is ready to pay to the plaintiff the money which by the rule he is called upon to pay. Unless therefore some legal excuse for withholding it is produced, the Court cannot hold its hand and say that the plaintiff is not entitled to the benefits which he has acquired by his judgment. The noble and learned Lord stated that he should abstain from making any observations upon the variety of delicate and most interesting topics which had been mentioned in the course of the argument upon the subject of the jurisdiction of the House of Commons or the consequences of its allowance. He should confine himself strictly to the rules and practice of the Court as they affected the question under consideration, and in this view of the case he had no doubt whatever upon the question, and believed that the Court possessed no discretion, but were obliged, in conformity with the established course of their own practice, to make the present rule absolute.

Mr. Justice LITLEDALE was entirely of the same opinion. The sheriff having admitted he was in possession of the money, it was competent for the plaintiff to choose whichever mode he pleased to get at his money. The resolutions of the House of Commons did not appear to be sufficient to prevent the payment of the money.

Mr. Justice WILLIAMS said that he should, like the member of the Court who had delivered judgment before him, confine himself to the rules of practice as they affected the particular case. It was impossible not to perceive that the sheriff had brought the whole difficulty upon himself by his own neglect. He not only omitted to pay the money into court on the 19th of December, when he received it, but allowed the whole remainder of that month to elapse before he took any proceeding whatever. If the money had been paid into court, it would have been there for the benefit of the plaintiff, and would have been paid out as a matter of course, and every difficulty avoided in which the sheriff was placed at present. The cases of bankruptcy and awards which had been cited were not applicable to the present question, as in all those cases there was a dispute as to the property in the subject matter in question. But what mortal could doubt here that the money was the property of the plaintiff? This being so, and no case having been cited in which the application of vis major was held to be a sufficient excuse on the part of the sheriff for non-performance of the exigency of a writ directed to him, there was no legal reason why the rule should not be made absolute. It was certainly much to be regretted that the sheriffs should be placed in a situation of such difficulty and doubt; of that he should say no more, thinking it quite sufficient to touch upon the point. Of the other topics alluded to he should say nothing until they were brought forward by necessity and force; but, as in point of law, no cause had been shown against the rule, it ought, in his judgment, to be made absolute.

Mr. Justice COLERIDGE said that he so entirely agreed with the rest of the Court in the decision as well as in the grounds of it, that in any other case he should have contented himself with briefly expressing his assent. This was an undefended action in which, after various delays a levy was made on the 19th of December, and from the very affidavit itself there appeared no reason why the money should not be paid on the 20th. The plaintiff's demand was satisfied by the levy, the defendant was discharged, and if the sheriff became a defaulter, the plaintiff would have had no remedy against the defendant. The present rule was obtained on the 11th of January and the first step taken by the sheriff was not until the 15th of that month. There were two modes of redress open to the plaintiff—that which he had adopted, or an action. As to the latter course, he (Mr. Justice Coleridge) agreed in what was stated by Mr. Platt, that it would lead to an interminable series of suits, which would be a complete disgrace to the administration of justice, and that it would be a gross dereliction of duty in the Court if they were to compel the plaintiff to have recourse to such a circuitous and ineffectual method of recovering money from an officer of the Court, who declared that he had it in his possession for the plaintiff's use, and ready to be handed over to him. He (Mr. Justice Coleridge), if allowed to refer to the difficulty and peril in which the sheriffs were placed, while their conduct was admitted by all parties to be without reproach, could say a great deal upon that subject. But it could not be forgotten that the sheriffs were the officers of the Court, and it was their—the judges'—primary duty to see that the sheriffs, and all other officers, did justice to the suitors by procuring for them the fruits of the proceedings which they had instituted. The statement which had been made about the case of bankruptcy and award might all be conceded, and yet it must notwithstanding be evident that the money here in question was undoubtedly the property of the plaintiff in the action. Of the action he should say no more at present than that until the judgment obtained in it should be reversed by a competent jurisdiction, it was for all purposes binding upon that Court, notwithstanding any opinions which might be expressed in another place; and that, therefore, this Court would now be guilty of abandoning their duty unless they made the present rule absolute.

RULE MADE ABSOLUTE.

IN RE THE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX.

Mr. Richards then asked for leave to move for a habeas corpus on the part of the Sheriffs.

Lord DENMAN said that the regular business of the Court must be proceeded with; the learned counsel might make the motion at the rising of the Court, if he pleased.

Jan. 23.

ards moved for a writ of habeas corpus directed to Sir Wm. Gossett, the Serjeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons, to bring up the bodies of the persons in his custody, in order that the course assigned for their commitment might be enquired of by the Court of law.
Ordered accordingly.

OBJECTION AGAINST THE SERGEANT-AT-ARMS.

ards said that he did not know it was a proper occasion for his admission of another part of his application upon which he intended to trouble the Court at this time, in the event of their Lordships finding any reason any difficulty in granting the writ of habeas corpus. What he alluded to was an application for an attachment against Sir Wm. Gossett, for having dared to take the persons into custody in contempt of the authority of this Court, and in obstruction of the course of justice, through the medium of the Serjeant-at-Arms.

His Lordship thought any discussion upon the application to be premature, as the persons were not yet committed by the Court until they had been committed by the authority under which he acted. The consideration of that application must, therefore, be postponed until after the discussion upon the writ of habeas corpus.

The Court rose immediately after granting the writ.

HOUSE OF EXCHEQUER.—Jan. 15.

Sittings in Banco.

WILLIAMS v. BRENSFORD.

DISTINGUISHING—Distinction between a person being "not at home" and a person being "from home."

moved for leave to issue a writ of habeas corpus to compel the appearance of the defendant, on the affidavits which showed, that in consequence of having been made at his residence in the 10th December last, the application for the writ was made at the Plough Inn, and that the inquiry was resumed on the same month and five following. The answer was made by the servant of the defendant, who said he was "from home."

His Lordship said that is quite different from the defendant's being actually absent from home on business, and does not raise a necessary presumption that he is keeping out of the way to avoid service. There is a distinction being "not at home," and the defendant's being "from home."

Rule refused.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

Jan. 22.

CASE OF JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE.

The COURT ordered the rule obtained in this case (a) to be enlarged for a fortnight.

TRIAL OF JOHN FROST FOR HIGH TREASON.

CHIEF JUSTICE TINDAL'S ADDRESS.

(Continued from p. 190.)

The witness then went on: he heard Frost say, "March!" and that the mob then moved down Charles-street. Now, here there was a discrepancy between this witness's statement and that of Coles, who said they came down Stowe-hill; but how far one or the other was correct was not very material, as one or other might be mistaken, as some might have dropped away from the general body and gone another way. But it was for the jury to say how far credit was to be given to these witnesses on this, which, after all, was only a collateral point. The difference on their evidence amounted to an incongruity rather than a contradiction, as might arise from any two persons giving an account of the same transaction. In the evidence of Thomas Brough it was said that the demand at the Westgate by the mob was "Surrender yourselves our prisoners!" This had been met by other evidence, and very properly, he thought, it had been conceded, that the words might have been "Surrender up our prisoners," and not "your prisoners." So far as the part of the charge related to an attack on the Westgate, it appeared that the first challenge was a demand by some one or other that the persons who were taken into custody during the night should be surrendered up to them, showing, as far as the evidence had yet been considered, a determination to get those persons out of custody, rather than a direct attack on her Majesty's troops. He did not think there was any evidence showing an earlier firing than the gun going off in the hand of Oliver: how that occurred hardly appeared, but it was said that the man's arm struck against the door, and thus caused the gun to go off. That, however, appeared to be the signal for firing the guns carried by the mob. The deposition of this witness before the magistrates was read, and a very proper mode that was of testing the credibility of a witness on the correctness of his memory. Oliver said then he heard the words, "Surrender yourselves our prisoners," and he saw a man act as the leader; but here in his examination he said the man whom he meant by the leader was the man who came to the door and summoned them; and he (the Lord Chief Justice) thought it very probable he might, in first using the term "leader," not mean the person having control over the mob, but the person who merely summoned them at the door. Daniel Taylor, in his evidence, spoke of the first man in the mob as "Rees the Fifer," and whether that was the same person as "Jack the Fifer," who two boys said they saw with a pistol in one hand and a pike in the other, there was no evidence to show. This man gave a similar account as the former one, as to the time when the firing commenced at the window of the room where the soldiers were, and, according to his statement, it began from the outside, and not the inside, and just at the moment simultaneously with the opening of the shutter at the time in question.

(a) Ante, p. 186.

(To be continued.)

COURT OF EXCHEQUER—Jan. 23.

ORDER.

Sittings in Banco.

BUSINESS OF THE COURT.

"The Court will hold sittings on Monday, the 17th of February, and proceed in disposing of the business now pending in the new trial paper on the same day and on the following days, namely, the 18th, 19th, 20th, and 21st days of February. And on the said 21st and on the 22d days of the same month, the Court will proceed in disposing of the business now pending in the special paper.

ABINGER,
J. PARKE,
E. H. ALDERSON,
J. GURNEY,
R. M. ROLFE."

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. B.—S. A. W. has replied to your letter, which shall appear next week.

S. A. W. has been received.

A Constant Reader.—We eschew politics. You will find your question answered by referring to Western's Commentaries.

Alphonso.—We much wish that we could adopt your suggestion. The majority of our subscribers are however of a different opinion.

A. L.—N. S.—A Subscriber—J. W.—Anon. Lincoln—C. L.—W. A. T.—M. H.—all under consideration.

A. X.—Every affidavit not made for the immediate purpose of being filed, read or used.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publisher.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s.

We have no need to make any alteration in this Notice by reason of the New Postal REGULATIONS, which are all fully and officially detailed in this paper. Our Country Subscribers will continue to receive it as heretofore, Post Free, without any further charge.

Just published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly.
Vol. IV. Part I.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING

adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S., of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS. S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. 1 & 2, £1. London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Volumes.

In the Press, SECOND EDITION,

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

This work, independent of the Precedents which have all been worked upon, abounds with valuable practical information to Town and Country SOLICITORS. The NOTES are for the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained. Tables are given, shewing those Customs in SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for ground LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenements—repairs—draining—manuring—also the relating to MINING LEASES.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is now well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, January 23, 1864.

The Legal Guide.

[ ] SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1840. [No. 14.]

SEPARATE USE.

We paid particular attention to this important question, and as it is now and we have been favoured with the writer's notes of the judgments, with the pleadings in the cause, to give our readers all the benefit and advantage. In doing this we beg attention to the letter we addressed the Chancellor on the subject, and also a view of the judgment of the Master of the Rolls, in Tullett v. Armstrong, and to our satisfaction, not only that the established is in perfect accordance with what we diffidently took of the subject, so that we were correct in thinking so much importance was placed on a judicial opinion given by the Chancellor in Massey v. Parker. (a) Following is the judgment of the Master of the Rolls, which is now affirmed. In Keen is very unsatisfactory. (b)

OF THE ROLLS.—In this case claiming to be entitled to two annuities, and the same and payments thereof, may be paid of the rents and profits of the freehold, leasehold, and copyhold estates, comprehended in certain indentures, dated the 16th of March, and 22nd of September, 1832, or if necessary that there may be a due execution of the trusts and powers of those indentures for the sale or mortgage of the said estates. The bill also prays for an inquiry respecting an annuity alleged to have been granted by Armstrong and his wife to one J. Izod, and that such annuity may either be declared invalid, or if a valid incumbrance on the estates, that an account may be taken of what is due in respect thereof and for further relief.

The case is, that N. Bradford by his will, dated the 27th of March, 1820, gave to his daughter, A. Bradford, and the defendant, William Gates, all his freehold, leasehold, and copyhold estates, and all his residuary personal estate, in trust for his wife, A. Bradford, for her life, and after her death upon trust; and he gave the particular property therein for that purpose described to his daughter, Ann Bradford, and after the death of his wife on trust; and he gave unto and equally between his daughter, A. Bradford, and his grand-daughters, G. Pierpoint and M. Tilt, a copyhold messuage and appurtenances in the possession of one Collier, to hold unto and equally between his daughter, A. Bradford, and his grand-daughters, Georgiana and M. Tilt, during their joint and several lives as tenants in common, so, and in such manner, that neither of my said daughter and grand-daughters may anticipate, charge, sell, assign, or dispose of their several and respective lives or life estates or estate so devised to them, of or in the aforesaid copyhold premises, and the rents and produce thereof, and so and in such manner that neither any husband or husbands of my said daughter or grand-daughters may have, or acquire any right of or in, or control over the life estates or interests of my said daughter and grand-daughters respectively, nor shall the same be liable to the debts, contracts, forfeitures, or engagements of any such husband; and I declare and direct that the receipt or receipts of my said daughter, Ann Bradford, and my grand-daughters, G. Pierpoint and M. Tilt shall, from time to time, be good and effectual discharge and discharges for the money therein expressed to be received;" and after the decease of the survivor of his daughter and grand-daughters, he gave over the property so devised to them for life, and after devising a moiety of a copyhold tenement on the east side of East-street, in Brighton, he gave, after the death of his wife, unto his grand-daughters, the other moiety, and also the entirety of a certain leasehold premises in his will, particularly described, to hold, to Mary Tilt, for her life, with remainder to her children, and he gave the residue of his personal estate unto, and equally between, his daughter, A. Bradford, Wm. Gates, G. Pierpoint, and M. Tilt, as tenants in common, and he declared "that all or any of the bequests and devises hereinbefore made by me to my granddaughters, G. Pierpoint and M. Tilt, not hereinbefore bequeathed and devised to them, exclusive of any husband, are so given and devised to them, my said grand-daughters, free, clear, and exonerated from, and not subject to any husband's right, control, interference, debts, contracts, and engagements, and which said several and respective bequests and devises so given and bequeathed to them by me as aforesaid, are to be taken and received by them respectively, as if they were sole and unmarried, and so held and enjoyed by them, my said grand-daughters respectively, and that their several and respective receipts or receipt, for any sum or sums of money, shall be good and effectual discharge and discharges." And he appointed his daughter and William Gates executor and executrix of his will. The testator died in October, 1820, leaving his wife, A. Bradford, and his daughter, M. A. Tilt, in the will called M. Tilt, and now the defendant, M. A. Armstong, surviving now the whole of this property, became vested in his wife for life, subject to that life interest. The testator gave a portion of it to his grand-daughter, Mary Augusta, for her life, for her separate use, and he intended that the interest he gave to her in a copyhold messuage or premises, constituting part of his property, should be vested in her without power of anticipation.

When the testator died, the grand-daughter, Mary Augusta, was unmarried, and it has been argued, as she was not married at the time of the testator's death, when the gift became vested in her, the limitation to her separate use is not effectual, and secondly, if that limitation can be sustained, the restraint on its forbidding her to dispose of it in anticipation is void, because it is not accompanied by a gift over, in the event of an attempt to alienate.

On the 25th of August, 1826, Ann Bradford, the daughter of the testator, made her will, and thereby, among other things, and subject to her mother's life estate, she devised to her trustees, N. Bradford and M. Bradford, a certain messuage in Church-street, Brighton, "upon trust, that they, or said trustees, or the survivor of them, or their heirs, do and shall receive and take the rents, issues, and profits thereof, and pay the same unto my niece, M. A. Tilt, for and during the term of her natural life, so as in such manner as the said M. A. Tilt shall or dispose of her life interest therein, part thereof, nor raise or borrow thereon by anticipation, mortgage, or, and so and in such manner that rents, issues, and profits thereof, be subject to, but exclusive of any, which the said M. A. Tilt shall have, right, control, or interference; nor shall the same be liable to his debts, confiscations, or engagements, and I declare that the receipt or receipts of my said niece shall be a good and sufficient discharge and discharges to my said trustees for the time being, of such rents and for so much thereof as shall be in receipt or receipts expressed to be received, and that any sale or disposition raised by mortgage or otherwise, of or in respect of said niece's life interest, shall be to time null and void;" and after the testatrix gave the same present to the children of M. A. Tilt, and she named her trustees executors of her will. On the date of this will, and in April, 1830, the legatee, M. A. Tilt, married the Wm. Armstrong, and two days afterwards, namely, on the 25th of April, 1830, she made a codicil, and thereby confirmed the same, and she died in October following; M. A. Armstrong, legatee, being married at the death of the testatrix, when the gift under her will was vested, it is not denied that the separate use might take effect; but the restraint or alienation is not binding, because there is no gift over in the will to alienate. In July, 1830, the said Wm. Bradford, the first testator died, and the gift under the two wills took effect. In March, 1832, Armstrong and his wife, having sold an annuity for £300, to the plaintiff for £300, executed a conveyance and assignment of Mrs. Bradford's life interest to the plaintiff to secure payment of the annuity, and a like deed was executed in the following month of September to secure to the plaintiff an annuity of equal amount. The annuities were paid up to some time in 1834; but in January, 1835, Armstrong took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act, and thereupon the plaintiff filed this bill to enforce payment of the annuity.

(To be continued.)

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

JUDGMENT pronounced by the CHIEF JUSTICE of NEWFOUNDLAND in the Chambers, Aug. 13, 1838, upon the application of EDWARD KELLY, to be discharged from custody under the Writ of Habeas Corpus, he having been committed by the Speaker's Warrant for an alleged Breach of Privilege.

(Continued from p. 197.)

It is laid down in the books of authority that the decisions of the two Houses of Parliament, in cases in which they are admitted to be the sole competent judges, are fitly governed by usage and controlled by precedent. But how can the House of Assembly here, whose existence commenced scarcely six years ago, be said to be governed by usage or controlled by precedent in the present case, as to which manifestly neither usage nor precedent exists? If it is to the usages and precedents of the Imperial Parliament, or those of other colonial assemblies, they refer, certainly they do not understand the meaning of the terms.

But if the House of Assembly on the first occasion upon which they choose to exercise a power of imprisonment consider themselves invested with it because the House of Commons exercise the same power, then they are equally entitled upon the same ground, and for the like reason, to all the powers and privileges of the House of Commons; for the rule by which they claim forbids them to choose some powers and privileges and reject others—they must take all or none; and if in addition to the lex et consuetudo Parliamenti they are at liberty to cull and choose from among the customs and usages of other colonial legislatures all such as in their judgment are desirable or convenient, they would be, I fear, a much more powerful body than the Imperial Parliament itself, or indeed any other known to the British constitution.

That the House of Assembly are here invested with some privileges as incident to their condition

a positive statute, and sanctioned by al usage from the remotest ages.

vorn to do equal law and execution of ll the Queen's subjects, rich and poor, aving regard to any one; and as I find
o will I to the best of my ability admi-

We live, thank God, under a system e boast of the civilized world, and the ark of British freedom, which will not e liberty of any subject of the Crown ained upon light or trivial grounds;
there is no man more chary of the just privileges of any of the constituted than I am, no man will be more for-nforcing, so far as lies within my prose laws which hedge round and secure of the subject, and which are the pporters of the freedom of the state.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM XIV. VOL. III.

TITLE DEEDS.

AT CASES WILL EQUITY COMPEL
NER OF TITLE DEEDS TO PRODUCE OTHER PERSONS, AND IN WHAT ILL THEIR PRODUCTION BE COM-N ADVERSE SUITS AND ACTIONS?

EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM VII. VOL. III.

MERGER.—WHAT IS IT?

definition of merger is not easily
d it is less easy to present the reader accurate and summary view of the ances which furnish the conclusion, merger has taken place." But Mr.
whose words I quote, has himself
duced these difficulties (a).

er is the absorption by act of law of ed estate in another, by the union of ates, without any intervening estate, and the same person, in the same
; or if in different rights, by such the same person by the act of the party, and not by mere act of law, and so that the person in whom the estates thus unite in different rights by act of the party, shall have an absolute power of alienation over both estates (c). Thus, for example, where A, tenant for life, with reversion to B in fee, surrenders his life estate to B, or B releases to A in fee. By this union A's life estate is absorbed in the inheritance; and the consequence is, the acceleration of the estate in reversion; which is not enlarged by the union of A's life estate, but is brought into possession (d). We shall, however, best learn "what merger is" by an analysis and examination of the above definition.

Merger is the absorbing of one estate in another. The effect of merger is to consolidate two or more estates into one, whose duration is precisely the same as that of the more remote of the estates consolidated.
The more proximate estates are absolutely annihilated; so that the only subsisting estate continues exactly of the same quantity and extent of ownership as it was before the accession of the estate which is merged (e).

"Merger is the absorption by act of law of one vested estate in another." Nothing can be more clear than that merger is an act of law; but in order to its operation, the estates must be vested; because it is obvious that a vested estate cannot merge in a contingent interest, for until the contingency occur, it is not an estate at all (f). For the same reason it follows that a present vested term cannot merge in an interesse termini (g).
And from this it appears that the estate in immediate remainder or reversion must in quantity be as large as, or larger than, the preceding estate: and in this case the less estate will always merge in the greater.

(c) White in Cru. Dig. Tit. 39. s. 1. Ed. 4.

(d) Id. s. 2.

(e) 3 Prest. Conv. 7.

(f) 6 Cru. Dig. 467, Pauling v. Hardy, Skin. 3. 62.

(g) 3 P. Conv. 161.

What estate will for this purpose be considered the greater, we shall notice shortly.

“By the union of these estates in one and the same person,” there must be more than one estate. On this head the law is positive; indeed it is demonstrably clear, that unless there be two estates, in the same person, in the same land, there is not any estate in that person to merge, or occasion a merger (h).

“Without any intervening estate;” because, just as the intervention of a second particular tenancy prevents the prior particular tenant from surrendering to the ulterior remainder man; so does the interposition of a second particular estate with remainder over, prevent that remainder from merging the tenancy in possession, should the first and the last happen to unite in the same person. This it does by keeping the estates distinct, by preventing their union. But if the intervening estate be not vested but in contingency, it will not prevent the union and consequent merger of the estates: although this union, in some instances, will not produce an absolute but only a temporary or conditional merger (i); so that the estate will open again to let in the contingent estate, when the event happens upon which it is to arise (j).

“And in the same right;” else, if the freehold be in the tenant’s own right, and he has a term in right of another, there is no merger. Therefore, if tenant for years dies, and makes him who hath the reversion in fee his executor, whereby the term of years vests also in him, the term shall not merge; for he hath the fee in his own right, and the term of years in the right of the testator, and subject to his debts and legacies. (h) An estate tail is however an exception to this rule, for a man may have in his own right both an estate-tail, and a reversion in fee: and the estate-tail, though a less estate, shall not merge in the fee. (l) But this privilege ceases after possibility of issue extinct, for then an estate-tail is considered, for the purpose of merger, merely as an estate for life.

“Or if in different rights, by act of the party.” For where two estates meet in the same person, in different rights, merger will not ensue, unless the union takes place by act of the party: as where the husband holding a term in right of his wife, purchases the reversion; or the lessee assigns his term to the wife of the lessor; or where an executor has a term in right of his testator, (m) and purchases the reversion. (n) And this last condition is further limited by this proviso, that the person in whom they meet, must have absolute power of alienation over both estates. (o)

I have already promised to shew what estates are for the purposes of merger considered the greater, and with this and a few words on terms merging in terms, I shall conclude. It was maintained by several of the earliest and highest legal authorities, that one term could not merge in another; (p) (h) 3 P. Conv. 55.

(i) I ask the reader’s pardon for not noticing much earlier, that merger is usually divided into absolute and conditional; but as little more can be done than merely to state this distinction, it being difficult to speak clearly of it in any other than an incidental and occasional manner, I hope he will not suffer much unnecessary inconvenience from this neglect. Merger absolute is what is understood in the absence of special description; and of conditional I cannot convey to the reader a more clear idea than he will form from the words next following in the text. A.

(j) 6 Cru. Dig. 472. Ed. 4.

(h) 2 Bl. C. 177.

(l) 2 Bl. 178, where the reasons upon which this dogma is founded, may be seen.

(m) But in this case, although the term will merge at law, in equity it will be considered assets for the benefit of the creditors.

(n) 6 Cru. Dig. 479, and the cases and authorities here cited.

(o) Id. ib.; and Lichden v. Windamore, 3 Roll. Rep. 472.

(p) For instance, 1 Co. Lit. 273; Shepp. Touch 341.

important case of Stephens v. (q) has completely settled the opposite opinion. In that case a mortgage was created in 1720 for one year. The executors of the mortgage made an assignment of another mortgage on the same premises, created for five hundred years, and assigned the terms to a lady who was entitled to under A. E.'s will. The Vice-Chancellor, that the term for one thousand years merged in the reversionary term for five hundred years. And he (Sir John Leach, C.) observed,—“It is settled by authority that there is no difference [in regard to] term merging by union with the reversion, whether the party is entitled to the interest of the reversion, or to the interest in reversion for a limited time.” In reference to the rule that the lesser term always merge in the greater, it appears greater in quality; and, it appears from the above case, that the term is not for purposes of merger, considered greater to the extent of its possible duration or legal quantity, but from its being the interest in reversion. (r) From which it is clear that a term of one thousand years is not annihilated in a reversionary term for five hundred years. (1)

ALPHONSO.

It is not clearly put—It was forbidden, that a term for years could merge in a term; but in Hughes v. Northam, (Cro. Eliz. 302.) as well as in Stephens v. Bridges, it was determined that if there be two termors, he who has the less estate may surrender to the termor who has the term, and the term will merge in the reversion, and although the reversion be for a longer period of years than the term in possession, the term in possession shall drown in the reversion; for it does not depend upon one term being longer than the other, but on the relation which the two termors bear to each other, while the estates are kept distinct. In such case the person, who has the term which was first created, is, in right of it, entitled to the possession; and the person who has the term in reversion is entitled to the rents and services, where any are reserved, of the first termor, as holding a grant of the reversion, to which those rents and services were incident. The first termor is therefore, in fact, legally tenant to the second, and this tenancy equally subsists where there is not any rent payable. The consequence is, that the first termor can surrender to the second: and on such surrender his estate becomes extinguished in the portion of the reversion, which is vested in the latter, whose estate then becomes an estate in possession. And where both the estates meet otherwise in the same person in one right, the same effect follows by operation of law; and the term first created will merge in the reversionary one, in right of which alone the person will become entitled to the possession, see Cru. Dig. tit. Merger, 475.; Bac. Ab. tit. Leases (S.) s. 2.; Sug. Vend. and Pur. vol. 3. p. 23, last Ed.; Watk. Conv. p. 55, Ed. 8.—Ed.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Dec. 5.

NEWLANDS v. HOLMES.

SEPARATE USE of Married Women.

Since we reported this case, (a) we have been favoured with a copy of the Order, which is as follows:—

Let the Order made in the cause, dated the 28th day of November last, and the 2nd day of December instant, be discharged. And let the injunction issued in this cause, in pursuance of the said order, dated the 28th day of November last, be dissolved. And let the defendant, Samuel Paynter, Esq. Sheriff of the County of Surrey, be restrained by the order add. [ & Geldart ] 66.

u. Dig. 240, Ed. 4.

(a) Ante, pp. 184-185.

and injunction of this Court from selling, or proceeding to sell, any part of the property, consisting of the leasehold premises, being Nos. 14, 15, and 19, West Square, in the parish of Saint George, Southwark, in the County of Surrey, with their appurtenances, or the goods and chattels now in the house of No. 19, West Square, aforesaid, under the writ of execution issued, or any other writ or writs of execution that may be issued out of the Court of Queen's Bench, in a certain action, wherein the defendant George Holmes is the plaintiff, and the defendant William Newlands is the defendant, until this Court shall make other order to the contrary. And upon the plaintiff giving to the said defendant, George Holmes, a sufficient security for the amount of the execution, and levy such security to be settled by the Master of this Court in rotation, the due execution of such security to be certified by the said Master, or upon the plaintiff's paying the said amount into the bank to the credit of this cause. Let the execution be withdrawn; and any of the parties are to be at liberty to apply to this Court as they may be advised.

Jan. 22.

TULLETT v. ARMSTRONG.

SEPARATE USE.

THE VALIDITY OF SEPARATE ESTATE WITH ITS QUALIFICATION OR PROHIBITION AGAINST ANTICIPATION, ESTABLISHED WHERE PROPERTY IS LIMITED TO THE SEPARATE USE OF UNMARRIED WOMEN.

The facts of this case we have fully detailed in our first volume (a), and we can vouch for their correctness, as we were kindly supplied with the papers by a Solicitor in the cause.

This was an appeal from the judgment of the MASTER of the ROLLS.

The LORD CHANCELLOR now gave judgment. The question was as to the clause against anticipation; as to that he agreed with the Master of the Rolls that it embraced separate estate, and if separate estate without power of anticipation must exist, it was only with that qualification that it existed at all. It was clear that without a clause against anticipation or alienation, nothing would be easier than to defeat the intention of the donor of property to the separate use of women. When once it was decided that a married woman could act in respect of her separate property as a feme sole, it was clear that it became necessary to establish some control against disposing of her separate estate; and this was effected by prohibiting anticipation, and the power to do this had been long established, and was founded upon the power of the Court to model and qualify an interest in property which it had itself created without regard to those rules which the law had established for regulating the enjoyment of property in other cases. When the donor intended to give a woman a separate estate, why should the Court prevent the execution of that intention? Both modes of provision were the creatures of equity, and he should assume that there was no ground for separating the two points. If any rule were now to be adopted by which separate estate would be given without a clause against anticipation, it was clear the property would be in a less secure situation than it is with the clause. A married woman depends on the protection of the clause; but without it, she depends on the protection of other persons. She is therefore less secure (in such case) than if the property had been held simply upon trust for her benefit. In the case of a gift with that clause the donor thinks he has guarded his bounty sufficiently. On what ground, then, can a Court of Equity disappoint his intention. The separate estate and the provision against anticipation are both creatures of equity, and equally inconsistent with the ordinary rules of property. The one is only a restriction and qualification of the other, and therefore this Court cannot separate them. His Lordship then proceeded to review the cases, and observed, he would assume that there was no ground for separating them. In delaying his judgment in a case of so much importance, he thought it his duty to examine all the cases on the subject, and to derive assistance from every source accessible to him. He commenced by examining the cases supposed to support the proposition, that the absolute interest of a feme sole in property given for her separate use, though with a provision against anticipation up to the time of her becoming covert, becomes subject to all the qualifications and restrictions of the gift upon such marriage. Sir Edw. Turner's Case (b), and Tudor v. Samyne (id. p. 227.) His Lordship considered as of too early date to be of any value now. Jones v. Salter (c); Barton v. Briscoe (d); Woodmeston v. Walker (e); Newton v. Reid (f); Brown v. Pocock (g);

(a) P. 21. See the Editor's letter to the Lord Chancellor, vol. i. p. 225; also his review of the judgment of the Master of the Rolls, now appealed against. Id. p. 22. et seq. Also the leading article in the present number.—ED.

(b) Ante, vol. i. p. 228.

(c) Id. p. 39.

(e) Id. pp. 22. 39. 70.

(g) Id. p. 38.

(d) Id.

(f) Id. p. 224.

Parker (k); which latter case his Lordship observed excited an interest to which he was not entitled, either from the authority of the case or from any novelty in the doctrine. He denied what he said on the subject of extra judicial (k), because it was not a question directly at issue, and the decision might have been made on other grounds. It could not be said that the question was that upon which his Lordship was there founded, and for that reason the case was paid to the various considerations belonging to it than it was entitled to. It would have received if the parties had depended upon its merits, and the case was not fairly decided had then been decided, that it was competent to affix restrictions upon a gift to a male or female, inconsistent with the gift. Wodmerton v. Walker; Reid. It did not occur to me that the gift could survive into a subsequent case freed from the restraint upon anti-ventures the doctrine singular? Only Polm v. O'Callaghan (2 Mad. 349.); Discoe; Newton v. Reid; Massey v.

Johnson v. Freeth (6 Sim. 127) is even more pointed. True it is in Benson (6 Sim. 127), although no decision on the subject, some observations seem to have been drawn by the Master of the Rolls between separate estate and a restraint clause; and in Davies v. Johnson His Honour expressly states his opinion that although the restraint cannot operate during a subsequent coverture, yet the separate estate may remain. Now I agree with the MASTER OF THE ROLLS this doctrine should be maintained. The case of Widd (1 Term. Rep. 193), upon which respondent relies, turned entirely upon the construction of the instruments, and not upon an express power reserved to the trustee. Erner v. Davies (2 P. Wms. 316) arose upon there being no trustee. More v. Bowes (1 Ves. I. 22; 2 Bro. 105) the trusts were "to such uses as she should, whether sole or covert, appoint." Anderson v. Anderson (2 Rup. & Myl. 427) may, from its circumstances, be the most important in favour of the separate estate being in force during a subsequent coverture; but there are no grounds for the judgment by either Sir JOHN LEACH or LORD ELDON. His Lordship then stated the case of Plant v. Lyne (1 You. 562) from the papers, as nothing could be gained from the report of that case, not even the point in discussion; and there this question did not arise, for the property was settled before marriage to the separate use of the wife. It is said to have been generally understood in the profession, that the separate estate would continue to operate during a subsequent coverture, and that conveyancers have acted so continually upon that supposition, that very many families are interested in the question, which therefore becomes one of very great importance. I am anxious to find some principle of property by which the preservation of the separate estate may be supported during a subsequent coverture; believing, as he did, that, when property was settled, all parties expected it should continue so; and he was disposed, for some time, to adopt the suggestion that the husband might be held to be tacitly bound by a gift to his wife's separate use, of which he was previously cognizant; but, after the gravest consideration, he was desirous to rest the rule on a broader foundation, and which he thought the interests of society required. Equity has already violated the rules of property between husband and wife; and if, subsequently to a deed of gift, the after-taken husband were now permitted to interfere with his wife's separate property, why should not the Court go further and extend its rules? It was not a stronger measure to prevent the husband from such interference than to establish the clause against anticipation. I have come to the conclusion, that the jurisdiction which this Court has assumed in similar cases justifies it in extending it to the protection of the separate estate, with its qualifications and restrictions attached to it throughout the subsequent coverture, and in resting such jurisdiction upon the broadest foundations. This the interests of society require. When this Court first established the separate estate it made this rule, that a wife might enjoy separate estate as a feme sole, and that the laws of property attached to this new estate, part of which law was the power of alienation in the wife, which destroyed her security. Then came the restraint upon alienation — this equity also adopted. In both these cases the law of property was violated by the Court. Why then, in this case, should not equity interfere? and if it is said in that case must not be taken as a question, for it was not necessary on the point, and his Lordship seems rather to be referring to the question, whether there is an anticipation, than to the question whether it can be a limitation to the separate use of the separate estate. Vice-Chancellor, Davis v. Thornycroft, and the Editor's observations, ante, vol. i. p.

ol. i. p. 225.

by the Ed.

cannot protect the wife consistently with the ordinary rules of property, extend its own rules in regard to separate estate, and secure to her the enjoyment of the gift made to her for her benefit: the wants of society require this being established. It is no doubt doing violence to the rules of property to say, that property which being given with restrictions which are held to be void, therefore belongs absolutely to the woman up to her marriage, shall not be subject to the ordinary rules of law, as to the interest which the husband is to take in it, and that is the only sense in which the expressions in Massey v. Parker—"Why may she not by the Act of Marriage give it to her husband"—are to be understood; but it is not a stronger act to prevent the husband from interfering with such property, than it was originally to establish the separate estate, or to maintain the provision against alienation. In establishing the validity of separate estate with its qualification which constitutes its value, I mean the clause against anticipation, I am not doing more than my predecessors have done for similar purposes.

Decree appealed from affirmed.

SCARBOROUGH v. BORMAN.

The question in this case was the same as in the last, and the facts we reported in our first volume.<sup>(1)</sup>

The Lord Chancellor dismissed the appeal without costs.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Jan. 18.

Sittings in Banco.

MARSHALL v. LYN.

CONTRACTS FOR GOODS.—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

No distinction to be observed in Contracts for Lands, and Contracts for Goods, where the latter are required to be in writing—Cuff v. Penn—OVER-RULED.

This was an action for not accepting a quantity of potatoes, tried at the last Cambridge Assizes. The declaration contained a special count to the effect that the original contract for the sale of these potatoes having been made on certain terms which had been reduced into writing, in accordance with the Statute of Frauds, the defendant had given verbal directions to the plaintiff, by which the time stipulated for their delivery was altered from the first to the second voyage of the Kitty, a vessel belonging to one of the parties. Evidence having been offered at the trial to prove this count, and to make out the variation in the written contract, it was objected that it was not competent to the plaintiff to go into such matters, unless the alteration had been reduced to writing themselves.

The plaintiff had a verdict for the amount claimed, with leave to move for a nonsuit.

Mr. Kelly now opposed the rule, to enter a nonsuit, and contended that the Statute of Frauds should not be construed with such extreme strictness; that the variation in the time or place of delivery was not the essence of the contract, or was, at least, so far susceptible of parol variation, as that the plaintiff should still recover, the original contract having been once reduced into writing. Construing the provision of the statute as reasonable men, the Court would see that great inconvenience would result from holding that the time of delivery stipulated in a written contract could not be altered by word of mouth, as in the instance where a written order for the delivery of goods by a particular coach; might not the purchaser, on finding that a different hour or mode of conveyance would suit his purposes better, call in person and give verbal directions to the tradesman to send the goods by the 12 o'clock coach instead of the 11 o'clock one, or by the waggon instead of the coach? In support of these arguments the learned counsel cited to the Court the case of Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. and S. 21, where it had been expressly laid down that performance of a written contract may be waived or dispensed with, as to the time and quantity specified therein, by a subsequent parol communication.

The COURT, however, without calling in counsel in support of the rule, made it absolute, laying it down that the decision on "Cuff v. Penn" was bad law. There was no distinction to be observed in the cases of contracts for land and those for goods, when the latter are required to be in writing. Both are susceptible of variation by subsequent contracts also in writing. If then the last is the contract at which the parties are to be supposed to arrive ultimately. So also, when the original contract is varied by parol. That alteration creates a new contract whether it regard the time or place mentioned in the original contract, and, if the first ought to be in writing, so ought also the second; and, if be not, then is it a new parol contract on a subject which ought to be in writing, and such is void. In this case the first voyage was expressly stipulated for, and the substitution of the second for that ought to have been reduced to writing.

Rule made absolute.

QUESTIONS

EXAMINERS TO APPLICANTS FOR AS ATTORNIERS AT THE EXAMINA-LARY TERM, 1840.

PRELIMINARY.

a)

STATUTE LAW, AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

Does amend defects in records after n? If so, how must it be done?

es may the judge certify to deprive f costs, and when and how must be obtained?

several defendants, who defended
mitted, will he now, as formerly, forty shillings only for his costs,
portion will he be entitled?

es may a defendant be now held how must you proceed?

sole obtain judgment and marry on, what must be done in order to gment?

fant joins an adult in a warrant of wholly void, or to what extent?

old tenant of a manor a right to inspection of the court rolls and manor? and if so, before or pending es may cattle be impounded? and for an excessive sum, what are the against the party impounding, or ind-keeper?

r be good if clogged with any and s?

of the nuisances affecting dwellingds for which an action will lie.

stances (if any) in which a carrier or the loss of goods intrusted to liable to pay the rent of premises stroyed by fire, under any and nces?

ner of a horse which was stolen
e it in any and what place?

master answerable for damage done and when not?

lord grants a mortgage, and after-premises by lease or at will, can distrain for rent if the tenant has o him, or what remedy has he nant? and would the remedy be ease had been granted of the pre-he mortgage? and if not, what difference?

CONVEYANCING.

What are the denominations of the several parts of a deed of conveyance by release? and state the form to prevent dower.

What are the usual covenants for title entered into by a vendor in his conveyance to a purchaser of a fee-simple estate?

What is the difference between an estate in fee simple and an estate in tail general?

How far back has a purchaser of land a right to require the title thereto to commence?

Is it customary for the vendor or the purchaser to bear the expense of preparing the abstract of the title to the estate to be conveyed? and which, according to custom, bears the expense of the conveyance?

What is the difference between a freehold and a copyhold estate?

If a copyhold estate is to be the subject of a conveyance, by what means is it usually conveyed?

What is the meaning of the assignment of a term to attend the inheritance?

If an outstanding term has never been assigned to attend the inheritance, at whose expense is such assignment to be made?

In what respect does an estate limited to joint tenants in fee, and tenants in common in fee, differ?

In what respect does an incorporeal hereditament differ from a corporeal hereditament?

Who are incapable of making a will?

What are the requisites to be attended to in the execution of a will under the recent Statute of Wills?

If a person die intestate, leaving a widow, one child, three children of a deceased child, and a brother and sister, in what manner would the intestate's personal estate be distributable?

Should the direction to sell an estate be absolute or discretionary, in order to constitute an equitable conversion of the freehold into personalty?

EQUITY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

Through the intervention of what person must an infant sue in a Court of Equity?

Can or cannot a bill be filed on behalf of an infant without his consent?

If a suit be instituted on behalf of an infant which is considered to be injurious to his interests, in what way will the Court, on a representation to that effect being made, proceed in order to ascertain whether it be well or ill founded?
and if the former, what course will it adopt?

If a bill be filed on behalf of a married woman against her husband without her consent, will this circumstance, on its being made out to the satisfaction of the Court, involve any, and if any, what consequences?

(a) See ante, p. 75.

If a bill be filed by a man and his wife touching the personal property of the wife, and the husband die pending the suit, does or does not that circumstance cause an abatement of the suit?

Is the objection for want of parties to a bill taken in the same manner, where such objection appears on the face of the bill itself, as where it does not so appear? If different, then state what are the proper modes of objection applicable to each of these two cases.

Where a cause has proceeded to a hearing, and is then ascertained to be defective for want of parties, does or does not that circumstance form a ground for the dismissal of the bill, or will the Court adopt any other, and if so, what course in consequence of such defect?

Is there or is there not any, and if any, what circumstance appearing on a defendant's answer, which will prevent a plaintiff from proving a deed vivâ voce at the hearing of a cause?

In a suit for a specific performance of a contract for the sale of an estate, is it competent to either the vendor or the purchaser to obtain a reference to the Master as to the title, or can this be done by one only, and which of such contracting parties?

Can or cannot an infant maintain a suit for the specific performance of a contract? And give the reason for your opinion, whatever it may be.

Where a submission to reference has been made a rule of a Court of Common Law, has or has not a Court of Equity jurisdiction to afford relief against the award which has been made in pursuance of such submission?

In a suit in Equity by an incumbrancer against a purchaser for valuable consideration, in which such purchaser is sought to be affected with notice of the incumbrance, and in which such notice is proved by one witness only, but is positively and expressly denied by the answer; in whose favour will the Court decree?

Are there any circumstances under which an agreement for a lease for twenty-one years, not made in writing, would be enforced by a Court of Equity? If so, state those circumstances, and on what grounds such an equity would prevail.

At what period after a mortgagee has taken possession of the mortgaged estate, and under what circumstances, is the mortgagor barred of his right to redeem the estate?

A testator, by his will, having given a pecuniary legacy to A. is induced, when in a state of great mental and bodily weakness, and through the fraud, influence, and circumvention of B., to revoke the legacy, and by a codicil to his will to give it to B. himself. Is or is not this a case in which, after the testator's death, and assuming that the facts above stated could be clearly established, you would advise A. to have recourse to a Court of Equity against B.? If yea, state the relief that you would seek to obtain for him. If no, give the reasons for your not recommending the suit.

BANKRUPTCY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURT

What are the facts necessary to be stated in the petitioning creditor's affidavit of debt to be entered on the docket?

State the most usual acts of bankruptcy.

Within what time must a town fiat be prosecuted? and within what time must a county fiat be prosecuted?

Does a fiat abate at any, and what time, after the death of the party against whom it has issued?

Can a creditor, having a security for his debt by way of mortgage, be a petitioning creditor?

For what purposes may joint creditors of a firm prove under a fiat against one of the firm?

Can a creditor, holding a joint and separate security (such as a bond or note), prove his debt under both the joint and separate estates, and must he elect?

If the funds under a fiat are insufficient to pay the expenses, are the creditors who have proved liable to contribute, or must the assignees bear the loss?

What amount of debt proved entitles a creditor to vote in the choice of assignees? and what amount entitles a creditor to sign the certificate of conformity?

If the certificate be signed by a sufficient number of creditors in amount and value, have the commissioners a discretionary power to refuse the certificate?

What is the course to be taken by creditors to expunge an improper proof of debt under a fiat?

Has the landlord any and what priority for his claim in cases of bankruptcy?

If, after adjudication, the petitioning creditor's debt should be found insufficient, can any other creditor's debt be added? and what course be taken to remedy the defect?

What proceeding must be taken by a creditor to enforce payment of his dividend?

Under any and what circumstances do goods and chattels of which the bankrupt has the possession, but of which he is not the owner, pass to his assignees?

CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

What is a constructive taking, in larceny?

In an indictment, or in a summary proceeding for a malicious injury to property, is it necessary against the owner essential?

When is a prisoner said (legally speaking) to stand mute?

What offence is the advising a prisoner to stand mute, and how is it punishable?

Who is an accessory before the fact?

Who is an accessory after the fact?

any crimes in which there cannot be before the fact? If any, give ex-any crimes in which there cannot be either before or after the fact? If samples.

dict of a coroner's jury be "wilful and the grand jury, upon a bill of in-wilful murder being preferred, find or "manslaughter" only, how must be arraigned and put upon his trial? number of peremptory challenges of prisoner entitled to on his trial for ? and what number on his trial for felony?

any limit to challenges for cause or need?

an indicted for a felony entitled, on to the Court, to have aliens on the n he is to be tried? If so, how at circumstances are justices of the ed to admit to bail a person charged at circumstances are justices required person so charged?

Court of Queen's Bench, or a Judge admit a prisoner to bail in any, and

OF JOHN FROST FOR HIGH TREASON. STICE TINDAL'S ADDRESS. (Continued from p. 208.)

Adams said, he saw Frost at ten e morning of the 4th of November, e outbreak in Tredegar park, with chief to his eyes. This witness asked as the matter at Newport, but Frost wer. Frost then went towards Car- a gate into a field, and then through into a coppice wood. This was an er the unhappy events had taken the prisoner was found retreating ort, with a view, no doubt, not to be at that time, because he had taken a part in the proceedings that had led ents. But that did not make out the he was guilty of high treason, be- must have been conscious of having a very serious offence in forming part multitude of persons guilty of such e could not but be conscious of that; it but know that he had been guilty of the law, and therefore determined doof for some limited time. In Sir s evidence there was some discrepancy as compared with that of Captain Gray, in respect to the opening the shutter and giving the order to fire, but it was very immaterial, as it might exist between the statement of different witnesses without breaking in on the weight of testimony to which the jury ought to give credit. It seemed clear, however, from all the evidence, that a soldier never fired a single gun until the firing commenced outside the house. In the course of Sir Thomas Phillips's examination, Edward Hopkins was called in to produce some of the arms taken from the prisoners, and Sir Thomas Phillips said the people he saw were armed with such weapons. The learned Judge then proceeded to read the evidence of Captain Gray. Captain Gray, in his evidence, said that he had every reason to believe that the mob deliberately fired on the military after they were un-masked. He thought it necessary to observe here, that the jury would find other evidence which seemed to throw some doubt on the correctness of Captain Gray's evidence on this point. It would be the duty of the jury to compare the different testimonies together, and to decide which was correct. The next witness on whose evidence the learned Judge commented was Matthew Williams. He said that this witness, together with one or two more that followed, took up the transactions, as far as the prisoner was concerned, as far as the bill. All that he had previously read related principally to the events at Newport.

(To be continued.)

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

COMPENDIUM of the LAWS of ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, and ANTIENT ROME, for the Use of STUDENTS. Part I. MARRIAGES. Fraser and Crawford, Edinburgh; H. Washbourne and A. Maxwell, London; W. Curry, jun. and Co. Dublin. 1839.

We have read with satisfaction this little treatise upon a large subject, and although we are familiar with many parts of it which are derived from Taylor's Civil Law, Roper's Law of Husband and Wife, and some other writers, we think the author is entitled to much credit for the very compact manner in which he has brought the subject-matter together, and the clear and distinct view he has given of its various parts.

He observes in his preface that the ordinary division into the rights of persons, of things, and actions, rests solely on the example of the Institutes of Justinian, and that it has, therefore, appeared to him at least deserving a trial, in a work that does not profess to be a complete institute of English and Scottish law, to commence with marriage, which, along with property, may truly be said to form the foundation on which civil society is built. From marriage, the principal relations which the law contemplates are derived. On it the descent of real and personal property depends. With it, the most important rights of persons and things are mediately or immediately connected. In a word, it forms the very primum mobile of the law.

The author commences his Treatise with "The English Forms of Pleading." Pleading is, doubtless, at all times the precursor of marriage, but we cannot see how it applies to the title of the work before us. "Real, mixed, and personal actions" do not at all harmonise with "Marriages." He next proceeds to "The English Law of Marriage," and in p. 29 he thus describes how marriages are to be solemnized at home and abroad:—

In what Churches.—Marriages since the 26 Geo. II. in chapels not having chapelries, or districts annexed to them, and in which banns have not been usually, although often, published, were upon the construction of that statute void. Rex v. Northfield, Cald. 115. 2 Dougl. 659. In an action for Crim. Con. if the plaintiff's marriage was solemnized in a chapel, he must give some evidence that banns were usually published there before the passing of the Marriage Act. Taunton v. Wyborn, 2 Camp. 297. Ellenb. But it is prima facie sufficient for this purpose to produce an old register of marriages, solemnized in the chapel before the Marriage Act, and a regular register of banns published there since, and to prove that within the recollection of witnesses who have attended the chapel, marriages have been solemnized and banns published from time to time of late years. Id.

In Scotland.—A marriage celebrated in Scotland without banns or licence is good. Ex parte Hall, 1 Rose, 30. A marriage in Scotland by an infant who was an English subject, without consent, was held good in the Court of Delegates. Compton v. Bearcro Bull, N. P. 113. A marriage celebrated in Scotland (but not between persons who thither for the purpose of evading the laws of England) will entitle the woman to dower in England. Ilderton v. Ilderton, 2 H. Bl. 145. And the lawfulness of such a marriage may be tried by a jury. Id. A replication therefore, to a plea of ne unques accuple in writ of dower, alleging a marriage in Scotland, may conclude to the country, and in such replication it is not necessary to state that the marriage was had in any place in England by way of venue. Id.

In Ireland.—A marriage in Ireland, solemnized by a clergyman of the Established Church in England, is valid, though it was celebrated in a room of a private house, without any special licence having been granted to the parties. Smith v. Maxwell, 1 C. & J. 271. R. & M. 80. Best.

ABROAD.—The validity of a marriage celebrated in a foreign country must be determined in an English court by the lex loci where the marriage is solemnized. Lacombe v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178. D. & R. N. P. C. 100. Abbot. The articles of the Law of France which prescribe the forms essential to a marriage, but which do not annul a marriage in fact for non-observance of such forms, are to be considered as merely directory; but previous evidence is admissible to show that by the law of that country a marriage in fact, without observance of the requisites prescribed by such laws, is void. Id. A marriage between two Protestant British subjects, solemnized by a Portuguese Catholic priest at Madras, according to the rites of the Catholic Church, followed by cohabitation, but without licence of the Governor, which it had been uniformly the custom to obtain, is a valid marriage. Lantour v. Teesdale, 8 Taunt. 822. Marsh, 243. Evidence that British subjects in a foreign country being desirous of intermarrying, went to a chapel for that purpose, where a service in the language of the country was read by a person habited like a priest, interpreted into English by the official clerk, which service the parties understood to be the marriage service of the Church of England, and they received a certificate of marriage, which was afterwards lost, is sufficient whereon to found a presumption (not appearing to the contrary) that the marriage was duly celebrated according to the law of that country, particularly after eleven years cohabitation as man and wife till the death of the husband, and such British subjects being attached at the time to the British vice in such foreign country, and tary possession of the place; it such marriage, solemnized by a ly orders (of which this would be evidence), would be a good marriage law of England as a marriage per verba de presenti before the t, marriages beyond sea being ex- of that act, and it would make no solemnized by a Roman Catholic v. Brampton, 10 East, 282.

Cohabitation as Man and Wife, 150, a man is conclusively liable for supplied to a woman while he is her as his wife, when they have is not liable for necessaries sup- on the ground that he has lived represented her as his wife, if he at in point of fact they were not pro v. D. Chemant, 4 Camp. 215.

allows a woman to use his name his wife, he shall be bound to pay rurnished to her, even by a man hat the parties were not married. hrelkeld, 2 Esp. 637. Kenyon.

man who had for some years coha- woman, who passed for his wife, , leaving her and her family at his this country, and died abroad:— he woman might have the same bind him by her contracts for as if she had been his wife: but cutor was not bound to pay for applied to her after his death, but e of it had been received. Blades . & C. 167; 4 M. & R. 282.

dea of the general issue to an ac- umpsit against husband and wife, ld before the marriage, it is com- ove that she was then married to band, who is still alive. Cowley v. 3 Camp. 438. Ellenborough.

marries a woman, and holds her world as his wife, he does not dis- self from his liability for necessa- d to her, by proving a previous tween himself and another woman, brings home a clear knowledge of tion of the first marriage to the supplied the necessaries to the . Robinson v. Nahon, 1 Camp. orough.

woman has passed as a married l given herself out as such, having e house of the man with whom she d which are ostensibly his, neither all be permitted to say there is no marriage, or that the goods do not belong to the reputed husband. Mace v. Cammell, Loft, 782.

Quere. Whether a woman who cohabits with a man, assumes his name, represents herself as his wife, can maintain trespass against a sheriff for taking in execution furniture alleged to be her property, but being in the house in which the parties reside? But it having been left to the jury to say whether, under the circumstances, the property might not have been given up by the woman to the man during cohabitation, and they have found it in the affirmative; the Court refused to disturb the verdict. Edwards v. Fairbrother, 2 M. & P. 293; 3 C. & P. 521.

A deed of separation need not necessarily contain a covenant to indemnify the husband from the wife's debt. Westmeath (Earl) v. Westmeath (Countess), Jacobs, 126.

Declaration on bond—plea that it was conditioned for performance of covenants which were to indemnify the obligee from alimony and debts incurred by his wife after their separation, and that defendant had performed the covenants; replication that a judgment was recovered against the obligee by a creditor of his wife, and he paid debts and costs, of which defendant had notice; demurrer, and joinder. The defendant is liable for the costs as well as the debt paid by plaintiff, for the covenant to indemnify is general, and it was not necessary for plaintiff to give notice that an action was commenced, and if it had been necessary the plaintiff must have recovered on these pleadings, for the defendant has admitted notice. Duffield v. Scott, 3 T. R. 374.

We think the treatise well adapted for students, and if a copious index be added we shall pronounce it a useful book of reference.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are very much obliged to Mr. SANGER, 4, Essex-court, Temple, for the loan of the papers and short-hand writer's notes in Tullett v. Armstrong.—We have also to thank one of the solicitors in Newlands v. Holmes for the paper in that cause.

S. A. W.—Thanks for your offer. Your second communication has been received.

A. J. H.—C. D.—O. L.—C. N. F.—B. W.—R. S. H.—A. L.—A Subscriber, Worcester.—An Attorney, recently examined—are all under consideration.

A Subscriber's remarks upon the last Examination must be authenticated.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Many of our Correspondents must continue to exercise their patience. We dare not, in the face of our pledge, imitate our contemporaries, by issuing double numbers, except at our own cost, and that our subscribers cannot expect from us.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s.

We have no need to make any alteration in this Notice by reason of the NEW POSTAGE REGULATIONS, which are all fully and officially detailed in this paper. Our Country Subscribers will continue to receive it as heretofore, Postage Free, without any further charge.

In the Press,

SECOND EDITION,

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition will contain the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

"The publication of any matter tending to disturb the public peace is a criminal offence, even should the matter relate to foreign governments and magistrates, because nations at peace with each other may be provoked to actual hostilities by the conduct of a subject of one nation, who, by his publications, defames another nation, or its government or magistrates. This was determined by Lord Ellenborough in the case of Peltier, who was tried in the Court of King's Bench for a libel upon Napoleon Buonaparte; in which his Lordship held that any publication which tends to degrade, revile, and defame persons in considerable situations of power and dignity in foreign countries, may be taken to be and be treated as a libel; and particularly where it has a tendency to interrupt the amity and peace between the two countries. It was (as the writer assumes) upon this principle of preserving the public peace, and as a part of the common law of the land, that the present Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench (Lord Denman) ruled, in the recent action brought against the printers of the reports of the House of Commons for an alleged libel (contained in those reports), that no man is privileged to publish and offer for general sale matter which is libellous, notwithstanding such matter be printed for a report to the House of Commons. Upon this decision, the House of Commons instituted a Committee of Privileges, who made a report, confirming the right of the House of Commons to authorize a general publication of its reports. See Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East's Rep. 1, the judgment in which case was affirmed. See 4 Taunt. 401: and, in the House of Lords, 5 Dowl. 165. Also the case of Burdett v. Coleman, 14 East's Rep. 165, upon the power assumed by the House of Commons.

"It has always hitherto been held, that it is not a libel to publish a correct copy of the reports or resolutions of the two Houses of Parliament, or a true account of the proceedings of a Court of Justice.

'For though,' as Mr. Justice Lawrence observed (Bur v. Wright, 8 Term Rep. 293), 'the publication of the proceedings may be to the disadvantage of the particular individual concerned, yet it is of vast importance to the public that the proceedings of Courts of Justice should be universally known. The general advantage to the country in having these proceedings made public more than counterbalanced the inconvenience to the private person, whose conduct may be the subject of such proceedings.'—B. II. c. ix. s. 2. ed. 1.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

* * The publication of the Second Edition has been hitherto delayed until the termination of the present collision between the Court of Queen's Bench and the House of Commons. It will now be published next week.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

Just published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part I.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents which have all been worked upon, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to every purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—manuring—also the Customs relating to MINING LEASES.

Vol. III. was published Dec. 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. 1 & 2, £1.10. London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

ERRATA.

Vol. III. p. 208, 1st column, last line—not to be read. Second column, second advertisement.—The paragraph after the tenth line from the top, commencing "This work," and continued for twelve lines ending with the words "Mining Leases," is misplaced, and applies to and should have been incorporated with the first advertisement.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, Feb. 1, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

[ SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1840. [No. 15.

SEPARATE USE.

(Continued from p. 211.)

Court, a married woman has, for a century past, been considered of possessing to her own use, of her husband; such property a separate estate, and, in respect considered in this Court as a enjoying and capable of exercising as such. The property may be her by contract with the husband marriage, or by gift from him or er, wholly independent of such far as his legal rights as husband re. The Court will treat him as id property held by or for the wife rate use, if unaccompanied by nt, is subject to her power of nd the other incidents of property n or single women.

e for separate use, as sanctioned f Equity, has a peculiar existence state of marriage. It operates as to a married woman against the over the wife's property vested nd. It acts in contravention and he legal rights of the husband, nst his legal power, is a sufficient but the power of alienation re- the wife, the separate estate s no protection against the moral the husband, and many instances have occurred, and daily occur, in which the wife, under the influence and persuasion of the husband, has been and is induced to exercise that power of alienation in his favour and for his benefit, and thus to defeat the protection intended for her; but as the separate estate owes its origin and support to the Courts of Equity, it was understood that the same Courts might so modify it as to secure the protection which was intended; and accordingly it was intimated by Lord Thurlow, that if a gift clearly expressed that the separate estate should be capable of assignment in anticipation or alienation, that that intention could be carried into effect; and his Lordship being of that opinion, afterwards set the example in a case in which he particularly took an interest, and from that time, now nearly half a century ago, it has been usual to introduce into all wills and settlements a clause giving women real and personal estate for their separate use, independent of their husbands, without power of assignment by way of anticipation and without power of alienation, and such clauses, though their operation has been considered to be, as undoubtedly it is, inimical and irreconcilable with the ordinary legal rules affecting the limitation of estates and the legitimate incidents of property, has been repeatedly approved and carried into effect by this Court, and family settlements and provisions to a very great extent has been framed in a reliance on them. And in

do so under the two following divisions:—

1st. What is a sufficient conversion of real estate into personalty so as to prevent a resulting trust in favour of the heir?

2ndly. What is a partial conversion only, so as to prevent the residuary legatee from taking?

First. A conversion out and out.

When a will creates a trust to sell real estate, the testator's object and clear intention being to convert his real property into personalty for all the purposes of such will, or to invest it with the quality of money, and to dispose of it as part of his general personal estate, the heir-at-law will not take a resulting trust in case of lapse or otherwise. Mallabar v. Mallabar, Forrester, 79.

In the case of a lapsed legacy, to be paid out of a mixed fund of real and personal estate, the next of kin will take the whole benefit of the lapse if it appear upon the will to have been the testator's intention that the produce of his real estate, directed to be sold after his death, should for all purposes have the same quality as if it had been part of his personal estate at his death. Phillips v. Phillips, 1 Myl. & K. 648.

A legacy out of the produce of a copyhold estate directed to be sold, failing, was held to pass by the residuary clause against the heir; the object being a general conversion out and out. Kennell v. Abbott, 4 Ves. 802.

If an estate be devised, charged with legacies, which fail, the devisee, and not the heir, shall have the benefit of them. Id. 811.

A specific legacy bequeathed to a residuary legatee of the testator's personal estate directed to be paid out of his real estate, devised to be sold for that and other payments (the overplus to be paid to another legatee), becoming lapsed by the death of the residuary legatee in the testator's lifetime; it was held not to be a resulting trust for the benefit of the heir-at-law, nor to be applicable in exoneration of the personal estate for the benefit of the next of kin, but to discharge the devised estate again in favour of the legatee of the residue of the produce of the sale. Noel v. Lord Henley, 7 Price, 241.

The case of Amplett v. Parke, 1 Sim. 275, is a leading case on this subject. There a testatrix gave her real and personal estate to trustees to sell; and directed that the proceeds of her real estate should be taken as part of her personal estate; that out of the monies to arise by such sale, and out of all other her personal estate, her legacies should be paid, and gave the residue to A. for life, with remainder over; and it was held that the real estate was absolutely converted into personalty, and that some of the legacies which had lapsed, belonged to the residuary legatee, and not to the heir.

Where a testator directed his real and personal estate to be sold, and his debts and legacies to be thereout paid, including certain charitable legacies, and gave the residue of the mixed funds to A. and B.: the failure of the charitable legacies, as far as they would affect the real estate, was held to enure to the benefit of A. and B. Green v. Jackson, 5 Russ. 35.:—Lord Eldon, in this case quoted with approbation the following extract from a judgment of Lord Hardwicke.—“I will point out the nicety of distinction, as it appears to me upon which this Court has gone. If I give to A. and his heirs all my real estate charged with my debts, that is a devise to him for a particular purpose, but not for that purpose only. If the devise be upon trust to pay my debts, that is a devise for a particular purpose, and nothing more; and the effect of these two modes admits just this difference: the former is a devise of an estate in inheritance, for the purpose of giving the devisee the beneficial interest subject to a particular purpose; the latter is a devise for a particular purpose, with tion to give him a beneficial interest where land was directed to be sold together, with the personal estate, (inter alia) in charitable purposes, the trustees were to place out all the money of testator's estate, and the interest on securities, and divide it, &c. Ke, C. held—1st. That the bequest of charity was void; and 2ndly. that the estate was absolutely converted into personalty — Durroux v. Motteux, 1 use of real estate in trust to sell, of the money to pay debts, &c. the surplus to maintain and educate daughter of the testator until marriage. But if she should die under twenty-one, all such money should remain in the hands of the trustees for such parts of the real estates as remain unsold (if any), to be to the use of the daughter lived to attain majority; this is a conversion out and the real estate remaining unsold at her death, goes to her personal representatives. Shelby v. Palmer, 1 Mer. 296.

by empowering other persons to sell of his estates, disinherits his heirs, such as by his own actual disposition. Therefore, where a testator appoints an executor to sell his estate, it is turned into personal assets, and leaves no resulting trust for the heir; but if a testator says,—“my heir shall sell the land, he is bound to sell it,” Cook v. Duckenfield, 6, 568.

an estate is charged with an interest for payment of debts, and after payment the surplus is given over, the property vests in the residuary legatee. Hawkins v. Chappel, 1 Atk. 621,

y.—A Partial Conversion.

there is a mere trust to sell real estate the testator's object being to cause a conversion for a limited purpose only, as to pay debts, legacies, &c. and the Court has no direction from the testator, to whom the money arising from such sale shall go, the heir takes by resulting trust the surplus of the money raised by the sale, after payment of debts and legacies.

And, in such cases, a lapsed legacy would result to the heir-at-law. Cruse v. Barley, 3 P. W. 20; Hutchison v. Hammond, 3 Bro. C. C. 128, cited 4 Ves. 810; Digby v. Legard, 2 Dick. 500, 3 P. W. 5th ed. 22 n. Collins v. Wakeman, 2 Ves. 687.

A conversion for a particular purpose which fails has been held a resulting trust for the heir.

A devise of real estate to be sold, the object being a provision for legacies, is not an absolute conversion, and is, therefore, as to the surplus, a resulting trust for the heir, though a residuary legatee is appointed, Berry v. Usher, 11 Ves. 87; Sheddon v. Goodrich, 8 Ves. 481.

Where a real estate is devised by payment of debts, and no more is said, there is clearly a resulting trust; but if a particular reason occurs why the testator should intend a beneficial interest to the devisee, there is no precedent that it shall not be held a beneficial interest, Hill v. Bishop of London, 1 Atk. 619.

A bare intention, or even negative words, will not exclude an heir-at-law from insisting on a resulting trust, Cook v. Duckenfield, ante.

The bequest of a legacy payable out of real estate to an heir-at-law will not be sufficient to exclude a resulting trust as to the surplus. As where land was devised to trustees to sell, and, out of the money arising by the sale, amongst other things, to pay £100 to the testator's son, and no disposition was made of the surplus, it was held that the land was converted into personalty, that no more should be paid to the son, and that the surplus should be paid to the heir. It was necessary to pay the debt and the sums, and that the surplus resulted to the heir-at-law, Randall v. Bookey, 2 Vern. 425, Pre. Chan. 162, S. C.

In Cruse v. Barley, ante, and Ackroyd v. Smithson, 1 Bro. C. C. 402, lapsed legacies were held to result to the heir-at-law.

Lastly, as before stated, it is a rule in equity that an heir-at-law can only be disinherited by express words or necessary implication, 3 Dow. 248, 254.

Considerable alterations having been made in the law of lapse by the recent statute of 7 W. IV. & 1 Vic. c. 26, it must be borne in mind that the foregoing cases have reference only to what the law was before the passing of this act, and that now the residuary legatee or devisee (if such be appointed by the will) will take, to the exclusion of the heir-at-law, in all cases of lapse. For, by sec. 24, it is enacted that every will shall be construed with reference to the real or personal estate comprised in it, to speak and take effect as if it had been executed immediately before the death of the testator, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will.

A residuary devise shall include estates comprised in lapsed and void devises, sec. 25.

Gifts to children, or other issue who have issue living at testator's death, shall not lapse, sec. 33.

J. A. M.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.
February 3.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.
PETITION of the BAR.

Sir E. SUGDEN presented a petition signed by 599 Members of the Bar of England, (twenty-seven of whom were Queen's Counsel or Serjeants-at-Law) of every shade of political opinion, and a very considerable number of them belonging to the two great parties into which the state is divided. No document which ever had come before that House was more entitled to the notice of the Hon. Members, from the standing of the parties, and from the consideration that they rarely came forward, and only upon occasions of the highest importance, before that House in the character of petitioners. The petitioners stated that they had heard with alarm the recent proceedings in that House, which had terminated in the committal of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms, for executing a process of the Court of Queen's Bench. The petitioners deplored that the House should have thought it necessary to take any step for the infliction of punishment on the ministers of justice, and humbly prayed that the persons now in custody should be discharged. The right hon. gentleman said that he would take the liberty of founding a motion during the course of the evening upon this petition, which was ordered to be printed. The following is the petition:—

“To the Hon. the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

“The humble Petition of the undersigned Queen's Counsel, Serjeants, and Barristers-at-Law.

“That your petitioners have heard with alarm of the recent proceedings of your Hon. House in committing to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms, the persons who now hold the office of Sheriff of Middlesex, and also the plaintiff in an action brought against the printer of your Hon. House, feel deep regret that punishment should thus be inflicted on a subject of the realm for having brought an action in one of Her Majesty's Courts in Westminster Hall, and on the officers of that Court for having, in the ordinary course of their duty, executed Her Majesty's writ in carrying into effect a judgment of that Court. Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that the persons so in custody may be discharged.”

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Dec. 24.

HILL v. GOMME.

APPEAL from the Master of the Rolls.

We have before fully reported this case, as heard by the Master of the Rolls on the 15th July and 10th August last, when the plaintiff's bill was dismissed.<sup>(a)</sup> Against this order the present appeal was made.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, the Master of the Rolls was clearly right in dismissing the bill, and the present appeal must be dismissed with costs.

(a) Ante, vol. ii. p. 328.

Jan. 13.

GOMPERTZ v. ANSELL.

—Upon an Interlocutory Application for an Issue—Whether the parties hide the result.

THE CHANCELLOR.—In this case there was an interlocutory application for an issue to Henry Gulling Isaac was the legitimate issue of Joseph Isaac. That issue was granted. The result in such cases is generally given to the jury. In this case however the parties had hidden the cause, and gone into evidence. It is not conclusive on this Court. It is a matter of evidence, but merely a matter of fact. It was competent to the parties to go into the cause. It is quite obvious that the case is attended with inconvenience. Hereupon on an interlocutory application I am granting an issue, I shall consider much so, unless the parties will undertake the result. That, however, was not adopted in this cause. There are matters of evidence now produced which were submitted to me before I directed the case to the jury by whom that issue was given which may have considerable effect on the jury. I cannot say there has been a change of practice of the Court shows that it is upon itself to decide without a jury, in cases of such controverted facts. Is, then, it now such as not to conclude the plaintiffs on their issue? Upon the whole I cannot say that the verdict upon another trial would be different from that upon the former trial. I desire to be understood as not directing the jury upon the ground of any thing that the Judge who tried the issue. It will go to a new trial upon the same issue.

DEBTORS' COURT.—Feb. 5.

OF JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE.

The nisi obtained in this case (a) came on for argument this morning. Mr. Nichols appeared on the part of Mr. Stockdale to show cause against the rule, and made a preliminary objection to the rule. He stated, as Mr. Stockdale was discharged from prison in January, 1831, that the presentment was made under the 59th section of the 7th George IV., and he would not before he mentioned the objection he intended to submit to the consideration of the Court. The words were, "That in case any person or persons, body politic or corporate shall after any such insolvent shall have become entitled to the benefit of this act become possessed of any stock in the public funds of this country, or any legacy, money due or growing due, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bank-notes, securities for money, goods and chattels, or any other property whatsoever, belonging to such insolvent or held in trust for him, or in case any such person or persons, body politic or corporate, shall be indebted to such insolvent, it shall be lawful for the said Court, upon the application of any assignee or creditor of such insolvent, to cause notice to be given to such person or persons, body politic or corporate, to hold and retain the said property till the said Court shall make further order concerning the same; and it shall be lawful for the said Court to order such person or persons, body politic or corporate, to deliver over such property, and to pay such debts as aforesaid, or any part thereof, to the provisional or other assignee for the general benefit of the creditors entitled to claim under such judgment entered up by order of the said Court as aforesaid; and such delivery and payment shall be made in obedience to such order, and such person or persons, body politic and corporate, shall by such payment and delivery be discharged in respect of such property and debts against all persons forever." The Court would clearly see that the section required the application to be made by an assignee or a creditor, and Mr. Nichols believed the practice of the Court in cases of subsequently-acquired property was that it should be shown that the person claiming was not a stranger; he was not a creditor, but he did not state whether he was assignee or creditor. One or other he must state. The Court would make a rule, so as to bring the matter within the words of the Act of Parliament. The affidavit had been obtained on the affidavit of Mr. Nicholain, coach-builder, in which he stated that he was not appointed, but he did not state whether he was assignee or creditor. Mr. Nichols was now submitting that he was a creditor of the insolvent.

Mr. Woodroffe, who was not a creditor of the insolvent, observed that he was not a creditor, but he did not state whether he was assignee or creditor.

Mr. Nichols came on to show cause against the rule, and made a preliminary objection to the rule. He stated, as Mr. Stockdale was discharged from prison in January, 1831, that the presentment was made under the 59th section of the 7th George IV., and he would not before he mentioned the objection he intended to submit to the consideration of the Court. The words were, "That in case any

The Chief Clerk

Mr. Nichols thought, as it was written in, it showed the necessity and the intention of the Court that the application should be founded on the application of a creditor, which circumstance was required to be set forth in the affidavit of the party applying. The fact was not to be supplied by inuendo. He (Mr. Nichols) supposed they would be told that the schedule showed that Mr. Chamberlain was a creditor, but that the document was not to be incorporated with an affidavit; he did not know that Samuel Chamberlain appeared on the schedule as a creditor, and if he did, the objection he had taken would apply in the same manner. There might be a junior and a senior, or any other person of the same name.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN observed, that there was this further difficulty, as it struck him. Supposing Mr. Chamberlain was an admitted creditor in the schedule, that would, perhaps, be sufficient as against Stockdale, but the omission would be an estoppel against the sheriffs. How then could this rule act against the sheriffs?

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER said, the affidavit of Mr. Chamberlain, on which the rule had been issued, in addition to not stating that he was a creditor, did not say what he thought was usual—that he made the application for the benefit of himself and the other creditors.

Mr. Nichols was unwilling to appeal to the recollection of the Court respecting cases in which applications had been made under the same section, but he apprehended not one could be found in which the omission he had mentioned had occurred. They were not to be driven to any long reason or circuitous route to find that Chamberlain was a creditor. His point was, that he was not so described in his affidavit. He therefore objected to the rule in limine, on the ground of the insufficiency of the affidavit. There was a circumstance here that required the Court to see that the preliminaries were properly made out. The application might result in an attachment, and the Court would therefore see that all was correct, that before they proceeded to an attachment, the law had been set in motion on a sure foundation. In Equity the Courts were strict that all parties were properly described, so at common law; and on these grounds he made his application for the dismissal of the rule.

Mr. Cooke, in support of the rule, said, whatever circumstances had transpired in this case elsewhere could not influence the Court on the present application. All they had to consider was, whether the rule had been drawn up so as to satisfy the act of Parliament. The act said the rule was to be granted on the application of an assignee or a creditor; there was not a word about an affidavit. The Court was to satisfy its mind that the applicant was a creditor.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN remarked that this satisfaction required an affidavit.

Mr. Cooke said it was known that the Court on all motions referred to the schedules; that they not only required affidavits, but always referred to the schedules; and he thought the schedule in this case was the most important document, and one to which the Court had referred before the rule was granted. It was drawn up in the usual form.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER referred to the rule. The words "a creditor" were written.

Mr. Cooke contended that the affidavit was sufficient. It described Mr. Samuel Chamberlain, of No. 10, Great Newport-street, Long-acre, and if the Court referred to the schedule they would see the same description; and on reference to the record they would see that the same Mr. Chamberlain was the opposing creditor on the hearing. It would be better if his learned friends had proved that Mr. Chamberlain was not a creditor. The rule was the speaking document, and it ordered Mr. Stockdale to come forward and oppose the application. Did he say that Mr. Chamberlain was not a creditor? No; but he endeavoured to evade this application by saying that the affidavit did not mention the fact, although the rule called him a creditor, and required him (Mr. Stockdale) to show cause why a sum of money should not be set aside for his creditors, as subsequently acquired property. The Court had been told that there was a probability that an attachment might be asked for against certain parties. There were no doubt circumstances connected with this case of a peculiar and public nature. But was this case different from all others? The Court were in all matters to look forward to the chance of an attachment. Suppose an attachment in this case issued against the parties, could they come and say they had disobeyed because it was informal—because the affidavit did not state that the person applying was a creditor? It was always presumed that the Court of Law was satisfied before a rule was granted. The Court had issued a rule, could proceed to attachment, and the parties could not say it was informal. It was presumed the Court was satisfied that Mr. Chamberlain was a creditor. Mr. Chamberlain might have been at the time proving his debt; it was merely for the Court to satisfy its mind that the party was a creditor. There was nothing in the act about an affidavit; the party might give viva voce evidence of his debt on which the Court could act.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN—The Court has never done so.

It had been denied on the part of the prisoner that such declarations were ever made, and therefore it became the jury, before they gave any weight to the testimony of this witness, to be satisfied that he was deserving of credit. Many objections had been made to the evidence of this witness, and one person had been called to prove his statement, in one particular instance, to be untrue. It was the province of the jury to determine whether or not these declarations were made. The witness said that the people were told that the soldiers were ready, and that it was only for them to go down and fetch them. If this took place in the presence of the prisoner, and he made no objection, it was a declaration of a most important character. He also said that they were told the people ought to be out on the road with guns to stop any person that passed. This was at Blackwood; and it was not immaterial to call the attention of the jury to the fact that Walker, a witness previously examined, described, that being sent out as a special constable to make observations, he came up to about a dozen persons on the road, one of whom had a gun loaded, and that he himself was wounded. This tended to show that something of the sort mentioned was on the road, but whether with reference to any planning was another question. The evidence of this witness was extremely important, since they had to inquire what was the real intention of the prisoner at the bar in bringing together, or assisting to bring together, a large number of persons in the night, and marching them towards Newport. No doubt, if the prisoner had the intention imputed to him, of stopping all traffic by means of a large body of men, with a view of effecting an alteration of the law or any other general purpose, his offence would amount to high treason. It was, therefore, extremely important to determine on the degree of veracity with which this witness spoke, and the degree of credit to be attached to him. Here was another point for their consideration, because the value of such testimony of what was said in a person's presence, when you sought to fix him with a design, must depend upon whether what was said was said loud enough for him to hear, or whether he assented to it, or whether it was said in a low tone of voice, and he was at a distant part of the room, so that he was not likely to hear it. They would also inquire whether or not they believed the testimony of the witness when they came to a decision that this was a communication to which he was privy at the time. There was one point of alleged contradiction between this witness and one who was called on the part of the prisoner. This witness said he fled away from Pie-corner as fast as he could, and he was sure he did not get home till 10 o'clock.

(To be continued)

OPINIONS of THE JUDGES upon the QUESTIONS raised at the Trial, as communicated to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and read in the House of Lords, 3rd of Feb. 1840.

“Westminster Hall, Jan. 28, 1840.

“My Lord,—I have the honour to inform your Lordship that the argument upon the three cases of ‘the Queen v. Frost,’ ‘the Queen v. Williams,’ and ‘the Queen v. Jones,’ closed this afternoon, and that the judges, after considering the subject, have come to the following determination upon the two questions which have been argued before them, viz.:—

“First, a majority of the judges, in the proportion of nine to six, are of opinion that the delivery of the list of witnesses was not a good delivery in point of law.

“But secondly—A majority of the judges, in the proportion of nine to six, are of opinion that the objection to the delivery of the list of witnesses was not taken in due time.

“All the judges agreed that if the objection had been made in due time, the effect of it would have been a postponement of the trial, in order to give time for a proper delivery of the list.

“The result, therefore, of the determination of the judges is, that the conviction is lost.

“I will have the honour of calling on your Lordship to-morrow at the rising of the Court, if I should receive any intimation of that effect.

“I have the honour to remain, my Lord, your Lordship's faithful and obedient Servant.

“N. C. TINDAL.

“The Lord Marquis of Normanby, &c.”

The following letter on the same subject was also read at the same time:—

“Westminster Hall, Jan. 31, 1840.

“My Lord,—As to the law, the uniform practice has been, so far back as we have any means of knowledge, that if the judge upon the trial of an indictment feels any serious doubt as to an objection that occurs in point of law, he decides the point against the prisoner, and allows the trial to proceed, reserving such point of law, in order that he may take the advice and opinion of all the other judges thereon. After consulting them, and hearing argument thereon (if thought necessary), the opinion of the judges is taken, and that the majority binds the judge who has reserved the question. If that opinion should be against the prisoner, the law is suffered to take its course, and the sentence which has been passed remains. If the opinion of the judges is in favour of the prisoner, the constant course is for the judge who tried

The Case of Frost—Opinion of the Judges.

d passed the sentence to apply to ry of State for a free pardon. And in no way depends on any consent, plied, on the part of the prisoner;
ursues it at his own discretion, and point for the present against the ving him the benefit of further con-and advice with the other judges.
ourse is pursued for the manifest preventing a failure of justice; in-if the judge decided under his impression, supposing it to be in favour ner, and directed an acquittal, there new trial, although upon reference r judges his own opinion was held
g. On the other hand, if the opi-
e judge is at the time unfavourable oner, it can be reserved by that if erroneous set right. With restatement in the memorial of what at the trial, so far as relates to our-cannot but remark, that the learned our under a complete misapprehen-ch we are the more surprised, as y stated that no distinction would between this and other cases tried at but that it must follow the ordi-
. At the time of the discussion is entertained serious doubts, more ng, on the objection that was raised And if the law had obliged us to immediate and final decision, wither of consulting the judges, which s not, we were not prepared, with-further consideration, nor without argument on the part of the Crown to come to any determination on We therefore followed the ordi-e pursued on similar occasions, depoint against the prisoner by allow-l to proceed, subject to the revision rred to. We beg to inform your at we think the circumstance stated on in the memorial, viz. that two of under the special commission ulclared their opinion in favour of the does in our judgment make no difatever; nor do we think that any in their minds at the time of the to affect the question: the law is the majority of the judges when Under the circumstances above-we beg leave to represent to your that in our opinion there is no atever to entitle the prisoner, John free pardon.

“ N. C. TINDAL,

“ J. PARKE.

“ J. WILLIAMS.

Most Noble the Marquis of Normanby,” &c.

The Marquis of NORMANBY, after reading these documents to the House said, he did not see that any case could be made out which would entitle the convicts to a free pardon. The Government was now of opinion that the conviction was, under all the circumstances, a legal one, and that the prisoners had sustained no substantial injustice. Still there was a question whether or not the extreme penalty of the law should be inflicted, and the difference of opinion amongst the judges on the reserved points opened a door to the consideration of certain other points. This consideration, and this alone, induced the Government to make an alteration in the sentence for if this difference of opinion had not taken place amongst the judges, and if the doubts and difficulties by which the case was marked had not arisen, he had no hesitation in saying that he never knew an instance in which the lives of the convicts would have been more justly forfeited to the offended laws of the country. Looking at the atrocity of the crime, at the influence and position of the parties convicted, at the number of persons who have been involved by them, together with the abortive attempts which had been made in other parts of the country, he had not the slightest hesitation in saying, that were it not for the circumstances which he had already stated, the Government would have withheld the recommendation for the exercise of the royal mercy, and, however painful, would have felt it to have been its imperative duty to suffer the law to take its course. There was, he repeated, no ground made out for a free pardon, and the Government, in changing the sentence, resolved to commute it to transportation for life.

The following is stated to be the opinion of the fifteen judges upon the case reserved:—

“ That the prisoner had no objection according to the statute, and that the objection was good if made before the sentence was pronounced:—

FOR.

Littledale

Patteson

Williams

Coleridge

Parke

Erskine

Alderson

Rolt

Colman.

"But that the objection ought to have been made before the prisoner pleaded :"—

| FOR.                 | AGAINST.   |
|----------------------|------------|
| Lord Denman          | Littledale |
| Lord Abinger         | Patteson   |
| Chief Justice Tindal | Williams   |
| Bosanquet            | Coleridge  |
| Gurney               | Parke      |
| Maule                | Erskine.   |
| Alderson             |            |
| Rolfe                |            |
| Coltman.             |            |

Therefore a majority held that the prisoner had not what the statute entitled him to, but a majority also held that the objection was not made in time.—Times.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

Jan. 20, 1840.

SIR,—I have noticed in your last a letter from C. B., in which he suggests that I should refer to the statute 12 Car. II. c. 24, and having acted up to that suggestion, I beg to return my sincere thanks to C. B. in having pointed out to me two very material errors; first, an erroneous extract (which is almost unpardonable) from a statute; and, secondly, giving a description of what Socage was, and not what it is.

I am, Sir,
Your's most obediently,
S. A. W.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,—As I think we ought to think of our more humble fellow-clerks, those who are not articled, I beg to suggest to you that there should be a general holiday in all Attornies' offices on the 10th, being the wedding day of our most gracious Queen. I have thus troubled you, as there does not seem at present any disposition to make the holiday general, although, as a matter of course, every articled clerk will so make it.

I remain, Sir, your very obedient servant,
AN ARTICLED CLERK.
Feb. 4, 1840.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

LAW and LAWYERS, or Sketches and Illustrations of LEGAL HISTORY and BIOGRAPHY in 2 vols. London: Longman, Orm Brown, Green, and Longman, 1840.

This is a work full of wit and anecdote, and to be appreciated as it deserves, must be read. "The improvement of reason; the diverting men from sensuality and idleness; the maintaining of propriety and justice; and consequently, the peace and welfare of the kingdom, is very much to be ascribed to the Judges and Lawyers," so said Richard Baxter. The author in his observations upon Legal Education, p. 5, says :—

It is a practice too common with controversialists, to argue against things in extremes. There is no necessity, because a lawyer devotes a certain portion of his time to the improvement of his mind, and the cultivation of his taste, by the study of literature, that he should therefore neglect the calls of his profession. "Moderation," says Fuller, "is the silken string running through the pearl chain of all virtues."

As to the sort of education best calculated for the bar student, we would, in the first place, observe, that let libellers say what they will, the bar is composed, for the most part, of gentlemen. That sort and extent of information usually found amongst gentlemen will, consequently, be expected from any one who enters the profession. An acquaintance with the classics, more or less intimate, usually forms a part of the education of every English gentleman; for this reason, a classical education is desirable to all who intend to become members of the bar. There have been men, indeed, who have risen to the very highest honours of the profession without the advantages of a classical education; but it would be as prudent to imitate their conduct as it would be to obtain for a son, a lieutenancy in the French artillery, under the expectation that he would, therefore, become Emperor of the French.

Again, in p. 11, he observes—

General knowledge too is unquestionably necessary for the lawyer. Ludicrous mistakes have frequently occurred through the deficiencies of some of them in this respect. I have heard an anecdote, somewhere, of an eminent barrister examining a witness in a trial

t of which was a ship. He asked, other questions. "Where the ship particular time?" Oh," replied the the ship was then in quarantine." antine, was she? and pray, Sir, quarantine?"

instance given by Mr. Chitty of the eral knowledge to the lawyer is worth is well known that a judge was so norant of insurance causes, that g been occupied for six hours in action "On a policy of insurance (Russia duck) from Russia, he, in s to the jury, complained that no ad been given to show how Russia taking the cloth of that name for the l be damaged by sea water, and to t!"

. 29—

ship in a solicitor's office has also mended by high authority as a ol for the bar. Lord Tenterden, esolved to turn his attention to the r some time in the office of a large aig's Court. This step he was in-ake upon the recommendation of er. Mr. Bentley, the Conveyancer, two or three years ago, was for a e time in one of the principal ses in London; and has been often eclare, that he owed to the habits quired, a facility of mastering every and case that came before him, ifficult or repulsive it might be. leman, who was eminent in his the profession—and there is none ures more positive learning—never e advantage of pupillage in any bar- ambers. All the information and he obtained, he acquired during ip. Chief Baron Thompson com- legal studies in an attorney's office; d Lord Wynford and Sir William ord Thurlow was articled, together er the poet, to a solicitor near Bed- ; and his great predecessor, Lord , passed through the same ordeal. as in his father's office for some le time. Lord Macclesfield actually is an attorney. Lord Kenyon served . Sir William Garrow passed some solicitor's office, as did Sir Samuel Lord Gifford was regularly articled; so was Lord Lifford, Chancellor of nd Sir George Wood and Sir Francis ry learned and distinguished judges.

chapter of EARLY STRUGGLES of : LAWYERS, p. 39, we read—s and Poverty," said Lord Chancellor Talbot, "are the only things needed by the law student." "Pray, my Lord," asked a fashionable lady of Lord Kenyon, "what do you think my son had better do in order to succeed in the law?" "Let him spend all his money, marry a rich wife, spend all her's, and when he has not got a shilling in the world, let him attack the law!" Such was the advice of the old chief justice.

Such sentiments as these it has been the fashion to laud. In themselves they are true, but they are only half-truths, or perhaps we should rather say they are the precise converse of great errors. A wealthy man is less likely to make a good lawyer than a man who is not rich, just as we are told he is less likely to inherit eternal life. But we read no where in Scripture that poverty is the road to salvation. An individual who "has every thing handsome about him," on whom fortune has abundantly showered her gifts, and to whom pleasure offers her thousand inducements, is assuredly not the most likely, nay, is just the least likely person, with Sir William Blackstone, to—

"—welcome business, welcome strife,
Welcome the cares, the thorns of life;
The visage wan, the purblind sight,
The toil by day, the lamp by night."

So he is the more likely to tread "the primrose path of dalliance," than "the steep and thorny way to heaven."

It may be questioned whether poverty, and the difficulties which so often beset men in their passage through life, have all the beneficial influence which is ascribed to them. The school of adversity as often indurates as softens the affections of mankind. In many minds instead of producing humility and industry, it produces only disgust and indifference. Again, looking particularly to our profession, it may be doubted whether poverty has not in many cases the effect of distracting the attention from professional subjects. When the unfortunate Donald, the author of "Vimonda," was asked how he was getting on with his tragedy, he replied in a tone of indescribable sorrow, "Talk not to me of my tragedy, I have more tragedy than I can bear at home." With a family reduced almost to starvation, we could hardly expect his mind to have been devoted to his noble subject.

Lord Erskine said that the first time he addressed the Court, he was so overcome with confusion that he was about to sit down. "At that time," he added, "I fancied I could feel my little children tugging at my gown, so I made an effort—went on, and—succeeded." With a man of less sanguine temperament the same feeling would have only added to his confusion—the conviction that upon his cess at that time depended the future welfare of those he loved would only have aggravated the embarrassment of his novel situation.

Fletcher Norton toiled through the routine of circuits and Westminster Hall for many years without a brief. Mr. Bearcroft, one of the most eminent barristers of the last century, and who died Chief Justice of Chester, underwent the severest difficulties in his passage to wealth and fame. His industry and perseverance were indomitable. For many years his practice was so limited as hardly to suffer him to subsist with the strictest economy. He sometimes, however, thought of relinquishing the law as a profession, but a just estimation of his own acquirements induced him to continue, and he at last made himself known, and obtained an immense practice and a high reputation. It was a long time before the eminent merits of Mr. Holroyd afterwards a puisne judge in the King's Bench became recognised. Lord Kenyon spoke of him, when in his 47th year, as "a rising young man." Sir W. Grant travelled many a circuit before he obtained a single brief, and at last owed to the friendship of a Minister what he was entitled to expect from his own merits.

We would willingly make further extracts but that our space denies it. The whole work is an illustration of the rewards that have attended industry and perseverance, and it richly merits the notice of every aspirant to legal fame and distinction.

EXCHEQUER OF PLEAS.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honourable JAMES LORD ABINGER, Chief Baron of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, after Hilary Term, 1840.

| MIDDLESEX. |      |    |   |   |                                 |
|------------|------|----|---|---|---------------------------------|
| Saturday   | Feb. | 1  | - | - | Common Juries.                  |
| Monday     | "    | 3  | - | - | Revenue and Common Juries.      |
| Tuesday    | "    | 4  | - | - | } Common Juries.                |
| Wednesday  | "    | 5  | - | - |                                 |
| Thursday   | "    | 6  | - | - |                                 |
| Friday     | "    | 7  | - | - | } Special and Common Juries.    |
| Saturday   | "    | 8  | - | - |                                 |
| Monday     | "    | 9  | - | - |                                 |
| Tuesday    | "    | 11 | - | - | } Common Juries.                |
| Wednesday  | "    | 12 | - | - |                                 |
| LONDON.    |      |    |   |   |                                 |
| Monday     | Feb. | 3  | - | - | To Adjourn only.                |
| Thursday   | "    | 13 | - | - | Adjournment day.—Common Juries. |
| Friday     | "    | 14 | - | - | } Common Juries.                |
| Saturday   | "    | 15 | - | - |                                 |
| Monday     | "    | 17 | - | - |                                 |
| Tuesday    | "    | 18 | - | - | } Special and Common Juries.    |
| Wednesday  | "    | 19 | - | - |                                 |
| Thursday   | "    | 20 | - | - |                                 |
| Friday     | "    | 21 | - | - | } Common Juries.                |
| Saturday   | "    | 22 | - | - |                                 |
| Monday     | "    | 24 | - | - |                                 |
| Tuesday    | "    | 25 | - | - | } Common Juries.                |
| Wednesday  | "    | 26 | - | - |                                 |

The Court will sit at half-past Nine o'Clock.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER—Jan. 29.

ADMISSION OF ATTORNIES.

NEW RULE.

Ordered, that every person who shall apply for admission as an Attorney at Law, and who shall not have been an Attorney and Solicitor of any Court, shall (in addition to the notices given to the Examiners, Masters, &c. by a Rule of Hilary Term, 6 Wil. 4, 1836, read in all the Courts) for the next full Term, previous to the Term at which he shall apply to be admitted, cause to be printed and place or places of abode for the following twelve months, and also the names, and place or places of abode of every Attorney or Attornies to whom he shall be Articled, written in legible characters, and affixed in the Exchequer Office of such place as public notices are affixed, and also enter or cause to be entered in two books to be kept for the purpose at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice, and the other at the chambers of the Clerks of this Court, his name and place or places of abode for the last preceding twelve months, and also the name or names of the Attorney or Attornies to whom he shall have been

(Signed) ABINGER,
J. PARKE,
E. H. ALDERSON,
J. GURNEY,
R. M. ROLFE.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

HILARY TERM, 1840, 3 VICT.

13.—This Court will, on Monday, the 19th day of February next, hold sittings, and proceed in disposing of the business, and in the New Trial paper on the 19th, 20th, and 21st days of February, and on the same 21st day of February, and on the 1st day of the same month, will proceed in disposing of the business now pending in the Trial paper.

By the Court.

NEW POSTAGE ACT.

POSTAGE OF LETTERS between FRANCE and GREAT BRITAIN.

A correspondent has furnished us with the following answer, just received, to his strong remonstrance against the old (British) rate being still charged here at the post-paid office. He has set the question at rest :—

“ Sir—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, and to acquaint you, in reply, that the British rate on a letter from France to Sligo, or any other part of the United Kingdom, is 10d. only, under half an ounce; and that the French Post-office has been furnished with a copy of the new regulations to that effect. I have no doubt that the errors which have been committed by the office at which the letters sent by you were post-paid will be corrected on a proper representation being made to the Director-General of the Posts of France.

“ I am, Sir, &c.

“ THOS. LAURENCE, Assistant-Secretary, “ General Post-office, London, Jan. 25.”—
Galvani.

SPRING ASSIZES.

HOME CIRCUIT.

(Before Lord Abinger and Sir Joseph Littledale.)

Hertfordshire.—Wednesday, February 26, at Hertford.

Essex.—Monday, March 2, at Chelmsford.

Kent.—Monday, March 9, at Maidstone.

Sussex.—Monday, March 16, at Lewes.

Surrey.—Monday, March 28, at Kingston-upon-Thames.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A Country Articled Clerk.—Your letter is under consideration. We much wish that our large mass of correspondence had vanished from our table, so as to admit of your request being complied with. You will have your turn if approved.

R. H.—C. V. B.—J. L.—Young Coke—(Young Vanity would have been a better adoption)—W. K.—E. D.—An Old Subscriber—all under consideration.

C. B.—We have your letter and enclosure. In reply to your P. S. see the advertisement. It appears to be the first edition, revised and corrected to the present date.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s.

We have no need to make any alteration in this Notice by reason of the NEW POSTAGE REGULATIONS, which are all fully and officially detailed in this paper. Our Country Subscribers will continue to receive it as heretofore, Postage Free, without any further charge.

Just Published, price One Guinea,

SECOND EDITION,

COMMENTARIES ON THE CONSTITUTION and LAWS of England, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S., of the Middle Temple. This Edition contains alterations and additions, showing the entire New Legal and Political Constitution of the Country at the present day.

HUMAN PUNISHMENT.

Mr. Western makes the following observations upon the manner in which "human punishment may be considered with regard to its power, end, and measure.

"With respect to the power or right of the legislature to enact punishment, any one must see the mischief that would arise, if men were allowed to redress their own grievances. But no man being a proper judge in his own case, the power of enacting punishment is, with the strictest justice, transferred from individuals to the sovereign authority, and thereby one of the evils which civil government was intended to remedy is prevented.

"The justice of human punishment can originally be maintained on no other principles than those of the laws of nature, which authorise every man to secure himself against the assaults of others. But with regard to the particular mode of punishment which may be thought best calculated to defend every individual, in his civil capacity, from injury, that must be left to the wisdom and determination of the supreme legislative authority. And it is in vain for any criminal to say, that this or that penalty is too severe for his crime; for it is a maxim of the constitution, that every man is consenting expressly or impliedly to every act of the legislature. The criminal code, therefore, is a constituent part of that original contract into which every man enters when he first becomes a member of society; and was intended to contribute to his personal safety and happiness, till his own folly brought down its terrible vengeance upon his head.

"As to the end of human punishment; it is not inflicted by way of revenge: for that would be to usurp the prerogative of God, to whom only vengeance belongeth. Neither is it awarded to make an atonement. For every wilful violation of human laws that are not contrary to revelation, is a breach of the moral law; and no human suffering can remove the guilt of the offender, or make whole the law which he has broken. Suffering is the effect of transgression. Now it is utterly impossible that an effect should destroy the cause which produced it. No length of confinement of a debtor, for instance, will discharge the debt which he owes. In short, it is from the Scripture alone that we learn how sin can be pardoned consistently with the Divine attributes and government (Rom. ch. 3. v. 20, 26; 1 Pet. ch. 3. v. 18.) The design of the legislature in enacting punishments is to prevent the commission of the same crime in future so as to secure the public safety; therefore the punishments should be merciful in proportion to the crime committed, and not savour of revenge. Crimes are more effectually prevented by the certainly than by the severity of punishment. Great severity of law has always been found to defeat its own end; its execution is hindered by public humanity, and the criminal escapes punishment. The certainly of suffering a mild punishment will deter men from breaking the laws much more effectually than (as was very recently the case) the uncertain penalty of death." B. II. c. xi. p. 377.

The FIRST EDITION of this Work was dedicated by COMMAND to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN, and was honoured by the most distinguished patronage at home and abroad. It is a work well adapted for STUDENTS.

JOHN RICHARDS and Co., 194, Fleet Street.

On March 1, price 4s, to be continued Monthly.
Vol. IV. Part II.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents, which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—maturing—also the law relating to MINING LEASES.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West in the City of London.—Saturday, Feb. 8, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

[.] SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1840. [No. 16.]

SEPARATE USE.

(Continued from p. 227.)

confirming the judgment of LORD LANG-M. R., in Tullett v. Armstrong, made by the Lord Chancellor, we are understood by our readers, that it is published in this paper, and its authenticity may be relied upon.

LANGDALE continued upon the question, came distinctly under the consideration of the Court, in Anderton v. Anderton,

Keen. There leasehold property bequeathed by will to a woman, then single, for her sole use, free from control of any predecessor, or any husband to come. The testator was single at the testator's death, and lived so for several years afterwards before she married she desired to have the property settled to her separate use.
Her husband refused, and the marriage took place without a settlement.

After marriage, the wife claimed the property for her separate use, and although her husband insisted, not only that a separate use of an unmarried woman was unsustainable, as an attempt to circumvent the power of disposition; but in that case there was an agreement to forego her claim it was decided that she was entitled to the leaseholds for her sole and sepa-

This was a decree of Sir John who had, in a previous stage of the case, granted an injunction to restrain the husband from receiving the rents, and his order in that respect was confirmed by Lord Eldon, by whom an order was made to discharge the injunction. Unfortunately this case was not reported, until the order on which the question now arises had been made;

but up to November, 1832, when that decree was pronounced, it seems to have been considered as clear, that a gift to a woman for her sole and separate use, independently of her husband, conferred on her a separate estate during her marriage, though she might be single, when the gift vested in interest or possession. The separate estate was considered simply as an estate vested in a woman, which this Court would protect against the marital power of her husband, and no question has been raised further as to the validity of the restraint or alienation affecting the separate estate; and according to the law thus understood has been the constant practice of the profession, and there are many cases in which married women, and through them their families derive their sole support from provisions made for them, on this understanding, if the gift is so limited as to be for her separate estate, during the period of coverture only, this Court would not extend it further, and the case of Benson
v. Benson is in conformity with that principle.

The cases which raise the question are Newton v. Reid, Massey v. Parker, and the two orders in Newton v. Reid, and Brown v. Pocock, there being two cases of the same name, were made by the Vice-Chancellor, as it would seem, without any argument at all. In each case property was given to the woman for her separate use, without power of assignment by way of alienation, and the alienation was made during her coverture. In the first case the Vice-Chancellor is reported to have said; that at the time the restriction was void, because the annuity was not given over on alienation; and subsequently he is reported to have said, that the restriction or alienation was rendered ineffectual by the context of the will in that case. In the other case no reason whatever is assigned by the Judge, though the reporter has transferred an observation of Counsel to his marginal note; but on a subsequent occasion the Vice-Chancellor is reported to have said, that the case of Benson v. Benson, and Newton v. Reid, proceeded upon this, that the policy of the law being in favour of the power to assign, the Court will not permit that power to be restricted by a fetter which is to take effect on a subsequent marriage. On this it is necessary to observe, that in Benson v. Benson, the alienation took place during widowhood, while in Newton v. Reid the alienation was during coverture. In Massey v. Parker, it was a question whether the property was given to the separate use of the wife; if it was so given in, fetter was imposed on it, and in that respect it differs from the present case. The Lord Chancellor, then the Master of the Rolls, having determined the estate was not given to the woman for her separate use, the case might there have ended; but his Lordship proceeded to declare his opinion, that if the property had been given to the woman's separate use, it would upon the marriage become the property of the husband, as the validity of the restraint on alienation appears to me to depend on the existence of the separate estate, it is not to be denied that the case of Massey v. Parker is to be considered as an established decision, while it negatives the existence of the separate estate in such a case as the present, which would alone put an end to the restraint or alienation; and must be admitted that the case, Newton v. Reid, though the order was made with opposition, has been more than once referred to without disapprobation. In the subsequent case of Davis v. Thorncroft, the Vice-Chancellor has expressed himself to have always understood that property may be given to the separate use of a woman, married or unmarried; and he stated, as I have conceived correctly, that the practice of the profession has been in accordance with that opinion without variation, and in some cases it has been stated also, as I conceive correctly, that the cases of Newton v. Reid, and Benson v. Benson, and Jones v. Salter, are all cases in which the question was whether, if the Court permits property to be settled for the separate use of a woman, it will admit of there being a restraint in disposal of it; but upon this statement it is impossible to add, that this case of Jones v. Salter, Benson v. Benson, and the first case of Brown v. Pocock, only shew that the Court does not admit of such a restraint while the woman is single; whilst the cases of Newton v. Reid, and the second case of Brown v. Pocock, are the only reported cases in which, notwithstanding the fetter annexed to the separate estate, the Court has permitted alienation during coverture. On the review of the cases to which I have last adverted it appears to have been the opinion of the Lord Chancellor, when Master of the Rolls, that the separate estate would not arise on coverture if the subject of it vested in the woman while single; and it appears to be the opinion of the Vice-Chancellor, that the separate estate would arise on coverture, though the subject of it vested in the woman while single; but the Court would not sanction any restraint on alienation of such separate estate. In this statement of the authorities, I own I have found myself extremely embarrassed, and I could have to have had this case re-argued before the Chancellor, and in the presence of the Chancellor. Not finding that course of, I have given the subject my attention; and though after what has I must own my own opinion with trust, yet, as it does appear to me an opinion expressed in Massey v. Par- necessarily inconsistent with the decision in Newton v. Reid, and the orders in Reid, and the second case of Pocock, are not warranted by authorities and doctrines of the Court, I refuse to the parties in this case the benefit of my opinion, such as it is. I have considered all the cases I have been told on the subject, and I am unable to find any authorities prior to those I have read, or any satisfactory principle for the proposition, that a gift to a woman for separate use is invalid, if she chances to die at the time when the benefit of the use becomes vested; or for this proposition, that restraint of alienation of the separate estate of a married woman is invalid, if accompanied by a gift over an alienation, or sanction either of those propositions, as it appears to me, defeat the purpose which was contemplated by the Court, when it framed its principles for the separate estate of a married woman. As this subject has given occasion to much discussion, and as a decision rendered here cannot settle the question, of great importance, I am desirous that the case should be brought under the consideration of a higher tribunal without unnecessary delay, and I will afford every facility in my power for the correction of error into which I have fallen.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM XVI. VOL. III.

AGREEMENTS.

Is a sufficient Signature by the Agent, to an Agreement for the Sale and Purchase of Land?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE. ANSWER TO PROBLEM XII. VOL. 3.

SCINTILLA.

What is the doctrine of Scintilla?

By the statute 27th H. 8. c. 10. commonly called the Statute of Uses, it was enacted "that the estate, &c. that was in such person or persons, that were or should be seised of any lands, &c. to the use, confidence, or trust of any such person or persons, should be from thenceforth deemed to be in him or them that had or should have such use, &c. after such quality, manner, form, and condition as they had before in or to the use, &c. that was in them." It transferred the legal estate to the cestui que use. Thus, if a feoffment be made to A. and his heirs to the use of B. and his heirs, the seisin is transferred to, and the use executed in B. To attract the legal estate under the statute, it is necessary that there should be an use in case; a question arose, therefore, how the statute operated upon contingent uses. As the statute was supposed to extract all the estate of the feoffee to uses, various opinions were held as to the person in whom was the seisin to serve the contingent uses as they should arise. (a) The point arose in Brent's case, 2 Leon. 14., and Manning and Andrews' case, 1 Leon. 256. But the case where the question came more directly under the notice of the judges, and where the doctrine of scintilla is said to be established is Chudleigh's case, 1 Co. Rep. 120. There Sir Richard Chudleigh conveyed an estate to the use of trustees and their heirs during the life of his son Christopher, remainder to the use of the sons of Christopher successively in tail, remainders over. The feoffees enfeoffed Christopher of the lands before he had a son. Whether the contingent use to the unborn sons of Christopher was destroyed, was the question. Periam and Walmesley held that the use was not destroyed; but rejected the doctrine of scintilla (Periam comparing it to Sir Thos. More's Utopia, 132 b), and insisted that the seisin of the feoffees was sufficient to serve the future uses when they came in esse: they held also that as the uses were never in esse, they could not be suspended, 133 a. The remaining judges agreed that the feoffment made by the feoffees who had an estate for life by limitation of the use, divested all the estates and future uses also, 134 b.:—that the statute could not execute any uses that were not in esse; and after arguing that the statute did not divest the feoffees of the estate, it was held by Popham and Anderson, C. J.J. and four other judges that the feoffees, since the statute had a possibility to serve the future use when it came in esse; and that in the mean time all the uses in esse shall be vested; and when the future uses come in esse, then the feoffees (if the possession be not disturbed by disseisin or other means) shall have sufficient estate and seisin to serve the future use when it comes in esse, to be executed by force of the statute, and that seisin and execution by force of the statute ought to concur at one and the same time. And they held that if the possession was disturbed by disseisin or otherwise, the feoffees would have power to enter to revive the future uses, according to the trust reposed in them, unless they did by any act bar themselves of their entry, 137a.(b) That which weighed with the judges to be of opinion for leaving a right of entry in the feoffees to preserve the contingent uses, was, their fear of perpetuities, 2 Cruise's Dig. 408.; Kent v. Hartpool, 1 Ventr. 306. That the contingent remainder was destroyed, by the destruction of the particular estate by feoffment or conveyance, before the contingent remainder came in esse was settled by Chudleigh's case, and confirmed by Archer's case, 1 Co. rep. 66., though Archer's case was reported first, Sug. on Pow. 125. In the case of Wegg v. Villiers, 24 Car. 1.: 2 Ro. Ab. 796, Roll, C. J., with Nicholas and Aske resolved (inter alia), that if the tenant for life in remainder, did not, upon feoffment by immediate tenant for life, enter so as to support the contingent uses, the feoffees may enter to revive the contingent use, and then by their entry the contingent use shall be executed in the person entitled, for there is a scintilla juris in the feoffees, otherwise the contingent use will be destroyed. And in the same case, in B. R. Newdigate, J. thought that rather than the contingent use should be destroyed, the covenantees might employ their scintilla to preserve it. These expressions seem to imply a want of conviction in the stability of the doctrine.

(a) In order to give effect to the contingent uses, and to prevent the "universal disquiet of the realm" (Popham, C. J. in Chudleigh's case), the judges resolved that a possibility of seisin still remained in the feoffees; not an actual estate, but a Scintilla juris et tituli.

(b) From Anderson's report of this case which Sir E. Sugden (1 Pow. 29) says is the best, it appears that the judges were of opinion that not a mere scintilla, but a sufficient estate remained in the feoffees to support the uses.

What (says Sugden, 1 Pow. 31.) is this scintilla juris et tituli? If it be an actual interest, it cannot be revested in the feoffees against their own feoffment. If it be not, why should it not be considered in the light of a collateral power which the donee cannot destroy?

The doctrine of scintilla seems now to be treated as a nullity, or as a theory only curious as showing the astutia of the Judges in their desire to support contingent uses and prevent perpetuities. (Mr. Sanders, however, Uses, vol. I. supports it). Where is the necessity for it? As we are compelled to hold that the estate is executed in the remainderman, so as to exhaust the seisin of the feoffees until the rising of the use, what is there in the act which should enforce us to say that the estates shall not open, and so once let in the contingent uses as they come

The intention of the act was to make the feoffee of every thing; he was to have the use of the unborn cestui que vie when they come in esse, the words of the statute are satisfied. Sug. on Pow. Of the same opinion is Hayes.

The statute makes no alteration in the use, but merely converts the legal estate. Then, the use is no sooner executed, than the statute converts the use with legal qualities, converted to a contingent remainder. When a conveyance to uses is made, all the present uses are converted into legal estates, and all contingent uses are converted into legal estates, capable in due time of ripening into legal estates. As, before the statute of land uses, a conveyance by A to B, to the use of B for life, and after his death to the use of his sons, the disposition in favour of B would have presently charged the land of B with a contingent equitable use, since the statute of land uses, by acting on the use, will convert the land with a contingent use into a legal estate. Hayes's Introduction to Conveyancing, 69, 70.

When then a conveyance to the use of B for life, remainder to the use of his sons, remainder to the use of B in fee; in which B. derives from the release of the land would seem to be a qualified seisin, to open and admit the son when he comes in esse.

A. J. H.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.

February 11.

THE SHERIFFS OF LONDON.

MR. KNATCHBULL moved "That it having been stated by W. Broaches, Esq., medical attorney to J. Whealton, Esq., that in his judgment Mr. Whealton's life would be endangered by confinement, the sheriff be forthwith removed from the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this house."

The question having been put from the chair, the motion was agreed to.

MR. HUME wished to have it understood whether the sheriff was to be discharged on payment of his fees in the usual way, or otherwise.

The SPEAKER stated it to be his opinion that persons in custody of the Sergeant, who had been ordered into confinement by the house, and whose health, it was stated, would be endangered by further confinement, ought to be at once discharged by the house without payment of their fees.

SCOTLAND.

JUDGES OF THE SUPREME COURTS.

MR. WALLACE rose to move, in pursuance of notice, for a committee to inquire into the administration of the law in the Supreme Court of Scotland, with a view to ascertain whether the number of judges may not be diminished. The hon. member proceeded to say, that it was a considerable number of years since he first introduced the subject to the notice of the house, but that a great increase having been made to the salaries of the judges, while the business of the court had considerably decreased, it was now more especially necessary to inquire whether the same number of judges ought to be employed as was considered requisite when the amount of business was greater. In the year 1831 the five judges who sat in one of the courts had before them 1,956 causes, but in the year 1838 the number of causes before the same court was 1,486, showing a diminution of about a quarter. With regard to the other two courts, the eight judges who sat in them had in the years 1831-2 decided 495 causes, but in 1839-40 they had only decided 218. It seemed clear that if there were only one court of review which sat for a reasonable time, the whole business might be effectually done. The length of the vacations taken by these courts was very great, and was considered to be one cause of the great delay and expense of the proceedings in them. He had last year alluded to a suit which had lasted upwards of four years, during which the court had sat 16 months only. During the last year two very great misfortunes had happened, which, however, made it manifest that the number of judges might be reduced without any public inconvenience. One very distinguished judge had been afflicted by a very severe complaint, which had prevented him from attending to his duties, and a calamity had befallen another eminent judge, who had now quitted the bench; the consequence was, that for some time there were in two of the courts only three judges, but no complaint was made of the insufficiency of the learned judges who remained to do the whole duty of the court, either on the part of those learned persons themselves, or on the part of the profession. He thought, therefore, that some reduction in the number of judges ought to be made, but it would be much more satisfactory if the Noble Lord who was the leader of the administration in that house would consent to take the inquiry into the hands of the Government. The Hon. Member concluded by moving according to his notice.

Mr. F. MAULE said, it was not the intention of the Government to oppose the motion, because, after the measure which the house had generously passed last session for increasing the salaries of the judges, it would not be proper to withhold from public inquiry the question whether the judicial strength at present existing was greater than was necessary to carry on the business of the court. He was not going to pre-judge that opinion by pronouncing any opinion upon it at present, but he knew that in Scotland an opinion prevailed that there were too many judges; and, such being the case, it was in his opinion better, as well for the due administration of justice, as for the credit of the court, to institute a full, impartial, and satisfactory inquiry into the subject. He was sure that nothing would emanate from any committee to be appointed for this purpose which could be prejudicial to the characters of those learned officers who now acted as judges in those courts; if he supposed that such a result could be produced by the appointment of a committee, he should be the last man to consent to the present motion. There were other matters to which such a committee might properly direct its attention. It was impossible to read the report of the commission of 1834, and to doubt that a general dissatisfaction prevailed as to the mode of administering justice in the Court of Session. At the same time it would be expedient that the inquiry, if agreed to, should be carried on by the Government, and he therefore proposed to the Hon. Member, if his motion were agreed to, to leave in the hands of the Government the selection and nomination of the committee.

Mr. R. STEUART supported the motion, in the expectation that the result would satisfy the people of Scotland that the judges were not over-paid, or the establishment too large.

Mr. HOPK opposed the motion. He should regard it, if carried, as tantamount to a censure on the Scotch judges.

The LORD-ADVOCATE was convinced that the result of the inquiry would be that the Court of Session had not too many judges, and that they had properly conducted the business. He adhered to the opinions he had expressed in the former debate on this question. The impression which prevailed in the country had arisen from the shortness of the time occupied by the judges in giving their decisions in court. But this feeling of dis-approbation of the manner in which business was there conducted was not shared by the profession or by any one whose opinion was worth having. The best way to satisfy the country would be to institute a full inquiry before a committee, and he had therefore no objection to that course, especially as he was sure that the result would be to give additional support to the court.

Sir R. PEEL said, that he formerly agreed to an increase of salary for the judges, because he felt that the salaries they had received were inadequate. He thought that there ought to be that relation between the bench and the profession, that you might always be able to get competent persons to fill the former. It was true economy to give such salaries as would purchase the highest talents at the bar, so as always to insure an equality at least, if not a superiority of the bench as compared with the profession. But what surprised him was that the Government should agree to this motion in the way they had done. They had made up their minds, they said, that there should be no reduction. Why, then, did they not state the grounds of that determination, and resist the motion? Such a motion might be made to-morrow to inquire into the manner in which the English judges conducted business. The Government might say to that, too, "We have made up our minds;" but how could they resist the motion? Would they say to such a motion—"We think the result of inquiry will be to add credit to the judges." Having, then, on one side, not only the opinion of the Government, but that of every man whose opinion was worth having, according to the hon. and learned gentleman, was it decent to enter on such an inquiry? The hon. member (Mr. Wallace) said that the number of four judges was preferable to three, and the hon. member and his seconder said that their minds were made up on the subject; that they had considered these matters, and of course they would adhere to their opinions. There was another point mentioned by the hon. member, with respect to the conduct of the judges—that several persons thought that the judges were not sufficiently patient in hearing long law arguments, and that was the particular point on which he recommended inquiry. He said that there had been a change made in the mode of conducting the business of the court; that formerly the judges were very patient and listened to the arguments of counsel, but that now the arguments of counsel and their written pleadings did not receive the same attention as formerly. How could they come to a satisfactory inquiry upon that point without an examination of the judges; and how could they conceive anything more improper than to ask the judges, "Why did you not give more attention to those arguments?" And suppose the judge ly, "If you press me on that point, I tell you that the counsel was so tedious that he was consuming the public time, preventing the court performing the duty which it owed to the public." He (Sir James) must say his leaning would be with the public; he could not conceive a judge better qualified by his duties to the public, when his duty was made up, and when he heard counsel waste the time of the court with frivolous and idle saying, "Other cases are pressing, and I am satisfied on the question." He heard a speech made by a Scotch counsel of the House of Lords of 11 hours the first day, and 5 hours the next; altogether three days were consumed in the JUDGE-ADVOCATE.—Sixteen hours.

PEEL continued—When he said eleven hours the Hon. Gentleman, in his anxiety to honour the Scotch bar, corrected him—"You do injustice to the Scotch bar; instead of eleven hours, the speech was only six hours long." Could there be anything more ridiculous than calling on these judges to say, when they had made up their duty about the eighth or ninth hour, they would tell the counsel that the time of the trial was valuable, and that they begged permission to pronounce their judgments, their duty having been made up some time before? A degrading inquiry! The reasons assigned by the Hon. Member for the inquiry were, that the House would best preserve its dignity, and best consult the dignity of the judicial functions of the Court of Session, by giving up the inquiry.

ALLANCE begged leave to move for the adjournment with the understanding that the appointment of the committee should be given up to the next day, the leader of the House.

House divided—

|                                   |     |
|-----------------------------------|-----|
| For the motion . . . . .          | 128 |
| Against it . . . . .              | 111 |
| Majority for the motion . . . . . | 17  |

Law Reports.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Jan. 14.

STURGIS v. CHAMPNEYS.

and WIFE—Right of a FEMME COVERT, Tenant for Life of Real Estates, to the rents and profits after the decease of her husband.

have before fully reported this case, as reported before the Vice-Chancellor on the 9th July last, (a) and the appeal heard by the Lord Chancellor on the 7th November last; (b) since that time (Nov. 21) Sir Thomas Champneys died.

Mr. Stuart now applied on behalf of Lady Champneys, that the receiver which the Court had appointed of the estates of Sir T. Champneys, and to which he had become entitled, in right of his marriage with her, might be forthwith discharged from his office, and that she might be let into possession of the estates, and the future receipts of the rents and profits. The Court made a decree in favour of the plaintiff, and a receiver of the rents and profits of the estates was appointed. It was now contended that all the interest which the plaintiff had in the estates under the decree of the Court was now at an end, that the receiver should therefore be discharged, and Lady Champneys be allowed to take possession of the estates.

Mr. Jacob opposed the motion on behalf of the assignees of the late Sir T. Champneys under his second insolvency, submitting that the Court would not now take upon itself to discharge the present receiver, inasmuch as Lady Champneys had, by certain instruments which she had executed in the year 1838, bound her interest in the estates in question to pay the sum of £35,000 to the creditors under the second insolvency. There were also arrears of rents which had accrued due anterior to the death of Sir T. Champneys, which those who claimed an interest in the estates through Sir T. Champneys would be entitled to receive, and which had not yet been received by the receiver of the Court.

Mr. K. Bruce, for Mr. Sturgis, opposed the motion, upon the ground that the whole of his claims were not yet satisfied, and that the receiver ought to be continued until the rents which had accrued due previous to the death of Sir T. Champneys should have been got in, applied, and accounted for.

Mr. Stuart, in reply, drew the attention of the Court to the decree which had been made in the suit under which the receiver had been appointed. By its terms the receivership could only continue during the coverture. The death of Sir Thomas Champneys had put an end to the interest the plaintiff, in right of the creditors, claimed in the estates; and as to the arrears of rents which had accrued due anterior to the death of Sir T. Champneys, and which had not been yet received, he submitted it was clear law they belonged to the wife by survivorship; and in support of that position he cited the authority of Co. Lit. 351 A. With regard to the claims of Mr. Sturgis on the estates, he contended it appeared from proceedings in the cause that they were now all satisfied, and, under the circumstances, Lady Champneys

(a) Ante, vol. ii. p. 232.

(b) Ante, p. 36.

the Court of Chancery in the case of Reynolds v. Reynolds, and in the case of Reynolds v. Reynolds, the Court of Chancery held that the husband was entitled to the rents and profits of the estate during the coverture, and that the wife was entitled to the rents and profits of the estate after the death of the husband.

The Court of Chancery held that the husband was entitled to the rents and profits of the estate during the coverture, and that the wife was entitled to the rents and profits of the estate after the death of the husband.

The Court of Chancery held that the husband was entitled to the rents and profits of the estate during the coverture, and that the wife was entitled to the rents and profits of the estate after the death of the husband.

The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that, by the terms of the decree in Reynolds v. Reynolds, the plaintiff, as provisional assignee, was only entitled to the rents and profits of the estates during the coverture, so that Lady Champneys since the death of her husband was entitled thenceforth to receive the rents and profits, and take possession of the estates. There was no objection to her now doing so, but the present receiver should continue to receive the rents and profits which had accrued due up to the 21st of Nov. 1839, when Sir T. Champneys died.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER—Dec. 19.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

Special Jury.

MORTIMER v. M'ALLAN.

STOCK BROKERS and JOBBERS—Liability of a Principal for Stock transferred to him by his Broker, which the latter had obtained by fraud.

The plaintiff is connected with the Stock-Exchange, and sought to recover by this action a sum of £4,531. 6s. from the defendant, a tailor, carrying on business in King-street, Covent-garden, under the following circumstances. The defendant, it appears, had been in the habit of intrusting "the working of his capital," as he termed it himself, to a broker named Taylor. According to the system adopted between them, the broker would seem to have been confided in to a considerable extent, until Mr. M'Allan, in September last, came to the determination to resume a share of dealing with his own capital, which he found had been productive of a large loss. He then the instant day, having received a check from his principal, Mr. Taylor, for the sum of £4,531. 6s., he went to his bankers, Messrs. Roberts and Co., and deposited the check. He then went to his principal, Mr. Taylor, and told him that he had deposited the check. Mr. Taylor, however, begged him to wait till the next day, and in the mean time offered to give him a check on his own bankers, Messrs. Roberts and Co., which he wished to be presented until the following day, as he said he had received a check from his principal on a west-end banker, which he could not get till that time. Mr. Mortimer, however, insisted on that being handed over to him, when Mr. Taylor said he could not do that, as he had already paid it into his bankers; but this Mr. Mortimer answered by saying, "Oh! very well, then come and walk with me to your bankers, and we can easily get the check back again." This course Mr. Taylor assented to, and they were proceeding on their way to Messrs. Roberts and Co. when Taylor turned round and confessed that had any check from the defendant; being indebted to him for stock previously for him, and also for money paid, amount of £5,000. stock, he had been called upon to invest that amount, and been driven unavoidably to perpetrate upon the plaintiff. Mr. Mortimer caused a distringas to be placed upon so transferred to Mr. M'Allan's name, the same day proceeded to lay his case before the committee of the Stock-Exchange, in the presence of Taylor he made the statement, which was admitted by Taylor, an additional statement that though he could not pay the purchase-money of the stock he had friends in town and country to whom he hoped to receive the necessary money. As the transaction was revealed to the public he never after this day appeared at his office, and shortly afterwards absconded from his residence; nor was he traced until the defendant, a stranger, was found stricken by apoplexy in a cab, we believe, which turned the inquest to be that of the absentee. In these melancholy circumstances it was an action was brought, the plaintiff contended that the defendant was liable to him. Sir W. Follett, for the defendant, contended according to the regulations of the Stock-Exchange, the credit on all such transactions was given to the broker buying the stock, and not to his principal, who, being in most cases unknown to the seller, was not likely to give such credit from those in the habit of doing the business. It would be a mistake if the plaintiff should make out that the defendant was liable to whom a broker had sold stock purchased by him, no matter how many accounts between them might be. The stock-jobbers transacted all the business and knew each other well, and their credit; the transfers and sales, there made on the faith of being paid by the broker doing the business, and the usual course of their business seemed to be to take their money back the transfer till he was satisfied with the money, and as some one is to bear the consequent upon this fraud of the plaintiff it was but right that the plaintiff should be dealt with a man whose position he was to judge of.

As well, in reply, said that it was not the statement of the usual course of the business at the Stock-Exchange, for so far from usual to look to the broker, the credit was given to him, nor is he always held as the principal neglects to pay; that the subject of the fourth regulation of the Statute, which expressly says that the broker shall be liable, even though he gives a reference to a third party, if that third party neglects to pay; so that, in fact, he is only the last resource of the seller. The evidence, however, in this case, fully proves that no credit had ever been given to Mr. Taylor, who had none on the Exchange at the time of this transaction, and who was immediately asked by the plaintiff to give the check of his principal, and not his own, with which Mr. Mortimer would not have anything whatever to do. There could be no doubt but that the plaintiff had been defrauded out of the stock, which he had immediately put a distringas upon, and to recover the entire of which he had brought this action at the very earliest point of time. If the fraud was that of Taylor alone, at any rate it was one in favour of the defendant, who had imposed such blind confidence in him, and who ought to bear the loss rather than the plaintiff, a stranger to him, and one who certainly showed no inclination to trust him to any amount.

GURNEY, B. said, the main question was, whether the plaintiff had trusted to Taylor, and to Taylor alone, in the transaction for the payment of the value of this stock so transferred by him to M'Allan.

A verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, which was entered accordingly, subject to a motion on a point of law raised by Sir W. Follett as to the right of the plaintiff to maintain the present form of action, which was indebitatus assumpsit for the value of this stock, with reference to the statute of 7 George II., c. 8, s. 8, by which it is enacted that all sales and transfers of stock by persons not actually possessed of the same shall be illegal and void in law. He cited the case of Child v. Morley, 8 Term. Rep. 610, (a) in support of this position, but the learned Baron determined to allow the verdict to stand, subject to future proceedings, if he should be wrong in the opinion entertained of the case, which seemed to be favourable to the plaintiff's right to sue in the present form.

(a) In this case, which was an action of assumpsit, it was held that a broker who contracts with others for the sale of stock at a future day, by the authority of his principal, who afterwards refuses to make good the bargain, cannot by paying the difference to such third persons maintain an action on an implied assumpsit against his principal for the amount. If the principal were really possessed of the stock so bargained to be sold, such contract is not illegal within the stat. 7 G. 2. c. 8. against stock-jobbing, although the broker did not disclose the name of his principal at the time of the bargain made, and the purchaser may maintain an action for the difference against the principal.—Lord KENYON said, he admitted that no man could by a voluntary payment of the debt of another make himself that man's creditor, and recover from him the amount of the debt so paid; but what pressed on his mind was that the plaintiff was under some sort of compulsion to pay the differences. He knew that it was the common practice on the Stock Exchange for the broker who is employed to sell stock not to disclose the name of his principal at the time of making the bargain; and the buyer deals with him upon the confidence of his character. Therefore his Lordship considered that his character was at stake in making good the engagement he had entered into on behalf of his principal; and having been placed in that situation of responsibility by the act and procurement of the defendant, he considered that his paying the differences under such circumstances was not altogether a voluntary act, but done under the pressure of a situation in which he was involved by the defendant's breach of faith. He remembered a case in Rolls' Abridgment (tit. Act. sur le Case, 24, pl. 31, Editor), where a party met to dine at a tavern, and after dinner all but one of them went away without paying their quota of the reckoning, and that one paid for all the rest; and it was holden that he might recover from the others their aliquot proportions. If the plaintiff here had been bound as guarantee for the defendant to the purchasers of the stock, there could have been no doubt but that he might have recovered his whole demand in this action.—Ed.

The Editor directs attention to Sanders v. Kentish, 8 Term. Rep. 162—310; 1 id. 20; Burr. 489; 3 Campb. 49—51, 168; 1 id. 88.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

JUDGMENT pronounced by the CHIEF JUSTICE of NEWFOUNDLAND in the Chambers, Aug. 13, 1838, upon the application of EDWARD KEILLY, to be discharged from custody under the Writ of Habeas Corpus, he having been committed by the Speaker's Warrant for an alleged Breach of Privilege.
(Concluded from page 213.)

I shall now consider, as the last point, the validity and sufficiency of the warrant set forth in the return to the habeas corpus; and here I will say in limine, that if the House of Assembly do really possess the powers which they claim to exercise equally with the British House of Commons, the warrant of the Speaker (provided it discloses a sufficient ground of commitment) ought not to be scanned with that critical nicety as to technicalities which is requisite to the validity of other commitments. But, admitting, for argument sake, that they have the same authority with the House of Commons to direct their Speaker to issue his warrant in such a case as this, does this warrant disclose a sufficient ground of commitment? In my judgment it does not. The prisoner is not stated to have been adjudged by the House to be guilty of any offence, for the proceeding of the House is not the nature of a judgment, or it is nothing; nor does it recite any order or resolution that the party should be committed for the offence, nor that the Speaker should issue his warrant to the sheriff accordingly.

But having shown that the House of Assembly is not a Court of Record, nor part of a Court of Record—that it does not possess the power which it claims to exercise by virtue of any law, usage, or precedent, upon no one, in short, on the grounds or authorities, by virtue of which the House of Commons must exercise such power, let us see whether, under these circumstances, there is anything in this warrant which gives it any efficacy; for in a warrant which is to take away a man's life, nothing is to be inferred but what the words themselves fairly and strictly import. A warrant, then, must be in writing and made by a person having competent authority. It must be under seal: without this the commitment is unlawful, the gaoler is liable to false imprisonment, and the wilful escape by the gaoler, or breach of prison by the prisoner, makes no felony.* A warrant committing one in execution (which is the case here) must state that the party has been convicted;† and it must be for a time certain,‡ and should set forth clearly the authority under which it is made.

* 1 Hale, 563.

† 5 B. and A., 304.

‡ 8 T. R. 509.

§ 3 Hale, c. 16. s. 10.

essentials this warrant is utterly dentertained doubts only that this war-ued by a court of competent jurisould still have been my duty to see n form and substance legal and valid poses for which it professed to be the Queen's Bench upon a habeas examine into the commitment of a ontempt by any other court of law petent authority to commit, and will he prisoner if the process of such regular, though the judgment upon ed be unquestionable; but under all ances, having no doubt of the want in the Assembly, it is the more imon me to pronounce upon the legal f this warrant.

owers and privileges affecting the e subject are for the first time arroman or body of men, who claim in question and pronounce definiany act which they may deem to be a ese privileges, and to punish for the ir own authority as they may see fit, behoves those who administer the care that no one is subjected to such unless it be clearly warranted by the
 and. And if the power which has ion been exercised can be shown to l by the law of the land, and to be e in any other Court, then I say, deference, that such a power is of e most liable to be so abused as to berties of all who dwell in this por-British dominions dependent upon as re as those of the subjects of the e Government in the world.

already said, the powers which the ve claimed to exercise upon this e not necessary for them, and the land are abundantly sufficient for ion; but if it be considered that the powers which they have arrogated y, then let it be so declared and the Legislature. Until, however, my mind that the laws of the land e give them such powers, I shall at ld my sanction from them.

RESPONSIBILITY OF ATTORNIES.

ROCKDALE V. HANSARD.

of the House of Commons. (a) ouse of Commons last week, Sir said he had always been of opinion se like the present the attorney was most responsible; being the adviser le proceeding, he ought to be held tly responsible than the plaintiff, who being an unprofessional and possibly an ignorant man, smarting under a sense of injury, went to take the advice of one more conversant with affairs than himself. In such circumstances it most certainly was the duty of the attorney to warn an unprofessional client against the dangers of persevering in a course by which he might incur the displeasure of the House of Commons. The duty which an attorney owed to a client in such circumstances was altogether to discountenance the action.

 If he abstained from dissuading his client he must, on account of his superior attainments and on account of the absence of personal prejudice, be considered much more liable to the displeasure of the house than any other party concerned. For these reasons it did appear to him that they had fallen into a mistake in not calling the attorney to the bar in the first instance. He certainly ought to have been examined by the house previous to any examination of the Sheriffs; but the error could not now be remedied. When Mr.
 Howard was called to the bar, he fully intended to vote for his committal. He had of course listened attentively to the statement and observations made by that gentleman at the bar, and he confessed that he thought them equivocal, at the same time that there was such an approach to submission that he was bound to say it deserved the consideration of the house.
 Mr. Howard said that if he were mistaken he could not too strongly express the regret which he should in consequence feel. He added, that he should express further regret if he could find stronger terms than those which he had already used. He after hearing such language as that, did think that committal would be rather too severe a course, at the same time that he doubted whether Mr.
 Howard ought to be immediately discharged.
 He did not entertain the least doubt that the house had a right to commit him; the committal would be just, but justice ought to be tempered with mercy; he should advise that Mr. Howard be recalled, and that Mr. Speaker be instructed to inform him that he had been guilty of a breach of the privileges of that house, but that having shown a desire to submit himself to the consideration of the house
 they did not wish to proceed to extremity.
 This course would place on record their conviction that the attorney was the responsible party. He thought that that course would be most consistent with the moderation and mercy which he wished to see observed by the house upon all occasions.

(a) No new laws can be made, nor old laws abrogated or altered, but by common consent in Parliament, where bills are prepared and presented to the two houses and then delivered, but nothing is concluded but by the King's royal assent; they are but embryos, it is he that giveth life unto them.

Yet the HOUSE OF PEERS hath a power of judicature in some cases; properly to examine, and then to affirm; or, if there be cause, to reverse the judgments which have been given in the Court of King's Bench, which is the Court of highest jurisdiction in the kingdom for ordinary judicature; but in these cases it must be done by writ of error in parlamento; and thus the rule of their proceedings is not absoluta potestas, as in making new laws, in that conjuncture as before, but limitata potestas, according to the known laws of the land.

But the HOUSE OF COMMONS have only power to censure the members of their own

House, in point of election or misdemeanour in or towards that House, and have not, nor ever had power so much as to administer an oath to prepare a judgment.

The true use of Parliaments in this kingdom is very excellent; and they should be often called, as the affairs of the kingdom shall require, and continued as long as necessary and no longer; for then they be but burthens to the people—by reason of the privileges justly due to the members of the two Houses and their attendants; which their just rights and privileges are religiously to be observed and maintained: but if they should be unjustly enlarged beyond their true bounds, they might lessen the just power of the Crown, it borders so much upon popularity. — Lord Bacon, vol. i. p. 266. Ed. Fo. 1788, tit. Advice to George Villiers.—EDITOR.

SITTINGS AFTER HILARY TERM, 1840.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

|           |         |  |  |  |                                                    |
|-----------|---------|--|--|--|----------------------------------------------------|
| Saturday  | Feb. 8  |  |  |  | First Seal—Appeal Motions and Appeals Causes.      |
| Monday    | " 10    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Tuesday   | " 11    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Wednesday | " 12    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Thursday  | " 13    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Friday    | " 14    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Saturday  | " 15    |  |  |  | Appeals and Causes.                                |
| Monday    | " 17    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Tuesday   | " 18    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Wednesday | " 19    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Thursday  | " 20    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Friday    | " 21    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Saturday  | " 22    |  |  |  | The Second Seal—Appeal Motions and Appeals Causes. |
| Monday    | " 24    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Tuesday   | " 25    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Wednesday | " 26    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Thursday  | " 27    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Friday    | " 28    |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Saturday  | " 29    |  |  |  | Appeals and Causes.                                |
| Monday    | March 2 |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Tuesday   | " 3     |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Wednesday | " 4     |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Thursday  | " 5     |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Friday    | " 6     |  |  |  |                                                    |
| Saturday  | " 7     |  |  |  | The Third Seal—Appeal Motions and Appeals Causes.  |

|      |   |   |                                           |
|------|---|---|-------------------------------------------|
| " 9  | - | - |                                           |
| " 10 | - | - |                                           |
| " 11 | - | - |                                           |
| " 12 | - | - |                                           |
| " 13 | - | - |                                           |
| " 14 | - | - |                                           |
| " 16 | - | - |                                           |
| " 17 | - | - |                                           |
| " 18 | - | - |                                           |
| " 19 | - | - |                                           |
| " 20 | - | - |                                           |
| " 21 | - | - |                                           |
| " 23 | - | - |                                           |
| " 24 | - | - |                                           |
| " 25 | - | - | The Fourth Seal—Appeal Motions and ditto. |
| " 26 | - | - | Petitions                                 |

Appeals and Causes.

The Sittings will close on the 3rd day of April.

Before the VICE-CHANCELLOR, at Lincoln's-Inn.

|        |   |   |                         |
|--------|---|---|-------------------------|
| Feb. 8 | - | - | The First Seal—Motions. |
| " 10   | - | - |                         |
| " 11   | - | - |                         |
| " 12   | - | - |                         |
| " 13   | - | - |                         |
| " 14   | - | - |                         |
| " 15   | - | - |                         |
| " 17   | - | - |                         |
| " 18   | - | - |                         |
| " 19   | - | - |                         |
| " 20   | - | - |                         |
| " 21   | - | - |                         |
| " 22   | - | - |                         |

The Last Paper of Causes to be disposed of previous to Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.

The Second Seal—Motions.

Vice-Chancellor will hear Short Causes and Unopposed Petitions previous to the General Friday during the Sittings.
Sittings will close on the 3rd day of April.

CLERKS WHO PASSED THEIR EXAMINATION AT THE HALL OF THE LAW SOCIETY, HILARY TERM, 1840.

| Names.   | Name and Residence of Attorney to whom articled, or assigned.                |
|-----------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Thomas Crawhall | Robert Wilson, Sunderland                                                           |
| Edward          | Matthew Anstis, Liskeard, Cornwall; assigned to Edmund Hambly, Wadebridge, Cornwall |
| George          | James W. Barrett, Gray's-inn                                                        |
| Benjamin        | G. Sheppard, Otley                                                                  |
| Henry Hugh      | Wm. Beckett, Doncaster                                                              |
| Andrew Robert   | Wm. Slater, Manchester                                                              |
| Thomas          | Charles Cook, 1, New-inn                                                            |
| Edward          | Robert Rogers, Liverpool; assigned to John Morris, Manchester                       |
| James Wilfred   | Charles Chatfield, 22, Cornhill                                                     |
| F. Charlesworth | Charles John Shoubridge, 5, South-square, Gray's-inn                                |
| Henry Isaac     | Thomas Dix, Bristol                                                                 |
| Henry Edw.      | James Wittis Lyon, Spring-gardens                                                   |
| , Richard       | Edmund Haworth, Bolton, Lancaster; assigned to Adam Haworth, Bolton                 |
| Henry Orlando   | Francis Pender, and James Genn, Falmouth                                            |
| Edward          | Henry Woolcombe, Plymouth                                                           |
| , William Smith | Eleazar Lawrence, Ipswich                                                           |
| John, Ayling    | Daniel Howard, Portsea                                                              |

| Names.              | Name and Residence of Attorney to whom articulated or assigned                                            |
|----------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Chilcot, John Gilbert      | Henry James Leigh, Hammet-street, Taunton                                                                        |
| Clark, William Fox         | James Baker, Bainton, Beverley                                                                                   |
| Clavering, John            | George Delmar, 46, Lincoln's-inn-fields                                                                          |
| Cook, Henry                | Thomas Thompson, Kingston-upon-Hull                                                                              |
| Cook, G. W. Francis        | George Phillips Foster Gregory, 28, Poultry                                                                      |
| Cooms, Thomas, the younger | Thomas Coombs, the elder, Dorchester                                                                             |
| Cooper, John Martin        | Thomas Thompson, Bishop Wearmouth: assignedGeorge Smith Ranson, Bishop Wearmouth                             |
| Cox, Wm. the younger       | Arthur Philip Groom, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square                                                          |
| Croase, Robert Jennings    | Frederick Chase, Luton, Bedfordshire                                                                             |
| Crotty, Edward             | Richard Hollier Atkinson, 37, Southampton-buildingsassigned to Christopher Crouch, 37, Southampton-buildings |
| Davenport, William         | Robert Southee, 18, Ely-place, Holborn                                                                           |
| Davies, Edmund William     | Baker Gabb, and William Woodhouse, Secretan, Aber-venny                                                      |
| Davis, Isaac               | James Phineas Davis, 14, Charlotte-street, Bedford-square                                                        |
| Davis, Thomas Hammond      | Henry Harper, Kennington Cross (To be continued)                                                                 |

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

COMMENTARIES on the CONSTITUTION and LAWS of ENGLAND, incorporated with the Political Text of the late J. L. De Lolme, LL.D. Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple. SECOND EDITION, Revised and and Corrected to the Present Time. London: John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet Street.

The public press appears to have spoken in such commendatory terms of Mr. Western's valuable work, that little is left for us to say; indeed, when we recollect the high esteem in which JUNIUS had the original work—the long held opinion that “De Lolme on the Constitution of England deserves to be written in letters of gold, and is worthy the consideration of every crowned head in Europe.”(a) We need only repeat the expiring wish of Father Paul for his country,—“ESTO PERPETUA.”

The present edition, we observe, contains much valuable information. The chapter “on the law that is to be observed in England in regard to civil matters,” the author has practically explained for the benefit of the student, and without being tiresome to the scientific or general reader—as an example under the title of “THE NEW LEGAL CONSTITUTION,” b. 1. c. 10. s. 2. p. 11. Ed. 2. he says,

When it is still intended to hold a person to bail, an order may be obtained at any time after the commencement of the suit, and before final judgment, in all actions in which the defendant was previously liable to arrest, by satisfying a judge by affidavit that the cause of action amounts to £20. or upwards, and that the debtor is about to quit England, or is less forthwith apprehended. On this the defendant may be arrested and held to bail in nearly the same way as under the writ capias, provided by the Uniformity of Process Act. (b)

Except, therefore, in replevin and other actions removed from inferior courts, in cases under the 85th section of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. (c), the writ of summons is now the process by which a personal action can be commenced in any of the superior courts of law. (d) That act has made no change in the form or mode of proceeding under the writ of summons. (e)

If the writ be against husband and wife, service on the husband will be sufficient. (f)

(b) A Member of Parliament, being a trader, and being served with a summons, not paying or compounding with his creditors to their satisfaction, and not appearing to any action within one month after service, commits an act of bankruptcy, upon which a fiat may issue against him.

(c) Turnor v. Darnell, 7 Dowl. 346.

(d) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 1 & 2.

(e) See Archbold's Practice, Q. B. by Chitty.

(f) Buncombe v. Love, Barnes, 406; Collins v. Shapland, Id. 412.

(a) We are truly glad to see among the subscribers to the present edition the names of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia.

inst a corporation aggregate, it must be served on the mayor or other head officer, town-clerk, clerk, treasurer, or secretary of such corporation.

Against a hundred, or other like corporation, it must be served on the high constable of any of the high constables thereof. Against the inhabitants of a county, of a borough, town, or the inhabitants of a franchise, city, town, or place not being a hundred or other like district, it is served on some peace-officer therein action against a printer, publisher, or editor of a newspaper, service may be at any time mentioned in the declaration of the writ. (h)

Against a trading or other company or corporation, within the meaning of the 7 Will. 4. & 1 Vict. c. 73. the service must be on the secretary of the company or body, or left at the office, for the time-being, of the company or body; or if such clerk shall not be known, then service thereof on any officer employed by the company or corporation, by leaving the same at the usual place of abode of such agent or officer, will be good service. (i)

Person who serves the writ must, within eight days at least after such service, indorse the writ with the day of the month and week of the year, and otherwise the plaintiff cannot enter judgment for the defendant according to the writ, and the affidavit upon which such judgment is to be entered, must state the date when such indorsement was made. (l)

For example we may add of Mr. Justice Giffard's mode of explanation. On the jurisdiction exercised by Courts of Equity, he jurisdiction (m) exercised by Courts of Equity may be considered in some cases as concurrent with, and in some cases as exclusive of the jurisdiction of courts of law.

Assistant to the jurisdiction of courts of law. 1st. By removing legal impediments to the decision of a question depending in law: thus, if an ejectment be brought in a court of common law, a court of equity will restrain the party from proceeding (unless he has an equal claim to the land) from the jurisdiction of a court of equity) from setting up any title which may prevent the fair trial of the right as a term for years outstanding in a trustee, lessee, or mortgagee. (Harrison v. Southcote, 1 Atk. 540.) So also equity will, under certain circumstances, restrain a party from insisting upon the invalidity of a devise. (Anon. 1 Cha. Ca. 267.) 2ndly. By compelling a discovery which may enable them to decide. 3rdly. By perpetuating testimony when in danger of being lost, before the matter to which it relates can be made the subject of judicial investigation. (The Earl of Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 451; Duke of Dorset v. Serjt. Girdler, Pre. Ch. 531; Cressett v. Mytton, 3 Bro. Ch. Rep. 481.) It is, however, material to observe, that a bill to perpetuate testimony will lie, though the plaintiff might proceed at law, if he alleged by his bill, and by an affidavit annexed to the bill, any circumstances by means of which the testimony may probably be lost (Philips v. Carew, 1 P. Wms. 117), as that the witness to be examined is the only witness to a material fact. (Shirley v. Ferrers, 3 P. Wms. 77; Hankin v. Middleditch, 2 Bro. Ch. R. 641.) It may also be said to be assistant, by rendering the judgments of courts of law effective; as, 1st. By providing for the safety of property in dispute pending a litigation, in some cases by ordering the property to be brought into court, or to be collected by a receiver, in other cases by restraining the party in whose hands it is from exercising any power over it, or parting with it until further order; 2ndly. By counteracting fraudulent judgments, &c.; and, 3rdly. By putting a bound to vexatious and oppressive litigation.

It exercises a concurrent jurisdiction with courts of law in most cases of fraud, accident (n), mistake (o), account, partition (p), and dower.

It claims an exclusive jurisdiction in most matters of trust and confidence, and "wherever, upon the principles of universal justice, the interference of a court of judicature is necessary to prevent a wrong, and the positive law is silent."

It grants a prohibitory writ, called an injunction, in mixed as well as personal actions, and in waste (q), ejectment (r), and quare impedit (s), to stay proceedings in another court of equity (t), or in the Admiralty (u), or in (n) Hatchett v. Pattle, 6 Madd. 4.

(o) Henkle v. Royal Exchange Assurance Office, 1 Ves. 317, by Lord Hardwicke; Taylor v. Radd, 5 Ves. 595, cited by Lord Thurlow.

(p) See Hargrave's Co. Litt. 169, b. n. 2.

(q) See Field v. Beaumont, 1 Swanst. 209.

(r) Lowe v. Jolliffe, 1 Dick. 390.

(s) Amhurst v. Dawling, 2 Vern. 401.

(t) 4 Madd. 362.

(u) 3 Swanst 605.

Will. 4, c. 39, s. 13.

7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 9.

Will. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 73, s. 16.

Will. 4, c. 39, s. 1.

3 Will. 4, c. 3.

Blanquet, Treat. Eq. vol. 1, p. 10.

the ecclesiastical courts (v), and in the courts of common law.

An injunction in the Court of Exchequer stays all further proceedings, in whatever stage the cause may be; but in Chancery, if a declaration be delivered, the party may proceed to judgment, notwithstanding an injunction and execution is only stayed: but if no declaration has been delivered, all proceedings at law are restrained (w).

The courts of equity have no restraining power over criminal prosecutions (x), nor will they stay proceedings on a mandamus (y), or interfere where redress may be had by certiorari (z).

An injunction may be had at various stages of the cause. It is in some cases issued of course, and when the answer comes in, the injunction can only be continued upon good grounds. Where it is applied for to stay injuries of an unjust nature, then, upon filing the bill, and its contents being well supported by affidavits, it will be granted immediately, and continue until the defendant has put in his answer, and till the court shall make further order; and after answer, the court will determine whether it shall be dissolved or continued.

A temporary injunction will be made perpetual, when the same reasons continue which prevailed at its being granted (a).

A dissolved injunction may be revived if there be ground for it (b).

Amending a bill dissolves an injunction (c).

The reader, who may be inclined to inform himself as to grounds taken by the friends and opponents of the jurisdiction of equity, may consult Hargrave's Law Tracts, p. 344.

An APPENDIX is added, containing all the new laws relating to real property and testamentary dispositions. We need but say in the words of our contemporaries, that "De Lolme's book, which had in a manner become obsolete, in consequence of the great alterations which have taken place in our laws since it was written, has now all the freshness of a work written within these last six months."—"That Mr. Western's extenution of his design is at once great, laborious, and laudable, and well deserves to become popular."—It is a book that not only every student, but every person should make himself well acquainted with.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. A. B. We have directed attention to the subject of your letter.

W. M.—T. D.—C. A. L.—W. A.—T. R.—A Subscriber—under consideration.

An Observer.—We have no communication bearing this signature.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

A Stamped Edition of this paper is published every Saturday, which will be forwarded to Subscribers, postage free, at any part of the United Kingdom, upon application to the Publishers.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION £1. 10s.

On March 1, price 4s, to be continued Monthly.

Vol. IV. Part II.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents, which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES OF ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—manuring—also the Law relating to MINING LEASES.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I and II. £1. 10s.

London; JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstons-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, Feb. 15, 1846.

(v) 1 Atk. 628; 3 Swanst. 418, n.

(w) 3 Wood. 411; see Bullen v. Ovey, 18 Ves. 141; and Mills v. Cobb, 1 Mer. 3.

(x) Attorney-General v. Cleaver, 18 Ves. 220.

(y) Montague v. Dudman, 2 Ves. 398.

(z) Kerrison v. Sparrow, 19 Ves. 449.

(a) Askew v. Townsend, 2 Dick. 471.

(b) Penfold v. Stoveld, 8 Madd. 472.

(c) Bliss v. Boscawen, 3 Ves. & B. 102.

The Legal Guide.

II.] SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1840. [No. 17.

SEPARATE USE.

(Continued from p. 243.)

LANGDALE continued — I think it right to state that it appears from the result of the authorities, constant practice of conveyancers, great and eminent Judges have had no mean evidence of the law, property given to a woman for her use, independent of any husband, according to the principles of this estate enjoyed by her during her coverture or separate estate, though the property originally, or at any subsequent period may have become vested in her covert. In respect of such separate estate is by this Court considered as a feme sole; though covert, her facilities as to be collected from the nature of the property in which the gift is made to her, she can be supported by this Court for her own use. The words 'independent of her husband' whether expressed or implied in the gift, mean no more than that this Court will not permit the material power of the property, according to the terms of the gift, if the gift be made for her separate use, without more, she has, during the coverture, an inalienable estate independent of her husband; if the gift be made to her for her sole use, without more, she can alienate, she has the present enjoyment of an inalienable estate, independent of her husband. In either of those cases she has, when discovert, a power of alienation, the restraint is annexed to the separate estate only, and the separate estate has its existence during coverture; while the woman is covert, the estate will not be in existence, is suspended, and has no operation. Though it is capable of arising on the happening of marriage, the restriction cannot be considered distinct from the separate estate, of which it is only a modification. To say that a restriction exists, in saying no more than that the separate estate is modified, the donor in giving the woman when married some of the facilities a feme sole has restricted her in alienation, under the terms of the gift; and by the aid of this Court the woman is a feme sole as to the present enjoyment of the property, but no further. Measuring those facilities by the terms of the gift, she is not a feme sole as to the disposition of her property, which is so restricted. If there be no separate estates, there can be no such restriction as that under consideration. The separate estates may, and often does exist without the restriction, but the restriction has no independent existence. When found, it is a modification of the separate estate, and inseparable from it; and, applying those principles to the present case, I am of opinion that those estates which, by the will of the testator, N. Bradford, and the testatrix, A. Bradford, were given to the defendant,

M. A. Armstrong, for her separate use, without power of alienation. The plaintiff has acquired no right under his security; but, as to the estate given by the will of N. Bradford to Mrs. Armstrong, for her separate use, without any clause to restrain alienation, I think the plaintiff is entitled to the account he prays for.

We believe this to be the only correct statement published of the judgment of the Master of the Rolls, upon this serious and important question. The law is now, for the present, settled. How long it may remain so in these days of continued change, it is impossible to venture upon even a guess. The LORD CHANCELLOR has now determined, after the careful consideration of twelve calendar months, that he agreed with Lord Langdale upon the question as to the clause against anticipation, that it embraced separate estate, and that if separate estate without power of anticipation must exist, it is only with that qualification it exists at all; and when it was once decided that a married woman could act in respect of her separate property as a feme sole, it was clear that it became necessary to establish some control against disposing of her separate estate; and this was effected by prohibiting anticipation. His Lordship, therefore, inasmuch "as the interests of society so require it" has arrived at the conclusion, that the jurisdiction which the Court of Equity has assumed in similar cases, justifies it in extending it to the protection of the separate estate, with its qualifications and restrictions attached to it throughout the subsequent coverture, and in resting such jurisdiction upon the broadest foundations. We need only remark, that the doctrine was invented and established very long since, for the express purpose of protecting women in the sole enjoyment of property when covert. The question, we repeat, is now settled, and settled justly—in accordance, we believe, with the opinion of the whole bar, or to adopt the expressions of the VICE-CHANCELLOR—"It is lawful to give property to the separate use of a man, married or unmarried, and the practice of the profession has been according to that opinion, without any variation."(a)

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OPINION of LORD CHIEF JUSTICE HOLT upon the power of the Court of King's Bench, to discharge a man committed upon a warrant, signed by the Speaker of the House of Commons, for a breach of privilege.(b)

HOLT, C. J. said, that the legality of the commitment depended upon the vote recited in the warrant; and for his part he thought the prisoners ought to be discharged, though in this his opinion he was so unfortunate to go contrary to the act of the House of Commons, and the opinion of the rest of the judges of England, whose assistance he had desired, and there had been a meeting for that purpose. He said, this was not such an imprisonment, as the freemen of England ought to be bound by; for this, which was only doing a legal act, could not be made illegal by the vote of the House of Commons; for that neither House of Parliament, nor both Houses jointly could dispose of the liberty or property of any subject, for to this purpose the Queen must join: and that it was in the necessity of their several concurrences to such acts, that the great security of the liberty of the subject consisted. After giving his opinion upon the three first objections to the resolution, he said, the fourth matter was for bring-

(a) Davies v. Thornycroft, 6 Sim. 420.

(b) Regina v. Paty, Lord Raym. 1105.; S. C. 526, in which case Paty and others brought writs against the constables of Aylesbury, upon the ground that their votes having been rejected; they were committed by the House of Commons, and they sought writs of Habeas Corpus to be discharged.—Ed.

on at Common Law for not allow-vote in the election of Members to n Parliament. Now, to bring an against a person who is not privi-ie said, was no offence, though no ould lie in this case, or though the upon which the action was grounded
e. And so is 2 Rep. 3, p. 9. And be charged with any false and scannatter, yet if it be by way of action, ot have scandalum magnatum. A o brings an action against another, not a privileged person, is not to action stopped, especially if he has cause of action, which that the
in this case have, appears by the of the judgment of this Court, in procerum, in the case of Ashby v.
And this action, which was brought ise, appears by the description of it te of the House of Commons, to be ame cause of action that that was :
ppose that the bringing such actions ared by the House of Commons to ach of their privilege; but that de-will not make that a breach of pri-it was not so before. But if they such privilege, they ought to shew s of it. The privileges of the f Commons are well known, and led upon the law of the land, and ning but the law. As we all ey have no privilege in cases of (b) of the peace. And if they demselves to have privileges which e no claim to, the people of Eng- not be estopped by that declarais privilege of their's concerns the the people in a high degree, by g them to imprisonment for the int of them, which is what the people cannot be subjected to without an Act of Parliament. As to what was said, that the House of Commons are judges of their own privileges, he said, they were so, when it comes before them. And as to the instances cited, where the judges have been cautious in giving any answer in Parliament in matters of privilege of Parliament; he said, the reason of that was, because the Members know probably their own privileges better than the judges. But when a matter of privilege comes in question in Westminster Hall, the judges must determine it as they did in Binyon's case (Cit. Carth. 137.; 1 Show, 199.). Suppose these actions against the constables of Aylesbury had gone on,

and the defendants had pleaded this privilege, we must have determined, whether there were any such privilege or no.(c) And we may as well determine it upon the return of this habeas corpus, for the defendants are here in a proper course of law; and the matter appears to us upon record as well this way, as if it were pleaded to an action. We must take notice of the lex parliamenti, my Lord Coke in his 1 Inst. ii. b. enumerates
the several laws that are within this realm, and the lex parliamenti is one of them, and the lex parliamenti is the law of the land.
As to what my Lord Coke says in the same place that the lex parliamenti est a multis ignorata; that is, because they will not apply themselves to understand it. He gave a great encomium of my Lord Clarendon, and cited a passage out of his history relating to the same doctrine with this that was then set up, that the House of Commons were the only judges of their own privileges, and therefore whatever they said was their privilege, was such. It is in his first part, fol.

did the lex terræ is the genus, and compre-hends the law of the land: the Admiralty law and species of this grand law; so is the lex par- liamenti, and if it be, the judges either do, or ought to do, what it is.—Note to the 3rd edition.

(c) He said, as to the high contempt of the jurisdiction of the House of Commons, neither House can hold plea in any action, not the House of Lords originally, therefore how can they have any jurisdiction in this case?—From Hanbury's MS. note to the 3rd edition.

310, and is very applicable to the present case, but too long to be transcribed. He said he would cite a greater author than he, King Charles the First, in his answer to the declaration and votes of the two Houses concerning Hull, Clarendon, 1, part 400, and Rushworth's Collections, vol. iii. pp. 728, 730, 731, wherein, among other things, he says, he very well knew the great and unlimited power of a Parliament, but he knew as well it was only in that sense as he was a part of that Parliament; without him, and against his consent, the votes of either or both Houses together must not, could not, should not (if he could help it, for his subjects' sake as well as his own), forbid anything that was enjoined by the law, or enjoin anything that was forbidden by the law. (d) And the Chief Justice said, if the votes of both Houses could not make a law, by parity of reason they could not declare law. That the bringing this action is no breach of the privilege of the House of Commons, appears by the judgment in the case of Ashby and White (Lord Raym. 938), in the argument of which case before the House of Lords, this argument of the privilege of the House of Commons was insisted on; besides, if the bringing this action was a breach of the privilege of the House of Commons,

(d) He said a House of Commons can no more declare anything to be law by their resolutions than they can make a law by themselves, and who (says he) can shew me how an House of Commons can stop a lawful prosecution? No man has privilege against the law of the land. And nothing but an Act of Parliament can subject any man's person to imprisonment. It is true the judges do not interpose in the House of Lords in matters of privilege, because the Lords are well acquainted with that themselves; but when a question regularly arises in the Queen's Bench concerning privilege, there the judges must concern themselves. Suppose the action had gone on without the interposition of the House of Commons, and the defendant had pleaded privilege to the jurisdiction of the Court, and to this it had been demurred, must not the judges then have determined privilege?—From Banbury's MS. Note to the 3rd Edition.

why was not Ashby committed when he first brought the action; but the suffering him to go on with his action is an argument that this pretence of privilege is a new thing. Ashby recovered in his action, and these men have followed his steps, and yet they are here said to have acted in breach of the privilege of the House of Commons. I shall say nothing to the case of Ashby and White, because the reasons upon which that judgment was given are printed. He said, the bringing this action is said to be in high contempt of the jurisdiction of the House of Commons; but that, he said, could not be, because neither House of Parliament could hold plea in any action; and, besides, the defendants might wave their privilege. He said, he made no question of the power of the House of Commons to commit; they might commit any man for offering an affront to a Member, or for a breach of privilege; nay, they might commit for a crime, because they might impeach. He said, my Lord Shaftesbury's case differed from this, because the commitment there was for a contempt done in the House. He said, the cause of the prisoner's commitment being expressed in the warrant excluded any intendment, that they might be committed for any other cause than that expressed in the warrant. He said, both Houses of Parliament were bound by the law of the land, and in their actions were obliged to pursue it. He cited Lord Banbury's case (10 Lord Raym.), which was thus:—Lord Banbury was indicted for murder by the name of Charles Knoll Esq., and he pleaded in abatement that letters patent King Charles I. created his grandfather Earl of Banbury, and so shew the descent to him, and prayed judgment the indictment because he was not named Earl; the Attorney-General replied, that upon his petition to the House of Lords, to be tried by his peers, the Lords dismissed his petition, and disallowed his peers. And upon demurrer the replication was by naught, and the plea good, and the indent was abated, and said, that case go a great way in this case. See 48, 150; Hodges v. Moor, Stiles 415; in Streater's case and Stiles, 90.

Other eleven judges were against the Justice, and the following entry was on the record:—Et super natura delicti per curiam hic habita, pro eo quod curia hic, quod cognitio causæ capit detentionis prædicti Johannis Paty tinet ad curiam dictæ dominæ reginæ ipsa regina, ideo idem Johannes remittitur ad custodi goalæ dictæ dominæ de Newgate, remanere in statu quo tempore emanationis brevis prædicti.

PROBLEM XVII. VOL. III.

BANKRUPTCY.

Who may be made a Bankrupt?

THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XXVI.
VOL. 2.

TENURE.—Describe what it is. (a) Fealty, in its most general and extensive signification, seems to denote a tenure by certain and determinate service, and is defined by Littleton (s. 117) to be where the tenant holds his tenement of the lord by any service, in lieu of all other services; and they be not services of chivalry, or knight service. The service must therefore be certain, in order to denominate it socage; and is held by fealty and twenty shillings a year, or by homage, fealty, and 20 shillings a year, or by homage and fealty without rent, or by fealty and certain corporal services; or by giving the lord's land for three days a year, or by fealty only, without any other service: these are Tenures in Socage. (Litt. 118, 119.)

Fealty Tenure was formerly of two sorts, viz. —free socage, where the services were not only certain but honourable; and villain socage, where the services, though certain, were of a baser nature; but it is considered unnecessary to trouble the reader with a particular account of each of those tenures as the 12 Car. 2, c. 24, enacts,—“That all fines for alienation, tenures by homage, knight service, and escuage, and also aids for marrying the daughter, or knighting the son, and all tenures of the king in capite be likewise taken away. (b) And that all sorts of tenures held of the king or others, be turned into free and common socage; save only tenures in frankalmoigne, copyhold, and the honorary services (without the slavish part) of grand serjeanty.”

C. B.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS—ENGLAND.
Feb. 17.

FRIVOLOUS SUITS AT LAW—EVIDENCE.

Lord DENMAN introduced “a Bill to repeal so much of an Act of the 43 of Elizabeth, entitled ‘an Act to avoid trifling and frivolous suits in law in her Majesty's Courts in Westminster,’ and an Act of the 22d and 23d of Charles II., entitled ‘an Act for laying impositions on proceedings at law,’ as relates to costs in personal actions, and to make further provisions in lieu thereof;” and, “a Bill to remove doubts as to the competency of persons being rated inhabitants of any parish to give evidence in certain cases.” Both were read a first time, ordered to be printed, and to be read a second time on Monday next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.
February 17.

PRINTED PAPERS—PRIVILEGE.

Motion made, and Question put, “That John Joseph Stockdale, by commencing and prosecuting the action now depending at his suit against James Hansard, Luke Graves Hansard, and Luke James Hansard, and in which a notice has been given of executing a Writ of Inquiry on

(b) Mr. Maddox (Mad. Bar. Ang. 208.) and Mr. Hargrave (Co. Litt. 108, n. 6.) have taken notice of this inaccuracy, namely, of taking away tenures in capite; for tenures in capite signifies nothing more than that the king is the immediate lord of the landowner; and the land might have both either of military or socage tenure.

See ante, pp. 148, 190, 236.

the 20th day of this instant February, such action being brought for acts done by the defendants as the officers and servants of this House, and under and pursuant to the authority of the orders and resolutions of this House made in exercise of the Privileges of Parliament, has been guilty of a contempt of this House, and a violation of the privileges thereof; and that all Sheriffs, Under-Sheriffs, agents, bailiffs, officers, clerks, and others, who shall act, aid, or assist in the continuing, furthering, and prosecuting the said action, will also be guilty of a contempt and violation of the privileges of this House, and subject themselves to the severe censure and displeasure of this House." The House divided—Ayes, 146; Noes, 75.

Feb. 18.

Motion made, and Question proposed,—“That T. Howard, jun. having been concerned in conducting the action of Stockdale against Messrs. Hansard, after the prosecution of the said action had been resolved by the House to be a breach of their Privileges, has been guilty of a contempt and a breach of the Privileges of this House :”—(Mr. Attorney-General).—Amendment proposed, to leave out the word “That,” to the end of the Question, in order to add the words “the Privileges of Parliament are intended solely for the benefit of the community at large, and as the power of publishing such of its Reports, Votes, and Proceedings, as shall be deemed necessary or conducive to the public interests, is an essential incident to the constitutional functions of Parliament; it is expedient that a joint Committee of both Houses of Parliament should be appointed for the purpose of considering the best mode of securing to each branch of the Legislature the free exercise of a power so important to the public welfare,” instead thereof :—(Mr. Thomas Duncombe).—Question, “That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the Question,” put, and agreed to :—Main Question put :—The House divided—Ayes, 137; Noes, 37.—Majority for the original Motion 100.

Motion made, and Question put, “That Thomas Howard, jun., having been guilty of a contempt and a breach of the Privileges of this House, be for his said offence committed to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this House; and that Mr Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly :”—(Mr. Attorney-General).—The House divided—Ayes, 134; Noes 41.—Majority for the Motion, 93.

Motion made, and Question put, “That Thos. George Johnstone Pearse having been concerned in conducting the action of Stockdale against Messrs. Hansard, after the prosecution of the said Action had been resolved by this House to be a breach of their privileges, has been guilty of a contempt and a breach of the Privileges of this House :”—(Mr. Solicitor-General).—The House divided—Ayes, 135; Noes, 53.—Majority for the Motion, 82.

Motion made, and question proposed, “That Thomas George Johnstone Pearse having been guilty of a contempt and a breach of the Privileges of this House, be for his said offence committed to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this House, and that the Speaker do issue his warrant accordingly”—(Mr. Solicitor-General). Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word “Pearse” to the end of the question, in order to add the words “be called to the bar and reprimanded by Mr. Speaker, and discharged,” instead thereof—(Mr. W. Miles). Question proposed, “That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question.”—Amendment, by leave, withdrawn. Main question put.—The House divided—Ayes 134; Noes 54.—Majority for the original Motion, 80.

Mr. GORING presented a petition from Mr. Thomas France, Under-Sheriff of the county of Middlesex, which, on the motion of the Hon. Member, was read at length by the Clerk at the table as follows :—

“The humble Petition of Thomas France, Under-Sheriff of the county of Middlesex.

“Showeth, that your petitioner has been served with a copy of the resolutions of your Hon. House, warning your petitioner and all others connected with the carrying on the proceedings of the office of Sheriff against acting in aid, furtherance, and prosecution of a certain action brought by John Joseph Stockdale against Messrs. Hansard and others, in breach of the privileges of your Hon. House.

“That your petitioner is anxious to pay the most respectful deference and obedience to your Hon. House and its privileges, but has great ground to fear, that in yielding such obedience the Sheriff of the said county may be exposed to great personal risk and loss; but, relying upon the protection of your Hon. House to the said Sheriff and his officers, your petitioner respectfully assures your Hon. House that all due respect will be paid to its privileges and resolutions under the protection of this Hon. House and your petitioner will ever pray.”

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Jan. 17.

ANON.

BANKRUPTCY—PRACTICE—Place of working a Fiat other than that of the Bankrupt's residence.

Mr. ——— moved that the fiat be worked at Bristol instead of Swansea. The bankrupt at a place about twenty miles from Swansea in the ordinary course the fiat would be made at Swansea; but in this case the debts in the estate within twenty miles of Swansea of small amount, whilst the petitioning creditor, whose debt was upwards of £300, resided at Bristol, and the other creditors in England and Scotland lived nearer to Bristol than Swansea. The inconvenience and expense to the petitioning creditor would be great in proving the petitioning creditor's and other debts at Swansea, the only expense that would be incurred by the removal of the fiat to Bristol was that of the bankrupt travelling to that city. It was stated to the Court that the place of residence afforded more communication with Bristol than Swansea.

LORD CHANCELLOR granted the application.

QUEEN'S BENCH.—Jan. 27.

Sittings in Banco.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

THE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX.

Sheriffs were this day brought up under a writ of habeas corpus (a) by the Serjeant-at-law to the House of Commons. Sir William (the Serjeant-at-Arms), upon producing the writ, said, "I appear here, my Lords, to deliver up the bodies of William Stockdale and John Wheelton, Esqrs."

The return was then handed in and read by the Serjeant-at-law. It was signed by the Speaker of the House of Commons, and stated that William Evans and John Wheelton, having committed a breach of the privileges of the House of Commons, it was resolved by the House that they be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-law and kept by him during the pleasure of the House, and that Mr. Speaker do issue his writ for the same.

The return having been read, Mr. Richards said he appeared to move that the writ be filed, and that the Sheriffs be discharged out of custody.

LORD DENMAN, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said—It appears to me to be necessary to state that the judgment delivered by this Court at Trinity Term, in the case of Stockdale v. Hansard, is, in all respects, perfectly correct. But there was decided that there was no power to question a writ of habeas corpus issued by the House of Commons, and which was above being questioned by the Court. It was decided that the manner in which the privilege was claimed by the House of Commons was not to be questioned on the footing of unquestionable and unlimited power. The argument there was, that such dicta as appear adverse to those general and incontestable principles were, in many cases, hastily and ill considered, and not necessary for the decision. It was also contended that those dicta were encountered by the authority of judges equally eminent and distinguished, and by numerous precedents; and I, for one, endeavoured to establish the principle, that there can be no despotic power in this country similar to that which was claimed; and I laid it down that such a power could not be possibly recognized in any court of English law. It was also necessary to declare an opinion founded upon the careful examination of the evidence of documents, and in my judgment, as well as in that of my learned brothers, it appeared that the privilege of publication, as claimed upon the record by the defendants, is a privilege that has no legal existence. To all those opinions, then deliberately formed and expressed, I now still, after full and careful consideration, distinctly adhere, and all of them, in my conscience, I sincerely believe to be true. If they were not true, if there was any ground for disputing them, it seems to me that the defendants should have brought them before a court of error, where the opinions of all the other judges might have been taken on the subject, and, if it was not unworthy of the dignity of the House of Commons to refer the question of privilege to our decision, surely it would have lost nothing in dignity or just claim to public respect to submit the same question to the calm consideration of the other judges of England in the two other Courts. If, also, the judgment was erroneous, the defendants had the power of taking it before the House of Lords, the last resort in matters of law; and I will never suppose any man can believe it justifiable to deny the propriety of obeying the judgment of this last Court, merely because it was thought fit to cast reflection upon the body in which the law and the constitution vested the appeal. And besides, it was truly observed that they did not confine this claim to the House of Commons. They expressly said that the power existed in both Houses of Parliament, so that there was an acknowledged interest in the House of Lords, as in the House of Commons, in defending the privileges which the latter sought to establish. At the same time let me observe, that if our judgments had been adverse to Stockdale, it would have been impossible, had Stockdale so pleased, for Messrs. Hansard to avoid being taken into a court of error, so that the case would inevitably have gone to another tribunal, and had that confirmed our judgment, it must have gone up to the House of Lords. In that case the two jurisdictions, which had been most carefully avoided by the defendants, must have been resorted to. Nothing of this sort having been done, I regard so far the conscientious decision of my brethren; arrived at after a careful review of all the circumstances, and a most calm and deliberate, and dispassionate consideration of the arguments and authorities, that I feel it entitled to that degree of respect as to justify Messrs. Hansard in saying that the judgment in the most recent case passed against them by default; but if they felt that that judgment was not justifiable, why, I again emphatically ask, was not that judgment submitted to the consideration of a superior tribunal? I submitted my opinion then to the jurisdiction of such tribunals as the law afforded, and I submit it now to the still higher tribunal of public opinion, being fully satisfied that no candid mind can go through the judgment then delivered, with a wish to arrive at a just conclusion, without being convinced that that which was arrived at by us was that which the occasion justified. We decided that case on our view of what the law was, and which we were called on to administer. Our opinion of the law was our only safe and sufficient guide. The decisions of our predecessors were the only authorities we were justified in following, and, discarding arguments of expediency or necessity, we had to say what the law justified, and what the law required. On that occasion we took the law for our guide, and we shall resort to the same authority in deciding the case which is now before us on this writ of habeas corpus and the return. This is a writ of habeas corpus, calling on the Serjeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons to bring up the bodies of two gentlemen who have been imprisoned on the Speaker's warrant. That warrant is returned to us as the cause of their detention; and the only question for us now to consider is whether that warrant is, in point of law, a good cause for the detention? There are three objections made to the form of the warrant. The first is, that there was no direct adjudication of the contempt. The expression in the warrant is that the sheriffs being committed in contempt of the privileges of the House of Commons, it was resolved that they should be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms. It was observed that this was not a direct statement of facts, and it was argued that the participle "having" could not be allowed to have that effect. It does so happen that, in a recent case from an inferior court, we gave that effect to a similar expression; and allowed a statement, by way of recital, to be considered as a direct allegation of fact. Then the consequence is, that in doing the same thing here, we shall be merely adopting an enforcement of the ordinary law. It cannot be doubted that, if the House is stated to have resolved that a contempt having been committed, the statement is equivalent to saying that a contempt has been committed, and a resolution of that House to place in the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms the individuals guilty of committing that contempt is an adjudication against them. The second observation is, that though the House of Commons adjudicated that the parties had committed a contempt, and therefore that they should be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms, yet that there is no order on the Speaker to issue his warrant for that purpose, I must say I do not think that that is at all necessary. We must take notice that the Speaker is an officer of the House of Commons, and that when the House of Commons adjudges that a contempt has been committed, and decides that the parties committing the contempt are to be taken into custody, the Speaker will be authorized from that instant, and without any positively expressed directions, to issue his warrant to carry the resolution of the House into effect. The third objection is, that the warrant not being dated from the House of Commons, and the name of the House not being specified in the warrant, it does not appear that "this House" is the House of Commons, but may be some other house, such as the House of Lords. I do not think there is any force in this objection. The warrant recites the resolution of the House, refers to no other House, and speaks of "this House" throughout. I think, therefore, that there is enough to show that the House against which the contempt has been committed is the House by whose authority the warrant is issued and the parties are taken into custody. Then again we see that the Serjeant-at-Arms certifies to us this warrant, and returns to us that it was in obedience to this warrant that he took these parties into custody, and he now detains them; and certifies that he does all this under a warrant issued "under the hand of the Speaker of the said House." Now, there is only the House of Commons mentioned, and I cannot allow myself for a moment so to trifle with a plain, intelligible, and clear document, as to say that I can entertain any doubt upon the matter. The fourth objection taken is, that this is not said to be a contempt of the House, but only of the privileges of the House. To that I answer by referring to the case of the King v. Burdett, in which the same expression has been used, and in which that expression has been held good and sufficient. It seems to me, therefore, that all these verbal criticisms must fall to the ground, and that on the face of the warrant we cannot help seeing that this is a committal for contempt, and that it is made by the authority of the House of Commons. If that is so, then we come to the great objection, which is, that the facts out of which the committal arose are not fully set out, so as to enable us to judge whether proper ground for that commitment. admitted that words of this sort have appeared in cases of this sort, so that it to say that the cases on which the facts been specified appear in number to be I will mention, however, one case— Sir Francis Pemberton and Sir Thomas o were committed by the House of in 1689, in consequence of a judg- h they gave in their court—a judg- ust, as reasonable, as lawful, and as for honest men and good lawyers to upon record, but for which those two e confined under a warrant for con- d sent into custody by the House, remained till the end of the session. that case chiefly in order to correct a no small importance, for I feel for the his profession, and I believe that, after ic of society will be found to rest on the value set upon personal cha- this resolution of the House of Com- is been supposed, most erroneously, Holt concurred. It is a mistake to . It is a mistake to suppose that the to commit these judges was adopted in tion Parliament. The committal oc- he year 1689. Lord Holt was made Justice in April of that year, and this to commit these two judges was not the July of the same year. It was therefore, for him to have concurred iving set right that mistake, I now e cases of Brasse Crosby, of Sir F. nd of Mr. Hobhouse, where, upon ty of the Shaftesbury case, such a dis- ent of the causes was held to be un- It was so expressly held in the Shaf- se. That case is correctly enough be open to observation upon various ut it is not open to observation upon ular ground. Nor have I ever heard ation ever made upon it in this respect ay, except as to the extent to which ne in that case was applied in the ate. In that case three judges said mitment for contempt was not to be , even if the cause of the commitment was not sufficient. Lord Rolle, who m the other three judges in this opi- the sufficiency of the cause of con- ated in that case, did not question the at, if the facts were not stated, the al- at the commitment was for contempt sufficient, and he declared that in such should not feel himself authorized to ns and seek into the motives for which tal had taken place. So that it seems fact on this doctrine that Lord Holt, ted the sufficiency of the facts in that case, never once said the facts themselves required to be set out. Another authority is Murray's case, where the warrant was in the same form, and there the warrant was held good.

(a) Ante, p. 207.

(To be continued.)

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Jan. 13.

Sittings in Banco.

MARKS v. BENJAMIN.

PRACTICE—Whether an ATTORNEY is entitled to carry on a Cause to Trial, after notice from his Client (the Plaintiff) not to do so. Whether he can be called upon to answer matter in an Affidavit which charges him with an offence for which he may be indicted.

We have already fully reported the trial of this case, (a) in which a verdict passed for the defendant. A rule was subsequently obtained by the plaintiff's attorney for a new trial, and it being the opinion of the Court that the case ought to have been laid before the jury by Lord Abinger, a new trial was ordered, upon which the defendant then obtained the present rule, calling upon the plaintiff's attorney to show cause why all further proceedings should not be stayed in the cause, and why he should not pay the costs upon the affidavit of the plaintiff and his brother, who swore that the name of the former had been lent by him to the attorney in question to enable him to bring the action, but that having experienced some loss of countenance consequent upon that course of conduct, he had several times expressly ordered that the cause should not be proceeded with, but that in spite of such directions the cause had been taken down to trial, and the rule for a new trial obtained by his attorney, who was further charged with having attempted to induce the brother to perjure himself on the trial.

Mr. Kelly appeared on behalf of the attorney in the cause, and read several affidavits in opposition to the rule, showing that instead of Mr. Marks having countermanded his written retainer, he had constantly urged the prosecution of the suit, had found security for costs to enable it to be carried on, and had actually accompanied some of the clerks in the office to serve the various witnesses with subpoenas on the day before the cause was heard. The deponents went on then to deny the offer to the plaintiff's brother in positive terms, and to impute collusion between the attorney for the defendant, the plaintiff, his brother, and another person, in order to deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, for the recovery of which it was contended that he was entitled to take the case before another jury, even though the plaintiff should not be a consenting party thereto. He had not, at all events, taken any steps to prevent his attorney from proceeding since his interposition at the trial, and if his had been a bond fide disinclination to follow up the case, he would have paid his attorney's bill of costs, as well as those of his opponent, and again interdicted any further proceedings. This he had not done, but the defendant now came forward to endeavour to stop the action.

(a) Ante, vol. ii. p. 153.

Mr. Jervis replied, contending that the charges and allegations made in his affidavits were not answered, and that the plaintiff's attorney was not entitled to carry on the cause after his client had thus openly avowed his wishes on the subject; but

The COURT thought that the matters in the affidavits had been substantially answered, and that being so, that the plaintiff's attorney had a perfect right to carry the case before a second jury. It was not the custom of the Courts to call upon an attorney to answer the matters in an affidavit which charged him with any offence of so serious a nature as that he might be indicted for; but it was proper to say that that portion of the case had been substantially met and repudiated by the affidavit in reply. Besides this, the attorney for the plaintiff swears to facts which raise a grave suspicion that the plaintiff has been acting in collusion with the opposite party, and if that be not so, it is difficult to understand why he should oppose a new trial, which might release him from his present obligation to pay, not only his own costs, but those of the defendant too. Under these circumstances the rule must be discharged, and with costs.

January 18.

PETERS v. FLEMING.

NECESSARIES for an INFANT, an Under Graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge.—

The term not to be confined to things absolutely necessary for life.

This action was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, an Under Graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, and son of a Member of the House of Commons, for articles of jewellery, consisting among others, of a watch-chain, signet-ring, and a breast-pin. The defendant pleaded infancy, the plaintiff replied that the articles furnished were necessaries suitable to the condition in life of the defendant, and were therefore such articles for which he might by law enter into a contract. The jury gave a verdict for the full amount, £3. 12s.

A rule nisi was in the last term obtained for a nonsuit.

Mr. Kelly now shewed cause against the rule, and contended that it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to satisfy the Court that these articles were all of them necessaries for which an infant might bind himself by law, but that it was enough if the Court should think any one of them came within that description. In order to decide this most important question the Court should bear in mind the facts in the case, which showed that the defendant, though a minor without any property of his own, was the son of a most wealthy gentleman, a member of the House of Commons, representing the county of Southampton; that he had been sent up to college by his father with a most liberal allowance; that during his residence there he kept the first company among the under-graduates, and that he had brought from home a watch, which he usually wore suspended by a silk chain round his neck. Under these circumstances it was for the Court to say whether an infant could not by law contract for some of these articles, such as the watch-chain, the seal-ring, and the breast-pin, all of which, though they might be ornamental, yet were actually useful to him, and befitting his condition in the world at large. The term of "necessaries" was not, in the eye of the law, confined to those things which were actually essential to the support of life, and must be construed, in a more liberal and reasonable spirit, to mean those things which in their use and nature were of service to the infant, and such as men in his rank and condition in life might reasonably be expected to possess. He had a watch; was it not even necessary to that that he should have a chain? His father may be presumed to have given him the one, and why might he not bind himself for the purpose of a chain and seal, which latter might be so fashioned as to be worn as a ring? These were both necessaries with reference to the situation of the infant, and so also was the breast-pin without which he could not wear his shirt and cravat as other men of his age and rank were accustomed to do. This being so it was a question for the jury at all events to say whether these things in particular were suitable to the infant's rank; and as the case had been presented to the jury subject to the offer of the plaintiff to give up one or two of the articles which did not come within the proposition submitted to the Court, it was apprehended that the plaintiff was entitled to sustain the verdict which had been given in his favour.

Sir W. FOLLITT in support of the rule contended, that though there was no doubt that a youth might have such things, yet that, in point of law, he could not bind himself for them by any implied or other contract. No case had ever gone so far as to say that jewellery were "necessaries."

or an infant: custom may render them almost unavoidable, but still they are ornaments of the person, and could not be held by the Court to be, in the eye of the law, necessities." The law is one which has for its object the protection of infants, and it is absolutely null and void all contracts made by such except for necessities suitable to the rank and condition in life, limiting even the quantity and quality of the supply of those articles, as clothes, food, and lodging, which are needed in their very nature to be "necessaries." All the cases on this point were to be decided in Burghart v. Hall, M. and W. Mee

(a) 727, and if the Court were to hold that a plaintiff might recover for chains, pins, where is the principle to stop? To go and say that race-horses, champagne, cars, are necessities suitable to the rank and condition in life of a nobleman, or man of letters, is at college? Such things may be only used by men of high rank, but the law say they were necessities for a man of high rank might contract, especially when he is to be supplied by his friends with an allowance commensurate with his state in life. JON PARKER.—The case of Burghart decided that the income of the infant was an ingredient in the question, which was confined entirely to the consideration of the goods supplied. Does the restriction of these articles without which a man of high rank and reason would lose caste in society? Is it a question for the jury to say whether the goods were merely ornaments, or were not but also really useful and necessary to the infant?

FOLLETT.—It is extremely desirable that a distinction should be drawn between those things which an infant may contract, and those which it is impossible for him to bind himself to. The judges ought to decide upon the question of necessities or no necessities, and the jury may be asked whether the things being necessities, were suitable to the rank. Here it is conceded that these are ornaments, and if an infant wants such things he has ready money for them, but he cannot bind himself.

JON PARKER.—I am of opinion that the law in this case could not have been proved on to nonsuit the plaintiff, but that it was a question to go to the jury. Some articles are necessary to the degree and condition of the defendant; for it is clear that the law is to be confined to things absolutely necessary for life, but is to be extended so as to include such things as are fit and proper to maintain an infant in the degree and state of life in which he may happen to move. Having a watch, a chain and seal, might well be considered necessary appendages thereto, at the age and situation in which he was at the time he bought them; all things which are merely ornamental, and not calculated for actual use, are not necessities for any one at all, and the question in such cases is merely whether the particular things, being calculated for use, were bought by the infant to support him in that degree of life in which he moves. If it appears that such is the case, it then becomes a question for the jury to say whether their quality or quantity were proper and suitable to that degree.

Mr. Baron ALDERSON.—I entirely concur in this opinion. There are things which are necessities beyond the consideration of life only, for I conceive that an infant may bind himself for his education. The acquirement of the learned languages may be necessary for one infant and not so for another. The real definition then is, that the things should be such as a prudent and reasonable man, moving in a given sphere of life, would require for actual use; for instance, a watch may be necessary for a youth of eighteen, when it never could be so for a baby in arms.—Rule discharged.

(a) It was there proved that the defendant was an officer in the Guards, that uniforms were supplied to him, and that the supplies were made with the knowledge that he was in a high rank in life, and entitled to an ample fortune on coming of age. In Mac-harell v. Bachelour, (a) which was an action for debt upon divers contracts, all for apparel; some for fustian suits, and some for velvet and satin suits laced with gold, amounting to £14., whereof the plaintiff was satisfied with £4.; the defendant pleaded infancy; the plaintiff replied, that he was one of the gentlemen of the chamber to the Earl of Essex, and so it was for his necessary apparel. On demurrer, the Court held, "that the suits of satin and velvet were not necessary for an infant, although he be a gentleman; but in regard he had acknowledged satisfaction for £4., parcel, &c., and they could not tell for what that was paid, the defendant could not have judgment for any part; otherwise he should have judgment for these contracts which were allowed of.

Then the question for the Jury was, whether any of these articles were suitable to the infant's estate and degree. In Fothergill v. Fothergill, Lord Kenyon held that the question of necessities was a relative fact to be governed by the fortune and circumstances of the infant, and that proof of those circumstances lay on the plaintiff. This requisition as to the station and degree of the party is not a modern invention, as appears by reference to the pleadings in the old entries: see North v. Thompson (b), and Rainsford v. Fenwick (c). The cases go to shew that the case of an infant is like that of an idiot, and that he is supposed to have an "invincible ignorance," which renders him incapable of contracting, except from necessity, for providing himself with food, clothing, and education, &c. Lord Abinger, in the case above stated observed, that an infant cannot be liable on an account stated, and the reason given is, that he cannot calculate, and is therefore incapable of stating an account.

It is laid down in Co. Litt. 172, that "An infant may bind himself to pay for his necessary meat, drink, apparel, necessary physic, and such other necessities, and like wise for the good teaching or instruction whereby he may profit himself afterwards."

SHERIFF'S COURT—MIDDLESEX.

Feb. 20.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

The UNDER-SHERIFF said, that in this cause he had to inform any parties who might be in attendance, that one of the learned Judges had postponed the execution of the writ of inquiry until the 4th day of next term. Mr. Chadwick Jones, who had attended before the learned judge, had informed him of that fact, and therefore parties attending might now leave the court.

Mr. Platt afterwards came into court and intimated that he attended as counsel for the plaintiff.

The UNDER-SHERIFF said, the execution of the writ of inquiry had been stayed by a Judge's order until the 4th day of next term.

Mr. Platt said, he understood the order was merely for a postponement of the return of the writ. He came there for the execution of the writ of inquiry, and he was ready to do his duty as Mr. Stockdale; he therefore called upon the Sheriff to execute the writ.

The UNDER-SHERIFF produced the Judge's order, which is as follows:—

"STOCKDALE v. HANSARD AND OTHERS.

"Upon hearing of Mr. R. V. Richards, counsel for the sheriff, and Mr. C. Jones, counsel for the plaintiff, and upon reading the affidavit of William Burchell, I do order that the return to the writ of inquiry in this cause be enlarged until the 4th day of next term, and that, in the meantime, all further proceedings be stayed.

(Signed) "J. WILLIAMS.

"Dated the 20th day of February, 1840.

Mr. Platt said, that when he just now called upon the sheriff to do his duty, he was not aware that a clause in the judge's order not only enlarged the time for the return of the writ, but stayed its execution. That being the case, would be a breach of his duty if the sheriff proceeded to execute the writ. His client was locked up in Newgate, his attorney was locked up in Newgate, the attorney's clerks were locked up, he knew not where. He, however, came here representing them; and if that which had just been intimated to him had not taken place, he should have performed his duty as Mr. Stockdale's counsel, notwithstanding all that elsewhere had been done in the matter.

NEW POSTAGE ORDERS.

General Post-Office, 25th Jan. 1840.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

The Mail for India via Marseilles being patched from London at an earlier hour than the ordinary French Mail on Tuesdays and Fridays, letters intended to be forwarded by that conveyance must be posted at the same hours, and under the same regulations, as the letters for the Land Mail.

By command,

W. L. MABERLY, Secy.

General Post-Office, Feb. 4th, 1840.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Printed Votes and Proceedings of Parliament, and of the Colonial Legislatures.

The Lords of the Treasury having modified the Rates of Postage upon Printed Votes and Proceedings of the Imperial Parliament, and upon those of the Colonial Legislatures by a warrant of the 31st ult.; on and after the 1st instant, all such Printed Votes and Proceedings transmitted by post between places in the United Kingdom and the Colonies (subject, however,

(b) Co. Entries, 125.

(c) Carter, 215.

sting regulations and restrictions), will
 the following rates of postage :—
 eight not exceeding four ounces . 1d eight exceeding four ounces and eding eight ounces - - - - 2d eight exceeding eight ounces and eding twelve ounces - - - - 3d eight exceeding twelve ounces exceeding sixteen ounces - - 4d proportion, viz., for every additional s in weight above the weight of six-s, an additional rate of one penny ; it rstood that any lesser weight than four ll be charged as four ounces.
 tional charge shall be made upon the ed votes and proceedings when the not paid in advance.
 ates and regulations, however, do not such votes and proceedings as shall be gh France, or which shall be trans-the East Indies, via Falmouth and

By command,
 W. L. MABERLY, Sec.

General Post-Office, Feb. 15, 1840.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Money Orders are issued and paid at all the undermentioned Post Towns and Places within the London District Post, comprising a circle of Twelves Miles from the General Post-office :—
 Barnet, Barking, Brentford, Bromley, Brompton, Camberwell, Clapham, Croydon, Edgeware, Edmonton, Enfield, Footscray, Greenwich, Hackney, Hammersmith, Hampstead, Harrow, Houn-low, Kensington, Kingston, Limehouse, Paddington, Putney, Richmond, Surrey, Romford, Shooter's Hill, Southall, Stanmore, Stratford, Tooting, Waltham Cross, Woodford, Wool-wick.

They are also issued and paid at every other Post Town in the United Kingdom.

Money Orders are likewise issued at the Branch Office in Lombard-street, Old Cavendish-street, Charing Cross, Borough.

By Command,
 W. L. MABERLY, Sec.

SITTINGS AFTER HILARY TERM, 1840.

Before the VICE-CHANCELLOR, at Lincoln's-Inn.

|      |   |    |   |   |  |
|------|---|----|---|---|--|
|      | " | 24 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 25 | - | - |  |
| y    | " | 26 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 27 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 28 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 29 | - | - |  |
| Mar. | 2 |    | - | - |  |
|      | " | 3  | - | - |  |
| y    | " | 4  | - | - |  |
|      | " | 5  | - | - |  |
|      | " | 6  | - | - |  |
|      | " | 7  | - | - |  |
|      | " | 9  | - | - |  |
|      | " | 10 | - | - |  |
| y    | " | 11 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 12 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 13 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 14 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 16 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 17 | - | - |  |
| ay   | " | 18 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 19 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 20 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 21 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 23 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 24 | - | - |  |
| ay   | " | 25 | - | - |  |
|      | " | 26 | - | - |  |

Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.

The Third Seal—Motions.

Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.

The Fourth Seal—Motions,
 Petitions.

Vice-Chancellor will hear Short Causes and Unopposed Petitions previous to the General
 every Friday during the Sittings.

Sittings will close on the 3rd day of April.

Before the MASTER OF THE ROLLS, at the Rolls.

|           |       |    |   |   |          |
|-----------|-------|----|---|---|----------|
| Saturday  | Feb.  | 8  | - | - | Motions. |
| Monday    | "     | 10 | - | - | }        |
| Tuesday   | "     | 11 | - | - |          |
| Wednesday | "     | 12 | - | - |          |
| Thursday  | "     | 13 | - | - |          |
| Friday    | "     | 14 | - | - |          |
| Saturday  | "     | 15 | - | - | }        |
| Monday    | "     | 17 | - | - |          |
| Tuesday   | "     | 18 | - | - |          |
| Wednesday | "     | 19 | - | - |          |
| Thursday  | "     | 20 | - | - |          |
| Friday    | "     | 21 | - | - | }        |
| Saturday  | "     | 22 | - | - |          |
| Monday    | "     | 24 | - | - |          |
| Tuesday   | "     | 25 | - | - |          |
| Wednesday | "     | 26 | - | - |          |
| Thursday  | "     | 27 | - | - | }        |
| Friday    | "     | 28 | - | - |          |
| Saturday  | "     | 29 | - | - |          |
| Monday    | March | 2  | - | - |          |
| Tuesday   | "     | 3  | - | - |          |
| Wednesday | "     | 4  | - | - | }        |
| Thursday  | "     | 5  | - | - |          |
| Friday    | "     | 6  | - | - |          |
| Saturday  | "     | 7  | - | - |          |
| Monday    | "     | 9  | - | - |          |
| Tuesday   | "     | 10 | - | - | }        |
| Wednesday | "     | 11 | - | - |          |
| Thursday  | "     | 12 | - | - |          |
| Friday    | "     | 13 | - | - |          |
| Saturday  | "     | 14 | - | - |          |
| Monday    | "     | 16 | - | - | }        |
| Tuesday   | "     | 17 | - | - |          |
| Wednesday | "     | 18 | - | - |          |
| Thursday  | "     | 19 | - | - |          |
| Friday    | "     | 20 | - | - |          |
| Saturday  | "     | 21 | - | - | }        |
| Monday    | "     | 23 | - | - |          |
| Tuesday   | "     | 24 | - | - |          |
| Wednesday | "     | 25 | - | - |          |
| Thursday  | "     | 26 | - | - |          |

Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions and Exceptions.

Motions.

Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions and Exceptions.

Petitions in General Paper.

Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions and Exceptions.

Motions.

Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions and Exceptions.

Motions.

Petitions in General Papers.

Short Causes, Consent Causes, and Consent Petitions, every Tuesday at the Sitting of the Court.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Sittings in Equity in Serjeant's Inn Hall, after Hilary Term, 1841, before Mr. Baron ALDERSON.

|           |      |    |   |   |   |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|---|
| Monday    | Feb. | 3  | - | - | } |
| Tuesday   | "    | 4  | - | - |   |
| Wednesday | "    | 5  | - | - |   |
| Thursday  | "    | 6  | - | - |   |
| Friday    | "    | 7  | - | - |   |
| Saturday  | "    | 8  | - | - | } |
| Tuesday   | "    | 11 | - | - |   |
| Wednesday | "    | 12 | - | - |   |
| Thursday  | "    | 13 | - | - |   |
| Friday    | "    | 14 | - | - |   |

Of Marquis of Waterford, by Order.

Petitions and Motions.

Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Further Directions, and Causes.

Lord ABINGER.

Petitions and Motions.

Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Further Directions, and Causes.

Mr. Baron ALDERSON.

|         |   |   |                                                                 |
|---------|---|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| „ 15    | - | - | Causes.                                                         |
| „ 24    | - | - | Petitions and Motions.                                          |
| „ 25    | - | - | { Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Further Directions, and Causes. |
| „ 26    | - | - |                                                                 |
| „ 27    | - | - | Causes.                                                         |
| „ 28    | - | - | Causes.                                                         |
| „ 29    | - | - | Causes.                                                         |
| March 2 | - | - | Petitions and Motions.                                          |
| „ 3     | - | - | { Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Further Directions and Causes.  |
| „ 4     | - | - |                                                                 |
| „ 5     | - | - | Causes.                                                         |
| „ 6     | - | - | Petitions and Motions.                                          |
|         | - | - | { Any matter standing over which may be specially appointed.    |
|         | - | - |                                                                 |

CLERKS WHO PASSED THEIR EXAMINATION AT THE HALL OF THE LAW SOCIETY, HILARY TERM, 1840.—(Continued from p. 254.)

| Names.           | Name and Residence of Attorney, to whom articled or assigned.                                                                                           |
|-------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| George Barbor           | Wm. Lamb Hockin, Dartmouth; assigned to Edward Dunstervin Puddicombe, 64, Lincoln's-inn-fields                                                                 |
| John Frederick          | Henry Earl, Andover; assigned to Daniel Cunningham, 47, Craven Street, Strand                                                                                  |
| George                  | Wm. Duberly, Dursley                                                                                                                                           |
| Walter Wren             | Wm. Rowson, Prescott                                                                                                                                           |
| James Armstrong         | John Archbould, Thrapston                                                                                                                                      |
| Francis                 | John Stanley, Newport                                                                                                                                          |
| Rich. Chambers          | Thomas Evans, Broad-street; assigned to John Burden, 27, Parliament-street                                                                                     |
| Charles                 | Thomas Bartlett, and Charles Oldfield Bartlett, Wareham; assigned to Barry Parr Squance, 29, Coleman-street                                                    |
| John, Henry the younger | Joseph Fisher, Bury-street, St. James; assigned to Thomas Hooper Law, Barnstaple, and assigned to Samuel Fisher, 25, Bucklersbury                              |
| Charles                 | Robert Fordsham, Liverpool                                                                                                                                     |
| Frederick               | L. Morris, Carmarthen                                                                                                                                          |
| Wm.                     | Bryan Holme, New Inn                                                                                                                                           |
| John                    | Wm. Nicholson Hodgson, Carlisle, Cumberland                                                                                                                    |
| Charles Mair            | Robert Frodsham, Liverpool                                                                                                                                     |
| John                    | Robert Bicknell, 38, Bloomsbury-square; assigned to Geo. Waugh, 5, Great James-street, Bedford-row                                                             |
| Philip Benjamin         | Philip Goode, Howland-street                                                                                                                                   |
| Montague the younger    | Richard Roy, Liverpool-street                                                                                                                                  |
| Charles                 | Charles Aikin Holland; Northwich and Runcorn                                                                                                                   |
| Edward Brydges          | John Swaine Sculthorpe, 43, Great Marlborough-street                                                                                                           |
| Robert                  | Wm. Duke, Arundel                                                                                                                                              |
| James, John Geo.        | John Bramwell, Durham                                                                                                                                          |
| Geo. Fred.              | John Atkinson, Leeds                                                                                                                                           |
| John                    | Wm. Manby, Wolverhampton                                                                                                                                       |
| Johnworthy Owen         | John O. Hall, 1, Brunswick-row, Queen-square, Bloomsbury                                                                                                       |
| John                    | Wm. Lackman, Lawrence-street, city of York                                                                                                                     |
| Thomas                  | Benjamin Hope, Wells; assigned to James Beavan Meredith, 1, Heathcote-street                                                                                   |
| Alfred                  | Wm. Blunt Fosbooke, Loughborough; assigned to Joseph Parker, Loughborough                                                                                      |
| George the younger      | G. Teale Lister, Cleckheaton                                                                                                                                   |
| John Penery             | Robert Montague Hume, 8, Gt. Winchester-st.; assigned to Edmund Maude, 8, Gt. Winchester-st., and assigned to Wm. Willoughby Gunston, 8, Gt. Winchester-street |

(To be continued.)

SECOND EDITION.

Just published, price one guinea,

COMMENTARIES on the CONSTITUTION and LAWS of ENGLAND, incorporated with the Political Text of the late J. L. De Lolme, LL D. Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; dedicated by special command to her Majesty the Queen. Revised and corrected to the present time.

John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet Street.

The following extract from this work is peculiarly applicable at the present day:—

“ RIGHT OF RESISTANCE.

“ But all those privileges of the people, considered in themselves, are but feeble defences against the real strength of those who govern. All those provisions, all those reciprocal rights, necessarily suppose that things remain in their legal and settled course: what would then be the resource of the people, if ever the prince, suddenly freeing himself from all restraint, and throwing himself, as it were, out of the constitution, should no longer respect either the person or the property of the subject, and either should make no account of his conventions with the parliament, or attempt to force it implicitly to submit to his will?—It would be resistance.

“ Without entering here into the discussion of a doctrine, which would lead us to inquire into the first principles of civil government, and consequently engage us in a long disquisition, and with regard to which, besides, persons free from prejudices agree pretty much in their opinions, it is only necessary to observe here, that the question has been decided in favour of this doctrine by the laws of England, and that resistance is looked upon by them as the ultimate and lawful resource against the violence of power.

“ It was resistance that gave birth to the Great Charter, that lasting foundation of English liberty, and the excesses of a power established by force were also restrained by force. It has been by the same means that, at different times, the people have procured the confirmation of the same charter. Lastly, it has also been the resistance to a king who made no account of his own engagements, that has, in the issue, placed on the throne the illustrious family which is now in possession of it. This resource, which, till then, had only been an act of force opposed to other acts of force, was, at that era, expressly recognised by the law itself. The Lords and Commons, solemnly assembled, declared, that ‘King James the Second, having endeavoured to subvert the constitution of the kingdom, by breaking the original contract between King and people, having violated the fundamental laws, and withdrawn himself, had abdicated the government; and that the throne was thereby vacant.’

“ And lest those principles, to which the revolution thus gave a sanction, should, in process of time, become mere arcana of state, exclusively appropriated, and only known to a certain class of subjects, the same act we have just mentioned, expressly insured to individuals the right of publicly preferring complaints against the abuses of government, and, moreover, of being provided with arms for their own defence. Judge Blackstone expresses himself in the following terms, in his Commentaries on the Laws of England:—‘To vindicate those rights when actually violated or attacked, the subjects of England are entitled, in the first place, to the regular administration and free course of justice in the courts of law; next, to the right of petitioning the king and parliament for redress of grievances; and, lastly, to the right of having and using arms for self-preservation and defence.’

“ Here, also, we must remark the error of those who, as they make the liberty of the people consist in their power, so make their power consist in the action.

“ When the people are often called to act in their own persons, it is impossible for them to acquire an exact knowledge of the state of things. The events of one day effaces the notions which they had begun to adopt on the preceding day; and, amidst the continual change of things, no settled principle, and above all, no plans of union, have time to be established among them. You wish to have the people love and defend their laws and liberty; leave them, therefore, the necessary time to know what laws and liberty are, and to agree in their opinion concerning them. You wish an union, a coalition, which can be obtained but by a slow and peaceful process; and bear, therefore, continually to shake the vessel.

“ Nay, farther, it is a contradiction, that the people should act, and at the same time retain any real power. Have they, for instance, been forced by the weight of public oppression to throw off the restraint of the law, from which they no longer received protection?—they presently find themselves suddenly become subject to the command of a few leaders, who are the more absolute in proportion as the nature of the power is less clearly ascertained; nay, perhaps they must even submit to the toils of war, and to military discipline.

“ If it be in the common and legal course of the law, that the people are called to move, each individual is obliged, for the success of the measures in which he is then made to take a concern, to join himself to some party; nor can this party be without a leader. The citizens thus grow divided among themselves, and contract the pernicious habit of submitting to leaders. They are, at length, no more than clients of a certain number of patrons; and the latter, soon becoming able to command the arms of the citizens, in the same manner as they at first governed their votes, make little account of a people with one part of which they know how to curb the other.

“ But when the moving springs of government are placed entirely out of the body of the people, the action is thereby disengaged from all that can render it complicated, or hide it from the eye. The people thenceforward consider things speculatively and are, if I may be allowed the expression, spectators of the game, they acquire just notions of things; and as these notions, amidst the general quietude, gain ground, and spread themselves far and wide, they at length entertain, on the subject of liberty, but one opinion.

“ Forming thus, as it were, one body, the people, every instant, have it in their power to strike a decisive blow, which is to level every thing. In those mechanical powers, the greatest efficiency which exists at the instant which precedes their entering into action, it has an immense force, just because it does not yet exert any; and in this state of stillness but of attention, consists its true momentum.”

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 20, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstons, in the City of London.—Saturday, Feb. 22, 1834.

The Legal Guide.

[II.] SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 29, 1840.

[No. 18.]

LEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

In the preceding number we quoted Lord [unclear]'s opinion upon these Privileges, and last week we noticed the opinion of Justice Holt, in Regina v. Paty. In the latter case the Lord Chief Justice held that the plaintiffs had a good cause of action, because the judgment of the Court in v. White had been reversed by the House of Lords; and consequently that a person who brings an action against another, who is not a privileged person, is not to have his action stopped, especially if he has a good cause of action, and that the bringing of such an action was no breach of the privilege of the House of Commons; inasmuch as the House of Lords could not make a law, and in parity of reason they could not make a law. Upon this question of Privileges, Justice Pattison thus expressed himself upon the recent judgment of the Court in Stockdale v. Hansard (May 31, where he said that the House of Lords has ordered the printing and publishing of reports and proceedings, and that no action occurs of any action having been brought against the publisher. The same principles apply to such practice in that the House of Commons, except as to trials in the House of Lords.

They are proceedings in an open court of justice, and may properly be considered under the second ground on which this power is supposed to exist, namely, the necessity for it.

“Beyond all dispute, it is necessary that the proceedings of each House of Parliament should be entirely free and unshackled, that whatever is done or said in either House should not be liable to examination elsewhere. Therefore no order of either House can itself be treated as a libel, as the Attorney-General supposed it might if his action would lie. No such consequence will follow. The power claimed is said to be necessary to the due performance both of the legislative and inquisitorial functions of the House. In all the cases and authorities from the earliest times hitherto, the powers which have been claimed by the House of Commons for itself and its Members, in relation to the rest of the community, have been either some privilege, properly so called, i.e. an exemption from some duty, burden, attendance, or liability to which others are subject; or the power of sending for and examining all persons and things, and the punishing all contempts committed against their authority. Both of these powers proceed on the same ground, viz. the necessity that the House of Commons and the Members thereof should in no way be obstructed in the performance of their high and important duties; and that if the House be so obstructed, either collectively or in the persons of the individual Members, the remedy should be in its own hands and immediate, without the delay of resorting to the ordinary tribunals of the country. Hence liberty of speech within the walls of the House, freedom from arrest, and from some other restraints and duties during the sitting of Parliament, and for a reasonable time before and after its sitting (with the exception of treason, felony, and breach of the peace), which, although the privileges properly so styled of the individual Members, are yet the privileges of the House. Hence the power of committing for contempt those who obstruct their proceedings, either directly by attacks upon the body or any of its Members, or indirectly by vilifying or otherwise opposing its lawful authority. Cases have frequently arisen in which the extent and exercise of these privileges and powers have come in question, and I believe that all such cases will be found to range themselves under one of the two heads I have mentioned. But this is, I believe, the first time in which a question has arisen as to the power of the House to authorize an act prejudicial to an individual, who has neither directly nor indirectly obstructed the proceedings of the House, and is in no way amenable to its authority. The decision of Lake v. King, which I mentioned before, proceeded on similar grounds of necessity. Every facility ought undoubtedly to be given to all persons applying to either House of Parliament, or to any Court of Justice, for the redress of any alleged grievance, and it would be most inconvenient to hold such persons liable to actions for any thing contained in such applications as libel; but when those who are applied to circulate generally by sale such defamatory matters, the case assumes a very different character. In the case of Fairman v. Ivis, 5 Barnewall & Alderson, 642, a petition addressed by the creditor of an officer in the army to Lord Palmerston, the Secretary at War, was held not to be actionable, although containing defamatory matter; but can it be doubted, that if Lord Palmerston had ordered it to be published, the publisher would have been liable to an action? or can it be contended that the Secretary of State, to whom the report and reply on which this action is brought, were by Act of Parliament directed to be sent, to be by him laid before the Parliament, would have been justified in publishing them? And, if not, why should the House of Commons be at liberty to do so. In the same manner, the protection of confidential communications extends no further than the necessity of each particular case requires. It is said, that if papers however defamatory, must needs be printed for the use of the Members, as it is plain they must, and the point is not disputed their further circulation cannot be avoided; for what is to be done with the copies upon a dissolution of Parliament, or upon the death or retirement of a Member? The answer is obvious; the copy of such defamatory matter ought to be destroyed, as can no longer be used for the purpose for which it was intended; or, at all events, must not be communicated to others. But it is said that the constituents have a right to watch over the conduct of their representatives, and therefore to know what passes in the House. The House itself is of a different opinion, for it is only by sufferance that any one is allowed to be present at debates; it is only by sufferance that the debates are allowed to be published, and it is only by the special permission of the House that its votes and proceedings and papers are communicated to the public, and that in the manner in which they think fit to order. If the constituents had a right to know all that passes, or if the House of Commons were an open Court, then, indeed, there might be some colour for saying it was necessary to publish all its proceedings.

It is upon the ground, that courts of law are open to the public, that what is there is public at the time, and that it is important, that all persons should be allowed to scrutinize what is there done, that the publication of every thing which there passes is thought to be lawful. I for one do not go to that length, but think, with some of great name who have gone before me, that the doctrine is to be taken with limitation; but I feel sure that it can only apply to a Court which is not open, proceedings in contemplation of law, and not at the time they take place, and not ex parte statements, often grossly untrue, are made, without the defamed person having any opportunity of being heard, and, indeed, often without the possibility of any inquiry being instituted; and it is impossible, if such indiscriminate publication and sale be continued by the House of Commons, that petitions containing the most libelous and most inane allegations may be purposely and maliciously introduced to that Honourable House by persons who seek to publish and sell them with impunity, and to make the House most notoriously the instrument of circulating falsehoods. It is the nature of the proceedings themselves which justifies, if at all, the publication of what passes in a court of law, and any person may therefore publish what he sees at the proceedings of the House of Commons, as cannot be published without the sanction of the House. The right to publish does not result from the nature of the proceedings, but from the leave obtained from the House; and this alone shows that it is not a matter of necessity for the information of the constituents. I do not say that it may not be conducive to the public interest to inform the world at large of what passes in the House, but I do say that it cannot be conducive to the public interest to circulate private slander; and that the exercise of a due discrimination as to what part of its proceedings shall be published, the House of Commons is bound to take care that such private slander be not circulated by its authority.

“But it is said to be necessary, in order to obtain the requisite information for the Members in any legislative or inquisitorial measure. This ground is still less tenable: the House is armed with ample powers to send for all persons who can give them information, either before a Committee, or at the bar of the House. It can never be necessary to sell indiscriminately to every body, in order to take the chance of some person volunteering information to the House. Will it be said, that any one ever did volunteer information in consequence of such publications by the House, or that the House ever waited and paused in its deliberations or its votes, in order to see whether any one would so volunteer? It is not pretended that such has been the fact. Whether any individual Member might or might not be justified in communicating to some persons out of the House defamatory matter printed for the use of the House, I cannot pretend to say. Probably, upon any such question arising, the decision will be with a jury; but I would by no means bind myself to any opinion on that subject. This is the case of an open sale to all who choose to buy, not justified by any peculiar circumstances attending this case above others.

“Where then is the necessity for this power? Privileges, that is, immunities and safeguards, are necessary for the protection of the House of Commons in the exercise of its high functions. All the subjects of this realm have desired, are desiring, and I trust and believe will continue to desire, the greatest benefits from the exercise of those functions. All persons ought to be very tender in preserving to the House all privileges which may be necessary for their exercise, and to place the most implicit confidence in their representatives as to the due exercise of those privileges. But power, and especially the power of invading the rights of others, is a very different thing; it is to be regarded, not with tenderness, but with jealousy, and unless the legality of it be most clearly established, those who act under it must be answerable for the consequences. The onus of showing the existence and legality of the power now claimed lies upon the defendants; it appears to me, after a full and anxious consideration of the reasons and authorities adduced by the Attorney-General in his learned argument, and after much reflection upon the subject, that they have entirely failed to do so, and I am therefore of opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to our judgment in his favour."

PROBLEM XVIII. VOL. III.

CHANCERY.—PLEA TO A BILL.

What is its object? What constitutes a good Plea?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM XIV.

VOL. 3.

TITLE DEEDS.

In what cases will equity compel the owner of title deeds to produce them to other persons, and in what cases will their production be compelled in adverse suits and actions?

Sir J. Leach V. C. in the case of Barclay v. Raine (1) 1 Sim. and Stu. 449, thought the existence of a right in equity to compel the production of deeds very questionable, and the Real Property Commissioners adopted his opinion, but that His Honour did not intend to deny the general doctrine of such an equitable right, as, I think, evident from his observations in a subsequent case of Fain

v. Ayers, 2 Sim. & Stu. 588 : (2) and I find equity will compel the Heir at law to produce title deeds in favour of a Devisee, see 6 Cru. Dig. 10. And it is, I believe, a general rule in equity that a person is entitled to the production of a deed which sustains his title, Sampson v. Swettenham, 5 Mad. 16. And in adverse suits a plaintiff may compel the production of deeds and papers connected with the object of the suit, if they are stated in the Schedule to, or referred to by, the answer and therein admitted to be in defendant's custody or possession, but the plaintiff has no right to the production of a deed not connected with his title and which gives adverse title to the defendant. Croft v. Stee, 4 Ves. 66.; Bird v. Harrison, 15 Ves. 408; Evans v. Richards, 1 Swan. 7.

A COUNTRY ARTICLED CLERK.

(2) As to the equity of the purchaser, the decision of that learned judge in the case of Fain v. Ayers, establishes that the purchaser would have had a clear equity to compel the production of the deeds. In that case, which was subsequent to the case of Barclay v. Raine, he expressed a strong inclination of opinion upon which he acted in overruling a demurrer that the purchaser of a part of a large estate who never had a covenant to produce the title deeds, had a right upon his reselling, to compel the first seller to produce them, to show a marketable title, as the first seller's title deeds were the root of the first purchaser's title, and in the dense sort of common property, and he stated that he was informed that the Lord Chancellor (Eldon) had expressed an opinion to that effect, and we shall see that in another important case, neither he, nor Lord Eldon considered it material to the binding nature of a covenant in equity that it should run with the land at law. It cannot be contended that a purchaser buying only in equity of the estates held under the same

(1) The result of this case introduced no new rule either as to the law or equity upon this subject.—Ed.

can say he is not bound by a covenant entered into by the seller upon a pre-sale to another, to produce the deeds if he had not notice of it: the contents of the deeds afford notice that they relate as to other property as to his, and the course of practice leads to the inference, that the seller has parted with a portion of his estate, and still has the deeds, he has intended to produce them, and the second purchaser is bound to enquire.

By the law, no doubt the expression in the report is, that Thring's covenant to produce did not run with the land: but it appears that Sir John Leach afterwards denied that he used the expression there imputed to him. He did not say that Thring's first covenant did not run with the land, for he said that it clearly did, but that the covenant was restricted to the period of being mortgagee; of course this means that it ran with the lands sold to him, for it was not disputed that it did run with the other lands in the hands of the original seller and those claiming under him. In that respect it was the common law, for the Barclays claimed through him, from A the original seller, with whom Thring entered into the covenant. This observation is not very distinct, for Thring's covenants ran with the land, and the real objection was, the first was lost, the second was limited to the period of being mortgagee. The explanation, however, believes the doctrine from the supposed facts of the case itself.

And, the title it may be thought ought to have been deemed a good one; for if a man sells all part of his estate, and delivers the deeds to the purchaser, and takes from him a covenant for their production, the same upon a sale of another part by him is the same as a sale by a purchaser with a covenant to produce the deeds, and no difference in each case he can make a title. If the deed of covenant itself had not been delivered over to the second purchaser (Barclay), nor had he a covenant to produce it, and the copy was mutilated: this would have been an objection if the deed had been in existence, because the last purchaser was entitled to the custody of it, or to a covenant to produce it from the person holding it, but he was not entitled to have a covenant entered into with himself to produce the title deeds; if such were the law, few titles would be good. But as the deed was lost, and there was sufficient evidence of its having existed to support Thring's acknowledgment; and as he had the legal fee vested in him with the custody of the deeds, although only as mortgagee, his deed would bind the mortgagors at law when he reconveyed to them, and the equity as we have already seen was clear, so that perhaps upon the whole there should have been a decree for a specific performance, instead of the bill being dismissed with costs. It would seem, also, that there was sufficient equity to have compelled the persons claiming the deeds under Thring (the Mortgagor), to enter into a new covenant to produce the deeds to supply the place of the one that was lost. It was distinguishable from the case before referred to, where no covenant to produce deeds had ever been executed. See Sugd. Vend. & Pur. vol. ii. p. 126.—EDITOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XV.—VOL. 3.

PLEA.—PUIS DARRIEN CONTINUANCE.

Describe this plea? When may it be resorted to as a matter of defence?

This plea is of a very peculiar nature, inasmuch as it belongs to no particular period of the suit, but may be resorted to at any stage of the pleadings. This will be evident from a consideration of the history of the plea, and the circumstances under which it is available. It may, therefore, be well in the first place to learn how it first came to be used; and, in prosecuting our inquiries on this point, we shall have to look back as far as to the times when the pleadings were conducted pro voce in open court. At this early period, as also for several centuries after (and in short until very recently), when adjournments of the proceedings took place, an entry was made on the record, stating the ground of the adjournment, and fixing a day for the re-appearance of the parties in court. Such entries were called Continuances. Between the continuances and the day appointed, as the parties were out of court, they were not able to plead; and in the interval, during which they were so out of court, it was possible for a new matter of defence to arise which did not exist, and which the defendant was therefore unable to plead, before the last continuance; this sometimes occurred. And, although some other plea had been previously pleaded, it was deemed inequitable that he should be deprived of such ground of defence; he was, therefore, entitled to plead it, on the day fixed for the re-appearance of the parties in court, as a matter which had happened after the last continuance; hence the title, "Puis darrien Continuance," or, "Since the last Adjournment."

By a recent rule of court (a), altering the ancient practice with respect to continuances, it is provided, that in all cases where this plea was then by law pleadable, the same defence may still be pleaded. It must, however, be accompanied by an affidavit stating that the matter of defence arose within eight days before the time of pleading it, unless the court or a judge shall order otherwise. It is pleaded by way of substitution for the former plea (1), and is followed by a replication, and other pleadings, in the same manner as pleas in general. It may be either in bar or abatement (b). In modern practice, it is styled "Plea to the farther Maintenance of the Action" (c).

(a) H. L. J. A. Y. 4. (b) Com. Dig. Abatement, l. 24. (c) Stephens's Pleading.

(1) But it cannot be pleaded after a demurrer (Day v. Savage, Moon 871; Martin v. Wyvil, 1 Str. 492), nor after verdict (Stamp v. Parker, Cro. Jac. 646; see Lowell v. Eastaff, 8 Term. Rep. 554). The matter of defence must have arisen after the defendant has pleaded, and before the jury have actually delivered their verdict; see in case of reference to arbitration, Alder v. Park, 5 Dowl. 16.—Editor.

Law Reports.

QUEEN'S BENCH.—Dec. 23.

(Sittings at Nisi Prius, before Lord DENMAN.)

HARVEY v. NORTON.

Special Jury.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.—SEPARATION.—HUSBAND'S LIABILITIES.—Whether furniture falls under the description of necessaries to which the husband shall be made liable after separation, where he has turned his wife out of doors, and had made no settlement or had not paid it.

This was an action for goods sold and delivered.

The Attorney-General for the plaintiff, said the plaintiff was a diaper and carpet manufacturer, carrying on business in the Westminster-r. The defendant was a gentleman of high character and station, one of the police magistrates of the metropolis. He should have very great pain in laying before the jury the circumstances of the case, and he should most cautiously abstain from saying anything at all calculated to wound the feelings of the defendant. The present action was brought to recover the sum of £49. 1s. 2½d. for necessaries supplied to Mrs. Norton, the wife of the defendant, in the year 1827. Mr. Norton had married Miss Sheridan, one of the daughters of Mr. T. Sheridan, son of the celebrated Mr. Sheridan. They lived together very happily for a number of years, but it happened in the month of March, 1826, they separated. At that time Mr. Norton had certain suspicions with respect to the conduct of his wife, which he had since acknowledged to be unfounded. He did not suppose that on this occasion there would be thrown out the slightest suspicion against the honour of Mrs. Norton. If there should be, he was in a situation to prove that the defendant had acquitted her of all imputations. The date in question was contracted in January, 1826. The defendant, living separate from his wife, was clearly liable for necessaries suitable to her station in life, she not disputing any misconduct in her having settled upon and paid to her a maintenance. It had often been laid on such occasions as the present, that the husband who was not permitted to live with her was not divorced, and that the husband was a credit for necessities to be supplied by person who supplied them having a remedy against the husband for the recovery due. In the beginning of the year 1838 Mrs. Norton, being separated from her husband, occupied apartments unfurnished, in a house in Bolton-street, Piccadilly. It was necessary that she should furnish those apartments, and she did so on a most moderate scale, and in the most economical manner. She came to the plaintiff's shop of that year, and asked to look at the terms of carpets and rugs. She selected such as were the plainest and the cheapest. In the following months, goods were ordered on behalf of Mrs. Norton's son, Mr. Sheridan, younger son of R. B. Sheridan, who occupied apartments in the same house.

That portion had been paid, but a portion remained unpaid of £49. 11s. 2½d. It could not be disputed that those goods had been delivered, or that they had been used; the only question then that was left for the jury to try was, whether they were necessities suitable to a person of Mrs. Norton's rank of life. It was possible that Mrs. Norton might contend that those goods were to be considered as necessities, inasmuch as they were furniture for an unfurnished house. It could never be said that a wife must take up her abode in a furnished lodging; on the contrary, any prudent person at the west end of London would take an unfurnished lodging in a house. It would surely not be contended that a lodging as Mrs. Norton had taken was a good for the wife of a man who was heir apparent, who was in the receipt of a very large allowance as a police magistrate, and had succeeded to considerable property in the county. It would not be set up as a defence that a settlement had been made by Mr. Norton; for it might have been the case since the time when the present debt was contracted, and it had not been made in the month of January, 1838. He could not for a moment say that the jury would say that such furniture had then been bought was extravagant for the wife of such a man as Mr. Norton, highly educated, and moving in the first circles of society.

The question as to what were necessities was one entirely for the consideration of the jury, who, in order to arrive at a conclusion, must take into consideration the rank and condition of life of the parties. The whole claim for this furniture amounted to £50. 6s. 2d. but of that sum £42. 15s. was, in respect of the furniture required for the use of her uncle, Mr. Sheridan, who lived in the house with her. Mr. Sheridan had paid that sum, and the amount now claimed was for goods for Mrs. Norton's own use. He understood this claim was resisted on the ground that the goods were not necessities, and that a distinction was to be taken between the clothes furnished for the necessary and decent clothing of the wife, or the food she required for her sustenance, and the furniture to be placed in her apartment. That distinction, however, could not prevail for a moment. It never had been laid down that a wife should take furnished lodgings, and pay an extravagant sum for them. She must then take unfurnished apartments, and it was necessary to her occupation of them, that she should be provided with furniture suitable to her condition in life. In the case of "Hunt v. De Blaquier," 5 Bing. 550-3, M and P. 108, it had been decided that furniture must be considered as necessities. The law always presumed a husband's liability for debts contracted by his wife for necessities, unless he had made a settlement, and could prove payment of it. No settlement had been made on Mrs. Norton when this debt was incurred, and therefore the defendant was clearly liable. He trusted that the jury would have no difficulty in pronouncing the defendant clearly in the wrong.

The following evidence was given.

Hugh Wilson—I am shopman to the plaintiffs, who are linendrapers and warehousemen, in the Westminster-road. I remember Mrs. Norton coming to the plaintiffs' shop in January, 1838. She requested to be shown some carpets, and I took, by her direction, some patterns to Bolton-street, Piccadilly. Mrs. Norton lived in Bolton-street. She purchased goods, and I made out an account of them. I afterwards saw those goods in the house in Bolton-street. The account was originally made out to Mrs. Norton, but it was subsequently divided at her request. One portion was made out to Mr. Sheridan, and the other to the Hon. G. C. Norton. The latter has not been paid. The goods for which Mr. Norton was debited consisted of carpets, floor-cloth, rugs, &c. They were put into Mrs. Norton's room and the maid's room. A Brussels carpet was put down in the drawing-room, the floor-cloth in the hall, and the hearth rugs in the bed-room and dressing-room. The witness described other furniture, and the parts of the house in which it was placed. Our shop sell for ready-money. The charges are the lowest ready-money charges. Mrs. Norton was told so when she ordered the goods. I afterwards, by desire of Mrs. Norton, called on the defendant for the money. He refused to take the invoice of the goods, and said he had paid more accounts than he was justified in paying, and would pay no more; that Mrs. Norton was living separate from him, had a separate maintenance, and she should never set foot in his house again.

Cross-examined.—Mrs. Norton did not say she was sitting up the house in Bolton-street when she first called. She gave her address there. She was a stranger to us, and came to the shop as a ready-money customer. When I went to the house in Bolton-street I saw painters and paper-hangers there, and it had the appearance of being fitted up. Mrs. Norton's butler gave me the money for Mr. Sheridan's bill on the 6th of June, 1838. I did not apply to Mr. Norton until September, as I learnt from his servant that he would not be in town until then. I knew he was a police magistrate. The house in Bolton-street is a moderately-sized house. It might require from £500. to £1,000. to furnish it. I saw Mr. Norton at his house in Wilton-crescent. It is a small house compared to that in Bolton-street. I had heard of Mrs. Norton, when the goods were supplied, but I was not acquainted with the fact that she was living separate from her husband.

J. Houghton, a person in the employment of the plaintiff, proved the delivery of the goods.

Mrs. Fire-Baton examined.—Was in the service of Mrs. Norton. Had lived with Mr. and Mrs. Norton since their marriage. Could not say she thought that they had lived in a very stylish manner; they had four maid servants and one man servant in Green-street. They received fashionable people at their house, and visited fashionable people. A separation took place in March, 1836. After that she went once to the house with Mrs. Norton to see her children. Mrs. Norton remained there long enough to dress the children, and then took them out to walk. She went again in August, 1836, with Mrs. Norton, when Mrs. Norton was refused admittance. The door was kept closed, the chain being drawn, so that they could not see the servant. Mr. Sheridan lives with Mrs. Norton at the house in Bolton-street, and is in the exclusive occupation of apartments there.

Cross-examined.—There are three maid-servants and two men-servants at No. 24, Bolton-street. Mr. Sheridan lived there with Mrs. Norton till they went to the continent in September last. Mr. Sheridan used to sit sometimes in the drawing-room with Mrs. Norton, but generally sat in his own study. Will not swear that Mr. Sheridan did not sit in Mrs. Norton's rooms every day. They see company together. Heard Mr. Norton in Green-street give an order to the man-servant not to admit Mrs. Norton if she came to the door. Remembers their separation in March, 1836. Remembers Mrs. Norton's going away early in the morning, about 8 o'clock.

It was not so early as 6 o'clock; it was quite light at the time. Mr. Norton had three children, all boys. Will not say that Mr. Sheridan has part of the house in Bolton-street to himself; has seen Mrs. Norton at tea in Mr. Sheridan's room.

Re-examined.—When Mrs. Norton quitted her husband's house in March, 1836, she went to the house of Lord Seymour, her brother-in-law.

Cross-examined.—The house in Bolton-street was now let to Sir Patrick Ross. When it was let witness was out of town with Mrs. Norton; was not present at any of the negotiations about letting it. Will swear that she did not hear Mr. Sheridan talk to Sir P. Ross about letting it.

Frederick Burton called.—Is in the service of Mrs. Norton. Had been hired by Mr. Sheridan, and was transferred by him in October, 1837, to the service of Mrs. Norton. His wages were £14. a-year. There was not so much furniture in the house in Bolton-street as there should have been in a house of such size. Never saw anything about Mrs. Norton's establishment that appeared unnecessary or extravagant for a lady of her rank.

Cross-examined.—When Mr. King, the landlord of the house, quitted it, witness took possession of it for Mr. Sheridan. Mr. Sheridan and Mrs. Norton used generally to sit together, and see company in the same drawing-room. The drawing-room curtains were of crimson moreen; those of the back drawing-room of chintz.

Colonel Leicester Stanhope examined.—Has been long acquainted with Mr. Norton, who lived in the first circles. Does not consider that Mrs. Norton's residence in Bolton-street was furnished in a manner more expensive than was necessary. Furnished lodgings at the west end are charged at a very extravagant rate.

Cross-examined.—Mrs. Norton's house at Storey's-gate was small; not above half the size of the house in Bolton-street. The situation was more expensive. Houses in that part of the town are dearer than in Piccadilly. Besides there was a public-house next door to the house at Storey's-gate. Should suppose the rent of the house in Bolton-street to be about £200. a-year. Believes the expenses of the house were shared between Mr. Sheridan and Mrs. Norton. Understood that it was a joint establishment. Was not present at any interview of Mr. Sheridan and Sir P. Ross respecting the letting of the house.

Mrs. Sheridan examined.—Is the mother of Mrs. Norton. Mr. and Mrs. Norton were married 30th July, 1827; they married in the first circles. Had visited her daughter at Bolton-street. Thought the couple were particularly reasonable.

examined.—Has not observed if the room curtains are of rich crimson silk

(To be continued.)

Jan. 30.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

It had been obtained in this case to show by a writ of attachment should not issue the Sheriff of Middlesex for not having the damages and costs awarded to the plaintiff in this action.

Kelly now showed cause against the rule.

That he should best fulfil his duty upon every occasion by first reading the affidavits of the Sheriffs, and then pointing out the situation in which those gentlemen would be placed in compliance with the present rule. He finally urge upon the Court the necessity of the officers of their Lordships being duly promoted the performance of their duties.

COURT made the rule absolute.

Feb. 23.

plaintiff obtained a summons to show cause by the order made in this cause on the 17th inst., "for staying the return to the writ of inquiry in this cause until the fourth day of the next term next should not be rescinded."

the Queen's Bench; between John Stockdale, plaintiff, and James Hansard, James Hansard, and Luke James Hansard, defendants. Thomas Burton Howard, of Strand, Strand, in the county of Middlesex, gentleman, but now a prisoner in the Newgate, the plaintiff's attorney in this cause, taketh oath and saith, that a notice in writing was duly served on the above-named defendants, purporting that a writ of inquiry of the Sheriff of Middlesex would be executed before the Sheriff of Middlesex, at his office in Red Lion-square, London, on the 20th day of February instant, and he delivered briefs to counsel to attend on the part of the plaintiff, and necessitated very considerable expense thereon; the deponent further saith, that on the 18th day of February instant, after the hour allowed for visitors in the above-named prison, he served with a summons, to show cause for the return of the said writ of inquiry should be enlarged until the fourth day of the next term, why all proceedings should not be in this time stayed. That on the following day renewed summons to the same effect was served on the deponent, which came on to be argued on the 20th instant, when an order was made, and this deponent further saith, that the clerks have been for some time, and now are, in custody by direction of the House of Commons, and he was thereby prevented from sufficiently instructing counsel to oppose the order being made, and that he never saw or knew the contents of the affidavit on which the application was grounded, until after the order had been made. And this deponent further saith, that the said order was not made in time to prevent the attendance of the leading counsel of the said plaintiff at the office of the said Sheriff of Middlesex, pursuant to the said notice for executing the said writ of inquiry, and he is informed, and believes, by such counsel, that the first knowledge which he, the said counsel, had of such order was upon the production of a copy of it by Mr. Burchell, the acting Under-Sheriff, after he, the said counsel, had appeared before the said Under-Sheriff for the purpose of advocating the plaintiff's claim to damages. And this deponent further saith, that on the 8th day of November last, he was served with a notice in a former cause between the above-named plaintiff and defendants, for another publication for the same libel for which this action is brought, from the Under-Sheriff of Middlesex, purporting that this honourable Court would be moved on the morrow, or as soon after as counsel could be heard on the part of the Sheriff of Middlesex, for a rule to show cause why the execution of the writ of inquiry in that case should not be staid until the further order of this Court. And this deponent further saith, that the application was made, and the resolution of the House of Commons, relative to persons acting in any suit that might bring the privileges of the House into discussion, brought before the notice of the Judge, who refused to grant the rule, or in any manner to interfere to delay the execution of the writ of inquiry; and this deponent further saith, that upon another occasion, when the plaintiff, by rule of Court, called upon the Sheriff of Middlesex to show cause why he should not pay over the money received by him under the writ of venditioni exponas, in the said last-mentioned action, the said Sheriff showed for cause the said resolution of the said House of Commons, and the plaintiff said, as was the fact, that he was then in custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms for acting in opposition thereto, but it was declared by the full Court that such resolution offered no excuse, and they ordered that the said Sheriff should pay over the money to the plaintiff, which he did.

Sworn at the gaol of Newgate, in the Old Bailey, in the city of London, this 22d day of February, 1840. Before us

J. B. HOWARD, a Commissioner, &c.

Mr. Platt appeared upon the summons for the plaintiff, and observed, The state of the case was that an action had been brought by Mr. Stockdale against Messrs. Hargreaves for the publication of a false and malicious libel. The defendants had suffered judgment to go by default. A writ of inquiry to assess the damages had been issued, and was about to be executed, when the order against which he appeared had been made. He had to submit to his Lordship in the first place, that the sitting at chambers had no power to make such an order, the effect of which was to inhibit the execution of the Queen's writ. The effect of the order was most disastrous to the plaintiff, who would be thrown over from term to term, as he had been in the former action. A similar application to the present had been made on behalf of the Sheriff to Mr. Justice Littledale, who, after hearing counsel for two whole days, treated the application as it ought to be treated, and rejected almost with indignation the attempt made by the Sheriff to delay the execution of the law, which was the subject's right.

Mr. Justice Williams.—Have you any affidavit, Mr. Platt?

Mr. Platt.—Yes, my Lord. The learned counsel then read the affidavit of Mr. Howard, and proceeded to observe, that in the last action the Sheriff had taken no step, except on compulsory rules obtained from the Court of Queen's Bench at the instance of the plaintiff, and the course theretofore taken showed what might be expected in this cause. The proceedings here had been perfectly regular, and they had arrived at a certain stage, when it was sought to stay them, because the House of Commons had passed certain resolutions which were clearly illegal. The House of Commons had no more right than a parish vestry to interfere by its resolutions with the administration of justice and the law of the land. At this moment the Sheriff was in custody by a technical deception, by legal chicanery, for the warrant under which he was held did not state the cause of his detention in such a way as to enable the Court of Queen's Bench to give him its own officer, its protection, and no benefit would arise to any human being by the delay of the execution of this writ of inquiry. The Sheriff was bound to execute the writ, and execute it he must, some day or the other; that it was merely a postponement of the day of trial, for that day must come. He could assure his Lordship that the plaintiff would not relax in his proceedings. The Sheriff was bound to do his duty, firmly and without flinching. He (Mr. Platt) therefore submitted that the order for staying proceedings ought to be rescinded—first, on the ground that a judge at chambers had no power to overrule the Queen's writs; 2dly, that even if he had the power, he would not interfere after the precedent laid down by

Mr. Justice Littledale; and, 3dly, because it was unreasonable to interfere to the delay of the plaintiff. On these grounds, he submitted that the order ought to be rescinded, and his client allowed to go before a jury to assess the damages he had sustained.

Mr. Richards, in support of the order, cited the case of "Phillips v. Weyman," 2d Chitty's Rep., to show that a motion to stay proceedings could not be rediscussed, unless new facts calculated to induce the Court to come to a different decision were brought forward. In this instance no new facts were alleged, and the arguments of to-day were only a repetition of those urged by Mr. Chadwick Jones when the order was obtained. He therefore felt confident his Lordship would not undo one day what he had done a few days before, except strong ground was shown, and new facts stated. He was much surprised to hear his learned friend doubt the authority of a Judge at chambers to make such an order. It was clear that sitting at chambers, the learned Judges had jurisdiction to enlarge the time for the return of all writs. The peculiar circumstances of the case had placed the Sheriff in a state of great difficulty, and therefore, being an officer of the Court, he ought to be protected. The High-Sheriff was at the present moment in custody; he was not able to act, and if the inquiry was proceeded with, the Under-Sheriff must also go to prison, and then the business of the Courts in Westminster Hall could not be executed. It was admitted by all that the Sheriffs had acted in strict conformity with their duty, and therefore they had a right to demand protection. No injury could result to Mr. Stockdale from the delay, as he could not enforce the verdict, whatever it might be, until next term. He hoped that he should never see the day when the resolutions of the House of Commons were to be considered and acted upon as the law of the land. He trusted to live under a clear and defined law—not under the provision of resolutions which might be changed every day. He trusted his Lordship would afford the Sheriffs an opportunity of applying on the first day of next term for the advice of the Court of Queen's Bench as to how they were to act; and he thought, when the whole case was before the Court, their Lordships would protect the Sheriffs in the honest discharge of their duty. The only protection his Lordship could give was to enlarge the time for executing the writ of inquiry, which he had done, and nothing had taken place to alter the state of things; and as to the power of his Lordship to suspend the inquiry, he thought no doubt could exist on that head. He rested the case on the private protection which the Sheriff was entitled to, and he hoped never to see the day when that public officer was called upon to twice over. He again said, that Mr. Stocker could not be injured by delay, and he made this application to rescind the order postponement of the trial merely an attempt to excite popular excitement. This case was not a new one, there were no new facts, and therefore his Lordship would confirm the order refusing the writ of inquiry until the next term, and direct Mr. Stocker to pay to the Sheriff the expenses of that day.

MR. JUSTICE WILLIAMS, in pronouncing his judgment, went at great length through the facts taken in this and the previous action. His Lordship said it was no part of his duty to consider what might be the ulterior consequences of the order he had made; his duty was to assign the rights of the Sheriff and Mr. Stocker, and to see whether the present application could not be supported. He had the advantage of consulting the other Judges, and the exception of Mr. Justice Coleridge was on circuit, and they entirely agreed with him on the subject. The question for the Court to consider was, did the case emanate from new grounds? He thought not; he thought there was any analogy between the present application and the one made in the case of Justice Littledale. In that case the writ had only been served with a notice from the Sheriff, a solicitor, not to proceed; in the present case they had been served with a resolution of the House of Commons, telling them, if they proceeded, they would be guilty of a contempt of that House; and therefore, in those circumstances, they ought to be afforded an opportunity of appealing to the Court for the Bench for advice. The plaintiff should not be injured by the delay, as he could not have any verdict which might be given in the next term, and the Sheriff being bound to the Court, the Court was bound to him in the discharge of their duty. The inconvenience was in favour of the plaintiff, and therefore he felt bound to give them an opportunity of appealing to the Court, and to rescind the order for postponing the execution of the writ of inquiry until the next term.

MR. JUSTICE WILLIAMS said, as the House of Commons had passed a resolution every year, that the plaintiff should try another county.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

June 24th.

Stringer v. Bence.

Matter of the Petition of the Sheriff of the County of Middlesex.

MR. JUSTICE WILLIAMS delivered the following judgment.

A question has been raised before us of the validity and legal effect of the warrant under the sign manual of his late Majesty, ordering and directing that the right of practising and pleading and audience in the Common Pleas, during term time, should, from the first day of Trinity Term, 1834, cease to be exercised exclusively by the Sergeants-at-Law; and that upon and from that day the Barristers-at-Law might have and exercise equal rights and privilege of practising, pleading, and audience in the said Court with the Sergeants-at-Law. We (his Lordship continued) have been called on by the learned Sergeants, who have joined in the application, to declare our opinion on a question which affects so nearly their interests, and to assent to that opinion. At the time when this warrant from his Majesty was openly read in Court, in the presence of the learned Sergeants, if any one of our learned brothers had expressed any doubts as to its validity and legality, and had desired the opinion of the Court on that point, we should have felt it our duty to pause before we gave effect to that warrant, and have given our deliberate opinion on the question so presented to us. But no such doubt was suggested. The larger number of Sergeants accepted the grace and favour of the Crown in making their right permanent, and those of our brothers who had previously obtained their right from the Crown, who are the only parties to the application, allowed the matter to pass sub silentio. Under these circumstances, it cannot be wondered at that the Court did not, of its own authority, interpose any objection to the warrant; more especially as the object of the warrant had in view—the opening of the Common Pleas—was that which the Common Law Commissioners had, by their report, previously recommended to be adopted for the benefit of the suitors, though certainly to a much more limited extent than the warrant itself directs. Still, however, notwithstanding the period of acquiescence under the operation of the warrant had been considerable, we see no legal ground on which the Sergeants can, by such acquiescence, be held to be barred of their right now to call for the opinion of the Court as to the validity of the warrant. And we think ourselves bound in the execution of our duty, in administering justice, not only to the suitors of the Court, but to the officers and ministers of the Court, to declare our judgment on the legality of the warrant. Now, we think the question before us turns generally on the point: whether the Sergeants-at-Law have, by the constitution of the Court, and consequently by the law, held and enjoyed the sole and exclusive privilege by virtue of their office or degree of Sergeants, of practising, pleading, and audience in the Common Pleas; for if they were entitled, they cannot be deprived of their ancient privilege.

by a warrant from the Crown under the sign manual, nor indeed by any power short of an act of the whole legislature. That the antiquity, and degree, and office of Sergeant-at-Law, is as high as the existence of the Court itself, is a fact proved from all the text writers or records upon the subject. They are mentioned in the "Mirror of Justices," a book of great learning, and of the earliest though uncertain antiquity. They are mentioned by Bracton, who wrote in the time of Henry III., and in the records to be found in the Tower of the time of Edward I. They are called to the estate and degree of Sergeants-at-Law by writ, which of itself is a strong argument as to the antiquity of the office. The form of such writ, besides, is found in the most ancient manuscript registers, in substance agreeing with the writ by which they are called to their degree at the present day. By the oath of office, which has existed from the earliest times—an oath by which no other barrister is bound—they bind themselves to give due attendance and service in the business of their clients. As early as any authentic records exist the Sergeants are found to be practising in the Common Pleas; and there is no mention of any other barrister being allowed to practise, or practising, in that Court. See the various authorities collected on the subject in the address of the Lord Commissioner White-locke, as to the newly-created sergeants, in his "Memorials," p. 256. We, therefore, think we are fully justified in saying that from time immemorial the Sergeants-at-Law have enjoyed the exclusive privilege of practising, pleading, and audience in the Common Pleas. Immemorial enjoyment is the most solid of all titles, and a warrant of the Crown can no more deprive the Sergeants of the benefit of that privilege belonging to them than it can alter the administration of the law in the Court itself. The right and privilege of the peers of the realm stand on the same foundation of immemorial enjoyment. We hold, therefore, the right of the Sergeants to the sole and exclusive privilege, and which they claim as still in existence, notwithstanding the King's warrant; and we hold ourselves bound, in the due course of administering justice, to let this right be still exercised. Extreme cases may certainly occur in the progress of time, in which the Court might be called on, for a time at least, to admit to audience, to plead and practise barristers not of the degree of the coif, until the circumstances which created such necessity had passed by, in order to prevent a failure in the due administration of justice to the Queen's subjects, for which object all the courts of justice were instituted. Justice Littleton, in the case of "Paston v. Sergeant Jenny," in the Year Books of the 11th Edward IV. says, "If all the Sergeants were dead, we could hear the apprentices (a) plead, of necessity, in case of the people." To this Bryan answered, "Then according to you, no Sergeants shall be made of necessity." It appears to us (the Chief Justice continued to say) that as the Sergeants have by their own voluntary acquiescence under the legality of the warrant which they now dispute induced suitors of the Court to retain as counsel in this Court barristers not of the degree of the coif, it would be against justice that such suitors should not still have the benefit of their service. While, therefore, we declare our opinion to be that we ought to allow the sole right of the sergeants in practising, pleading, and being heard in this Court, during term time, it is with the reservation, that all barristers, not of the degree of the coif, shall be heard in such business, now in progress, in which they are at present engaged until the same be brought to an end. I would wish to add, that my learned brother Maule was not present at the time this was mentioned and argued by my brother Wilde; but he does not dissent from the opinion we have given, and I have his authority for saying that he entirely agrees with that opinion.

(a) "Apprentices," was the title originally given to barristers, and is derived from apprendre, to learn. They were (according to "Dugdale's Orig. Jur." 55; and "Sir Henry Spelman's Glossary," 37), first appointed in the 20th year of Edward the First's reign by an ordination in Parliament.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

Sir,—Last week I sent a letter to the Legal Observer to know whether any and what answer was returned to the following question at the last examination:—"What offence is the advising a prisoner to stand mute, and how is it punishable?"

Having seen no notice of the letter, (1) any gentleman, who passed in Hilary Term answered this question, I should be obliged if he would favour the public, through "THE GUIDE," with the correct reply.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
Law Soc. Hall. J. L.

(1) We think our correspondent (who we suspect not to be one of our subscribers) somewhat hasty in his implied censure on our contemporary—some of our notices and letters in this paper are of three weeks' date—some Answers to our Problems are still longer date, and we cannot find a remedy.—Ed.

| circuits,1840. | Lord Denman.J. Bosanquet. | Lord Abinger.J. Littledale. | B. Parko.B. Alderson. | J. Patteson.B. Gurney. | J. Coleridge.J. Erskine. | J. Coltman.B. Rolfe. | J. Williams. | J. Maule.                   |
|--------------------|-------------------------------|---------------------------------|---------------------------|----------------------------|------------------------------|--------------------------|--------------|-----------------------------|
| Tues. Feb. 18      | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | Appleby                      | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Thursday 20        | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | Carlisle                     | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Saturday 22        | -                             | -                               | -                         | Reading                    | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Monday 24          | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | Newcas. & town               | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Wednesday 26       | -                             | Hertford                        | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Thursday 27        | -                             | -                               | -                         | Oxford                     | -                            | Winchester               | -            | -                           |
| Saturday 29        | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | Durham                       | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Mon. March 2       | Northampton                   | Chelmsford                      | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | Swansea                     |
| Wednesday 4        | -                             | -                               | -                         | Worcester & city           | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Thursday 5         | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | York and city                | Salisbury                | -            | -                           |
| Friday 6           | Oakham                        | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Saturday 7         | Lincoln & city                | -                               | Aylesbury                 | -                          | -                            | -                        | Welchpool    | -                           |
| Monday 9           | -                             | Maidstone                       | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | Haverfordwest[and town] |
| Tuesday 10         | -                             | -                               | -                         | Stafford                   | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Wednesday 11       | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | Dorchester               | Bala         | -                           |
| Thursday 12        | Notting. & town               | -                               | Bedford                   | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | Cardigan                    |
| Saturday 14        | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Monday 16          | -                             | Lewes                           | Huntingdon                | -                          | -                            | Exeter and city          | Carmarvon    | -                           |
| Tuesday 17         | Derby                         | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Wednesday 18       | -                             | -                               | Cambridge                 | Shrewsbury                 | -                            | -                        | -            | Carmarthen and[borough] |
| Thursday 19        | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | Lancaster                    | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Friday 20          | Leicester & B.                | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Saturday 21        | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | Beaumaris    | -                           |
| Monday 23          | -                             | Kingston                        | -                         | Hereford                   | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Tuesday 24         | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | Liverpool                    | -                        | Ruthin       | Brecon                      |
| Wednesday 25       | Covent. & War.                | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Thursday 26        | -                             | -                               | Bury St. Edm. Monmouth    | -                          | -                            | Bodmin                   | Mold         | Presteign                   |
| Saturday 28        | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Tuesday 31         | -                             | -                               | Norwich & city            | Glouces. & city            | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Wed. April 1       | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | -                        | -            | -                           |
| Thursday 2         | -                             | -                               | -                         | -                          | -                            | Tapton                   | Chester      | -                           |

ARTICLED CLERKS WHO PASSED THEIR EXAMINATION AT THE HALL OF THE LAW SOCIETY, HILARY TERM, 1840. (Continued from p. 271.)

| Names                 | Name and Residence of Attorney, to whom articulated or assigned                                                     |
|------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Hull, Fred. Shepard          | Wm. Thompson, Liverpool; assigned to John Buck LloydLiverpool; and assigned to Wm. Henry Cotterill,Throgmorton-st. |
| Hunter, John                 | John Anderson, Pybus, Newcastle-upon-Tyne                                                                                  |
| Iggulden, John the younger   | John Mercer, Deal                                                                                                          |
| Jarvis, Lewis Whincop        | Lewis Western Jarvis, King's Lynn                                                                                          |
| Johnson, James               | John Makinson, Manchester                                                                                                  |
| King, Paul John              | Edward Robert Porter, 1, New Court, Middle Temple;assigned to Thomas Wright Nelson, 41, New Court,Middle Temple    |
| Kingdon, Richard             | Charles Kingdon, Holsworthy                                                                                                |
| Leech, Joseph                | Wm. Stevens, 6, Frederick's-platz, Old Jewry                                                                               |
| Leonard, Robert              | Winterbotham, Tewkesbury; assigned to E. Blackmore1, Mitre-court Chambers, Fleet-st.                                   |
| Leitch, Thomas Curr          | John Lowry, North Shields                                                                                                  |
| Lowe, William the younger    | Samuel Danks, Birmingham                                                                                                   |
| Mayo, John Ryall             | John Pyne, Somerton; assigned to John Slade, Yeovil                                                                        |
| Mercer, George               | John Mercer, the younger, Ramsgate                                                                                         |
| Merrick, William             | Wm. Timbrell, Bradford                                                                                                     |
| Monkman, Henry William       | Thomas Walker, York                                                                                                        |
| Moss, Wm. Henry the younger  | Wm. H. Rosser, Gray's-Inn-Place; assigned to CharlesFrost, Kingdon-upon-Hull                                           |
| Mould, Ralph Allen           | John Bridges, Red-lion-square                                                                                              |
| Mullens, Richard             | Wm. Bolton, Crea-lock, 4, Regent-street, St. James's, Westminster                                                          |
| Newington, William John      | Giles Miller, Goudhurst                                                                                                    |
| Paget, William               | Thomas Brown, Skipton                                                                                                      |
| Palmer, William H.           | Wm. Evans, Haverford West                                                                                                  |
| Parkinton, Joshua Furness    | James Stansfield, Halifax                                                                                                  |
| Phene, Phineas               | Henry Goddard Awdry, Milksham                                                                                              |
| Pierson, James H. G.         | Clement Govett, Tiverton                                                                                                   |
| Pitman, Harry Harris         | John Geare the elder, Exeter; assigned to WightwickRoberts, 57, Lincoln's-inn-fields                                   |
| Pitt, James                  | Thomas Lediard, Cirencester                                                                                                |
| Portmore, Charles Broadhurst | Edward Fisher, Ashby-de-la-Zouch; assigned to WilliamDewes, Ashby-de-la-Zouch                                          |
| Pybus, Geo. Harrison         | Wm. Pybus, Middleton Tyas, York; assigned to ThomasHenry Dixon, 5, New Boswell-court                                   |
| Rayer, Edward                | Joseph Cooper Straford, Cheltenham                                                                                         |
| Rea, John                    | Wm. Dickson, Alnwick                                                                                                       |
| Robinson, Thomas             | Wm. Barker, Huddersfield                                                                                                   |
| Robinson, Thomas             | Wm. Rymer, Darlington                                                                                                      |
| Sanders, John Thomas         | George Saffery, Market Rasen, Lincoln                                                                                      |
| Scott, William Henry         | Robert Bartlett, Chelmsstead                                                                                               |
| Smith, John Oliver           | Timothy Surr, 80, Lombard-street                                                                                           |
| Sparks, John                 | Isaac Sparks, Crewkerne                                                                                                    |
| Stephenson, McCarthy         | John Stephenson, Newark-upon-Trent                                                                                         |
| Taddy, Charles               | George Cook, Bristol                                                                                                       |
| Thomas, George the younger   | George Thomas the elder, Carmarthen; assignedSamuel Walker, 29, Lincoln's-inn-fields                                   |
| Tomlin, Ottiwell the younger | Ottiwell Tomlin the elder, Richmond; assigned to Jan.Williamson, 4, Verulam-buildings                                  |
| Towse, Robt. Beckwith        | John Beckwith Towse, Fishmonger's Hall, London-bridge                                                                      |
| Twynam, W. Edwin             | Geo. Twynam, Winchester; assigned to Benj. Hope, W.                                                                        |
| Wake, William                | Bernard John Wake, Sheffield                                                                                               |
| Walmisley, Edward            | Archibald Keightley, 43, Chancery-lane                                                                                     |

|                        |                                                            |
|------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| cy, John Rich. Lambest | Walter Fridesco, Goldsmith's Hall                          |
| William Webb           | Charles Hen. Webb, Stafford; assigned to James Gay         |
| er, Edmund             | Hiern, Stafford                                            |
| Edward                 | Richard C. Wardroper the elder, Midhurst, Sussex; assigned |
| James Call             | to Charles James Palmer, Bedford-row                       |
| Robert                 | George Saul, Carlisle; assigned to John Saul, Carlisle     |
| Sam. George            | Robert Weddell, Berwick-upon-Tweed; assigned to Wm.        |
| use, Joseph            | Pringle, 3, King's-road, Bedford-row                       |
| ck, Thomas Nortman     | John Whall, Worksop                                        |
| ton, Geo. Bancroft     | Cecil Proctor Wortham, Buntingford                         |
| r, Jeremiah            | Peter Williams, Holywell, Flint                            |
|                        | Julius Garbarran, Shepherd. Faversham, Kent                |
|                        | Wm. Casson, Manchester                                     |
|                        | Wm. Butt, Ryde                                             |

ICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

T.—A. L.—T. W.—G. L.—T. B. subscriber—S. A. W.—W. M.—S. P.
 —J. S.—R. D.—all under considera-ver.—Consider your question.—Is it one?

T.—Your industry shall have its relue season.

LMUS.—Hastings why did you not "homo trium literarum." We should ported you.

—We fully admit the justice of your ons. Our paper differs from every e strive not only at being correct in all ls, but we aim also at being useful to e practitioner as well as the student.
 arrying out our object that we find our confined for the information we desire
 It would relieve us greatly, and be to our Subscribers, could we issue a umber every month—Several have ap-it, but the majority are silent. We have no alternative but to stand to our

P.—See the List in our Columns.

RD ROG.—See our Vol. I. p. 175—work well read, and the references ap-will go a great way to effect your wish.
 for your P. S. When can we send for rs?

i. Llanelly.—We are waiting your omunication.

RTICLED CLERK—a Subscriber from mncement.—We believe 119 appliended the last examination of Articled at the Law Society. The list of those sed will be found in our columns.

W.—Your industry deserves our com-ons, and we think that in our limited here every line is to us of the first im-your communication would take the others more valuable, inasmuch as our Index shows every Problem. and whether ap-answered or no.

A Constant Reader and an Articled Clerk.—
 No.

J. A. B.—We have not neglected your letter, which shall be complied with. It was an oversight.

ALPHA.—We do not, at this distance of time, think that our taking notice of the work you allude to would answer any good purpose.

We have this week, contrary to rule, but in order to dispose of our accumulated correspondence, inserted answers to two Problems.

SECOND EDITION.

Just published, price one guinea,

COMMENTARIES on the CONSTITUTION and LAWS of ENGLAND, incorporated with the Political Text of the late J. L. De Lolme, LL.D. Advocate. By THOMAS GEORGE
 WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; dedicated, by special command, to her Majesty the Queen. Revised and corrected to the present time.

John Richards and Co. Law Booksellers,
 194, Fleet Street.

"We rejoice much at the appearance of a second edition of this very accurate and valuable work; as we deem it one which should not only be found in the library of every professional man, but in the hands of all those who wish to gain an intimate acquaintance with the principles, the machinery, movements, and working of the British Constitution. Men may admire the regular motion of a watch or a clock; but it is not until each separate portion has been taken asunder, and subjected to close inspection, until its various checks and springs, and wheels within wheels have been pointed out, and their use in the economy of the machine explained, that an adequate notion of its complicated nature and harmonious working can be obtained. The constitution of England presents a strictly analogous case. We may admire its wise provisions, excellent arrangements, and complete adequacy; we may be struck with the mutual dependencies of its various parts; with the mutual checks which they impose one upon another, and with the regularity and harmony resulting from such counter-acting, and apparently opposite influences; but it is only by consulting such a work before us, where the constitution is, as it were, anatomically dissected, and each portion of it made the subject of a separate demonstration; where the uses, relations, properties, and functions of every part are clearly and fully elucidated, that we can arrive at a full and adequate comprehension of the whole. And for that purpose we know of no work at all comparable to Mr. Western's. The text of De Lolme, the best analytical commentator on the British Constitution, is incorporated with the work, to which several additions relating to recent Acts of Parliament have been made. The arrangement is good, the style is clear—every thing irrelevant is carefully excluded, and the result is a work containing a vast and valuable body of political knowledge. We repeat knowledge, because it is neither disfigured by the introduction of disquisitions on abstract principles, or of fanciful and untried theories. The course of demonstration pursued is two-fold—first, the salient points of the constitution are laid down, and reduced to general principles—the essential difference between these and the corresponding points in other constitutional monarchies is traced out and exhibited; and, next, the value and truth of these are demonstrated by the testimony of history and experience. A work so modelled, and executed with skill and ability, with no party bias to thwart the writer's judgment, or party prejudices to impart to his views their own jaundiced hue, we deem no inconsiderable acquisition to British legislature. It is one that deserves, and will, we hope, obtain extensive popularity."—Surrey Stand. Feb. 21.

"We noticed this work in The Sun on its first appearance two or three years since, and stated at the time that we thought from its highly useful and important character—being Commentaries on the Laws of England incorporated with the text of De Lolme—it would be favourably received by the public; and our anticipations have been verified, for the second edition is now lying on our table, containing much new matter, arranged and digested with much tact, and a fitting regard to conciseness. The gentleman to whom we are indebted for this serviceable practical work is Mr. Western, of the Middle Temple."—Sun, Feb. 24.

First Review.

"There are few readers in the slightest degree acquainted with the principles of the British Constitution who are not well acquainted with M. De Lolme's popular treatise on the government and Laws of England—a work deservedly regarded as only second in interest to the admirable Commentaries of Sir William Blackstone. But as many most important changes have taken place in the Constitution of England since 1784, when De Lolme published the last edition of his work—particularly as regards the principles of our penal and criminal codes, and the regulations of the elective franchise—Mr. Western has undertaken the arduous and hitherto unattempted task of striking out from the text of De Lolme the portions of his treatise which have become obsolete, and interweaving in the body of the work the history of all the principal recent changes which have been effected in the Laws and the Constitution of Parliament, in order to render it a safe and trustworthy guide to readers of the present day. Mr. Western's execution of this design is at once great, laborious, and laudable, and well deserves to become popular."—The Sun.

See also Windsor and Eton Journal, Feb. 22.—The Old England, Feb. 22.

"This is a work of great talent; it is one also of great labour and careful and extensive research; and we are satisfied that it will eventually become a standard book. It is a work which is well adapted for the general, as well as the professional reader, for it treats of those constitutional topics which interest all classes of her Majesty's subjects. Mr. Western displays excellent judgment in regard to the arrangement of his book. His own remarks and additional matter are skilfully incorporated with, or appended to the text of De Lolme, as circumstances suggested. He has brought his information and facts down to the latest period; and in an Appendix which he has judiciously added, he has given the new code of laws regulating real property and testamentary dispositions. This latter part of the work is exceedingly valuable. The work is very properly exempted from every thing of a political character. We are glad, however, to perceive that the author has not shrunk from the reserved expression of his opinions on several subjects bearing immediately on the great interests of justice, humanity, and religion, which naturally came in the way. We fully concur with him in all he has said in reprobation of imprisonment for debt, and in opposition to the infliction of capital punishments. Mr. Western, we repeat, has produced a work of great and permanent value. He is a man of sound judgment, and of extensive information on the topics treated, while he expresses himself with much clearness and precision. De Lolme's book, which had in a measure become obsolete, in consequence of the great alterations which have taken place in our laws since it was written, has now all the freshness of a work written within these last six months."—Morning Advertiser.

On March 1, price 4s, to be continued Monthly,
Vol. IV. Part II.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING
adapted to the Present State of the Law
Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of
the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES OF ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—manuring—also the law relating to MINING LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, Feb. 28, 1846.

The Legal Guide.

II.] SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1840. [No. 19.

LEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

ient times, so far from the House of Commons presuming to declare upon its privileges, or presuming to enact what are its own privileges, they do not venture to decide upon them. The case is Lorke's case; that was a matter affecting the privilege of Parliament the arrest of a Member. The House of Commons did not then claim it as an absolute right to deal with it as if it were the authority themselves; but, on the contrary, they petitioned the King, and ever from the King is, "With the Lords Spiritual and Temporal," very much in the form of an Act of Parliament, as "Le Roi le veut," is the answer to the petition of the Commons. It is through several of the cases; and important in another point of view, shows that in the more ancient times of the constitution many things were done in which could hardly be distinguished whether they were measures legislative or judicial. Many cases have occurred where the King, Lords, and Commons made a joint resolution, and that that explains what is the law of Parliament, because that is the law of Parliament; but if there are equal powers to both Houses, and they have each the same force as the law of the legislature, &c. III.

there must be necessarily three concurrent legislatures at the same time, who may enact, nay, have enacted, three different sets of resolutions at the same time, and perhaps contradictory to each other; and who is to say which is the law of Parliament? By degrees the House of Commons claimed more privileges; in fact, as they gained power, they assumed to themselves the right of legislating; and whenever they legislated for themselves, with public opinion in their favour, though they might be a little irregular, yet they were supported and their resolutions acquiesced in. While they were determined to resist oppression, and followed the public opinion, and identified themselves with the people, they always had the public voice in their favour; their actions were not then too nicely scanned, and they frequently went beyond the just bounds of the law and the constitution with impunity; but whenever they thought it proper to set themselves up in opposition to public opinion, and trench upon public rights, they were always then ultimately defeated. There are several instances of that sort. The case of Wilkes, which was in a time of great excitement; there they came to a resolution which afterwards they were forced to abandon; "for," says Lord Chatham, "where law ends, tyranny begins;" and he says, in allusion to that case, "No man more than I respects the just authority of the House of Commons; no man would go further to defend."

it; but beyond the line of the constitution, like every exercise of arbitrary power, it becomes illegal: threatening tyranny to the people, destruction to the State; power without right, the most detestable object that can be offered to the human imagination. It is not only pernicious to those whom it subjects, but works its own destruction. Res detestabilis et caduca. Under pretence of declaring law, the Commons have made a law, a law of their own, and have united in the same persons the offices of legislator and party and judge." That was the opinion of that great statesman of the act of the House of Commons, going beyond their just privileges, depriving the subject of his legal right, and overturning, to a certain extent, the law of the land. That case is perfectly analogous to Stockdale's case; because the subject has a right to bring an action by law, and that is as much a part of the law of the land as the most important branch of it: and yet the House of Commons say, by their resolution, that they can deprive the subject of that right. Is not that legislating by themselves, without the concurrence of the other two branches of the legislature? With respect to that right of the subject, it has been decided by the House of Lords to be the law of the land, as that precise question arose in the case of Ashby v. White. There an action had been brought, and the House of Commons said that an action could not be brought to control their privileges. Lord Holt maintained that the action could be brought, three judges were of a contrary opinion, and the case ultimately went to the House of Lords, and the House of Lords decided that the action would lie; so that we would suppose an end was put to any question upon that subject. The opinion of Lord Holt is clear and distinct, both in that case and also in the case of the Queen v. Paty (a).

(a) See Mr. Curwood's reply to the argument of the Attorney-General in Stockdale v. Hansard, printed by order of the House of Commons with the proceedings, 4th June, 1839.

Mr. JUSTICE COLBRIDGE in giving his opinion upon the judgment delivered by the Court of Queen's Bench in Stockdale v. Hansard, observed, "It is said that this and all other courts of law are inferior in dignity to the House of Commons, and that, therefore, it is impossible for us to review its decisions. This argument appears to me founded on a misunderstanding of several particulars: first, in what sense it is that this court is inferior to the House of Commons; next, in what sense the House is a court at all; and, lastly, in what sense we are now assuming to meddle with any of its decisions. Vastly inferior as this court is to the House of Commons considered as a body in the State, and amenable as its Members may be for ill-conduct in their office to its animadversions, and certainly are to its impeachment before the Lords, yet as a court of law we know no superior but those courts which may revise our judgments for error, and in this respect there is no common term of comparison between this court and the House. In truth, the House is not a court of law at all, in the sense in which that term can alone be properly applied here; neither originally nor by appeal can it decide a matter in litigation between two parties; it has no means of doing so, it claims no such power; powers of inquiry and accusation it has, but it decides nothing judicially, except where it is itself a party in the case of contempts. As to them no question of degree arises between courts, and in the only sense therefore in which this argument would be of weight, it does not apply. In any other sense the argument is of no force, considered merely as resolutions or acts. I have yet to learn that this court is to be restrained by the dignity or the power of any body, however exalted, from fearlessly, though respectfully, examining their reasonableness and justice, where the rights of third persons in litigation before us depend upon their validity; but I deny that this inquiry tends to ersal of any decision of the House ;

 eral resolution and the res judicanda identical; the House of Commons er upon the fact on which the plain-ered an issue; that argument will be y-and-bye to apply to the cases of al for contempt, but it has no place nsideration immediately before me.

, it is said that the jurisdiction of se must be exclusive, because it pro-ot by the Common Law, of which e are cognizant, but by a different party law, of which we are wholly

I cannot think that this argu-entitled to much weight. It is every actice with us to decide cases which on the laws of foreign countries, or administered in courts of peculiar ion in this country; of these we judicial knowledge, but we acquire ssary knowledge by evidence. And denied that where in a cause the of privilege arises incidentally, this ust take notice of it and inquire into ence and extent; what, therefore, it in some cases where the same diffi-ists, there can be no moral impossi-a that account of its doing in all.

objection, however, leads me to ob-hat cases of privilege, so called, en arise, where the question will not ly whether the privilege does exist, ther the claim made can be reduced nder any true definition of privilege.
 ge, if it be any thing but the mere tion of the present will of the body
 g it, must be capable of some general efinition, however it may vary in in different bodies. No lawyer, I now supports the doctrine of Black-hat the dignity of the Houses, and ndependence, are in a great measure

 ed by keeping their privileges inde-
 But of privilege in the general,
 st be competent to form some opinion,
 e we have from time to time to deal or own privileges.

Let me suppose, by way of illustration, an extreme case: the House of Commons resolves, that any one wearing a dress of a particular manufacture is guilty of a breach of privilege, and orders the arrest of such persons by the constable of the parish; an arrest is made, and action brought; to which the order of the House is pleaded as a justification. The Attorney-General has said, that it is always a question of privilege when it is a question whether the House has power to order the act complained of to be done, and that this question arises directly whenever it appears by the record that the action is for that which the House has ordered to be done. In such a case as the one supposed, the plaintiff's counsel would insist on the distinction between power and privilege; and no lawyer can seriously doubt that it exists; but the argument confounds them, and forbids us to inquire in any particular case whether it ranges under the one or the other. I can find no principle which sanctions this.

His Lordship then proceeded to examine a few of the very numerous authorities cited on this question, and observed that it did not appear to him at all necessary to go through many; for whatever might be the weight of instances of acquiescence by individuals in the acts of the House of Commons, and, generally speaking, his Lordship considered it to be little or none, it is not so between the House of Commons and the Courts of Judicature. The House has, for centuries, been feelingly alive upon questions of privilege, and for centuries it has been the most powerful body in the state; if, therefore, he found, in several well-considered causes, the courts disdaining to be bound by the resolutions of the House as to their privileges, and actually adjudicating upon them without any or only with ineffectual remonstrance, he could but think such instances entitled to the greatest respect, and to be of quite sufficient force to establish a proposition which in itself is so consonant to reason

His Lordship added, he knew it would be said, that in many of the cases alluded to, the question of privilege has arisen accidentally only, and that in such ex necessitate, the courts have interfered. In what sense "incidentally" is here used, has been often asked, and never as yet quite satisfactorily answered; in what sense a greater necessity exists in the one case than the other has not been made out. The cases of habeas corpus are generally put as instances, where the question arises directly; let me suppose the return to state a commitment by the Speaker under a resolution of the House, ordering the party to capital punishment for a larceny committed,—it will hardly be said, that a stronger case of necessity to interfere could be supposed, and yet it must be admitted, on the other hand, that the question of privilege or power, between which the argument for the defendants make no difference, would arise directly. A case, therefore, may be supposed, in which it would be necessary to interfere, even where the so doing would be a direct adjudication upon the act of the House. It would seem, then, that some other test must be applied to ascertain in what sense it is true that the House can alone declare and adjudicate upon its own privileges. With these observations his Lordship said—

"I venture with great diffidence to submit the view which I have taken on these embarrassing questions, not as claiming the suspicious merit of novelty, but as one which will, at least, remove all difficulties in theory, and be found, I believe, not inconsistent with the general course of the authorities. I say general course; for during so long a series, carried through times so differing in political bias, and between such parties as either House of Parliament on the one side, and the courts of law, individual judges, or litigant suitors on the other, it would be quite idle to expect that any one uniform principle should be found to have invariably prevailed. In the first place, I apprehend that the question of privilege arises directly whenever the House has adjudicated upon the very fact between the parties, and there only; wherever this appears, and the case may be one of privilege, no Court ought to inquire whether the House has adjudicated properly or not; a court of Law, I conceive must take notice of the distinction between privilege and power; and where the act has not been done within the House (for of an act there done can any tribunal, in my opinion, take cognizance, but the House itself) and is clearly of a nature transcending the legal limits of privilege, it will proceed against the doer as a transgressor of the law."

PROBLEM XIX. VOL. III.

TERMS OF YEARS TO ATTEND THE INHERITANCE.

What is the nature of a Term to attend the Inheritance?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM IX.

VOL. 3.

LEGACIES.

Under what circumstances is a legacy regarded as a satisfaction of a debt?

There are two principal circumstances under which the devise of a legacy is regarded as in satisfaction of a debt, but the intention of the testator is the principal criterion, and if this can be clearly ascertained, no circumstances will be regarded in opposition to such intention.

Those two circumstances are,

First,—If a person bequeaths a legacy of money, being at the time of the bequest indebted to the legatee in a less sum than the legacy, the legacy is generally speaking and unless circumstances, as before stated, be shewn to prove a contrary intention of the testator, interpreted to be a satisfaction of the debt, and the legatee would not be led to be paid both. (3 Ves. 564.)

And, — If the legacy devised be only to the debt the same construction be put on it, namely, that it was a satisfaction of the debt. (a)

It may be taken as general rules, and fully acknowledged to be law: yet Courts lean very much to create exceptions of it, and eagerly lay hold of any circumstances in a new case which are at all different from those already established, and, in the least degree, authorise them to depart from the established rules; saying, that though acknowledged as a policy of such rules, which often the generous acts of a testator bequeathed happened to be indebted to the testator's bounty at the time of making the bequest, is somewhat doubted.

It does not, perhaps, be trespassing far out of the problem, by just here stating a few of the circumstances which the Courts have laid hold of, to form exceptions to the general rule; thus, where there is an expression in the Will to pay debts; (b) where the subject of the gift is land (2 P. W. 614.) the legacy given being on a continuing trust, not being supposed that the testator intended an uncertain recompense in lieu of a certain demand, (2 Salk. 508) where the legacy is made payable not at the testator's death but at a future day, (2 Atk. 300. 2 P. W. 614.) that the debt was upon an opening account, so that it might not be known to the testator whether he did owe the correspondent has shewn what is the strict rule in Falbot v. Duke of Shrewsbury, Prec. Cha. 10. Wood, 2 P. Wms. 232.; Fowler v. Fowler, 1 P. Wms. 353.; Reech v. Kennegal, 1 Vis. 126.; Case, 1 P. Wms. 410. n. 1.—see Crompton v. Crompton, 1 P. Wms. 555. It is however merely a rule of construction.—Ed.

Concey's Case, ante Richardson v. Greese, 3 B. & C. 428. — Ed.

any money to the legatee or not, (Rawlin's v. Powell, 1 P. W. 297,) if the debt were contracted after the making of the Will in which the legacy is given (3 P. W. 353); nor is a legacy considered to be in satisfaction of a covenant unless it be equally beneficial in amount, certainty, and time of enjoyment with the thing contracted for. (2 P. W. 614.) These cases are now interwoven with, and form modifications of, the rules on the subject of this Problem above stated.

As to shewing the intentions of the testator, hinted at above as riding over all rules, parol declarations by him have been in some cases admitted in evidence to repel the presumption of the satisfaction of a debt by the bequest of a legacy of greater amount, even where such declarations were made after the making of the Will, and even where the expressions of the Will afforded an inference in favour of the presumption. (Wallace v. Pomfret, 11 Ves. p. 542.)

If the legacy be less than the debt it has been held not to go in discharge nor even in diminution of it. (c) But in all cases where there is a deficiency of assets, the legacy is to be taken, pro tanto, in satisfaction of the debt. (Tollers Exors. 337. 338. 4th Ed.)

W. M.

Law Reports.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT—Feb. 27.

RATCLIFFE v. DICKENS.

PARTNERS.—Right of a Partner under the Copartnership Deed to dissolve the Copartnership.

Mr. Jacob moved to dissolve an injunction granted ex parte restraining the defendant from entering into any contract or negotiating any bills in the name of the partnership which formerly subsisted between the plaintiff and the defendant, from selling any of the partnership stock, or doing any act by which the firm might become liable. The partnership was entered into in the year 1836, between John and Cleophas Ratcliffe and Thomas Dickens, to carry on the trade of manufacturers of broad silk for a term of ten years, and the business had ever since been conducted in Wood-street, up to the end of last year, when the unprosperous state of the concern induced the Messrs. Ratcliffe to give notice to the defendant to dissolve it. The defendant had, nevertheless, continued to act as though the partnership was still subsisting, and on allegations that he had, since the date of the notice, received monies on behalf of the partnership which he had applied to his own use, and sold goods belonging to the firm without rendering any account until long after it was discovered by the plaintiffs, and he was aware they were acquainted with the fact, the injunction now sought to be dissolved was granted. The articles of partnership contained a provision that a general account of the stock and affairs of the partnership should be taken every half-year, which was to be written in three books, and subscribed by each partner within a month after the time appointed for taking the accounts, and each partner was to be bound by such account. If it appeared that the gains of the partnership in respect of any successive half-year should be insufficient to pay the expenses and loss of the concern, then it was to be lawful for either of the partners to dissolve the partnership at the expiration of one month after giving notice for that purpose. On taking the midsummer account in 1839, a deficiency appeared of £83., and on the subsequent half-year a deficiency of £2,655. after paying all expenses; and the plaintiffs accordingly gave notice, on the 4th of January last, to the defendant to dissolve the partnership at the end of one month. The defendant now contended that the accounts had been improperly taken, that the month's notice had not transpired when the injunction was obtained, and that the charges of misconduct and misappropriation of the partnership property were untrue, and would not have been thought of but for the purpose of carrying into effect the object of the plaintiffs in dissolving the partnership.

(c) Cranmer's Case, 2 Salk. 508.; Hawes v. Warner, 2 Vern. 478.; Eastwood v. Vinke, 2 P. Wms. 616.; Minaul v. Sazarine, Mos. 295.—Ed.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, he was of opinion, on the substance of the case, the legal right to determine the partnership (setting motives aside, which had nothing to do with the case) did arise, and had been properly exercised; and that on the 4th of February the partnership ceased to exist. He also thought the defendant had not acted consistently with the duties of a partner, who had agreed, by the articles of partnership, to keep and render true and faithful accounts, and that therefore the motion to dissolve the injunction must be refused with costs.

QUEEN'S BENCH.—Dec. 23.

HARVEY v. NORTON.

(Continued from page 281.)

Sir W. Follett addressed the jury for the defendant. He regretted, as much as his friend the Attorney-General could do, the necessity of this inquiry; but he thought the jury must have observed that it was not the sum of £49. 11s. that was now in question, but that they were now to decide whether Mr. Norton should be held liable for the claims of different tradesmen for any expenses that his wife might think proper to incur. They had heard the answer made by Mr. Norton when this account was presented to him, "It is quite impossible for me to pay it. I have already paid so many other accounts, and I cannot settle it; I must send it to my attorney and ask him whether in point of law I am liable or not." It was upon the advice of counsel that he was not liable to this demand that Mr. Norton had determined to resist the present action. He did not wish to hurt the feelings of any one above all, those of the lady on whose account the present proceedings had been originated; but he must say that this case came before them under very extraordinary circumstances. A bill had been made out in the first instance to Mr. Norton for the whole amount of £92. Afterwards furniture for part of the rooms was taken out for Mr. Sheridan and paid by him; the other half was cut out and debited by Mrs. Norton. Upon the evidence before them, he had no hesitation in saying that Mr. Sheridan had most distinctly taken the house, occupied it with Mrs. Norton, and let it furnished. They were then to determine the very important question whether Mr. Norton was liable for debts incurred in furnishing a house taken, as far as appeared, by Mr. Sheridan, let by him, and the rent going into his pocket. There was the house let furnished, with the very furniture they were seeking to make him accountable for. Mrs. Norton was now living separate from her husband with his consent. Under these circumstances, if it had been proved that his wife had not received sufficient to supply her with the necessaries of life, Mr. Norton would be liable to the expense of those necessaries, by whomsoever supplied, which she might require during the time of her separation. But she had been living, first with her sister, subsequently with her uncle. The demand made to-day was not that which was usually made in a court of justice on a wife's behalf: it was for the furniture of a house occupied by Mr. Sheridan, in which he was living with Mr. Norton. If the house were really in the occupation of Mrs. Norton, why was not Mr. Norton the landlord, who let it, or Sir P. Ross, &c.

in it, called before them; one to tell them it was not Mr. Sheridan who took the house, and the other to say that it was not Mr. Sheridan to whom the rent was paid? Why, nobody would have taken a house to a married lady under Mrs. Norton's circumstances, knowing that neither the husband nor the wife could be sued for the rent. It is to say that this proceeding bore upon it the appearance of something like connivance between the parties, if he might use that term. Had it been proved that Mr. Sheridan was in the house and had complete occupation of the whole of it, that Mrs. Norton was constantly sitting in it, and that what was called her exclusive use of part of the house made no difference whatever? It was not even pretended that the actual compact as to occupation had been made between the parties. That being the case, it is to say that Mr. Sheridan had no right to seek to live at Mr. Norton's expense, and to have a house, of which the furniture was paid for with Mr. Norton's money. Further, it would contend, that nothing was more reasonable than to hold the law strict upon the heads of husbands for goods supplied to their wives while living apart from each other. The law is that the wife was to be allowed to charge her husband with those things which were absolutely necessary for her sustenance, and that her rights in some degree depend on the rank and condition of the parties. Now, there was no evidence that Mr. Norton possessed any income beyond his salary of £800. a-year as police magistrate. It was a demand which, if he was adjudged liable for it, would in its consequences swallow up his means. If he were liable for the furniture, he was also liable for the rent, which they had stated at £200. Clearly Mrs. Norton could not charge her husband with anything more than a fair share of his income, payable to her day, or year to year. What right could she have to fit up a house on a scale which, if it was to be economical, would cost £1,000.? At to its being an economical mode of proceeding to take possession of a furnished house, it might as well be pretended that it was an economical mode of proceeding to purchase the fee-simple of the property, as much as it would cost less in the end than paying rent from year to year; so that, if that argument was to go for anything, Mr. Norton might be saddled with untold expenses. The law presumed that such a separation between the defendant and his wife was temporary; they might come together again at any time, and Mrs. Norton had it in her power to compel a renewal of their union, notwithstanding the separation being assigned. It was therefore, that a claim on account of the hire of a house for the wife could not be maintained. He would only add, with reference to the appearance of his client before them to-day, that it was most unpleasant for Mr. Norton to be again dragged before the public in this way; but his client had only one alternative—he must defend this action, or he must be ruined. He had reluctantly said, “I will come into Court, and trust to a British jury to do me justice.”

Lord DENMAN said, in this case it was clearly proved that it was by the wish of the husband that his wife lived apart from him; there was no deed of settlement which might supersede the necessity of paying for the necessaries with which he was bound to supply his wife. But then came the question whether the goods which formed the subject-matter of this action could be regarded as necessaries. It was submitted that articles of furniture could not be necessaries, inasmuch as the separation was merely temporary, and might at any moment be terminated. Undoubtedly, separation of this kind must be viewed in that light, but it appeared to him that under the circumstances of this case, the defendant having desired his wife to leave the house, and refused her admittance when she came back, it would be unreasonable to suppose that she would be likely to return to her husband in a very short time, and there must be a reference to this probability by the jury when they determined whether the articles supplied in this case were to be looked upon as necessaries. A wife must be clothed by her husband as well as fed, and that in a manner agreeable to their station in life, and there did not seem to be any reason why many articles of furniture ought not to be supplied by him to her in the same way; but whether articles of rich and splendid furniture, purchased for a house of such a kind as that of which they now heard, could be considered as necessaries, was matter for the jury to determine. As to the question of occupation, it was impossible not to see that Mr. Sheridan was the owner of the house. Articles were supplied to him for the purpose of furnishing it, and it appeared very probable that he was now receiving the rent of it. He did not see why a person in Mr. Sheridan's place might not put forward a fair claim on the husband, having received the wife, and given her comfortable apartments; but it would be for the jury to say, when a house was taken by the lady's near relation, who also received rent for it, whether it should be taken to be his, and the furniture to be supplied to him or Mrs. Norton. He would only add one more observation. They were left very much in the dark as to the means which Mr. Norton possessed of maintaining his wife, and as to what might be considered a reasonable scale of expenditure under the circumstance of the parties. This was a matter wholly for the consideration of the jury. Having excluded his wife without assigning any reason, Mr. Norton was prima facie liable, but he was liable only for necessities furnished to her bond fide, for the purpose of maintaining her in a reasonable and decent manner, according to her station in life.

The Jury, without retiring, found a verdict for the defendant.

(Sittings in Banco.)

Mr. Swann moved for a rule for a new trial on the ground of misdirection by the Judge. He also contended there was no evidence that the goods were supplied on the credit of Mr. Sheridan, Mrs. Norton's uncle.

LITTLEDALE, J.—There is no fault to be found with the direction; it was hardly possible to separate the other furniture in the house from the consideration of the question, whether the articles supplied to the defendant's wife were necessities; whether the goods were supplied to, or on the credit of, the uncle, was a question for the jury.

COLERIDGE, J.—Two points on which the verdict turned were left to the jury. The cardinal point was, whether the articles in question were necessities, and I think that was rightly left to the jury. Then there was very meagre evidence of the fortune of the defendant. The second point was, whether credit was given to Mr. Sheridan, the uncle. Prima facie the wife deals for her husband; but in this case of the wife living in a state of separation from him, the circumstances of her being in her uncle's house, and the payment of part of the original bill by him were evidence that she all along dealt for and as the agent of her uncle.

Lord DENMAN was of the same opinion.

Rule refused.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD, IN-RE SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX.

(Continued from page 265.)

Then comes the case of Burdett v. Abbott, in 1810. There is not any case which ever appeared on the books that is entitled to such great weight as that, whether in respect of the great learning of the judges, or of the counsel, or of the number and frequency of the discussions in and out of Parliament, and the extraordinary caution of the judges, and the great light which must have been thrown in all possible quarters on the subject, enabling them to avail themselves of the fullest information upon it. In that case there is a passage in Lord Ellenborough's speech which is most remarkable. He says, "I am pressed with an extreme case, and I am asked whether it is possible that the House of Commons, or the other House of Parliament, should be permitted to go such a length as was supposed at the bar." His Lordship further says, "It is not decent to suppose such a case; but what occurs to me upon this subject is this—that if either House of Parliament commits for contempt without informing me upon what ground they proceeded I should not be justified in reversing that decision. If, on the other grounds, they stated such an authority as convinced me they had no right to complain of any contempt whatever, the Court will know how to do its duty." That is a plain doctrine. If they state a general contempt, this Court is bound by the statement; but if they enter into particulars, Lord Ellenborough clearly laid it down, and Mr. Justice Bayley followed him in the declaration that the judges could act on the principle which Lord Holt stated in Patey's case, that if particular facts were stated which were insufficient to support the commitment, they would order the release of the party committed. But then there is this doctrine most clearly declared, that in case of a statement in general terms, this Court is bound by it. The subsequent case of Sir J. Hobhouse was to the same effect. I feel bound to say, with respect to ourselves, that there is one of us, who expressed our opinion on the last occasion of "Stockdale v. Hansard," who did not intimate the same opinion, though the state of that case did not require us fully to declare it. Passages of my judgment in that case have been referred to in argument, as tending to show that if, on the committal for contempt, there should be shown to us some cause clearly insufficient and illegal, such as fishing in the pool of a member, or other things of that description, such statement would be open to revision. That doctrine I admit to have asserted, but that does not in the least contradict the general proposition. Reference has been made to the case of Lord Shaftesbury on this subject, but when it is said that that case is the foundation of all the rest, and that the judges in subsequent cases were controlled in their opinion by that case, I must say I think that statement is erroneous. Every court, of course, refers to the latest decision, but there is something in the nature of the Houses of Parliament which does not invest them with this power, and the Shaftesbury case happened to be the most recent instance in which it was exercised, and to that case, therefore, reference was frequently made. Instances have been properly brought before us in argument of acts of illegality committed by the Crown which the judges were bound to set aside; and if they had not done so they would have committed a high offence towards the country, and would have most justly forfeited their reputation. But there are cases in which the Crown has rights where those rights cannot be enforced by law. The prerogative of the Crown is a part of the law, and the

has its recognized officers, who must its rights. Those rights are therefore ined by law. A deliberative assembly is in nt position. It must have the power to e its own privileges by its own means, annot exercise its own means but by hav- ource to the process for contempt. In r. Abbott, that privilege of committing empt was not pretended to be confined to Houses, but was said to belong to every n Westminster Hall, and was therefore ch the highest body in the land could sibly be deprived of. There is no doubt, such a power, they would be obstructed proceedings, and would be put down if uld not of themselves judge of the cir- ces which called it into exercise. With- ring into small discussions of a verbal whether the House of Commons is a I think that its right to commit is clear. wledge its authority, and am aware that use of Lords, when sitting on writs of m us, sit as and for the whole body, and that the functions of neither assembly n properly unless each is properly pro- n the exercise of them. There must be principles which no Court can question, re necessary for the protection of one the other. This was brought out in the gular manner by the test of the questions Lord Eldon to the judges in the House ls in the case of Burdett v. Abbott. his Lordship came to consider the case, as one where Sir Francis Burdett had e Speaker for sending him to prison on a committing him for contempt, his Lord- it the question as to the right of the of Common Pleas to make such a com- and supposing that no less reason was on the face of it, he asked whether this ould inquire into such a committal; and answer of all the judges was, that such a ould not be done; and Lord Eldon, with currence of Lord Erskine, and without a ent voice raised in the House of Lords, t case on the analogy between the House ourt of Westminster Hall, and decided that analogy. We must presume that er any Court, and much more either of Parliament, takes on itself solemnly, der the responsibility of great local autho- declare to be a contempt, that that is con-

Some affidavits have been produced in se, and it has been intimated that they used because this is not a criminal case. ot think that that is the meaning of the eorge III. Any person complaining of imprisoned has always brought his case own whether he was lawfully or unlaw- nprisoned. If it is shown on the face of urn to be unlawful, there is an end of all before us by affidavit: and the return to the writ argument in favour of the discharge. The pro- duction of a good warrant makes a complete end of this case. We are not at liberty to enter into the question whether there is a real ground of contempt, for that would give us the power which I have already denied that we possess. We are not justified in entering into the sup- posed motives, and speculating as to the proba- ble reasons of the House of Commons in com- ing to such a conclusion. We find such a con- clusion distinctly expressed, and we must be bound by it. Indeed, I thought that according to the language of the cases, and especially that of the judge, in Burdett v. Abbott, it would be unseemly and indecent to suspect the House of Commons of suppressing any facts, the statement of which would tend to show a Court of Law that a subject had been improperly deprived of his liberty, and if in violent times this should ever appear to be the course pursued by the House of Commons, I am sure that it would be a course which, upon reflection, that House would extremely regret, considering it both as unwise and unjust. It would be offensive to the House to think that merely for the sake of avoid- ing a disclosure such as would give a subject his freedom, the House had avoided stating the reasons of committal, desiring to take a poor advantage of a party, and wrongful to keep this Court in the dark. It would be monstrous to consider that such could be the case under the advice of men of great ability and learning; and I for one, will not readily presume such to be the case. I cannot suppose that injustice would first be committed, and then that the House would say—"We will make an insufficient state- ment of facts in order to keep the Court in the dark." I know that in Bushell's case, the Re- corder Jefferies might have had reason to adopt such a line of conduct, but I will not believe it has been or will be again adopted. This, how- ever, has been supposed in the course of the argument, but I cannot think that such will ever be the course of a great public body amena- ble to public opinion. In conclusion, I must say, that I do not see any ground on which these gentlemen should be released from their impri- sonment. According to all these authorities, the return seems to me to be sufficient; and I am bound by the law, which alone I can look at, and by which I am required to declare that the return is sufficient, and the warrant set out on the face is good.

Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE, Mr. Justice WIL- LIAMS, and Mr. Justice COLERIDGE, severally expressed a strong and positive opinion as to the propriety and correct decision which the bench had come to in the case of Stockdale v. Han-

The Sheriffs were remanded back into the custody of the Serjeant-at-arms.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

Feb. 20.

MUDDLE v. STRIDE AND ANOTHER.

STEAM BOAT COMPANIES—Liability of the proprietors for damage done to goods shipped on board the boats.

The plaintiff, a shop-keeper at Dover, brought this action against the defendants, who are proprietors of the Royal Adelaide steam vessel, to recover compensation for damages done to some goods sent by that vessel.

It appeared that a little previous to the fête given in August last to the Duke of Wellington, by the Cinque Ports, the plaintiff shipped on board the defendants' steamer, the Royal Adelaide, a quantity of silk dresses, shawls, &c., and which were intended for sale at the Grand Pavilion Ball. The Adelaide proceeded to her destination, but on her arrival in the harbour of Dover the usual flag was up, intimating that it would be dangerous to land. Accordingly, the Royal Adelaide put back to Margate, and left the goods intended for Dover there, which were in a few days subsequently transmitted to Dover by the Royal George steamer, of which the defendants are owners. On opening the case it was found that the goods were greatly damaged, and the colours in the silk dresses, as well as those in the shawls, were quite faded, and were altogether unsaleable, with the exception of one shawl, which was sold in its damaged state for £12. to the Duchess of Cannizzaro, but £20. would have been obtained for it had it been perfect. It was admitted that the case which contained the goods, to all appearance, was uninjured; but when it was opened a most obnoxious odour came from the goods. The loss on the whole was estimated at £20., and also the loss of not having the goods for the Pavilion Ball.

For the defendants it was contended that, if the goods were injured, they were so by the visitation of Providence; and, in point of law, being carriers, the defendants were not accountable for the perils of the seas, or the assaults of the enemies of the country.

Verdict for the plaintiff—Damages £20., but no damages for the probable profit on the sale of the goods at the Pavilion Ball.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Feb. 28.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

CONTRACTS by AGENTS—CUSTOM of MERCHANTS—Whether an Agent is justified in rescinding a Contract.

This action was brought by the plaintiffs, Messrs. Anton and Mitchell, merchants of London, to recover damages from the defendant, merchant at Hull, for a breach of contract.

The plaintiff, it appeared, being at Hull on the 15th of October, 1839, entered into a contract with the broker of the defendant for the purchase of 230 quarters of old tares, at 25s. per quarter, and it was then agreed that he should give his acceptance at two months' date for the amount, and the tares were accordingly shipped to the port of London, but no invoice or bill of lading was sent, until it first was ascertained that the plaintiff, who was a stranger at Hull, and wholly unknown to the defendant, was a responsible person. The defendant caused inquiries to be made to that effect in London, and the result was that he declined to accept the plaintiff's bill for the amount of the goods, but offered to let him have them at two and a half per cent. for cash payment. The plaintiff refused to accede to this proposal, on the ground that the defendant was bound to comply with the contract entered into by the broker on his behalf, but he consented to cancel the agreement if the defendant would allow him 1s. per quarter on the tares, which, being refused, the action was brought for the breach of contract.

Evidence for plaintiff proved that had the agreement been fulfilled, he would have derived a profit from his bargain, inasmuch as tares had risen in the corn market, in proof of which it was shown that the tares in question were sold, on account of the defendant, for 31s. per quarter, three days after the alleged contract was broken.

Evidence for the defendant proved that, according to a practice existing at Hull, merchants who carried on business there were not bound to agree to any contract which brokers might make on their behalf, unless their principals were satisfied that the parties to whom their goods were sold for credit were respectable and trustworthy; and, in this instance, without at all impugning the solvency of the plaintiff, it was deemed advisable not to accept his bill, but to deal with him for cash only.

TINDAL, C. J. left it to the jury to say, first, whether, although the contract was made by the agent of the defendant, the latter was justified in rescinding it, according to the custom of merchants at Hull; and, secondly, whether the defendant had, within a fair and reasonable time, declared his intention not to abide by the act of his agent. But if the jury should think that the defendant had no right to break the contract, the plaintiff would in that case be entitled to a verdict, with such amount of damages as they should consider he had sustained by the rescinding of the agreement.

Verdict for the defendant.

RT OF EXCHEQUER.—Jan. 22.

Sittings in Banco.

MASON v. KIDDLE.

IT.—As to the due execution of a writ under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110.

necessary in all cases that the party at-be some one NOT the PLAINTIFF'S AT-
, and to be expressly named by the nt. (a)

is case the defendant had proposed to plaintiff a Cognovit for the debt and an action brought against him, and had the Plaintiff's Attorney as his (the nt's) Attorney to satisfy the Statute 1 & 2 110. The defendant then signed the t, and the Plaintiff's Attorney wit-describing himself as the Defendant's
y.

Busby had obtained a Rule to set aside novit.

Godson now shewed cause against the nd contended, that as the attorney had viously employed for, and paid by, the nt, to act for him, and named at the time the Cognovit on his behalf, the proof the statute had been fully complied

ABINGER, C. B. said, It is clear that ney at Shaftesbury, charged in his bill ndon Agent with all that was done by the transaction. It certainly was his have informed the defendant that in order y the statute, the presence of some other y would be requisite.

ERSON, B.—The original rule on this sub-ich required the Warrant of Attorney to uted in the presence of an Attorney, was be sufficiently complied with by executing e presence of the Attorney for the plain-Afterwards, however, another rule was requiring the attesting Attorney to be ressly named by the defendant. Then e Act of Parliament which embodies the ce of both the rules in a law, and conly rendering it necessary in all cases e party attesting be some one not the ff's Attorney, and to be expressly named defendant. Were we not to adhere to instruction, a wide door would be open to

An Attorney attesting a Cognovit under umstances here detailed is not the person plated by the statute, and this rule must re be made absolute.

(a) See ante Vol. 1. pp. 151. 234.

Feb. 20.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

SAMUEL v. PILE.

ATTORNIES' LIABILITIES for NEGLIGENCE.

Writ of Summons—Improper Service.

The defendant is an attorney, and the action was brought against him by his client the plaintiff, to recover the amount of certain costs, which it was alleged the plaintiff had been obliged to pay in consequence of the wrong service of a writ of summons.

Mr. Gray, for the plaintiff, stated that the defendant, had been employed by the plaintiff to commence an action at his suit against a person, in pursuance of which he sued out a writ of summons directed to the Sheriff of Middlesex, but which was served upon the defendant in the action in Bishopsgate-street, in the City. This service being incorrect, the writ of summons was set aside by a judge's order, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff. The plaintiff having, however, neglected to pay the costs, an attachment was issued against him, the costs of which, together with those of the writ of summons, amounted to £10. 14s. 8d., which the plaintiff paid, and it was to recover this sum that the present action was brought.

Lord ABINGER told the jury the plaintiff was entitled to recover the costs of the writ of summons where it had been served beyond the proper limits. The law allowed it to be served within 100 yards from the bounds of the county into which it was directed, but not beyond that distance. The plaintiff was, however, not entitled to recover the costs of the attachment, because, when he found that the costs of the writ of summons had not been paid by the attorney, he ought to have paid them himself.

Verdict for the plaintiff—£2. 14s.

Sittings in Banco.

Special Paper.

Feb. 22.

GALWAY v. ROSE.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE—PRACTICE—PLEADING.

—Whether a refusal to accept, and a refusal to pay, are distinct causes of action, and as such can be included in one count.

This action was against the drawer of a bill of exchange, wherein the declaration alleged that the defendant made his bill of exchange, and directed it to Messrs. ———, by whom it was dishonoured on being presented for acceptance, whereupon it was presented for non-acceptance,
of which premises the defendant had notice.
The declaration then went on to say further, that the said bill being still unpaid, was afterwards, when it became due, presented to Messrs. — for payment, but that they wholly declined to pay it, of which premises the said defendant then had due notice. Besides this there was the usual count on an account stated, with a general allegation that the defendant in consideration of the premises respectively promised the plaintiff to pay him the said several monies respectively on request, with a general breach and special damage.

To this the defendant demurred, assigning for cause that the declaration was double, inasmuch as it alleged two distinct dishonourers of the bill, either of which would alone give him a good cause of action.

Mr. Mellor, in support of the demurrer, argued that the refusal to accept, and the refusal to pay, both of which were alleged in the declaration, were distinct causes of action, and as such could not be included in one count, as a declaration must not allege a distinct demand by two several and perfect causes of action, either of which, if proved, would be enough for his purpose. When a bill is once dishonoured, it is so for all purposes, and the plaintiff had a right of action in the event of either taking place. This declaration is bad therefore for duplicity, and if not, it would be difficult to say what is duplicity in pleading.

Mr. Butt, for the plaintiff, contended that the precedents were in exact conformity with the form of this declaration, and cited "Chitty on Pleading" in support of his position. The fact was, these were not distinct causes of action, but distinct considerations for the promise of the defendant, any number of which might be included in one count. If, however, the Court should be of opinion that this objection was a good one to the declaration on the bill, treated as one count only, then the plaintiff would submit that there were two counts, each containing a distinct consideration or cause of action, in which case the plaintiff must succeed, as the demurrer was not pointed at such a state of things. There was no necessity to begin a new count with the word "whereas," and though informal, yet it was apprehended that the use of the words "several" and "respectively" in the general promise and breach would fully bear out the position that the declaration might be taken to contain two counts.

The COURT said, it might either be that this was one single count, or two counts, though informally pleaded. In either view the declaration is good. If it be only one count, then it is good, as alleging two distinct but executed considerations for one cause of action, whereas if it be divisible into two counts, in that case the demurrer does not touch their defects.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

COPYHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT BILL.

We have been favoured by Lord BROUGHAM and VAUX with a copy of his Lordship's Bill for the ENFRANCHISEMENT OF LANDS OF COPYHOLD AND CUSTOMARY TENURE, AND OTHER LANDS SUBJECT TO MANORIAL RIGHTS, by which we are enabled to present to our readers the following ANALYSIS.

Preamble, and Appointment of Commissioners.

Sect. 1. After reciting that it is expedient to provide for the gradual and entire enfranchisement of lands of copyhold and customary tenure, and other lands subject to manorial rights, on such a basis as shall be equitable towards the interest of all parties effected, it is enacted, That "the Tithe Commissioners for England and Wales" for the time being, shall be the commissioners for carrying the act into execution; and that should the act not be carried into execution before tithe commissioners cease to act, or if they shall decline to act, other commissioners may be appointed, &c. with power to supply vacancies.

2. Style of Commissioners, Seal, &c.

Enacts that the commissioners shall be styled "The Copyhold Enfranchisement Commissioners," and shall have their office and seal, and that instruments sealed are to be received in evidence, &c.

3. Report to Secretary of State, &c.

Commissioners to report to Secretary of State, and annual report to be laid before Parliament.

4. Assistant Commissioners, &c.

Power to appoint and remove assistant commissioners, secretary, &c.

5. No Commissioners to sit in House of Commons.

6. Operation of Act limited to Ten Years.

7. Salaries and Allowances of Commissioners.

8. To be paid out of Consolidated Fund.

9. Declaration.

Commissioners and assistant commissioners to make declaration before acting.

10. Commissioners may delegate Powers.

11. Manors and Lands vested in Crown.

Provision is made for cases in which manors or lands are vested in the Crown generally or in right of Duchies of Lancaster or Cornwall.

12. Disabilities of Lords or Tenants provided for.

13. Power to appoint Attorney.

An attorney may be appointed, and at the first

g the power, or a copy, shall be delivered Chairman.

Power to call a Meeting, &c.

one or more of the lords or tenants, interest shall not be less than one-fourth annual value of manor or lands, may call a meeting of the lords and tenants (by notice to be given twenty-one days before the meeting on the outer door of church of parish within the limits of which the manor or greater part in interest extends, or on door or conspicuous part of house or building where courts are usually held and twice advertised in some newspaper, or in each of two newspapers generally circulated in the county), for the purpose of making an agreement for the general enfranchisement of the lands holden of such manor; and every lord or tenant present at such meeting shall bear his expence of attendance; and the lords and tenants present at such meeting whose interest in the manor and lands shall not be less than a majority of the tenants in number, and whose interest in the manor and lands shall not be less than two-thirds of the annual value thereof, may make and execute an agreement for the enfranchisement of the lands holden of the manor, to charge thereof from all manorial rights, to which the lands are subject; and if so agreed between such lords and tenants, the enfranchisement may be made to extend to mines and minerals but otherwise shall not affect such rights.

Terms on which Agreement may be an agreement may be entered into for enfranchisement from the Lord's rights on payment of a sum certain for such entire enfranchisement, or a sum certain for enfranchisement of a certain number of years purchase for the other rents, a sum certain for rights in and other manorial rights as aforesaid; or the lands for enfranchisement may be subject to a rent or increase to such an amount per acre as shall be agreed on; and such agreement shall fix the amount of the steward's fees to be awarded by the commissioners: every tenant for any species of manorial right shall concur by the concurrence of two thirds in a majority in number and two thirds in interest of persons

*A provisional Agreement may be made.
Proportional Interest how to be com-*

Power to adjourn Meetings, but notice must be once advertised.

Agreement to bear date the day on which signature attached to same, or minutes and to be in such form as the commissioners shall from time to time direct.

20. Commissioners to frame and circulate Forms.

21. Commissioners or Assistant Commissioners may attend Meetings, and advise Terms of Agreement.

22. Suits and Differences may be referred to Arbitration.

23. Commissioners to require Consents of Ecclesiastical Corporations, or other Bodies, whose Interests appear to be affected, to be obtained by Agreement.

24. Agreement to be confirmed by Commissioners.

25. Appointment of Valuers.

At meeting, or adjourned meeting valuers, to be appointed to ascertain annual value of lands to be enfranchised, as follows: (i. e.) if enfranchisement is in consideration of aggregate fixed sum payable to the lord, the tenants to appoint; and if majority in number and value do not agree, then two or other even number to be appointed, half by number and half by value; and when enfranchisement not in consideration of fixed sum, half the valuers to be appointed by the lord, and half by the tenants.

26. Valuers to apply to the Commissioner for Instructions, and are then to proceed to ascertain value of lands, and make out and send to office of commissioners such valuation, with power to appoint umpires.

27. Power to enter Lands, &c. Valuers and umpires to make declaration before acting.

28. Steward to furnish Information, for the purpose of enabling valuers to make valuation, and otherwise to facilitate enfranchisements under the Act; the steward shall, on request by valuers or chairman of meeting, make a correct statement in writing of—

The tenants on the manor:

Description of their lands:

The amount of assessment to poor rate:

Amount received for heriots in respect of each tenant, for three times previous:

And any other information which the commissioners shall direct:

Shall produce same for inspection at the meetings, and allow extracts to be taken, and upon request by valuers, deliver to them a copy of such schedule, or the parts which they may require for such statements and extracts; the steward to receive such sum as shall be agreed on, and four-pence for seventy-two words, for copies or extracts.

The steward shall also within three calendar months, or such time as the commissioners shall fix, make out and send to them a schedule of—

The names of the several tenants of the manor:

To which class belonging:

(To be continued.)

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

Sir,—Being parties greatly interested in the query which we take the liberty of proposing to your consideration, we earnestly hope you will forgive the liberty we take in stating our case for the opinion of yourself or some of your learned correspondents.

“We are twins, and were born on the 15th day of June, 1819. Our Father, a widower, is possessed of some real property, and being now far advanced in years, and incapable from mental imbecility of making a Will, we, his only children, are anxious under our peculiar circumstances, to know 1st. On the death of our parent to what interest in the real property we shall respectively be entitled? and 2nd. Supposing the one who is considered the elder (which is disputed), to take possession of the said real property, what remedy will the other possess to bar him from so doing?”

Knowing from the constant perusal of your valuable work, your extreme affability to all your correspondents, we are emboldened to take the liberty of thus troubling you,

Remaining Sir,

Your obedient servants,

Δίδυμοι.

It has been greatly disputed which of two twins is to be esteemed the elder? The faculty of Montpelier gave it, that the latter born is to be reputed the elder, because first conceived: but by all the laws which now obtain, the first born enjoys the privilege of seniority; and the custom is confirmed by the Scripture instance of Esau and Jacob. But if two twins be born so intertwined, that one cannot distinguish which of the two appeared first, it should seem that neither the one, nor the other, can pretend to the right of primogeniture, which ought to remain in suspense by reason of their mutual concurrence.—EDITOR.

HILARY TERM, 1840.

Barristers admitted to the dignity of the Coif
as SERGEANTS-AT-LAW—

W. F. Channell.

J. Halcomb.

James Manning.

William Shee.

D. C. Wrangham.

They gave rings with the motto—

“Hones nomenque manebunt.”

Barristers appointed QUEEN'S COUNSEL—

Turner.

R. Bethell.

Gentlemen called to the BAR—

LINCOLN'S INN.

Henry Vaughan.

Edward Richard Golightly.

Timothy Coleman Johnson.

Frederick Prideaux.

William Adam Loch.

Travers Twiss.

Charles Jasper Selwyn.

Frederic Hill.

John Lucena Ross Kittle.

Gordon Whitbread.

Thomas Plumtre Methuen.

William Stevens Richardson.

Edward Thornton.

INNER TEMPLE.

George Alexander Hoskins.

John Kirkpatrick.

James Gordon Hay.

John Coke Fowler.

MIDDLE TEMPLE.

Frederick Albert Winsor.

James Little.

William Frederic Lewis.

George Whitlock Nicholl.

William Faulknor Browell.

Charles Swaine Wright.

Richard Thomas Maddison.

George Arthur Lister.

George John Holmes.

Samuel Barrow.

Edmund Sawyer.

Charles Zachary Macaulay.

GRAY'S INN.

George Tyler.

ERRATA.

Vol. 3, p. 287, Notice to Correspondents, RICHARDSON, for “when can we send for the papers,” read “where.”

Vol. 2, p. 122, Reports, for “Tubbs v. Morris,” read “Hebbelwhite v. McMorris.”

CIRCUITS

OF THE

COMMISSIONERS FOR THE RELIEF OF INSOLVENT DEBTORS.

| 340.      | Home Circuit.                                   | Southern Circuit.                      | Northern Circuit.                     | Midland Circuit.                    |
|-----------|-------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| Circuits. | H. B. Reynolds,Esq., ChiefCommissioner. | J. G. Harris,Esq.Commissioner. | T. B. Bowen,Esq.Commissioner. | W. J. Law,Esq.Commissioner. |
| Feb. 12   | .                                               | .                                      | Oakham . .                            |                                     |
| . 14      | .                                               | .                                      | Sheffield . .                         |                                     |
| . 17      | .                                               | .                                      | Wakefield . .                         |                                     |
| . 22      | .                                               | .                                      | Kingston-upon-Hull . .            |                                     |
| . 24      | .                                               | .                                      | York and City                         |                                     |
| . 25      | .                                               | Reading                                |                                       |                                     |
| . 27      | .                                               | Oxford . .                             | Richmond . .                          |                                     |
| . 28      | .                                               | .                                      | Durham . .                            |                                     |
| . 29      | .                                               | Worcester & City                       |                                       |                                     |
| Mar. 2    | .                                               | Presteigne .                           | Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Town      |                                     |
| . 3       | .                                               | Hereford . .                           |                                       |                                     |
| . 5       | .                                               | Monmouth . .                           | Carlisle . .                          | Chelmsford                          |
| . 6       | Horsham . .                                     | .                                      | .                                     | Colchester                          |
| . 7       | .                                               | Brecon . .                             | Appleby . .                           | Ipswich                             |
| . 9       | .                                               | .                                      | Kendal . .                            | Yarmouth                            |
| . 10      | .                                               | Cardigan . .                           | Lancaster . .                         | Norwich & City .                    |
| . 12      | .                                               | Haverfordwestand Town . .          | .                                     | Lynn                                |
| . 13      | Canterbury . .                                  | Carmarthen andBorough              | . . . . .                             | Bury St. Edmunds                    |
| . 14      | Dover . .                                       | .                                      | .                                     | Cambridge                           |
| . 16      | .                                               | Swansea . .                            | .                                     | Huntingdon                          |
| ie day    | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Peterborough                        |
| . 17      | Maidstone . .                                   | .                                      | Preston . .                           |                                     |
| ay . 18   | .                                               | Cardiff. . .                           | Liverpool . .                         | Warwick                             |
| . 20      | .                                               | Gloucester & City                      | Chester and City                      | Birmingham                          |
| . 21      | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Coventry                            |
| . 23      | .                                               | Bristol . .                            | Mold . .                              | Derby                               |
| . 24      | .                                               | .                                      | Ruthin . .                            | Nottingh.&Town                      |
| ay . 25   | .                                               | Bath . .                               |                                       |                                     |
| . 26      | .                                               | .                                      | Beaumaris . .                         | Lincoln & City                      |
| . 27      | .                                               | Wells . .                              | Carnarvon . .                         |                                     |
| . 28      | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Leicester                           |
| . 30      | .                                               | Exeter and City                        | Dolgelly . .                          | Lichfield                           |
| . 31      | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Stafford                            |
| l. Apr. 1 | .                                               | Plymouth . .                           | Welch Pool . .                        |                                     |
| . 2       | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Shrewsbury                          |
| . 3       | Hertford . .                                    | Bodmin . .                             | .                                     |                                     |
| . 4       | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Oldbury                             |
| . 6       | .                                               | Dorchester . .                         | .                                     |                                     |
| . 7       | .                                               | .                                      | .                                     | Bedford                             |
| lay . 8   | .                                               | Southampton . .                        | .                                     | Northampton                         |
| . 9       | .                                               | Salisbury . .                          | .                                     | Aylesbury                           |
| . 10      | .                                               | Winchester . .                         | .                                     |                                     |

TO THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE LEGAL OUIDE.

In consequence of the great mass of correspondence which the Editor of this paper now has on hand for which he has not room, and the daily increase of correspondence, it has been requested by several subscribers as well as myself that, in order to work up all such arrears and to give room to other correspondents, the Editor should publish a double number once a month, but as in consequence of the pledge he made at the commencement of the work he will not do so unless requested by a majority of the subscribers, I therefore earnestly request that you will, one and all, send a requisition to the Editor on the subject. Your early attention will oblige

Your humble servant,

R. J. T.

Devizes,

March 4, 1840.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E. A.—See the Errata.

N. R.—We are very sorry that your regard for Sixpence is so great as to wish us in the hands of her Majesty's Attorney-General—you had better go to another shop and get better served. This is a newspaper.

R. P.—We think that you incur a risk.—How can your master make the requisite affidavit of service with a clear conscience?

GULIELMUS.—We have your letter—its contents do you much credit—persevere.

SCRUTATOR.—Lord Brougham has favoured us with a copy of the Bill, or you must have been aware that in its present early stage it was not otherwise to be had. We have pleasure, therefore, in complying with your wish, which was not singular.

R. J. T.—G. A. W.—J. S.—O. L.—T. M.—H. D.—R. S.—W. T.—A Subscriber, York—S. L. F.—A Student—S. T.—all under consideration.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We have before us very many letters which we must answer by one notice. Some complain of the Clerk's lists—others thank us for their insertion. Some complain of the Questions—others require them. Some fancy the sheet of paper can be lengthened as a piece of steel wire, and consequently be made to contain an extra pennyworth. Some are liberal enough—some exclusive enough—some sufficiently thoughtless—some extremely courteous—quot homines tot sententia—and here we are in the midst of them all. We quite agree with those, who, for the sake of a better meal, abominate Master Slender in the shape of lean lists of any sort. We detest them as not suiting OUR taste. We wish this paper to be something superior to a law list, although the latter contributes in a much more substantial manner to the personal comfort of its Editor, by reason of its being a law list; than our columns of jurisprudence give to us, and so long as our publishers inform us that the general wish appears to be for the lists, we must continue to publish them. Let each subscriber write us on the subject, and we shall then know what to do. The majority shall have their wishes complied with.

We also direct attention to the letter of our subscriber, R. J. T. (one of a great number to the same effect). We are not much disposed to increase our editorial duties. We find them already sufficiently onerous and heavy. Nevertheless, let also in this case each subscriber write his wish, (in these days of cheap postage the penny is of no great importance), and if we find the majority desirous of a double number once a month, at the price of 1s. in London, or 1s. 2d. post free in the country, we will make arrangements for its production.

Just Published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly.
Vol. IV. Part II.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING
adapted to the Present State of the Law
Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of
the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—manuring—also the law relating to MINING LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with a Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, March 7, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

[II.]

SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1840.

[No. 20.]

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

In another part of this Journal we have seen a copy of the Bill brought into the House of Commons by Lord JOHN RUSSELL on this all-exciting question, with Sir EDWARD SUGDEN's suggestions. The title is to give summary protection to persons employed in the publication of Parliamentary Papers." A contemporary writes the title ought to be, "a Bill for shutting out Courts of Justice against persons injured by libel, contained in the publications of the House of Commons, and the printers of the House," and adds,

ATTORNEY-GENERAL, who has grieved in his attempts to sustain the privilege of the House—we hope intentionally in the shame of the duty he was put upon him to think he had answered all argument by this blunt and almost unmeaning—"Has the House, then, no privilege?"

We answer, yes. It has the privilege of meeting to assist the other two Houses of the Legislature in making laws; that purpose it has all the privilege of going to and returning to its seat of legislation without let or hindrance—security before, during, and after its meetings—protection from all responsibility for what the members may say or do in the House which the people have provided for and their deliberations—the privilege of calling for all previous information necessary to the making of laws, by sending for persons and papers, as have our august Courts of Justice, and, like them, the power or privilege of imprisoning those who refuse to give, or give false information, at their bar. This is all the privilege necessary to a House of Commons for making their part of the laws, or passing them when sent from the Upper House of Legislation. And it is for this sole purpose of making laws that a House of Commons is chosen. What more privilege does it want, or can be necessary for, the complete discharge of its duty, which we again assert is simply and exclusively that of passing laws (a)?"

We think that the observations made by Sir Edward Sugden in the House upon this Bill, render any further comment from us superfluous in its present stage. We are glad to find that the Attornies of London have had a meeting upon the question, although at the eleventh hour. We have given their resolutions, and we shall be as happy to promote their views, as we at all times are ready to promote their advantage.

PROBLEM XX. VOL. III.

BANKRUPTCY.

What are the different Acts of BANKRUPTCY?

(a) Times, March 12.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM IV.—VOL. 3.

Distress for Rent—Who may distrain?

If a person seized in fee grants out a lesser estate, saving the reversion of rent or other services, the law gives him, without any express provision, remedy for such rent or services by distress. 2 Bac. Abr. 106. But for a rent issuing out of an incorporeal inheritance the reversioner cannot (unless it be the KING or QUEEN) distrain. A devisee may distrain for rent of the lands devised to him, if the lands be charged with distress, but not otherwise. Shep. Fouch. 439. For a rent granted for equality of partition by one coparcener to another, or, for rent granted to a widow out of lands whereof she is dowerable in lieu of dower, or for a rent granted in lieu of lands upon an exchange, the grantee may distrain without any provision of the parties though he have no reversion. Co. Lit. 169. A mortgagee after giving notice to the tenant in possession under a lease prior to the mortgagee, may distrain for rent in arrear at the time of notice, although not in the actual seizin or receipt of the rents of the premises at the time it became due, as well as for rent accruing due after the notice. Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 278. A receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery may distrain for rent, and need not apply to that Court first for a particular order for the purpose. Pitt v. Snowden, 1 Atk. 750.; Hughes v. Hughes, 3 Bro. Chau. Cas. 87. One joint tenant may distrain alone, but he must avow in his own right and as Bailiff to the other. Pullen v. Palmer, 2 Mod. 72 et 150, S. C. 3, Salk. 207. One tenant in common may distrain for his share of the rent upon a terre tenant holding under him, and another tenant in common, where such terre tenant has paid the whole rent to the other tenant in common after notice not so to do. Harrison v. Bamby, 5 T. R. 246.; Powis v.

Smith, 5 Barn. & Ald. 850.; 1 Dowl. & Ry. 490. S. C. One of several co-heirs in gavelkind may distrain for rent due to him and his companions without an actual authority from his companions. Leigh v. Shepherd, 2 B. & B. 465.; 5 Moore, 297. S. C. And it is enacted by Stat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 37. s. 1. That the executors or administrators of tenants in fee, fee tail, or for term of life for rent services, rent charges, rent seck, and fee farms, may distrain upon lands chargeable with the payment thereof so long as they remain in possession of the tenant who ought to have paid rent, &c. or any person claiming under him. Sec. 3. That if a man in right of his wife have any estate in fee simple, fee tail, or for life, or of or in fee rent or fee farms, and the same rent or fee farms be due and unpaid at the death of his wife, such husband may distrain for the same. And Sec. 4. If any person have such rents or fee farms for term of life or lives of other persons, he, his executors or administrators may distrain for arrears of such rent incurred at the death of the Cestui que vie, in the manner as if such Cestui que vie had been still living.

R. J. T.

A landlord has no right to distrain unless there be an actual demise to the tenant at fixed rent, as for instance, a tenant in possession under an agreement, by which the landlord agrees to grant a lease only at rent certain to enter at any time on or before a particular day, this being only an agreement for a future lease, and no lease having been executed, or not subsequently paid, the landlord is not entitled to distrain, there being no existing demise. See Dunk Hunter, 5 Barn. & Ald. 322. The law upon the subject, as to what agreements will support a distress, will be found collected in WESTERN'S CONVEYANCING — tit. AGREEMENTS, Vol. 3. p. 113. et seq.—EDITOR.

THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XIII.
VOL. 3.

WRIT OF SUMMONS.

Describe this writ? What are the requirements of this process and the proceedings to obtain an appearance where the defendant is absent?

The first two points raised by this Problem have been completely disposed of in the elaborate answers of your correspondent to Problem 13, Vol. 1, I shall confine my attention exclusively to the last point, proceedings to compel an appearance where the defendant can be served, first noting that by the word can you imply possibility of such service being effected although the defendant may studiously avoid cases where the defendant, residing in England and or Wales, cannot be served with the writ it is usual to issue out of one of the courts at Westminster, a writ of habeas corpus (into the nature of which I shall not enter), to compel such appearance, the manner of procuring such writ is as follows.

After the expiration of eight days from the last attempt at service, an affidavit must be made, stating that all possible diligence has been used to serve the defendant personally with a copy of the writ of habeas corpus, and that to the best of the deponent's belief the defendant carefully avoids service, and to prove this it must be shown that three several distinct applications have been made by calling at the real or supposed residence of the defendant on three different days and occasions (1). (Gale v. Willingham, N.C. 294.) (Johnson v. Rouse, M. 26) It must be also shown that one of the first two of those visits the deponent apprised the person whom he saw of the nature of his business, and said that he would call on some future day, taking care to have named some particular hour in order to see the defendant; that on the last of such visits an exact copy of the writ of summons was left with the person seen, together with an injunction that it was to be delivered to the defendant. (Johnson v. Rouse, ante.) (Cross v. Wilkins, 4 Dowl. 279.) (Johnson v. Disney, 2 Dowl. 400.) (Hill v. Maule, 1 C. & M. 617.)

Especial care must be taken that the deponent's affidavit show reasonable ground for his belief that the defendant wilfully absents himself from home to avoid service. The mere circumstance of the defendant's being away from home at the different periods of deponent's visits, not being in themselves sufficient to induce a Judge in general to order a Distringas to be issued, and in a recent case of Williams v. Beresford, BARON ALDERSON held, that though the affidavits of the deponent showed five separate applications at the house of the defendant, on each of which he received for answer that the defendant was "from home;" yet that it was quite consistent with defendant's being actually absent from home on business, and did not raise a necessary presumption that the defendant kept out of the way to avoid service.

It may be as well to remark that all these attendances need not be made by one and the same person. (Smith v. Good, 2 Dowl. 398.)

If you make your application in term, instruct your counsel, armed with the necessary affidavit, to move in Court for the Distringas(2). If in vacation, take the affidavit to the Judge's chambers, who will make an order accordingly, if he approve of the contents of such affidavit.

R. H.

(1) The affidavit should also state that the deponent believes the defendant is, or that the deponent believes him to be in England. It is insufficient to allege that inquiries have been made at the defendant's last supposed place of abode.

(Isdaile v. Marshall), 6 Dowl. 400. see Norman v. Winter, 4 Bing. N. C. 637. and the real or supposed place of residence must be stated (Pitt v. Eldred) 1 Cro. & I. 147. Bowser v. Austin, 2 id. 45. It must also set forth the tenor of the summons (Hill v. Wilkinson), 4 Taunt. 619. in hæc verba. (Hannam v. Dietrichsen.) 5 Taunt. 853. and that the defendant has not appeared to the action (Hocher v. Townsend, 1 Hodges, 204).

(2) This writ may issue for the purpose of proceeding to outlawry after a writ of summons that has been continued by alias and pluries writs issued to save the Statute of Limitations, Reade v. Youde, 2 Mee. & Wels. 183. Ray v. Dow, 5 Dowl. 340.

EDITOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.

March 6.

PRIVILEGE.

Printed Papers.—Motion made and Question put,—“That leave be given to bring in a Bill to give summary protection to persons employed in the publication of Parliamentary Papers.” The House divided—Ayes, 203; Noes, 54.

Supply.—Motion made, and Question proposed, “That the order of the day for the committee of supply be now read:”—Amendment proposed, to leave out from the word “That” to the end of the Question, in order to add the words “on consideration of the evidence of Mr. Freeman and Dr. Chambers, given at the bar of this House with respect to the state of health of Mr. Sheriff Evans, who is now in custody, he be discharged, for the present, out of the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this house; and that he be directed to attend at the bar of this house on Monday, the 6th day of April next,” instead thereof (Sir James Graham). Amendment proposed to the proposed Amendment, to leave out the words “on consideration of the evidence of Mr. Freeman and Dr. Chambers, given at the bar of this house, with respect to the state of the health of” (Mr. Hume.) Question put, “That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the proposed Amendment.” The House divided—Ayes, 129; Noes, 47.

The Sheriff was accordingly almost immediately after discharged.

March 9.

PRIVILEGE—PRINTED PAPERS BILL. (a)

Lord J. RUSSELL moved the order of the day for the second reading of this bill.

Sir E. SUGDEN said he had taken some trouble to consider what regulations might be adopted by the house, in order, concurrently with the bill, to prevent the danger which had hitherto arisen from the publication of their papers, and he would now state what checks he thought there were to prevent papers being sold, which contained, either from carelessness or otherwise, defamatory matter. First, there were the votes without the appendix. Those had been always sold; no objection to that course had been made and even the judges had admitted the right of doing so. The question involved in the case of Stockdale v. Hansard arose on an entirely different ground. Now, in all their resolutions, since their first general resolution in 1680, there were inserted directions that the votes and proceedings of the house should be first perused and signed by the Speaker. He should, therefore, propose no change upon that point. The appendix to the votes and proceedings stood upon different grounds, but he should not suggest any alteration in that particular, because the Public Petitions Committee ought to peruse every thing contained in that appendix. It was true that, in 1836, an instance did occur in which libellous matter was allowed to be published in the appendix, but he trusted that more care might be in future observed, though he, for one, held that if it were necessary for the public good to publish such papers which might contain matter criminal against certain individuals, the rights of those individuals must give way to the public good. All he contended for was, that where no such necessity existed, they could not publish papers injurious to the character of any individual, and there might be a simple check of this nature, either that no petition should be printed in the supplement to the votes unless it had been read at the table of the House, or was perused and signed by the Speaker. As regarded bills, he thought no change was necessary. The next head was accounts and papers. These he thought required no other care than the general attention which would be paid to them by the proper officers, and guard against the introduction of defamatory matter. With regard to reports, they were of two kinds, those proceeding from their own committees, and those laid before the house by commissioners of inquiry. These both seemed to require some further check than existed at present. He should suggest, when reports of either kind were made to the House, the committee or commissioners from whom they proceeded should at the ate whether there were any reasons for not ing any part of the reports. In addition checks he begged leave also to suggest ediciency of appointing a committee of pub- ; there existed at present a committee of , but it was not considered a part of the of that committee to consider which of the papers were proper to be sold, for by a on of the House all printed papers were to be sold indiscriminately. He did not o the sale of Parliamentary papers gene- m the contrary, he considered that the de of communicating them to those who terested in their contents. He would uther not interfere himself with this bill, d prefer that the Noble Lord opposite ove for a committee to consider what t was expedient to place upon the sale of rnted papers, or that the Noble Lord ake into consideration the suggestions e had taken the liberty of offering, and dd to his bill such suggestions as the ord might think best adapted for carry- effect those suggestions, or any others ight appear to the Noble Lord more ar accomplish the object in view. If such ns were introduced into the bill, he should at pleasure in giving it his support, but easure were not accompanied with some ecks as he had mentioned he should be tly compelled to oppose it on the third

(a) See Post.

He could not conclude, without saying upon the last clause in the bill as it now e meant that the clause providing that all heretofore brought or prosecuted, or which hereafter be brought or prosecuted for aged trespass under or in execution warrant granted by the Speaker of use of Commons, by authority of the since the commencement of the present of Parliament, should be put an end to, ally determined, discharged, and made He thought it impossible to maintain use, and he had no conception that it ass elsewhere. The House had no offi- owledge that any such proceedings had en or were in contemplation. The title bill did not warrant the introduction of clause, and, on general principles, it was ectionable, for if the officers of the House exceed their duty the privileges of the would protect them, and if any excess mitted, the injured party ought not to ved of redress.

J. RUSSELL said that he should take into ous consideration the suggestions of the m. member for Ripon.

bill was then read a second time, and or- be committed on Friday.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

PRINTED PAPERS.

A Bill to give Summary Protection to Persons employed in the Publication of Parliamentary Papers.

Whereas, it is essential to the due and effectual exercise and discharge of the functions and duties of Parliament, and to the promotion of wise legislation, that no obstructions or impediments should exist to the publication of such of its reports, votes, and proceedings, as either House of Parliament may deem fit and necessary to be published :

And whereas obstructions or impediments to such publications have arisen, and hereafter may arise, by means of civil or criminal proceedings being taken against persons employed or acting by the authority of the Houses of Parliament, or one of them, in making or causing such publications : by reason and for remedy whereof, it is expedient that more speedy protection should be afforded to all persons acting under the authority aforesaid, and that, all such civil or criminal proceedings should be summarily put an end to and determined in manner hereinafter mentioned :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for any defendant or defendants heretofore, now, or hereafter sued or prosecuted, civilly or criminally, in any manner howsoever, for or on account, or in respect of the publication of any such reports, votes, or proceedings by or under the authority of either House of Parliament, to deliver or cause to be delivered and left at the office of the court or jurisdiction wherein any such suit, prosecution, or proceeding may be commenced, depending, or prosecuted, in which the judgment in such matters is signed or entered, or with the officer, clerk, or person whose duty it may be to sign or to enter such judgment, or to make up, prepare, or receive, or file the rolls or records of such judgment, with an affidavit verifying the same, a certificate under the hand of the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, or the Lord Keeper, or the Speaker of the House of Lords for the time being, or the Clerk of the Parliament, or of the Speaker of the House of Commons, or of the Chief Clerk of the same House, that such civil or criminal proceeding is commenced and prosecuted for and in respect of the publication of reports, votes, or proceedings, in any case may be, by authority of the House of Lords, or of the House of Commons.

be; and from and after the delivery of such certificate and affidavit no proceeding, writ, or process whatever shall be had, taken, executed, or prosecuted in such civil or criminal proceeding; but the same civil or criminal proceeding, writ, and process, whether heretofore commenced, prosecuted, or issued, or hereafter to be commenced, prosecuted, or issued, shall thenceforth be, and shall be deemed and taken to be finally concluded, put an end to, determined, and superseded by authority of this Act.

And whereas, during the present session of Parliament certain warrants have been granted by the Speaker of the House of Commons, under the authority of the said House, in relation to the matters aforesaid; and a certain action or actions have been, or may be, brought for certain alleged trespasses in the execution of the said warrants; and it is expedient that such action or actions should be put an end to, and finally determined, discharged, and made void by virtue of this Act: be it enacted, that all and every action or actions heretofore brought or prosecuted, or which may hereafter be brought or prosecuted, by any person or persons, for or in respect of any alleged trespass or trespasses under or in execution of any warrant or warrants granted by the Speaker of the House of Commons, by authority of the said House, since the commencement of the present session of Parliament, shall be put an end to, and finally determined, discharged, and made void by virtue of this Act.

Provided always, and it is hereby expressly declared and enacted, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or taken, or held or construed, directly or indirectly, by implication or otherwise, to affect the privileges of Parliament in any manner whatsoever.

Law Reports.

BAIL COURT.—Jan. 31.

(Before PATTERSON, J.)

RISING v. DOLPHIN.

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY—As to the due execution of a Warrant of Attorney under 1 and 2 Vict. c. 110. (a)—ATTORNIES' LIEN for Costs over Mortgage Securities in their hands—Whether the Court has a summary Jurisdiction over ATTORNIES so as to compel them to deliver up such Securities when improperly or irregularly obtained.

A rule Nisi had been obtained in this case, calling upon the plaintiff and Messrs. Hughes and Rising, attornies at Worcester, to show cause why a warrant of attorney for £5,000. should not be set aside, partly on the ground that no attorney had been present for the defendant at the time of its execution, and partly that it had been obtained in an usurious transaction. Other parts of the same rule called upon the plaintiff and the said attornies to deliver up certain mortgage deeds which had been placed in their hands by the defendant as securities for the above-mentioned sum of £5,000. and an additional sum of £2,000., the latter having been advanced by the said attornies. The rule further directed that the attornies should deliver in their bills of costs, in order that the same might be referred to the Master of the Court.

Sir W. Follett showed cause against this rule on the part of Messrs. Hughes and Rising, and argued that the Court could not exercise a jurisdiction in regard to the mortgage securities mentioned in the rule, which should rather be made the subject of inquiry and decision in the Court of Chancery, and that his clients were entitled to hold these securities until their costs had been paid. In one of the affidavits made by the attornies, it was specifically denied that any sum had been received by them as commission for obtaining the loan of £5,000. for the defendant.

Mr. B. Andrews, for the plaintiff William Rising, contended that it was established by the affidavits in the case, that Mr. Rising, the attorney, had, at the time when the loan had been advanced by his brother, the plaintiff, been in the habit of acting for Mr. Dolphin, and that he had, on that occasion, recommended that person to call in another professional adviser, but that he had declined to do so, upon the ground that he did not wish to have his private affairs exposed to another party.

Mr. Cresswell, for the defendant Dolphin, urged that the transaction had been extortionate, that William Rising had made no affidavit that he had advanced the £5,000., and that Robert Rising, the attorney, had been the only individual with whom he, the defendant, had had any communication in regard to the loan; that, according to the statute 1 and 2 Vict. c. 110. it was necessary that Mr. Dolphin should have had another attorney present at his execution of the warrant of attorney; that Mr. Robert Rising should have been aware of that circumstance, and have acted accordingly. From this omission there could be no doubt that the warrant was wholly void. With respect to the other matters contained in the rule, although it had been alleged that they should be referred to the Court of Chancery, yet this Court, exercising a summary jurisdiction over attornies, as its own officers, could compel them to deliver up or account for any mortgage securities that might have imcome into their possession. The same rule also held good in regard to any lien which the broker might claim over any deeds or documents in respect to these costs.

(a) As to the due execution of a COGNOVIT under the same statute see Mason v. Kiddle, ante, p. 290. Ed.

MR. J. said, that whatever might have been Mr. Dolphin's feelings in regard to exposing the facts to a third party, it was the duty of Mr. Robert Rising, the attorney, to explain to the plaintiff that he could not pay over the money of the plaintiff unless an attorney was present on his, Mr. Rising's, behalf. There were facts in the case which rendered it a matter beyond doubt that Mr. Robert Rising was virtually acting for his principal—such were the facts of his having gone to the place where the money was to be paid, the mortgage deed ready prepared and endorsed for the £5,000., and also the warrant of attorney given as a collateral security. As far as the Court should decide that it should be set aside and the rule made absolute. But in regard to the question of delivering up the mortgages, that Court had no power to do so; their validity would be inquired into in the Court of Equity. Neither could this Court do so in this case with the alleged lien for the money. The rule, therefore, should be discharged and Mr. Messrs. Hughes and Rising. The Lordship considered, had asked for too much and he should, therefore, not give any costs on either side.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER—Jan. 14.

Sittings in Banco.

MORTIMER v. M'ALLAN.

BROKERS and JOBBERS—Liability of a principal for Stock transferred to him by Broker, which the latter had obtained by fraud.

In our report of this case (a), we stated that the learned BARON (GURNEY) who tried the case had reserved a point of law for the consideration of the Court as to the right of the plaintiff to maintain his form of action (indebitatus assumpsit) for the value of the stock in reference to the Stat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 8. by which it is enacted that all sales and transfers of stock by persons not actually possessed of the same shall be illegal and void in law. The point was raised by Sir W. Follett.

W. Follett now moved for a rule for a trial, and stated the following grounds:—Because evidence had been both rejected and received improperly by the learned Baron. 2nd. That the credit had been given to the broker, and not to his client, by the plaintiff. 3rd. That the plaintiff could not sue in the form adopted by him, that being indebitatus assumpsit for stock which the evidence showed he had not possession of at the time; and, 4th, because the evidence in the case proved one of the pleas of the defendant, which was, that he had not accepted any stock from the plaintiff; and, 5th, because the question in the cause had been erroneously left to the jury by the judge. The learned gentleman having been heard at length upon all these points,

The COURT.—The question in the cause was, whether the plaintiff meant to take Taylor's responsibility or his principal's; and it was entirely for the jury to say how that was. The learned judge was quite correct in leaving the case to the jury to say whether Mortimer had trusted to Taylor solely, or had meant to look to his principal. Though the rules of the Stock Exchange may bind its members inter se, yet they do not affect the community at large, and its members must be governed by the general law of the realm. There was evidence of a strong nature to show that credit was not given to Taylor, and as they had decided that he did not by their verdict, we cannot disturb it. The objections raised by the learned counsel to the reception and rejection of certain portions of evidence in the cause are without any sound foundation; and as to the points raised on the pleadings, it is too late now to say, after the recent decision in this court of Hebblewhite v. McMorine (a) that a man may not sell that which he has not the actual possession of at the time of the contract. The statute relied on applies to fictitious sales of stock, and not to bond fide transactions, such as this was; and whether the stock was Ward's or Mortimer's was of no importance at all, for the plaintiff had induced Ward to lend it to him, and the issue raised by the plea was in fact and honesty whether the defendant had accepted the stock at all, not a mere quibble whether he accepted it from one or the other.

Rule refused.

PREROGATIVE COURT.—Feb. 14.

REEVE v. KENT.

NEW WILL ACT, 1 Vict. c. 26.—Whether a Will made and duly executed BEFORE this Act came into operation with UNATTESTED OBLIGATIONS made SINCE shall be considered as wholly unaltered or wholly revoked as to the subject of the Alterations. (b)

William Brooke, of Great Walsingham, Nor-

(a) Ante Vol. 2, p. 122. See Errata, ante p. 302.

(b) See Hobbs v. Knight, ante, vol. 1. p. 6. Hobbs and Wife v. Munnings, ante, p. 88.

(a) See Ante p. 249.

folk, by his will dated 15th July, 1837, duly executed in the manner by law required previous to the new Will Act, empowered each of the tenants for life to whom he had devised his real estates, to charge them with an annual jointure or rent-charge not exceeding £200. for any woman he might marry, but so that the estates should not be subject to greater annual jointures than £400. On the 26th June, 1838, the testator with a knife erased the amount of £200. annual jointure, and with his own hand altered the same to £100., and also erased the £400. to which the jointures were limited, and altered it to £200. Under the attestation at the end of the will, the testator wrote: "The erasures in the 23d line of the sixth sheet, the word 'two' taken out, and the word 'one' put in its place; and in the first line of the seventh, the word 'four' taken out, and the word 'two' put in its place;—by me, William Brooke, June the twenty-sixth, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight." These alterations were made after the New Will Act, 1 Vict. c. 26, came into operation, and were not attested as required by that statute. One of the executors prayed probate of the paper, as it originally stood; the other opposed such grant, and prayed that it might issue as altered.

The Queen's Advocate submitted that the requisites of sec. 21 of the Act were satisfied if the words or effect of the will, before the alteration, be apparent on the face of the will itself, although not apparent on the face of the alterations.

Sir H. JENNER.—In one or two instances, I have already expressed an opinion as to this question. In one case, (b) a legacy had been left to a maid-servant, and the deceased, out of regard for her, increased the amount of the legacy to £50. by an alteration in his own hand-writing; but he had not caused it to be attested according to the Act of Parliament, and the Court did not pronounce for the £50., and he had so completely obliterated the original legacy, that only the word "pounds" could be read. The Court was satisfied that the word was not apparent, and declined to receive any explanation, and, consequently, the servant lost both sums.

In this case, nothing can be more clear than the intention of the deceased expressed in his own hand-writing. Having originally directed that each of the tenants for life might charge his estate with £200., he altered this sum to £100. after the will was executed, and after the late Act came into operation; and he has stated in the will what the sums originally were, and that he had erased them and substituted other sums; and he has signed his name to this statement; and in support of the facts the draft will is exhibited, which contains the sums as they originally stood: so that nothing can be more clear than that the intention of the deceased was to give a power of charging his estate to the extent of £100. each person, and not £200., and that he died in that intention. But, unfortunately the alteration, not having been executed in the presence of two witnesses, is of no effect as to the charge of £100.; and the question is, whether the Court can pronounce for the will as it originally stood, and decree probate of it with the word "two," in the face of the Act of Parliament, which enacts "that no obliteration, interlineation, or other alteration, made in any will after the execution thereof, shall be valid or have any effect, except so far as the words or effect of the will before such alteration shall not be apparent, unless such alteration shall be executed in like manner as hereinbefore is required for the execution of the will."

The alteration is not so attested, and the words or effect of the will before the alteration are not apparent. I feel myself, therefore, bound to what appears on the will itself, and I decree probate of the will with this part in blank. I cannot pronounce for the £100.; as the alteration is not attested according to the statute, and I cannot pronounce for the £200., as the sum is not apparent, and the Court is not at liberty to admit other evidence than appears on the face of the will itself. (c)

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—March 6.

CASE OF JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE.

The following Memorial was submitted to the Court by Mr. Cope the Governor of Newgate.

"TO THE HON. THE JUDGES OF THE CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

"May it please your Lordships,—I have long been illegally detained in her Majesty's gaol of Newgate, under an order, contrary to the laws of this realm, that the keeper of the said gaol should safely keep my body during certain pleasure; and I feel it my duty to apprise your Lordships of the fact, and to represent, that were such monstrous commitments against law, and transfers from one gaol to another, to be tolerated, the most innocent, say praiseworthy and useful individuals may, by the exercise of a despotic and irresponsible usurpation, be, for sinister purposes, by commitments and transfers from one prison to another conveyed to the uttermost confines of the world, and be finally lost and destroyed by

(c) See Ayling's case, ante, vol. I. p. 48. Newman case, id. 110. Woodington's case, id. p. 362. Allan case, ante, vol. II. p. 89.

(b) Levet's case, 2 Monthly Law Mag. 201.

the power of human discovery: I therefore pray your Lordships, before you adjourn present gaol delivery of her Majesty's prisoner Newgate, to inquire into the case, and be heard in person by your Hon. applying the words of Jesus Christ to the most humble, and unworthy, and persecuted but faithful, of his followers:—"If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; well, why smitest thou me?" Should your Lordships not order my discharge on this motion, I beg permission to receive my wife and family on Sundays, at seasonable hours, not interfering with the divine service performed here on that day.

"I have the honour to be, &c.

"JOHN JOSEPH STOCKDALE.
1840."

COMMON-SERJEANT.—I presume, Mr. Stockdale, that the writer of this memorial has been committed to your custody under some writ.

He has, my Lord.

COMMON-SERJEANT.—Have you the writ here?

He has, my Lord.

COMMON-SERJEANT.—This is the warrant. It was then handed to the Bench, and was read:—

"Veneris, 7mo die Februarii, 1840. Whereas the House of Commons have this day resolved that John Joseph Stockdale, having been guilty of a high contempt and breach of the privileges of the said House, be for his offence committed to her Majesty's gaol of Newgate.

And whereas we are, therefore, to require you, the Keeper of her Majesty's gaol of Newgate, to receive into your custody John Joseph Stockdale, and to keep him safely to keep during the pleasure of the said House, for which this shall be sufficient warrant.

Given under my hand this 7th day of February, 1840.

"CHARLES SHAW LEFEVRE.
Keeper of her Majesty's gaol of Newgate."

COMMON-SERJEANT said—We have no jurisdiction in this case, unless you bring the writ oner to the bar before us, and you have no authority to do so. It does not appear, however, on the face of this warrant that the writ oner is charged with any offence. It is termed a general warrant for a writ of habeas corpus, and we have no jurisdiction in the matter. As to the latter part of the petition, which prays that the party may be allowed to receive his wife and family on Sundays, the visiting hours of the prison are the persons to whom the writ is to be addressed.

NEW FORMS OF WRITS.

ORDER OF THE JUDGES, PURSUANT TO THE STATUTE 1 & 2 VICTORIA, Cap. 110.

HILARY TERM—3rd VICTORIA, 1840.

It is ordered, that the following forms of writs, framed by the Judges, pursuant to the statute 1 & 2 Victoria, c. 110, s. 20, be used from and after the first day of next Easter Term in the cases to which they are applicable, with such alterations as the nature of the action, the description of the Court in which the action is depending, the character of the parties, or the circumstances of the case may render necessary; and that in all cases in which the judgment is for a penalty, and the plaintiff seeks to obtain interest, there shall be a memorandum on the back, or at the foot of the writ, directing the Sheriff to levy the amount of the sum of money really due and secured by the penalty, and of the damages and costs recovered and interest thereon, at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the time when the judgment was entered up, or if it was entered up before the first of October, 1838, then from that day; and, that in the cases in which the amount for which the judgment has been given is less than the amount of the sum of money really due and secured by the penalty and the damages and costs recovered, and the interest thereon calculated as aforesaid, it shall be stated in the body of the writ, that the Sheriff is to levy interest at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the — day of —, and on the back, or at the foot of the writ, there shall be a memorandum as above directed; and, that in the case of an assessment of further damages under a writ of scire facias pursuant to the statute of 8 & 9 William III., it shall be stated in the body of the writ of execution, that the Sheriff is to levy interest on the damages assessed and costs taxed in that behalf at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the day on which execution was awarded, unless execution was awarded before the first of October, 1838, and in that case from that day:—But it is further ordered, that any variance not being in matter of substance, shall not affect the validity of the writs sued out.

No. I.

Writ of Capias ad Satisfaciendum, on a Judgment in the Court of Queen's Bench, in an Action of Assumpsit.

Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith;—To the Sheriff of —, greeting. We command you that you take C. D. if he shall be found in your bailiwick and him safely keep, so that you may have his body before us at Westminster, immediately after the execution hereof, to satisfy A. B. £ — which the said A. B. lately in our Court before us at Westminster, recovered against the said C. D. for his damages which he had sustained, as well on occasion of the not performing certain promises and undertakings then lately made by the said C. D. to the said A. B., as for his costs and charges by him about his suit in that behalf expended; whereof the said C. D. is convicted, as appears to us of record, together with interest upon the said sum of £ —, at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum, from the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —, (a) on which day the judgment aforesaid was entered up, and have there then this writ.

Witness, Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —.

NOTE.—This and all other writs of execution may be made returnable on a day certain in Term.

No. II,

Writ of Capias ad Satisfaciendum, on an order of the Court of Queen's Bench, for payment of money.

Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith;—To the Sheriff of —, greeting We command you that you take C. D. if he shall be found in your bailiwick, and him safely keep, so that you may have his body before us at Westminster, immediately after the execution hereof, to satisfy A. B. £ —, which lately in our Court before us at Westminster, by a rule of our said Court, entitled, &c. [as the case may be], were by the said Court ordered to be paid by the said C. D. to the said A. B., and further to satisfy the said A. B. interest upon the said sum of £ —, at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —, (b) on which day the said rule was made, and have there then this writ.

Witness, Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —. (To be continued.)

(a) The day on which the judgment was entered up, or if entered up prior to the 1st of October, 1838, say from the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord 1838, omitting the words on which day the judgment aforesaid was entered up.

(b) The day on which the rule was made, or if it were made prior to the 1st of October, 1838, say from the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord 1838, omitting the words on which day the said rule was made.

PRIVILEGE OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

IMPRISONMENT of Mr. HOWARD, Mr. Stockdale's Attorney, by order of the House of Commons.

A meeting of attornies and solicitors was held on Monday last, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, to consider what any and what steps should be taken in consequence of the proceedings adopted against Mr. Howard, by order of the House of Commons in reference to the case of "Stockdale, & Hansard."

Mr. CHARLES SHADWELL in the chair.

The following resolutions were almost unanimously agreed to, viz.—

Moved by Mr. Frere, seconded by Mr. Tisdale;

That the members of this profession have observed with much alarm the proceedings of the House of Commons in imprisoning an attorney of the Court of Queen's Bench, &c. having acted as attorney of a party in an action in which it was supposed that a privilege claimed by that Honourable House might be called in question

Moved by Mr. Adlington, seconded by Mr. Kinderley;

That it is the undoubted right of all Majesty's subjects, who consider themselves aggrieved by the act of any person whomsoever to seek for redress in her Majesty's courts. That the law has pointed out the proper remedy for an erroneous judgment of the Courts, and the constitution has vested in the Legislature the power of altering the law as may be necessary; but that the constitution does not recognize in any person or body in the state a right to control the administration of the law in her Majesty's courts.

Moved by Mr. William Lowe, seconded by Mr. George Law;

That all suitors in her Majesty's courts are entitled to the assistance of their attorneys to conduct their cases, and that it is essential to the enjoyment of that right that the attorney should be protected in the lawful discharge of his professional duty, and that this meeting without expressing an opinion on any privilege claimed by the House of Commons, or on the conduct of any of the parties who have incurred the displeasure of the House, is of opinion that the imprisonment of an attorney for acting in his professional capacity in accordance with the decisions of the Courts of Law is most dangerous to the rights and independence of the profession and to the true administration of justice.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Robert B. Follett;

a petition embodying these resolutions presented to the House of Commons; that the Incorporated Law Society be requested to have the petition to lie in the hall of the Society for signature; and that James William Ald, Esq., M.P., be requested to present the petition to the House.

Resolved by Mr. Beaumont, seconded by Mr. [unclear], and carried unanimously; that the thanks of this meeting be cordially given to Mr. Charles Shadwell for his conduct on this day.

The petition embodying these resolutions lying for signature in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society.

COPYHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT BILL.—(Continued from p. 301.)

residences:
descriptions:
ages, as nearly as he can ascertain the more than one tenant, whether admitted tenants, or how otherwise:

description of the lands:
whether copyhold, customaryhold, subject to customary freehold:

at what parish situated:
at what amount assessed, or assumed proportioned, with other lands [as in previous Bill]:

rent of quit or free rents:
whether held at fines arbitrary on death and return; at fines certain, or how otherwise:
whether subject to heriots, and how:

rent received for each of three last heriots on the tenement:

whether subject to rights in timber, and what; and as to each tenement:

number of changes of tenants on each tenement, subject to fines payable on death or return, during the last seventy, or such other number of years [as fixed on]:

number of changes of tenants during the last ten years, on each tenement, subject to fines on death or return:

add such other information as commissioners may direct; and insert, at the foot of the schedule, the amount of his claim for compensation, and the grounds upon which the same is stated.

and to make inquiries by post as to ages of tenants, and enactment that tenant refusing to give information shall not afterwards be allowed to give the age stated, and penalty on giving false statement.

and to give from time to time such other information to Commissioners as they may require, with penalty on default.

29. Valuers to take particular Circumstances of each Case into consideration.

30. Schedules of Valuation to be deposited for inspection, and Meeting to determine objections.

Copies of schedules by valuers to be lodged with steward, for inspection by all interested parties, without charge, and notice to be given as Commissioners may direct, with penalty on disallowing inspection.

Notice to fix time for hearing objections, and at such meetings objections to be heard and determined by assistant commissioner, with power to adjourn when requisite, and direct any further valuation, &c. to be made.

No person to be allowed to object without giving five days notice of intention to object; such notice to be left with steward, and inspected by other parties with schedules; forms of notices to be supplied to steward, and by him delivered to party applying.

After hearing and determining objections, assistant commissioner to amend schedules, and power to him or commissioners to amend such valuations or schedule as to alterations by death, change in ages, &c. on satisfactory proof, by affidavit or otherwise, that such alterations are requisite.

31. Expences of Proceedings under the Act (except where from special circumstances the commissioners shall direct otherwise) shall be payable as follows: where the valuers shall be appointed by the tenants, the costs of valuation and schedules shall be paid by the tenants rateably according to their interest; but where the valuers shall be appointed by the lord and tenants, then, if only two appointed, the lord shall pay one-half and the tenants one-half; and where more than two shall be appointed, the lord shall pay one-third, and the tenants two-thirds; and in case of dispute as to costs the commissioners shall have power to decide the same.

32. Schedule to be made by the Commissioners. Forthwith, after receipt of the schedules settled and amended, the commissioners shall either agree to apportionment made by valuers, or cause a schedule to be made of the apportionment to be made of the sums to be paid by each tenant, taking all the circumstances of each case into consideration.

33. Schedule of Apportionment to be inspected; Errors pointed out and rectified, and then confirmed.

The commissioners shall forthwith, after making such schedule, cause a copy to be deposited with the steward for inspection by all parties interested; notice is to be given of such deposit, and steward to allow inspection under a penalty for default; parties interested may give notice of objections by parties entitled in reversion, and other interested parties, as in sect. 36.

46. Apportionment not to be questioned after Confirmation, except with consent.

47. Commissioners may hear and determine Disputes and settle Boundaries.

If any action or suit shall be depending touching the right to or amount of any fines, other manorial payments or incidents, or any question shall arise thereon, or as to the boundary of any lands holden of the manor, or precise situation of such lands as shall be intermixed with other lands, or the exact quantity of the lands so holden, or any difference shall arise whereby the proceedings to effect any enfranchisement, whether voluntary or compulsory, as aforesaid, shall be hindered, the commissioners or assistant commissioner may appoint a time and place in or near the manor for hearing and determining the same, and inquire into, hear, and determine such right or amount, or such question; and their or his decision shall be binding and conclusive on all persons to whom twenty days' notice of the time, place, and intent of such meeting shall have been given or left at his abode, or with the occupying tenant, with a penalty on the occupying tenant for omitting to send the notice to his landlord, or party for whom same left, and shall be liable to make good to such party all damage which he may sustain by such defaults.

48. Subject to Appeal by Issue at Law, or on Case stated.

Appeal, &c. given where matter in dispute shall exceed the sum of twenty pounds value.

49. Proceedings not to abate by Death of Parties.

50. In case of Death, Actions to be brought, &c.

51. Statute of Limitations not to be affected. Nothing in act contained to revive any right to fines or other manorial claims now or hereafter barred by any law in force for limitation of actions or suits.

52. Power to summon Witnesses, &c. Power to summon witnesses, call for returns, production of deeds, &c.

53. Expences of Witnesses, &c. Commissioners, or assistant commissioners, may order expences of witnesses and of production of books, deeds, court rolls, &c. and all other expences (except salaries or allowance to commissioners or assistant commissioners) incurred in settlement of any suit or difference, or in hearing or determining any objections, &c. to be paid by such interested parties, and to such parties as they or he may think fit and reasonable.

54. General Expences and Recovery. Expences attending enfranchisements (except otherwise provided for) shall be paid as commissioners may in apportionment or otherwise under their hands and seals direct; and if any difference shall arise as to amount to be paid by or to any person, the commissioners or assistant commissioners may, under their or his hand, certify amount; and in default of payment the same may, on production of certificate, or of a deposited copy of apportionment, be recovered before two justices of peace, by distress and sale, with costs of application and proceedings.

55. Action for Expences. If expences not levied within two months after warrant of distress granted, the person entitled (if amount including costs of distress shall equal forty shillings), his executors, &c. may recover same, with costs of suit, in any court of law at Westminster, against party named in certificate of apportionment, his executors, &c. in which action such certificate or copy of apportionment shall be satisfactory evidence of the amount of such expences, and of the same being due from and to the parties therein named; and the certificate of two justices under their hands, which they are required to give in such cases, shall be satisfactory evidence of non-recovery of such expences and costs under the distress.

56. Expences of Trustees. Every tenant of the manor being a trustee (save as against an admitted mortgagee) shall be entitled to recover in like manner by distress or action respectively all expences, costs, and charges which he may have to pay under any such certificate, apportionment, distress, or action, from the person beneficially interested at the date of such apportionment in the lands, his executors, &c. or by like distress on the lands, and the occupier thereof shall be entitled to deduct any such payments from any rent then or subsequently due and should any dispute arise as to any trust or right to recover, the same shall be determined by the commissioners or assistant commissioners, as in the case of causes of difference before-mentioned; the like evidence of certificate, &c. to be admitted in any such proceedings or action.

57. Copyholders, &c. having limited Interests, may charge Costs in certain Cases.

Tenants having limited interests may, with consent of commissioners, by a simple entry on court rolls, charge the lands with the costs and interest, the principal being however reduced one twentieth each year; the steward to charge only thirteen shillings and sixpence for such entry and copy, which is not to be liable to stamp.

58. Expenses payable by Lords of Manors.

Expenses payable by Lords having partial interests, or being trustees, shall, with the expences they may reasonably incur in employing agents to protect their interests or otherwise (the amount of such expences being subject to approval of commissioners or assistant commissioner,) be paid

rors to the steward, who must send them the copy apportionment to the commissioners at the expiration of the time appointed for inspection; the commissioners shall then rectify such errors, and cause the apportionment to be engrossed, and annex any schedules thereto required for elucidation, and confirm the same under their hands and seals.

Copies of confirmed Apportionment to be deposited with Steward and Clerk of the Peace.

Two copies of every confirmed apportionment, with documents annexed, to be made and sealed by the commissioners; one copy to be deposited with the steward, and kept with the court rolls, the other with the clerk of the peace for the division of jurisdiction within which the manor or part in value, computed as aforesaid, is situated, to be kept by him and his successors; and all persons interested therein may have access to the said copies respectively, and may take copies or extracts thereof on giving reasonable notice and paying two shillings and sixpence for every hundred words in such copies or extracts: and the contents in such apportionment, &c. to be admitted as evidence; and deposit to be notified by advertisement as commissioners may direct.

Notice to Parties.

The commissioners, before confirming any apportionment, valuation, assessment, schedule or apportionment, may require notice thereof to be given in such manner as they shall direct, to the person next in remainder, reversion, or expectancy of an estate of inheritance in any manor or lands, or any other person to whom they may think notice ought to be given, and by them or their assistant commissioners hear and decide any objection made to such confirmation by any person so interested, and may direct any proceedings accordingly.

Commissioners may correct Errors with the Lord.

The Lord, and a majority of tenants in number, two-thirds in value, may request that this section shall not apply to them.

Compulsory Enfranchisement; Commissioners to ascertain Value.

Power to commissioners after 1st day of August 1842, by themselves or assistant commissioners, to ascertain value of enfranchisement in case of no agreement, with power to defer doing so until proceedings commenced.

Commissioners to require Information from Steward.

The commissioners may require the steward, and where no steward, to furnish them with a schedule as or to the effect before required to be furnished in the case of voluntary enfranchisements for the purpose of apportionment, and which shall contain a statement of the steward's claim for compensation, and such further information relative to the manor as commissioners shall require, with like powers in obtaining information, &c.; and a duplicate of such schedule shall be kept for inspection as commissioners shall direct; and the commissioners shall furnish the steward with forms of notice of objection to be delivered to party applying for same.

42. Notice of Inspection; Meeting to hear Objections and appoint Valuers, &c.

Forthwith after receipt of schedule and information the commissioners are to cause notice of duplicate remaining for inspection, and shall appoint a meeting for hearing objections to the schedule by any persons interested giving five days notice to steward, and to appoint valuers; the commissioners or assistant commissioners shall at such meeting hear and determine objections or adjourn meeting, and then hear objections and amend schedule accordingly, and according to deaths, &c. happening since making out the schedule, and determine amount of compensation to steward; and valuers are to be appointed as at voluntary meetings, when one-half in number to be appointed by the lord and the other half by the tenants; and which valuers or their umpires are to be appointed as in voluntary enfranchisements, shall make the like declaration, and act in like manner and with the like powers, &c., as if appointed under voluntary enfranchisements.

41. Power to Commissioners to appoint Valuers and Umpires.

If within six months after first meeting, to appoint valuers in compulsory enfranchisements, or if like period from confirmation of voluntary agreement, no valuers shall have been appointed, or valuation not made and sent to the commissioners, the commissioners may appoint valuers.

42. Inspection of Schedules, Objections, &c.

A copy of the schedules of valuers to be deposited with steward for inspection, as in cases of voluntary enfranchisement; notice to be given of such deposit and proceedings for hearing objections and making amendments, as in case of voluntary enfranchisements, and to make amendments in steward's schedule, becoming requisite from deaths, &c.

43. Expenses. Like provisions as in voluntary enfranchisements (see sect. 32).

44. Apportionment. The commissioners to make apportionment, cause schedule to be deposited for inspection, and proceed to confirmation and deposit of copies with Clerk of Peace, as in voluntary enfranchisements.

45. Notice to interested Parties. Commissioners may have notice given to, and hear out of the first monies to be received out of the enfranchisements to be effected under the Act.

59. *Lands to be charged with Enfranchisement Considerations as on Mortgage in Fee.

From and immediately after date of final confirmation of apportionment the several and respective lands holden of the manor shall stand chargeable with the respective sums mentioned in the apportionment as payable to the lord and steward respectively, with lawful interest from that day until payment; and the person or persons for the time being seised of the manor shall be deemed to be seised of the said lands as mortgagee in fee thereof for the benefit of the lord as to the sums payable to him, and of the steward as to the sums payable to him; and that (subject to the power of continuing the charge at the option of the tenant as herein-after provided,) it shall be lawful for the person so seised, or the lord or steward respectively in his name, from time to time to adopt such means and proceedings as a mortgagee in fee of freehold lands is entitled to, for the enforcing payment of such principal sums and interest, and with the right to obtain payment of all attendant and incident costs.

60. *To be first Charges.

Such sums shall be first charges, and have priority over all mortgages, charges, and incumbrances, &c.

Power to Mortgage. Any tenant whose lands shall be enfranchised may charge the same (or any of them, if he holds all under same right and for same estate,) with payment of such sums and costs of such charge and lawful interest, to any person advancing same and his executors, administrators, and assigns, and for securing payment thereof to demise lands by way of mortgage, for any term of years to such person, his executors, &c., or to such other person as he shall appoint; such demise to be made with a proviso or condition, declaring the term to be void on payment to the amount thereby secured, with interest, at a time to be therein appointed, and such charge shall have the like priority, &c., with powers and rights of first mortgagee.

62. Power to tenants for life, and tenants whose lands are not of more than the annual value of 20*l.*, to defer payment of consideration for enfranchisement until the next event at which fine would be payable.

63. *Power to Tenant to defer payment of Consideration for Enfranchisement. For purpose of freeing tenants of manors from the inconvenience to which, in certain cases, they might be subject, by an immediate liability to payment of the sums to be awarded to the lord of the manor under the act, it shall be lawful for any tenant, at any reasonable time before final apportionment as aforesaid, (to be fixed by the commissioners, or, in default of their fixing any at any other time or until within ten days next previous to such apportionment,) to declare, by notice under his hand, to be delivered to the lord or steward, as in case of other notices, his desire that such compensation shall remain a charge on the lands affected thereby for any number of years not exceeding Fourteen, or as to tenants for lives for the whole period of his life, and one year longer; and which notices the said steward shall forthwith, or with the schedule of apportionment, send to the commissioners; and thereupon the said commissioners shall insert, in a column of the apportionment to be appropriated to that purpose, the number of years or period for which such charge is to be continued, and thereupon (subject as after mentioned) no proceedings shall be instituted during such term or period to enforce payment of the principal money so apportioned; provided nevertheless, that lawful interest shall be payable, and paid half-yearly on the days to be mentioned in such apportionment, or, if not mentioned therein, at the expiration of each half year, computed from the date thereof, and that such proceedings may be instituted, and nothing in the Act contained shall extend to protect any tenant or other person from such proceedings, in case one and a half year's interest shall remain due on the said principal sum apportioned, or on any part thereof, to the extent of one half; provided also, that during the term or period so fixed, the lord shall not be compellable to receive payment of the principal money without receiving twelve calendar months notice of intention to pay off the same, and that in case the interest on such principal sum, or any part thereof, shall at any time or times be in arrear thirty days, it shall be lawful for the lord or party for the time being entitled to receive such interest money, to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods on the lands and tenements enfranchised and affected by such enfranchisement money, or any of them, in like manner as for rent in arrear and subject to recovery by distress.

64. *To whom Monies for Enfranchisement from Lord's Rights to be paid.

Monies to be received for enfranchisement from lord's rights to be paid to lord, his heirs, or assigns, when absolute owner, for limited estate or interest, or under legal disability, to be paid as follows:—If it amounts to two hundred pounds, to be paid into the Bank of England under the 1 Geo. 4. c. 35.

65. When less than two hundred pounds, and more than twenty pounds, to be paid into the Bank of England, or to trustees, at the option of the parties.

Where twenty pounds, to be paid to the person entitled to the rents and profits.

When payments are deferred by tenants, provision as to lords being tenants for life.

(To be continued.)

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

s appointed to be held in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honourable THOMAS DENMAN, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, in and after Easter Term, 1836:—

IN TERM.

| Middlesex. |          |         | London. |  |  |
|------------|----------|---------|---------|--|--|
| Monday     | April 22 |         |         |  |  |
| Tuesday    | April 25 |         |         |  |  |
| Wednesday  | May 11   | Tuesday | May 12  |  |  |

AFTER TERM.

|        |        |        |        |
|--------|--------|--------|--------|
| Monday | May 14 | Friday | May 15 |
|--------|--------|--------|--------|

Court will sit at eleven o'clock in Term, in Middlesex; at twelve in London; and in both past nine after Term.

—Long causes will probably be postponed from the 22nd and 25th of April to the 14th of May, and all other causes on the lists for the 22nd and 25th of April, will be taken from day to day as they are tried.

Defended causes only will be taken on the 11th of May.

Causes defended as well as undefended causes entered for the Sitting on May 12th, will be tried on that day, if the Plaintiffs wish it, unless there be a satisfactory affidavit of merits.

EXCHEQUER OF PLEAS.

to be held at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London before the Right Honourable JAMES LORD BROUGHAM, Chief Baron of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, in and after Easter Term, 1836:—

IN TERM.

| Middlesex. |           |          | London.        |           |          |
|------------|-----------|----------|----------------|-----------|----------|
| Monday     | Wednesday | April 22 | 1st Sitting    | Wednesday | April 29 |
| Tuesday    | Thursday  | April 23 |                |           |          |
| Wednesday  | Friday    | April 24 | By adjournment | Thursday  | April 30 |
| Thursday   | Saturday  | April 25 |                |           |          |
| Friday     | Monday    | May 4    |                |           |          |
| Saturday   | Wednesday | May 6    | 2nd Sitting    | Monday    | May 11   |
| Sunday     | Thursday  | May 7    |                |           |          |
| Monday     | Friday    | May 8    | By adjournment | Tuesday   | May 12   |

AFTER TERM.

| Middlesex. |          |        | London.           |  |  |
|------------|----------|--------|-------------------|--|--|
| Monday     | April 14 | Friday | April 15          |  |  |
|            |          |        | (to adjourn only) |  |  |

The Court will sit during Term at ten o'clock.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH POSTAGE.

REDUCTION OF FRENCH POSTAGE.

ENGLISH POSTAGE.—The Director-General of the Post-office has published a notice, announcing that the postage charged over and above the amount of Postage on all letters sent from France to any part of England, Scotland, Ireland, for whatever distance they may be within the United Kingdom, will henceforth be reduced to the uniform rate of 10 deniers or 1 franc, for any letter not exceeding in weight half an ounce English, or 14 grammes French. Certain towns in the counties of Kent and Sussex, the postage charge to which is under

1 franc for such letters, according to a scale determined by the convention of the 30th of March, 1836, will continue to enjoy the same privilege. No alteration is made in the charges of letters coming from, or going to, countries beyond sea, and conveyed either by the regular packets or merchant ships of England. Charges of all kinds received in France upon letters for the English part of the postage remain subjected to the following English tariff; viz. for any letter not exceeding in weight half an ounce English or 14 grammes French, single postage; exceeding half an ounce, and not exceeding one ounce or 28 grammes, double postage; exceeding one ounce, and not exceeding two ounces, or 56 grammes, quadruple postage; and so on for every additional ounce or 28 grammes an additional double postage will be charged. The French charge upon letters for the French part of the postage remains as follows :—For every letter not exceeding  $7\frac{1}{2}$  grammes, 1 franc ; not exceeding 10 grammes, 1f. 50c ; not exceeding 15 grammes, 2f. ; and so on, 50c. being added for every additional 5 grammes.—Galignani's Messenger.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. F.—Every articulated clerk must continue to be actually employed by the Attorney or Solicitor to whom he is bound, or by his agent, in the proper business, practice, or employment of an Attorney or Solicitor during the entire period of service specified in the Articles. Any person may take the advantage.—See Taylor's Case, 5 Barn. & Ald. 538, see also 10 Barn. & Cress. 511.

R. E. I.—S. A. W.—I. G.—O. L.—I. L.—C. W.—W. D.—I. T. G.—P. H.—T. A. S.—all under consideration.

We have this week again contrived to insert the Answers to two Problems.—We have many in arrear.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The applicants (very many) for a double number are at present in the minority.

We direct attention to the letter signed "Amicus."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

Wycombe, Mar. 9, 1840.

SIR,—By your Notice to Subscribers, in your number of the 7th inst. you propose issuing a double number monthly, which I hope will be carried into effect as early as convenient. I hope you will still continue the insertion of the Questions and List of those who pass.

You will perhaps allow me once more to mention a digested index. If there are any of your subscribers averse to it, then let those who wish it each subscribe a sum ; then it can be done without the malcontents. I shall be most happy to subscribe any sum you think necessary. When the volume is finished, the index to that and the two previous ones can be published together. Trusting you will excuse the length of my remarks, I remain your humble servant,

AMICUS.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

The African Institution of Paris have recently elected Owen Flintoff, Esq. A.M. Vice-President, as a mark of their approbation of his work on the Rise and Progress of the Laws of England and Wales.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

HENRY VILLIERS DE BILLINGHURST TAYLOR was called to the Bar by the Honorable Society of the MIDDLE TEMPLE, Jan. 18.

ERRATUM.

P. 208. Court of Common Pleas—the name of the case in the title is omitted, read Aston and another v. Hessel.

Just Published, price 4s, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part II.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple ; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents, which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES as to the Term—time of entry—rent—days—rotation of crops—restrictions on tenants—repairs—draining—manuring—also the law relating to MINING LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Bookellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex ; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookeller, 194, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-Fields, in the City of London.—Saturday, March 14, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

[III.] SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1840. [No. 21.]

OF LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.

(Continued from page 179.)

PROTECTOR OF A SETTLEMENT. TRUSTEES TO SUPPORT CONTINGENT REMAINDERS.

CONTINGENT REMAINDER, AND A RIGHT OF ENTRY DEFINED.

to the second principal question, whether the limitations to the first and sons of Escebe, were well barred by and recovery, without the joining of trustees? It was insisted upon, to shew were barred, first, that no estate at all in the trustees; secondly, if any estate it was a contingent estate, or a right only; and, thirdly, that whatever was, it was effectually barred by the recovery.

the first, we are of opinion, that an commenced in the trustees immediately the determination of the term for by effluxion of time, forfeiture, or be.

to the second, whether the estate to trustees was a vested or contingent estate, led to us the great difficulty in the case; the doctrine of contingent remainders is very nice and intricate, and if we were to cite all the cases in the books, I fear we should rather puzzle than explain the difficulty. The definition of a contingent remainder laid down by the counsel for the plaintiff, that a remainder was contingent when it was uncertain, whether it would take effect or not, is, by no means, the legal notion of a contingent remainder; it is not the uncertainty of taking effect in possession that makes it contingent: if an estate is limited to A. for life, remainder to B. and the heirs of his body, every one will allow that this is a vested remainder; and yet, it must be allowed, that it is uncertain, whether B. may not die without heirs of his body before the death of A., and consequently the remainder may never take effect in possession.

We have considered this point a good deal, and are of opinion, that all contingent remainders may be reduced to these two heads: first, where a remainder is limited to a person not in being, and who may possibly never exist; and, secondly, where a remainder depends upon a contingency collateral to the continuance of the particular estate. I will give an instance of each: if an estate is limited to A. for life, the remainder to his first son before he has any child, this is a contingent remainder of the first kind, for it is uncertain whether he will have any son. If an estate is limited to A.

for life, and after the death of I. S. to B. in fee, or after I. S. shall come from Rome; this is a contingent remainder of the second kind, for it is uncertain what time I. S. shall die, or shall come from Rome. For as the law, for many good reasons, will not permit the freehold to be in abeyance, it expects the contingent remainder to take place when the particular estate determines, and it cannot immediately vest in those cases, when it is uncertain whether the contingency will happen.

The present case comes under neither of these heads, the trustees are in being and capable of taking. The estate does not depend upon any contingency collateral to the continuance of the particular estate; we, therefore, are of opinion that, subject to the term of 99 years, a good estate of freehold vested in the trustees during the life of Robert Dormer. I will put one case:—Supposing a person grants an estate to A. for 99 years, if A. should so long live, and after the death of A. to another; supposing A. should outlive the term, or commit a forfeiture, is not the freehold vested in the grantor during the life of A., and has not he a power to enter, and if he has an estate in this case, may he not grant it away upon the same terms, and would not his grantee have the same estate? But consider what would be the consequence, if the trustees do not take but upon a contingency, their heirs cannot take; and if the trustees die before the contingency happen, the limitation to their heirs fail, and if the estate limited here to the trustees is contingent, so are the limitations to trustees in all settlements, and consequently all the settlements for these 200 years, ever since the statute of uses, may be questioned. But, can we conceive, my Lords, that every one has been mistaken for these 200 years, and that this new light is just now arisen to us? Surely it is a much less evil to make a construction, even contrary to the common rules of law, (though I think this is not so,) than to overthrow, I may say, 100,000 settlements; for it is a maxim in law, as well as reason, communis error facit jus.

As to the RIGHT of ENTRY, I should scarce have thought it deserved an answer, but that some weight has been laid upon it: we are of opinion that a right of entry always supposes an estate; for what is a right of entry without a right to hold and receive the profits; therefore I have always thought, that if an estate is granted to a man, reserving rent, and in default of payment, a right of entry was granted to a stranger, it was void. A case was cited to endeavour to shew that a right of entry might subsist without an estate; but I am inclined to think some material circumstances in that case are omitted, and are agreed in our judgment, that the law is otherwise; and for these reasons are of opinion, that not a mere right of entry or a contingent estate, but an estate of freehold, was vested in the trustees during the life of Robert Dormer. (To be continued.)

PROBLEM XXI. VOL. III.

POWERS.

In what cases will a defective execution of a Power be supported?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XI.—VOL. 2

Heirs special or general. What is the present state of the law with regard to limitations to heirs special or general?

A recent Statute has materially altered the law with regard to limitations to heirs general or special, by abolishing that perplexing rule of law commonly known as the rule in Shelley's Case, and the numerous decisions following that memorable case. But as there is a saving clause in the Act as to limitations made before the 1st January 1834, to the heirs of a person then living, it is absolutely necessary to understand the effect of such limitations under the old law.

Let us then divide our subject as follows,

1. The effect of limitations to heirs specifically or general before the 3 & 4 W. 4. c. 106. 2. The effect of such limitations since passing of this Act.

1st.—It was affirmed in Shelley's Case, where by the same instrument by which an Estate was given, the remainder was limited to the heir or heirs of the body of the tenant for life, whether immediate or limited to other Estates, the life estate and remainder united, and the intended tenant for life became entitled to an estate in fee-simple or fee-tail, but so as not to prejudice intervening interests. 1 Co. 104 a. Where an Estate was conveyed to A. for life, limited to the heir or heirs of the body, if the construction had been according to the strict meaning of the words, A. would have taken an estate for life only, and the remainder to the heirs, &c. of A. would have been a contingent remainder, thereby making the heirs take as purchasers: but such a construction would have been attended with great inconveniences.

The Lord of the fee would have been deprived of those claims to which he would have been entitled in case the heirs had been required to take by descent, such as wardship and marriage.

2ly. The remainder being contingent, the heir would have been in abeyance.

3ly. No alienation could have taken place in the lifetime of the ancestor.

It was therefore decided, that in all such limitations of legal estates, Cart. 170. De-terminations of trust estates, Fearne Cont. Rem. surrenders of copyholds, Gilb. Ten. 270. assignments of terms of years, Fearne, the heirs should take by descent, and it is immaterial whether the ancestor took expressly limitation or by implication of law.

There are, however, many exceptions to this rule, ex. gr. Where the ancestor takes an estate for years only. Sir William Tippin's case cited 1 P. Wms. 359. where the limitations to the ancestor and his heirs are made by different conveyances. Cranmer's Case, 2 Leon. 57. Where the word heirs is clearly explained to mean sons, or children, or issue, or where words are added to show that the limitation is intended to apply to the heir apparent as a gift to the heirs male now living; or the word "heir" in the singular number is used, if coupled with other words of explanation. Lewis Bowles' Case, 11. Co. 30. Walker v. Snow, Palm. 359.

The rule was held not to apply in executory contracts, such as articles made in contemplation of marriage, 1 Bro. C. C. 222.

Where an Estate for life is limited to the parents, and the subsequent limitation is to the heirs of both their bodies, 1 Rol. Rep. 238. Where the limitation to the heirs proves an intention that they are to take differently from the usual course of descent, as where a remainder is given to the heirs, and heirs female, of the bodies of their ancestors.

Mr. Hargrave in his masterly observations on the rule in Shelley's Case observes, that when it is once settled that the donor or testator has used words of Inheritance according to their legal import; has applied them intentionally to comprise the whole line of heirs to the tenant for life, and has really made him the terminus or ancestor by reference to whom the succession is to be regulated, then it will appear that being considered according to those rules of policy from which it originated, it is perfectly immaterial whether the testator meant to avoid the rule or not; and that to apply it, and declare the words of inheritance to be words of limitation, vesting an inheritance in the tenant for life, as the ancestor and terminus to his heirs is a mere matter of course. That on the other hand, if it be decided that the testator or donor did not mean by the words of inheritance after the estate for life, to use such words in their full and proper sense; nor to involve the whole line of heirs to the tenant for life, and include the whole of his inheritable blood, and make him the ancestor or terminus for the heirs; but intended to use the word "heirs" in a limited, restrictive, and untechnical sense, and to point at such individual person, as should be the heir, &c. of the tenant for life at his decease, and to give a distinct estate of freehold to such single heir, and to make his or her estate of freehold the groundwork for a succession of heirs, and constitute him or her the ancestor terminus and stock for the succession to take its course from; in every one of these cases the premises are wanting, upon which only the rule in Shelley's Case interposes its authority, and that rule becomes quite extraneous matter. The previous enquiry, therefore, will be, whether, by a remainder to the heirs either general or special of a preceding tenant for life, it is the meaning of the instrument to include the whole of his inheritable blood, the whole line of his heirs; or to design only certain individual persons answering to the description of heirs at his death. If the former is the sense the rule always applies, and by vesting the remainder in the tenant for life, forces it to operate by limitation, even though the instrument should contradictorily and inconsistently add in express terms that the remainder should operate as a contingent one, and enure so as to make the heirs purchasers. If the latter sense is adopted, the rule is as invariably foreign to the case, and the remainder consequently is contingent till the death of the tenant for life, upon which event the heir takes by purchase, 1 Hargr. Law Tracts, 755, 577.

Lord Thurlow is reported to have said, in Jones v. Morgan, 1 Bro. C. C. 206, that all possible heirs must take as heirs, and not as purchasers: that in all cases where the limitation is of an estate in freehold to a man, and afterwards to his heirs, &c. (whether general or special) so as to give it to the heirs as a denomination or class, the heirs shall take it by descent, and not as purchasers: and that the case stated by Anderson, in Shelley's case, of a limitation to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use of his heirs, and of their heirs-female, was the only one to the contrary; and in that case the word "heirs" must be a description of the persons, in order to let in the limitation to the heirs-female.

Secondly. This rule, the source of so much litigation, and the death-blow to the intentions of so many testators, has at last come under the consideration of the Legislature, chiefly owing to the suggestions of Mr. Tyrrell; and is now abolished as to cases of conveyances, &c. arising after 31st December, 1833.

The 3rd section of the aforesaid Act declares, that after the 31st December, 1833, an heir shall be entitled under a devise to him in a will to take as a devisee; and that a limitation to a grantor and his heirs in any assurance executed after the same time shall create an estate by purchase.

Where heirs take by purchase under limitations to the heirs of their ancestors, the land shall descend as if the ancestor had been the purchaser.—Sec. 4.

Limitations made before the 1st January, 1834, to the heirs of a person then living, are to take effect as if the Act had not been made.—Sec. 12.

J. A. M.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS—ENGLAND.

March 17.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR'S NEW BILL.

The LORD CHANCELLOR brought in a Bill facilitating the Administration of Justice, of which the following is an analysis.

The preamble sets forth that, "Whereas the administration of justice by her Majesty in council would be greatly facilitated by the appointment of a judge to preside in the judicial committee of the privy council; be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty," &c.

Clause 1 provides, that the Master of the Rolls be appointed Vice-President of the Privy Council.

ause 2 empowers her Majesty to appoint a member of the judicial committee temporary Vice-president of the Privy Council, &c. ause 3 provides, that no matter be heard by judicial committee unless in the presence of four members of judicial committee, of whom Vice-president, &c., to be one. Proviso, her Majesty direct any matter, &c., to be heard by three members of judicial committee.

ause 4 enacts, that judges not being members of judicial committee, &c., to be assistants to committee.

ause 5 enacts, that the ordinary duties of judges attending judicial committee to be performed by other judges during their absence.

ause 6 declares, that the business of the Plea of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer at Westminster has of late years greatly increased, and transfer to the Court of Chancery of the jurisdiction of the said Court of Exchequer, as a court of equity, would relieve the judges of the Court of Exchequer, and would otherwise tend to promote the public advantage; and it enacts, that the jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer, as a court of equity, &c., be abolished, and transferred to the Court of Chancery.

ause 7 provides, that suits depending, and proceedings transferred to Court of Chancery, be conducted according to the practice of that court, ause 8, gives power to Court of Chancery, in summary way, to restrain Bank of England, from permitting transfer of stock.

auses 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14, make provision, that the stocks, &c. in the name of Account-General of Court of Exchequer, be transferred into the name of the Account-General of Court of Chancery, &c. auses 15 and 16 make provisions for the re-division of offices and the transfer of proceedings.

ause 17 says, "And whereas the duties of Master of the Rolls as Vice-President of the Privy Council will prevent his devoting so much of his time as heretofore to the hearing of causes in Chancery: and whereas the business of the Court of Chancery has of late years greatly increased, and by reason of the transfer to the Court of Chancery of the equitable jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer, further duties will devolve on the Court of Chancery; it is therefore enacted, for the better administration of justice in the said Court of Chancery, that two additional judges should be appointed to assist in the discharge of the judicial functions of the Lord Chancellor. Be it therefore further enacted, that it shall be lawful for her Majesty to nominate and appoint, by letters patent, under the great Seal of the United Kingdom, two fit persons to be additional judges assistant to the Lord Chancellor in the discharge of the judicial functions of his office, each of such additional judges to be called Vice-Chancellor."

(To be continued)

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.

March 13.

PRINTED PAPERS.

(In Committee).—First clause (proceedings, criminal or civil, against persons for publication of papers printed by order of Parliament, to be stayed upon delivery of a certificate and affidavit to the effect that such publication is by order of either House of Parliament) p. 1, l. 20. Amendment proposed to leave out the words "heretofore, now, or." Question put, "That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the clause." The Committee divided—Ayes, 179; Noes, 9.

Order read, for consideration of petition of Messrs. Hansard (presented March 12.) Petition again read.—Motion made, and Question put,—"That John Joseph Stockdale, by commencing and prosecuting the action now depending at his suit against James Hansard, Luke Graves Hansard, and Luke James Hansard, and in which a notice of action was served on the 9th day of this instant March, such action being brought for acts done by the defendants as the officers and servants of this House, and under and pursuant to the authority of the orders and resolutions of this House, made in exercise of the privileges of Parliament, has been guilty of a contempt of this House, and a violation of the privileges thereof; and that all sheriffs, under-sheriffs, agents, bailiffs, officers, clerks, and others, who shall act, aid, or assist in the continuing, furthering, and prosecuting the said action, will also be guilty of a contempt and violation of the privileges of this House, and subject themselves to the severe censure and displeasure of this House." The House divided—Ayes, 98; Noes, 33.

March 17.

PETITION OF THE ATTORNIES AND SOLICITORS.

Mr. Freshfield presented the following petition, signed by 757 attorneys and solicitors of the courts of law and equity.

"To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

"The humble petition of the undersigned attorneys and solicitors of her Majesty's courts of law and equity,

"Sheweth,—That your petitioners have seen with alarm the proceedings of your honourable House with reference to the cause of Stockdale v. Hansard.

"Your petitioners beg leave respectfully to submit to your honourable House that it is the undoubted right of all her Majesty's subjects, who consider themselves aggrieved by the act of any person whomsoever, to seek for redress in her Majesty's courts.

"That your petitioners submit that all suitors in her Majesty's courts are entitled to the assistance of their attorney to conduct their cases, and that it is essential to the enjoyment of that right that the attorney should be protected in the lawful discharge of his professional duty.

"That the law has pointed out the proper remedy for an erroneous judgment of the courts; and the constitution has vested in the Legislature the power of altering the law, as may be necessary. But your petitioners most respectfully but firmly submit, that the constitution of this country does not recognise in any person or body in the state, not even in your honourable House, the right to supersede the administration of the law in her Majesty's courts.

"That your petitioners have heard with deep regret that an attorney has incurred the displeasure of your honourable House and been committed to prison, because he has acted as attorney of a party in an action in which it was supposed that a privilege claimed by your honourable House might be called in question.

"That your petitioners, without expressing an opinion on any privilege claimed by your honourable House, or on the conduct of any of the parties who have incurred your displeasure, beg leave respectfully to submit, that the imprisonment of an attorney for acting in his professional capacity, in accordance with the decision of her Majesty's courts of law, is most dangerous to the rights and independence of your petitioners' profession, and to the due administration of justice.

"Your petitioners most humbly pray your honourable House that your honourable House, while taking such measures for securing the privileges which the constitution has given you for the benefit of the people as in your wisdom you may think right, will not sanction any act which may be injurious to the rights of your petitioners, or interfere with the independence and dignity of the law and the free administration of justice. And your petitioners will ever pray, &c."

Ordered to lie upon the table.

Sir R. H. Inglis presented the following petition:—

"To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

"The humble petition of John Joseph Lawson, of No. 26, Newington-crescent, in the parish of St. Mary, Newington, in the county of Surrey, printer, and Thomas Payne, of No. 23, Pembroke-square,

Kensington, in the county of Middlesex, printer,

"Sheweth,—That your petitioners are printers and publishers of certain newspapers published daily in London, and severally entitled 'The Times' and the 'Morning Post,' and are responsible for the contents of those papers.

"That, to the conducting in an adequate and efficient manner the business in which your petitioners are engaged, and which consists in diffusing as widely as possible throughout the United Kingdom and its dependencies the fullest and most accurate information they can procure in relation to all affairs of public interest, it is indispensably necessary, upon occasions of frequent recurrence, that your petitioners should reprint and republish in their respective newspapers the whole or selected portions of reports and other documents previously printed and published by order of your honourable House.

"That the utility of such reports and documents depends in a great degree on their receiving publication through the medium of the public press.

"That your petitioners are liable to prosecution by indictment or information, as well as to actions at law for the recovery of damages, so often as any thing contained in the reports or other documents first printed and published by order of your Hon. House, and subsequently reprinted and republished by them, may be deemed by any individual whatever to reflect in any manner upon his character, or to be in any degree injurious to his private interests.

"That your petitioners are apprehensive, if legislative protection against such prosecutions or actions at law be given exclusively to the original printers and publishers of Parliamentary reports or other documents connected with Parliamentary proceedings, that prosecutions or actions at law against your petitioners, who are often compelled, in the regular and ordinary course of their business, to reprint and republish the same, may thereby be rendered more frequent, vexatious, and oppressive.

"Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray your Hon. House that you will not pass any act having for its object or effect to prevent prosecutions or actions at law against the original printers or publishers of Parliamentary reports or other documents, unless such act shall contain a clause or clauses to prevent in like manner prosecutions or actions against your petitioners, and the registered proprietors of the said newspapers, for reprinting and republishing the same in whole or in part.

"And your petitioners will ever pray, &c."

"JOHN JOSEPH LAWSON (Printer and publisher of The Times).

"THOMAS PAYNE (Printer and publisher of the Morning Post)."

hon. baronet said that he would not move the petition printed with the votes, but give notice that if no other member should take the matter up, he would in a future stage of the bill move the addition of clauses to the petition prayed for in the petition. The petition was ordered to lie on the table.

March 18.

PRINTED PAPERS.

COMMITTEE.—Lord Howick brought up the report.—The following is the Bill, (as amended by the Committee), to give summary protection to persons employed in the publication of parliamentary papers:—

Whereas it is essential to the due and effectual exercise and discharge of the functions and duties of Parliament, and to the promotion of legislation, that no obstructions or impediments should exist to the publication of such of its reports, papers, votes, or proceedings of either House of Parliament, as such House may deem fit or necessary to be published:

and whereas obstructions or impediments to the publication have arisen, and hereafter may arise, by means of civil or criminal proceedings being taken against persons employed in acting under the authority of the Houses of Parliament, or one of them, in the publication of its reports, papers, votes, or proceedings: and for remedy whereof, it is expedient that more speedy protection should be afforded to persons acting under the authority aforesaid, and that all such civil or criminal proceedings should be summarily put an end to and terminated in manner herein-after mentioned:

and whereas an action has been brought, and is now depending, against certain persons employed in the execution of a warrant granted and issued by the Speaker of the House of Commons during the present session of Parliament, in taking into custody the person therein named, and it is expedient that such action should be put an end to, and that no other action should be allowed to be brought or prosecuted in respect of the execution of any such warrant which has been so granted or issued by the said Speaker as aforesaid, during the present session of Parliament:

Be it therefore enacted, by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present Parliament assembled, by the authority of the same, that it shall and lawfully may be lawful for any person or persons who is, or are, or hereafter shall be, a defendant or defendants in any civil or criminal proceeding, commenced or prosecuted in any manner soever, on account, or in respect of the publication of any such report, paper, votes, or proceedings by such person or persons, or by his or their servant or servants, by or under the authority of either House of Parliament, to deliver and leave or cause to be delivered and left at the office of the court or jurisdiction wherein any such civil or criminal proceeding shall have been commenced, or is or shall be depending or prosecuted, in which office the judgment in such matters is or may be signed or entered, or with the officer, clerk, or person whose duty it may be to sign or to enter such judgments, or to make up, prepare, or receive, or file the rolls or records of such judgments, a certificate under the hand of the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, or the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, or of the Speaker of the House of Lords, for the time being or of the Clerk of the Parliament or of the Speaker of the House of Commons, or of the Clerk of the same House, stating that the report, paper, votes, or proceeding, as the case may be, in respect whereof such civil or criminal proceeding shall have been commenced or prosecuted, was published by such person or persons, or by his, her, or their servant or servants, by order or under the authority of the House of Lords, or of the House of Commons, as the case may be, together with an affidavit verifying such certificate; and from and after the delivery of such certificate and affidavit, every such civil or criminal proceeding, and every writ or process issued therein, shall be and shall be deemed and taken to be finally put an end to, determined, and superseded by virtue of this act.

“ And be it further enacted, that in every such civil proceeding as aforesaid, within 48 hours after the delivery of such certificate and affidavit as herein-before is provided, the defendant or defendants in such civil proceeding shall cause a notice in writing to be delivered at the residence, office, or lodgings of the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or of the attorney or attorneys of the plaintiff or plaintiffs, as the same may be, in the particular case indorsed upon the writ or process by which such civil proceeding shall have been commenced, in which notice it shall be stated that such civil proceeding is stayed pursuant to and by virtue of this act.

“ And be it further enacted, that all and every action or actions heretofore brought or prosecuted by any person or persons for or in respect of any trespass or trespasses alleged to have been committed in or under colour of the execution of, or in or under colour of the endeavouring to execute any warrant or warrants granted or issued by the Speaker of the House of Commons, by authority of the said house, since the commencement of the present session of Parliament, shall be and are stayed, put an end to, finally determined, discharged, and made void by virtue of this act; and that no action, suit, or prosecution shall hereafter be brought or commenced for, on account, or in respect of any such alleged trespass or trespasses as aforesaid, but that all proceedings in any such action, suit, or prosecution, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes.

"Provided always, and it is hereby expressly declared and enacted, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or taken, or held or construed, directly or indirectly, by implication or otherwise, to affect the privileges of Parliament in any manner whatsoever."

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY—Feb. 26.

IN RE WILLIAM COE.

MILES v. PRISLAND.

Act for abolishing arrest for debt. Sec. 14. Whether the court of Equity has the power to make orders creating a charge upon stock belonging to a debtor in favour of a judgment creditor.

Mr. Hallett applied for an order directing that certain stock, standing in the name of the defendant to an action at law, might become charged with the amount of the sum recovered against him by the plaintiff in the cause. He applied under 1 and 2 Victoria, cap. 110, sec. 14, which empowered the judges of the superior courts to grant such order, if they thought fit. He said, the Master of the Rolls doubted his jurisdiction when applied to, although the Vice-Chancellor had made similar orders. The act of Parliament did not restrict the authority to the judges of the courts of law, and there could be no doubt that the courts of equity were included under the denomination "Superior." Besides, the Court of Chancery was itself a superior court of common law.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, it was probable the attention of the Vice-Chancellor had not been called to the 18th section of the act, which it seemed difficult to interpret without considering the judges referred to as those sitting in the courts where the judgment was given. By the section he had named, the same powers were extended to the judges of courts of equity, as had been previously conferred upon the judges in courts of law. This seemed conclusive as to the meaning of the 14th section on the point, but he would speak with the Vice-Chancellor before he finally disposed of the question.

His Lordship afterwards gave judgment, and said, the question was whether the courts of equity had the power to make orders creating a charge on stock belonging to a debtor in favour of a judgment creditor. His Lordship observed, that he had conferred with the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellor, and they both agreed the order ought to be applied for in the courts of common law. The Master of the Rolls doubted his jurisdiction, and though the Vice-Chancellor had made such orders, his attention had not been drawn to the objection.

COURT OF REVIEW—March 16.

FIAT AGAINST ——— WOOD.
Ex parte Wood.

LIABILITIES of JOINT STOCK SHAREHOLDERS
—the right of a Creditor of a Joint Stock Company to make a SHAREHOLDER a BANKRUPT.

Mr. Swanston appeared in support of this petition, which, in order, if possible, to prevent the appearance of the advertisement of adjudication in the Gazette, asked that the fiat might be annulled, on the ground that there had been no act of bankruptcy, and that the debt of the respondent was not such a debt as could clothe him with the right of acting as a petitioning creditor. Mr. Tomkinson, the respondent, sought payment of 3,000*l.* out of the alleged bankrupt estate, on the ground of his liability as one of the shareholders of the Imperial Bank of England. The fiat issued on the 6th of the present month. The question was, whether the creditor of a partnership could at once, as holder of a bill of exchange, issue a fiat without bringing an action, and becoming entitled by judgment and execution. The petitioner, Mr. Nicholas Price Wood, was a registered shareholder, but disputed his liability on the debt of a bill-holder of the Imperial Bank, who had not taken legal proceedings as bill-holder.

Mr. Anderdon, for the respondent, asked time to meet the petitioner's application to annul the fiat, the matter not being yet ripe for hearing, but brought on by special application to stay the advertisement; but objected to any postponement of the insertion in the Gazette.

Mr. Swanston would have consented to a delay, but the non-compliance of the other side drove him to ask the Court to annul the fiat in the absence of proof of an act of bankruptcy.

Sir G. Ross said, any interference between adjudication and advertisement must be authorized by the appearance of some defect in the proceedings. He had looked at them with a view to assist the applicant, but could not say there was not evidence of a debt and act of bankruptcy.

Mr. Swanston then submitted a point of law. By virtue of the contract the respondent entered into, he had no right except under the act by which the bank was constituted (7th George IV.) It was not given a right to sue out a fiat against older, and the respondent could have no right except under it. The debt in question was not a debt with privilege of issuing the writ now sought.

J. CROSS said, this was a new question on the act of Parliament, and involved a point of importance to the community. This was a sufficient reason why the alleged bankrupt should be allowed time, by the suspension of the advertisement, to bring the matter before the Court. The Court listened to hear if there was any valid objection to the step by a creditor of making a share in a bankrupt. The 9th section of the act provided for proceedings against the registered officer in case of inconvenience in process. The act did not take away the right of suing against individual partners, but in suing the officer who represents the whole company, judgment against the officer is also judgment against the whole of the company, with the right of process by action against the goods of each partner. The question arose whether this gave a right to sue out a writ. Nothing in the act prohibited it; and there was a common law right, existing before the act, to sue out a fiat against any one of a body of persons on commission of an act of bankruptcy. This right had not been expressly taken away, and was sufficient to support the fiat against Mr. Wood. The only question now left was the absolute disposal was the suspension of the advertisement. It had been already temporarily stayed to allow the petitioner time to shew that there was no debt. Now, it had been fully heard, and the Court was of opinion that the fiat was valid and there was no reason why the advertisement should be stayed, there being apparently a petitioning creditor's debt.

G. ROSE coincided. His opinion of the fiat was conclusive to the purpose of not interfering to stay the adjudication and advertisement. The petitioner ought, however, to have the right of objecting to the proceedings, and might then take such measures as he might think fit. The advertisement in the Gazette not stayed; the petition to stand over; the petitioner to have the right of access to inspect the proceedings, so far as respects the act of bankruptcy and petitioning creditor's debt: costs reserved.

JUDICIAL COMMISSION — MONMOUTH. FROST'S TRIAL.

(Continued from p. 234.)

A witness was called by the name of Mary Jones, which was to prove that he was at home at that time before, and that was so far important, because he could not have been at Pie-corner at the time he mentioned; if he was at home at the time he stated, a distance of 12 miles off, he could not have been at Pie-corner at the time he was given; and if he was not, and was stating a conversation when he was not there, that would make him a witness upon whom they could place no reliance, and therefore they must consider first whether he was entitled to any credit at their hands. Mary Jones said he was in bed about 8 or 9 o'clock. Then, however, the inquiry was shifted—was she the witness of truth, because they could not set up one against the other unless they were satisfied one was superior to the other? This woman was at variance in her statement with the man Hodges, but in answer to her testimony they called another witness on behalf of the Crown, and they desired then to infer that Mary Jones could not be correct in her statement, and this was a man of the name of Watts, who stated that he saw Hodges, at half-past 7 in the morning, about three miles from Pie-corner, and that he knew the time from having looked at his watch and from the time of the morning. There was a man on horseback riding past to the tramroad, and he met Hodges by the Welch Oak. If this man was correct, then the evidence of Mary Jones could not be true; but it was for them to make up their minds upon the manner in which the witnesses gave their testimony, their appearance, and still more upon the probability of the circumstances to which they spoke. Then an inquiry, and a very proper one, was made, whether the witness had not been taking an active part for the prosecution—whether he had not been a busybody, getting up evidence; because if a man was so busy in assisting to get up the cause in which he was to be a witness, that would weaken his evidence. He said he had rendered assistance, and would do so again; that he was a constable. That was the direct contradiction offered to the testimony of Hodges,—that being extremely important as to what he heard at Pie-corner, it was for them to decide. The question of contradiction of evidence rested with the jury. For the defence they put in the deposition of Hodges before the magistrates in order to show that he had omitted in his deposition one or two things he had stated in this Court. The object, and a very proper one it was, was to show that he had not given an account in his deposition of the conversation which yesterday he had given as having taken place between the man in the glazed hat and the other person. The reason he had given was that he was not examined so particularly before the magistrates as he was in court, that he was told to state what he knew about Mr. Frost, and, inasmuch as this was not a statement made by Frost, he, in his own mind, thought it was not included in the general direction to state what took place. That was the reason he gave: it was an important piece of evidence, and one could not but wonder that matter of such importance should have been omitted in the first examination, but whether he was speaking truly or falsely was for their consideration; whether he had given a sufficient reason or not, they must judge of it for themselves. Therefore, with respect to this witness, James Hodges, the testimony he had given was liable to two strong observations on the other side—namely, the contradiction of Mary Jones, and the omission on a former occasion of that which he now put forward as having been said by the man in a glazed hat.

The next witness, George Lloyd, spoke to the proceedings that took place in the adjoining parish, when Zephaniah Williams was supposed to have come down. It was no direct evidence against Mr. Frost; it was no immediate testimony to show that this observation about the necessity of being at Newport at two in the morning, was either communicated to Mr. Frost or adopted by him; but it was a feature in the case that another person connected with him did say the intention was to be in Newport by two o'clock. It was only matter of evidence, which they were to adopt or not, that this was ever communicated to him. In point of fact, they did not arrive till nine in the morning.

Then came James James; and he says, that orders were given that the men on the mountains were to arm themselves, and to provide themselves with victuals for their support; and afterwards he found those on the hills armed pretty much in the same way as the others. They would give all the weight it deserved as to that particular department of the men who were to come with Zephaniah Williams. According to his statement, he did not expect anything of that serious nature at Newport which afterwards occurred. Some of the persons had arms with them at the time, and therefore to the observation made that they did not intend there should be any conflict or danger arising from the arms, they would give their own meaning. Zephaniah Williams, he said, had told them to keep the peace. That was an observation denoting that he was rather disposed to gain his purpose by keeping the peace, and not by breaking it. But this again, they must recollect, was some time before the riot.

In the examination of William Howell, he stated that Zephaniah Williams had told him there was to be a large meeting on the mountain, and they were to take something with them to defend themselves, for fear that some people might interrupt them. The danger of large bodies of persons carrying arms to defend themselves was that they might attack as well as defend. He did not state that there was any object at that time to come down from the mountain, and therefore one did not exactly see what danger there would be to require any arms for the purpose of defending themselves. Whether there were any persons on the look-out for them there was no evidence, but the statement the witness made was that the arms were taken by them for the purpose of defending themselves if they were interrupted.

After reading the evidence of Mr. Brough, who had been released by Frost from the custody of the Pontypool men, the learned Judge said it had been used on the part of the prosecution, and also by the counsel for the prisoner. On the part of the Crown, the witness was produced to convince the jury of the power Frost had over the whole of those who were on the following morning found in the town of Newport. The men, who had only spoken of Jones before their leader, immediately Frost expressed the wish, allowed Mr. Brough and his companions to go at large. On the part of the prisoner, the evidence of Mr. Brough was used for the purpose of showing that Frost, being a man of humane and kind disposition, ready to do a kind action to persons, at the very time, would not be guilty of the enormities charged against the prisoner.

Mr. Kelly.—Pardon me, my Lord, we also used Mr. Brough's evidence for the purpose of showing that Frost was at the Welch Oak at day-break.

The CHIEF JUSTICE said he was very much obliged to the learned counsel. The evidence was also used by the prisoner as a contradiction of Hodges' evidence, as to the time when the conversation occurred with the prisoner at the corner.

The learned Judge then commented on the evidence of John Harford, another important witness as to the declarations made by the prisoner at the bar. The ground, said his Lordship, which the cross-examination of this witness was submitted to the jury to invalidate the weight attached to it was that, in the first place, the man had been imprisoned on a charge of being concerned in the transaction they were now inquiring into, and was, therefore, to be looked on as an accomplice, and liable to the same objections to which a partner in guilt with the prisoner was at all times subject. The answer the witness gave to that was, that all the he had in the transaction consisted in his being present with a sword in his hand, but against his will, and he undertook to say that he was not afraid of anything that might happen to him, being convinced as soon as he told his story to the magistrates, not having willingly participated in any act of criminality, he would be released. It should be remembered that people were often found to consult their own safety by giving evidence for the Crown against a prisoner in the situation of the man at the bar: and their object being to save themselves rather than state the truth, they sometimes would make out a case against others unfavourable to themselves.

(To be continued.)

LIST OF SHERIFFS, UNDER-SHERIFFS, THEIR DEPUTIES, AND AGENTS,
FOR 1840.

are granted in Town for all places except Exeter, Durham, Cinque Ports, Cardiganshire, Glamorganshire, Lancashire, and Kingston-upon-Hull.

| Counties, &amp;c.                                                                   | Sheriffs.                              | Under Sheriffs. | Deputies for granting Warrants, &amp;c. and Town Agents. |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------|------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| BEDFORDSHIRE.—William Frederick                                                            |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| n, of Dunstable, Esq.                                                                      |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| BIRMINGHAM.—Henry Hippisley, of Charles James Barnes, Messrs. Rickards and Walker,         |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| some-place, Esq.                                                                           | Esq. Lambourn.                                |                        | 29, Lincoln's-inn-fields.                                       |
| BURTON-UPON-TWEED.                                                                         |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| , City of.—Richard Vaughan, William Ody Hare, Esq. Messrs. Bridges and Mason, 23,          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
|                                                                                            | Bristol.                                      |                        | Red-lion-square.                                                |
| CAMBRIDGESHIRE.—John Peter Deer- J. Rumsey, Esq. High Messrs. Alexander, Gem, and          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| of the Lee, Esq.                                                                           | Wycombe (A. U. Mr. Pooley, 60, Lincoln's-inn- |                        |                                                                 |
|                                                                                            | H. Hatten, Aylesbury).                        |                        | fields.                                                         |
| CANTERBURY and HUNTS.—T. Mort- Charles Pestell Harris, Esq. Messrs. Taylor, Sharpe, Field, |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| of Little Abingdon, Esq.                                                                   | Cambridge.                                    |                        | and Jackson, 41, Bedford-row.                                   |
| CANTERBURY, City of.—James Fyfe, Thomas Wilkinson, Esq. Mr. Thomas Kirk, 10, Symond's      |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
|                                                                                            | Canterbury.                                   |                        | Inn.                                                            |
| CHESHIRE.—John Tollemache, of Til- Thomas Bond Dumville, Mr. John Cole, 4, Adelphi-ter-    |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| Lodge, Esq.                                                                                | Esq. Tarporley.                               |                        | race, Strand.                                                   |
| CHESHIRE, City of.—Thomas Griffith, Finchett Maddock, Esq. Messrs. Philpot and Stone, 3,   |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
|                                                                                            | Chester.                                      |                        | Southampton-st., Bloomsbury.                                    |
| CINQUE PORTS.—His Grace the Duke Thomas Pain, Esq. Dover. Messrs. Egan, Waterman, and      |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| Wilmington.                                                                                |                                               |                        | Wright, 23, Essex-st., Strand.                                  |
| CORNWALL.—Sir Richard Rawlinson, P. P. Smith, Esq. Truro. Messrs. Adlington, Gregory, and  |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| in, of Trelowarren, Bart.                                                                  |                                               |                        | Co. 1, Bedford-row.                                             |
| DERBY, City of.—Samuel New- Messrs. Troughton and Messrs. Austin and Robson, 4,            |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| Esq.                                                                                       | Lea, Coventry.                                |                        | Raymond-buildings.                                              |
| DEVON.—Sir George Musgrave, Thos. Dobson Bleaymire, Mr. Addison, 8, Mecklenburgh-          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| in Hall, Bart.                                                                             | Esq. Penrith.                                 |                        | square.                                                         |
| DEVON.—Sir Henry John Jo- John Barber, Esq. Derby. Mr. George Capes, 48, Bedford-          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| Hunloke, of Wingerworth, Bt.                                                               |                                               |                        | row.                                                            |
| DEVON.—Augustus Stowey, of Charles Brutton, Esq. Ex- Messrs. Brutton and Clipperton,       |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| try, Esq.                                                                                  | eter.                                         |                        | 17, Bedford-row.                                                |
| DEVON.—J. S. W. S. Erle Drax, H. M. Aldridge, Esq. Messrs. Cuvelge and Co. South-          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| arborough Park, Esq.                                                                       | Poole.                                        |                        | ampton-buildings.                                               |
| DEVON.—Sir Hedworth Williams, of John Bramwell, Esq. Mr. James Griffith, 6, Ray-           |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| ourn Hall, Bart.                                                                           | Durham.                                       |                        | mond-buildings.                                                 |
| DEVON.—Christopher Thos. Tower, of Thomas Morgan Gepp, Mr. T. W. Nelson, 1, New-           |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| Hall, Esq.                                                                                 | Esq. Chelmsford.                              |                        | court, Temple.                                                  |
| DEVON, City of.—Richard Bastard, Richard Thomas Abra- Mr. H. T. Shaw, 18, Ely-place.       |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
|                                                                                            | ham, Esq. Exeter.                             |                        |                                                                 |
| GLoucestershire.—Sir M. H. Beach, John Burrup, Esq. Glou- Messrs. Jones, Trinder, & Tud-   |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| Williamstrip Park, Fairford, Bart.                                                         | cester.                                       |                        | way, 1, John-st. Bedford-row.                                   |
| GLoucester, City of.—Charles James Thos. Bailey, Esq. Glou- Mr. Wilton, 16, Gray's-inn-    |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| t, Esq.                                                                                    | cester.                                       |                        | square.                                                         |
| GLoucester.—John Meggott Elwes, Charles Seagrim, Esq. Mr. Sowton, 27, Great James-         |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| ssington House, Esq.                                                                       | Winchester.                                   |                        | street, Bedford-row.                                            |
| GLoucestershire.—Thomas Heywood, Thos. Evans, Esq. Here- Mr. C. G. Jones, 11, Gray's-      |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| ope End, Esq.                                                                              | ford.                                         |                        | inn-square.                                                     |
| GLoucestershire.—Charles Snell George Nicholson, Esq. Messrs. Hawkins, Bloxham, and        |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| ncey, of Little Munden, Esq.                                                               | Hertford.                                     |                        | Stocker, 2, New Boswell-court.                                  |
| GLoucestershire.—Arthur Pott, of Bentham Hill, William Woodgate, Esq.                      |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| ridge Wells, Esq.                                                                          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| KINGSTON-UPON-HULL.—William Thos. Holden, Esq. Hull. Messrs. Hicks and Marris, 5,          |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| nes, Esq.                                                                                  |                                               |                        | Gray's-inn-square.                                              |
| LANCASHIRE.—Thomas Fitzherbert Messrs. Pilkington and Mr. Fiddey, 14, Serjeants'-inn,      |                                               |                        |                                                                 |
| holes, of Claughton Hall, Esq.                                                             | Walker, Preston.                              |                        | Fleet-street.                                                   |

| Counties, &c.          | Sheriffs.                                             | Under-Sheriffs.                                                | Deputies, &c.                                                    |
|------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------|
| LEICESTERSHIRE.—       | Sir George Joseph Palmer, of Wanlip, Bart.            |                                                                |                                                                  |
| LITCHFIELD, City of.—  | Halford Wotton Hewitt, Esq.                           | John P. Dyott, Esq. Litchfield.                                | Messrs. R. M. and C. Baxter 48, Lincoln's-inn-fields.            |
| LINCOLNSHIRE.—         | Thomas George Corbett, of Elsham Hall, Esq.           | John Nicholson, Esq. Brigg.                                    | Messrs. Dyneley, Coverdale, and Lee, 1, Field-court, Gray's-inn. |
| LINCOLN, City of.—     | George Bailey, Esq.                                   | Richard Mason, Esq. Lincoln.                                   | Messrs. Willis, Bower, & Willis 6, Tokenhouse-yard.              |
| LONDON, City of.—      | William Evans and John Wheelton, Esqs.                | Thomas France, Esq. Bedford-row.                               | 24, Secondary's Office, Basinghall street.                       |
| MIDDLESEX.—            | Ditto ditto.                                          | Henry Jackson, Esq. St. Helen's-place.                         | 15, Messrs. Burchell and Co. Re lion-square.                     |
| MONMOUTHSHIRE.—        | Summers Harford, of Sirhowy, Esq.                     | Henry Mostyn, Esq. Usk.                                        | Messrs. White and Whitmore 2, Bedford-row.                       |
| NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—  | Robert William Dunn, Esq. New-Boyd, Esq.              | castle.                                                        | Messrs. Clayton and Cookson, New-square, Lincoln's-inn.          |
| NORFOLK.—              | Henry Villebois, of Marham House, Esq.                | Fred. Browne Bell, Esq. Downham Market.                        | Messrs. Taylor, Sharpe, Field and Jackson, 41, Bedford row.      |
| NORWICH, City of.—     | John Barwell, Esq.                                    | A. Dalrymple, Esq. Norwich.                                    | Messrs. Adlington, Gregor Faulkner, and Follett, 1, Bedford-row. |
| NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.—     | Thomas Alderson Cooke, of Peterborough, Esq.          | Christopher Markham, Esq. Northampton.                         | Messrs. King, Robinson, Ouse 13, Tokenhouse-yard.                |
| NORTHUMBERLAND.—       | William Lawson, of Longhirst, Esq.                    |                                                                |                                                                  |
| NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.—      | Sir J. Granville Jukes Clifton, of Clifton, Bart.     |                                                                |                                                                  |
| NOTTINGHAM, Town of.—  | Jonathan Christopher Swann, Esq. Nevill, Esq.         | Nottingham.                                                    | Messrs. Holme, Loftus, Young, 10, New-inn.                       |
| OXFORDSHIRE.—          | Hugh Hammersley, Samuel Cooper, Esq. of Haseley, Esq. | Henley-upon-Thames.                                            | Mr. Charles Berkeley, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields.                  |
| POOLE, Town of.—       | Ambrose Tucker, Esq.                                  | Thos. Arnold, Esq. Poole.                                      | Mr. George Weller, 29, East street, Strand.                      |
| RUTLANDSHIRE.—         | Samuel Richard Fyde, of Morcott, Esq.                 |                                                                |                                                                  |
| SHROPSHIRE.—           | Thomas Eyton, of Eyton, Esq.                          | Joshua John Peele, Esq. Shrewsbury.                            | Mr. Harvey B. Jones, 22, Austin Friars.                          |
| SOMERSETSHIRE.—        | John Jarrett, of Camerton, Esq.                       | Edward Coles, Esq. Taunton.                                    | Messrs. W. & E. Dyne, Lincoln's-inn-fields.                      |
| SOUTHAMPTON, Town of.— | John Hole, Esq.                                       | Richard Blanchard, Esq. Southampton.                           | Messrs. Davies and Cleobury, Warwick-street, Regent-st.          |
| STAFFORDSHIRE.—        | Henry John Pye, Esq.                                  | Francis Willington, Esq. Tamworth.                             | Messrs. Swain, Stevens, & Co. Frederick's-place, Old Jewry.      |
| SUFFOLK.—              | George St. Vincent Wilson, of Redgrave, Esq.          | John Jackson, Esq. St. Edmunds.                                | Messrs. Dixon, 5, New Bow court.                                 |
| SURREY.—               | The Hon. J. P. Locke King, of Woburn Farm, Chertsey.  | Mr. Potter, Guildford.                                         | Messrs. Jenkins and Abbott New-inn.                              |
| SUSSEX.—               | John Davies Gilbert, of Eastbourne, Esq.              |                                                                |                                                                  |
| WARWICKSHIRE.—         | Dempster Fleming, Esq.                                | J. W. Unett, Esq. Birmingham.                                  | Messrs. Tooke and Son, Bedford-row.                              |
| WESTMORELAND.—         | The Earl of Thanet.                                   | John Heelis, jun. Esq. Appleby.                                | Mr. George Mounsey Gray Staple-inn, Holborn.                     |
| WILTSHIRE.—            | William Henry Fox Talbot, of Lacock Abbey, Esq.       | West Awdry, Esq. Chippenham.                                   | Messrs. Nethersole and Bell 15, Essex-street, Strand.            |
| WORCESTERSHIRE.—       | James Foster, of Stourbridge, Esq.                    | George Clarke, Esq. (A. U. Messrs. Gillam and Son, Worcester.) | Messrs. Cardale and Ill Bedford-row.                             |
| WORCESTER, City of.—   | William Corles, Esq.                                  | Edward Corles, Esq. Worcester.                                 | Mr. Becke, 59, Lincoln's-inn-fields.                             |

| Justices, &amp;c.                               | Sheriffs. | Under-Sheriffs. | Deputies, &amp;c.                               |
|--------------------------------------------------------|------------------|------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------|
| IRE.—Sir Clifford Constable, James Russell, Esq. York. |                  |                        | Messrs. Beaven and Anderson, 2, Adelphi-terrace.       |
| ton Constable, Bart.                                   |                  |                        |                                                        |
| City of.—William North, Esq. John North, Esq. York.    |                  |                        | Messrs. R. M. and C. Baxter, 48, Lincoln's-inn-fields. |

SOUTH WALES.

|                                                                                                         |                  |                                |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------|--------------------------------|
| SHIRE. — Richard Douglas Henry Mayberry, Esq. Messrs. I. Gregory and Son, 12, h, of Yniscedwin, Esq.    | Brecon.          | Clement's-inn.                 |
| ANSHIRE. — John William Horatio Hughes, Esq. Messrs. Hawkins and Co. 2, , of Llanarchayron, Esq.        | Aberystwyth.     | New Boswell-Court.             |
| THEN, Borough of.—John Philip Griffith Jones, Esq. Messrs. Poole and Gamlen, l Davis, Esq.              | Carmarthen.      | Gray's inn-square.             |
| THESHIRE. — John Lloyd of Glanwilly, Esq.                                                               |                  |                                |
| IGANSHIRE. — Michael Wil- C. B. Mansfield, Esq. Messrs. Holme, Loftus, and of Scorrer, near Truro, Esq. | Swansea.         | Young, 10, New-inn.            |
| KESHIRE.—Richard Llewellyn, William Lock, Esq. of Messrs. Norris, Allen, & Simp- gwynt, Esq.            | Tenbey.          | son, 19, Bartlett's-buildings. |
| SHIRE.—Edward Roger, of Thomas Stephens Rogers, Messrs. Meredith and Reeve, 8, ge Park, Esq.            | Esq. of Kington. | New-square, Lincoln's-inn.     |

NORTH WALES.

|                                                                                                        |                                           |                       |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| IA.—Sir Love Parry Jones Messrs. Williams & Breeze Messrs. Williams and Roberts, of Madryn, Bart.      | of Pwllheli (A. U. Mr. 38, Hatton-garden. |                       |
|                                                                                                        | Owen Owen, of Gadlys, near Beaumaris.)    |                       |
| VONSHIRE.—The Hon. Edw. Messrs. Williams & Breeze, Ditto                                               | ditto                                     |                       |
| n Lloyd Mostyn, of Plas Hen.                                                                           | of Pwllheli.                              |                       |
| HSHIRE. — Townshend Main- Richard Williams, Esq. Mr. Dean, Essex-street, Strand.                       |                                           |                       |
| g, of Marchwiel Hall, Esq.                                                                             | Denbigh.                                  |                       |
| IRE.—William Shipley Con- C. W. Wyatt, Esq. St. Messrs. Bloxam and Ellison, 2, of Bodryddan, Esq.      | Asaph.                                    | Lincoln's-inn-fields. |
| ETHSHIRE. — George Price Messrs. Williams & Breeze, Messrs. Williams and Roberts, , of Plasyndre, Esq. | of Pwllheli.                              | 38, Hatton-garden.    |
| MERYSHIRE.—Thomas Evans, Thomas Edmund Marsh, Mr. E. S. Bigg, 38, Southamp- mol, Esq.                  | Esq. Llanidloes.                          | ton-buildings.        |

FREEDHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT LL.—(Continued from p. 318.)

Payment to Steward. Sums payable to the steward for compensation to be paid to the executors or administrators.

Receipts to be Discharges. Receipts to be given to whom money directed to be paid to the charge person making payment; and, for evidencing payment, the steward shall, for compensation, forthwith after payment, to payment for enfranchisement from the rights, forthwith after production of the same, signed by the party entitled to the same, enter, on the copy apportionment, be deposited with him as aforesaid, a return of such payments; and such return shall be sufficient evidence of such payments, and discharge lands and person from the sums therein mentioned to be

Lands to become Freehold, &c. From the final confirmation and apportionment

the lands therein comprised shall, subject to the payment of the enfranchisement consideration in favour of lords and stewards as aforesaid, become and be of freehold tenure, and all mortgages affecting the same shall be deemed and become mortgages in fee of the same lands, if such enfranchisement consideration shall be paid off; and, if not so paid off, mortgages in fee of the equity of redemption thereof, subject to such mortgage estates respectively as aforesaid, for securing such consideration; provided that nothing in the act contained shall operate to deprive any tenant of any commonable right to which he may be entitled in respect of such lands, but such right shall continue attached to such lands notwithstanding the same shall become freehold.

71. Reservation of Lord's other Rights. The act not to affect rights of lords of manors to escheats, fairs, markets, appointments, franchises, royalties, rights of chase and in game, fisheries, &c., or any rights in mines or minerals, save that the person whose lands shall be enfranchised, his heirs, &c. shall have right to dig for, raise and get stones, lime, slate, clay, brick-earth, turf, or peat.

72. Substituted Titles. The lands enfranchised shall be deemed to be held under the same title up to the time of enfranchisement as that under which the same were held at the time of the enfranchisement, and shall not be subject to any estates, rights, titles, interests, incumbrances, claims, or demands affecting the manor of which the same were holden.

73. Power to Lords and Tenants to effect Enfranchisements independent of the Act.

For the purpose of affording to the lords and tenants respectively the opportunity of obtaining an enfranchisement of their respective lands, free from any delay or expense under this act, it shall be lawful for the lord and tenants of any manor (whatsoever may be their interest therein), with the consent of the commissioners under this act, at any time or times before such agreement for enfranchisement as aforesaid shall be entered into, to enfranchise any of the lands holden of the said manor, in consideration of a sum of money to be agreed on between them and the tenants affected, and certain facilities are given to such enfranchisements.

74. How such Enfranchisements may be effected.

Every such enfranchisement shall be made by such conveyance, deed, or assurance as would be adopted for effecting such enfranchisement if the lords were seised of the manor for an absolute estate of inheritance in fee simple in possession.

75. Agreements, Contracts, and Awards not to be liable to Stamp Duties.

No agreement, award, or power of attorney made or confirmed or used this act chargeable with any stamp duty.

76. Correspondence of Commissioners relating to this Act to be free of Postage.

77. False Evidence to be deemed Perjury. Withholding Evidence a Misdemeanor.

78. Limitation of Actions against Commissioners, Assistant Commissioners, Justices of the Peace, &c.

79. Proceedings under this Act not to be quashed for Want of Form, nor to be removed by Certiorari.

80. Limits of Act.

81. Act may be altered this Session.

82. Interpretation Clause. In construction of act, unless something in subject or context repugnant to such construction, the words after mentioned, or similar words, to extend to and be construed as herein provided; (that is to say,)

The word "Manor" shall extend to manor or reputed manor, of whatsoever tenure the same may be.

The words "lord" and "steward" shall include the person or persons for the time being filling those respective characters, or acting in those respective capacities, whether those persons shall be lawfully or rightfully entitled to fill such characters or act in such capacities or not.

The words "tenant" or "tenants" shall extend to and comprise persons holding by Copy of Court Roll or as customary tenants, or holding lands subject to any manorial rights, and whether holding to them and their heirs, or for life, or in any other manner whatsoever.

The words "land" or "lands" shall extend to and comprise all lands, of whatever tenure, holden of the manor, and whether the interest therein to be affected shall be an estate of inheritance in fee, or for life or lives, absolute or qualified, or for any other estate or interest whatsoever.

The word "enfranchisement" shall mean and include the commutation or discharge of all lands holden of a manor from heriots or any manorial rights.

The word "person" or "party" shall extend to and include the Queen's Majesty, and any body politic, corporate, or collegiate, as well as an individual.

Every word imputing the singular number only shall extend to and include several persons or parties as well as one person or party, and several things as well as one thing respectively, and the converse.

And every word imputing the masculine gender only shall extend to and include a female as well as a male.

NEW FORMS OF WRITS.

(Continued from page 314.)

No. III.

Writ of Capias ad Satisfaciendum, on an order of the Court of Queen's Bench, for payment of money and costs.

Victoria, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith; to the Sheriff of ———, greeting. We command you that you take C. D. if he shall be found within your Bailiwick, and him safely keep, so that you may have his body before us at Westminster, immediately after the execution hereof, to satisfy A. B. £——, which lately in our said Court before us at Westminster, by a rule of our said Court entitled, &c. [as the case may be], were by the said Court ordered to be paid by the said C. D. to the said A. B., together with the costs of the said rule, which said costs were afterwards on the —— day of —— the year of our Lord —— taxed and allowed.

said Court, at the sum of £——, and to satisfy the said C. D., the said sum —(a), together with interest upon the several sums of £—— and £——,
at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum, from the said —— day of —— in the fourth year of our Lord ——(b), and have there then written.

Witness, Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, on the —— day of ——, in the fourth year of our Lord ——.

No. IV.

of Capias ad Satisfaciendum, on a Judgment in an inferior Court in an action of trover, removed into the Court of Queen's Bench.

Whereas, by the Grace of God, of the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; to the Sheriff of ——, greeting. We command you, that you take C. D. if he shall be found in the County of —— and him safely keep, so that he may have his body before us at Westminster, immediately after the execution of the said judgment to satisfy A. B. £—— which the said judgment of the said Court recovered of the said C. D. for his damages which he sustained, as well on occasion of the performing certain promises and undertakings then lately made by the said C. D. to the said A. B., as for his costs and charges about his suit in that behalf expended; and if the said C. D. is convicted, as appears of record, and which judgment was given on the —— day of —— in the fourth year of our Lord ——, removed into our Court at Westminster, by virtue of an order of our said Court before us at Westminster of ——, one of the Justices of our Court before us at Westminster, as the law may be,] in pursuance of the statute in that behalf made and provided, and the costs allowed upon the application for the said removal and upon the said removal were on the day of ——, in the year of our Lord —— and allowed by our said Court before us at Westminster, at the sum of £——, and to satisfy the said A. B. the said sum —(c), together with interest upon the

the amount of the costs taxed.
the day on which the costs of the rule were taxed, which were prior to the 1st of October, 1838, say the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord

the costs attendant upon the removal of the case out of the inferior Court into the Court of Queen's Bench.

said two several sums of £—— and £——,
at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum, from the said —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——,(d) and have there then this writ.

Witness Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, on the —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——.

(To be continued.)

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

March 17, 1840.

SIR,—I should not have troubled you with the following remarks, but for the very great error your correspondent R. H. has committed in answering Problem 13, vol. 3, which runs thus: "Writ of summons: describe this writ: What are the requisites of this process, and the proceedings to compel an appearance where the defendant can be served?" The first and second points raised by the problem, R. H. says have been elaborately answered by C. B. With regard to that I most readily agree with R. H. But with respect to the part of the problem which says, "What are the proceedings to compel an appearance when the defendant can be served?" R. H. informs us what we are to do if the defendant cannot be served; consequently he has given us an answer just the reverse to what the problem required.

I hope, whilst making the above remarks, it will not be supposed that I impute the least carelessness or partiality upon the learned Editor of this truly valuable work;
my only motives being to point out to R. H.
the great error he has committed, (for if
R. H. will refer to pp. 147 and 163, vol. 2, he will see that C. B. has given us information upon the proceedings necessary for a distringas), and to submit to the learned Editor whether this answer is or is not a proper answer to the problem which was asked.

I remain, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

S. A. W.

(d) The day on which the costs of removal were taxed.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. M.—E. A. or, E. D.—R. H.—L. P.
—W. A.—S. T.—I. I.—I. A.—M. W.—W.
R.—S. C.—B. B.—all under consideration.

An Articled Clerk.—You must not place reliance on the first book named in your letter. The second needs no comment, but you must in these days of constant change assist its reading with modern authorities. The third, if one of the modern editions, you must read cautiously. The information you seek, you will find in Vol. I. of this work, p. 175.; take the new edition of the first work there mentioned. No Gentleman, wishing to pass the examination, should be without.

"UNUS à MULTIS."—Every Articled Clerk must continue and be actually employed by the Attorney or Solicitor to whom he is articled, or by his Agent, in the proper business, practice, or employment of an Attorney or Solicitor during the entire period of five years; and of that time one year only may be served with the Agent; and he may serve, not exceeding one year, as pupil to a practising barrister or certificated special pleader.

A. H.—Does not the preceding notice also answer your questions? if not, write again.

Δ.—It is not within our rule to answer cases (if at all), twice. We will endeavour next week to comply.

RICHARD ROB.—To do as you require would be equal to an advertisement. Our publisher will send you the number (vol. i. no. 11.) if you require it.

R. H.—See letter by S. A. W.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Letters continue to arrive requiring the double number, but the applicants are still in a minority. We may add, in reply to many, that the extra sheet would be exclusively devoted to clearing off OUR MONTHLY ARREAR; after we shall have got rid of our large stock on hand. We shall most certainly not copy the London Gazette or Lloyd's List.—We had hoped to have given answers to two problems this week; that is however impossible.

AMICUS.—We have some assents to your proposition. (See the letter ante, p. 320.)

ERRATUM.

Ante, p. 307.—Col. 1, line 8 from the top, for "sued" read "served."

On April 1, will be published, price 1s. 6d. to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part III.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING,
adapted to the Present State of the Law.
Illustrated with Notes, Practical and General, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents, which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for grants; LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

Vol. IV. Part II. contains
ASSIGNMENTS.

Part III. will contain

A NEW FORM of Assignment of several Terms to attend the inheritance to one Trustee—and save the expense of several Trustees—and the law relating to such Terms—and

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS,

With the Law relating to USES; REMAINDERS and POWERS.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Bookellers
104, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Cornhill, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookeller, 104, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, March 21, 1841

The Legal Guide.

. III.]

SATURDAY, MARCH 28, 1840.

[No. 22.]

THE LAWS OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.

(Continued from page 322.)

PROTECTOR OF A SETTLEMENT.

TRUSTEES TO SUPPORT CONTINGENT REMAINDERS.

The last point to be considered is, what will be the effect of the fine and recovery?

As to the fine, it hath been insisted that it is a feoffment upon record, and that a fine by tenant for years is not void; as to the recovery, it must be considered either as a lease for years, or as a fine of a reversioner in tail; fines of lessee for years, I think, are not absolutely void, but operate by estoppel, and therefore bar the claiming under them; a reversioner cannot recover by a fine, for this reason, and it bars him in tail, but it can never be contended that the fine of a reversioner can get hold; let us therefore consider it as the fine of a lessee for years; it has been said that lessee for years in this case might be barred all remainders by a feoffment; that a fine sur done grant and render is a gift, which means a feoffment, &c. III.

and therefore is equivalent to a feoffment. I am of opinion that even a feoffment would not have been a bar unless the trustees had been asleep, for they might have immediately entered and possessed the estate, if they had lain by till the recovery had been perfected, that might have been a bar, but that is not to be supposed. It has been said that a fine supposes a feoffment, but the word done, though it sometimes signifies a feoffment, has many other significations; it may signify grants of incorporeal inheritances, which will not pass by feoffment, and therefore does not necessarily suppose a feoffment. A feoffment differs very materially from a fine, for in notoriety of fact, the feoffment is supposed to be made openly upon the land, and the feoffee is immediately put into the possession, but a fine has nothing public except the proclamations; and, therefore, by the Act of Parliament of 4 Henry 7, nonclaim runs only from the proclamations; whereas, if a fine supposes a feoffment, it will have its effect from the time of acknowledging, which is a private transaction; a feoffment can only lie of land, a fine may be of tithes and in other corporeal inheritances.

Great weight has been laid upon Lord Coke's authority, who says a fine is a feoffment upon record; he was certainly a great man, which has made some people think every thing he says is right, though he has his mistakes; but in answer to it, I shall offer two or three great authorities, and one of equal age and authority with Lord Coke: In the cases that were cited at the bar, it was determined by Lord Chief Justice Holt and Lord Macclesfield, that a fine was a feoffment upon record, when the party had such an estate as will entitle him to levy a fine, that is, an estate of freehold; otherwise a fine has no effect whatsoever with respect to a stranger, and operates as an estoppel only, and bars none but the party claiming under it.

As to the authority I promised which was equal to the authority of Lord Coke, it is Lord Coke himself, who in the page before that of the case cited Co. Lit. 9, a, has these expressions: a feoffment is the most ancient and sure way of conveyance, both for that it is solemn and public, and therefore best proved, and also for that it cleareth all disseisins, &c. which cannot be done even by fine and recovery; so that it is Lord Coke's own opinion that a feoffment can effect that which a fine and recovery cannot; and therefore it cannot longer be maintained that he has laid it down, a fine is to all purposes a feoffment upon record.

It was said that if a fine was void in this case how would it make a forfeiture? there are sure many cases where an act may be void as against another, and yet be a forfeiture to the person. I will give one instance, that of a copyhold tenant. A lease made by him is certainly void against the lord, and yet is a forfeiture.

The Court was of opinion that the fine and recovery were no bar to the remainders.

PROBLEM XXII. VOL. III.

WRIT OF INQUIRY IN ORDINARY CASES.

What is this writ? In what cases is it necessary? How is it executed, and in what manner is execution had after verdict?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM VI.

VOL. 3. p. 84.

What is an estate tail by implication?

On the creation of an estate tail by deed it is absolutely necessary to express that the heirs are to be of the body of a person; for if by deed lands be given to a man and his heirs, male or female, the word "male" or "female" is rejected, and the donee takes fee simple.

An estate tail by implication, therefore, arises in those cases where the words "of the body" are not strictly required, but may be expressed by words which amount to as much.

If a person by will devise lands to a man and his heirs male, this, by construction of law, is an express estate tail, the law supplying the words "of his body;" but as express estates tail are not the subject of present consideration, I shall, in the solution of this problem, confine myself as strictly as possible to the object in view, and adduce the ten following instances, in each of which, an estate tail has arisen by implication.

1. Where a man devises to A. for life, and then gives the subject of such devise over to B., after the failure of issue of A. In this case it clearly appears, that an interest only is given to A., and that the benefit is given to B. whilst there is no issue of A. The consequence is, that no interest springs to B., and no express estate is given after the death of A. The intermediate interest would be supposed of, unless A. were considered as taking for the benefit of his issue as well as of himself, and as the words in this case are susceptible of such an amplification, an intention in the testator is naturally implied, that A. should so take, that the property should be transmissible through him to his issue.

e was therefore considered as taking an estate tail by implication, which would lead to such issue.

Where there was a devise to A. generally, and if he died without heirs or issue (general or special), then over it was construed an estate tail by implication in A. Where an estate was given to A. for life, and if he died without issue, then to B., it was likewise construed an estate tail in A. by implication.

In a case where there was a devise to A. for life, and if he died leaving no child lawfully begotten, then over, this was also considered as an implied estate tail in A.

Where a testator having two sons, A. and B., devised that if A., his eldest son, should happen to die and leave no issue of his lawfully begotten, that then, and in that case, and not otherwise, after the death of his said son A., he gave and bequeathed all his lands of inheritance in H. to B., to have and to hold the same, after the death of the said A., to him and his heirs, it was held that A. took an estate tail by implication, and that the limitation to B. was a remainder expectant on such estate tail.

It was also construed an estate tail by implication, where the devise was to "A. for life, and for the maintenance, and after her death, if she should die without issue," then to another.

And so, where the testator "made A. his heir, and if he died without issue," then over.

In the case of a devise "to A., and if he should die without heirs, then over to his sister or collateral heir," the word heirs was construed heirs of the body, because A. was not to die without having heirs, if "his sister or other collateral heir" was living at the time of his death, and therefore the word "heirs" was construed heirs of the body, and accordingly that devise was held to give an estate tail by implication to A.

Where lands were devised "to the three daughters of A. to be equally divided, and if any of them died before the other, then the others to be her heirs, equally to be divided, and if they all died without issue," then over, the devise was construed an estate tail by implication.

Lastly. Where a person seised in fee devised his lands to A. and his heirs, and if he died without issue then to B. In this case (as in all others of a similar nature) the death of A. without heirs was considered as a remote possibility, and the devise was qualified by the addition of the words "and if he died without issue," to give an estate tail by implication to A.

The above instances of an estate's tail arising by implication, it will be observed, principally resulted from the state of the law before the passing of the statute 1 Victoria, cap. 26, "For Amending the Law relating to Wills." In wills made after the 1st of January, 1838, the rule of construction is now very materially altered by ss. 28 and 29 of that statute in respect to devises similar to most of those above instanced, as giving estates tail by implication; it being thereby enacted, that where the expressions "die without issue," or "die without leaving issue," or "have no issue," or any other words occur which may import either a want or failure of issue of any person in his lifetime, or at the time of his death, or an indefinite failure of his issue, they shall be construed to mean a want or failure of issue in the lifetime or at the time of the death of such person, and not an indefinite failure of his issue, unless a contrary intention appears by the will. The effect of this enactment will be to give the first devisee an executory devise, defeasible on his dying without issue living at the time of his death, instead of an estate tail as heretofore, and this alteration in the rules of construction makes a very material alteration in the estate of the person entitled under the devise, over as well as in the quantity and value of the estate of the first devisee, as the following example will shew:—

If the devise were to A. generally, or to A. and his heirs, and if he dies without issue to B.; or to B. and his heirs under the old rule of construction, A. took an estate tail, and of course as an inseparable incident thereto the power of acquiring the absolute ownership, by suffering a recovery which would bar B.'s remainder, whether it were for life or in fee; but now, by sec. 28 of the above-cited statute, the devise to A. without words of limitation carries the fee, and by sec. 29 above cited, the devise over gives a fee to B., to take effect in the event of A.'s dying without leaving issue living at his death, an executory devise, indefeasible by A.

E. A.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND.

March 23.

Sir E. SUGDEN gave notice, "that if any measure were introduced into this House for the appointment of additional equity judges, unaccompanied by any improvement of the present appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords, he should at some stage of the measure take an opportunity of drawing the attention of the House to the necessity of such improvement. The propositions he intended to make known he would lay before the House at an early day, so as to be printed with the votes."

March 24.

PRINTED PAPERS.

Printed Papers.—Petition of Thomas George Johnston Pearce (presented the 12th of March) read: Motion made, and question proposed—That Thomas George Johnston Pearce be excused from the payment of the sum of 4l. 19s. being the cost of his maintenance during his confinement: and that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to supply the said Thomas George Johnston Pearce with rations free of expense." (Sir F. Burdett.) Amendment proposed, to leave out from "Thomas George Johnston Pearce" to the end of the question, in order to add the words "be discharged forthwith from the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms attending this House," instead thereof: Question put,

"That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the question." The House divided,—Ayes, 98; Noes, 56.

Law Reports.

ROLLS COURT.—Dec. 24.

IN RE BOORD SOLICITOR.

COUNTRY ATTORNIES AND THEIR LONDON AGENTS.—Whether the BILL of COSTS of a London Agent, upon the Application of the Country Solicitor, is or is not taxable; and if so, whether as of course or upon terms.

Mr. Pemberton appeared upon the petition of Mr. Boord, a country solicitor, praying that his London agents, Messrs. Morris and Beke, might be restrained from proceeding in action in the Common Pleas for the recovery of their bills of costs upon a deposit with the register of the balance in question, and that might be referred to the Master to tax all costs in which they had been employed as agents for Mr. Boord upon the principle of country solicitor and town agent. Mr. Morris claimed that he did not act as agent in some of the matters he had transacted, but as a solicitor generally. He had not communicated to the petitioner that he had so done; if he had, the petitioner would have had an opportunity of exercising his discretion whether he would have permitted Mr. Morris to act for him upon such terms. No arrangement was entered into allowing other than agency charges to be made.

Mr. Dixon said the point was material, because it involved the question whether the costs of a London agent, upon the application of a country solicitor, was or was not taxable. The act which gave the right to tax costs was 2 George II., c. 23, but the 12th George II. enacted that that act should not extend to bills, fees, charges, or disbursements that should become due from attorneys or solicitors to attorneys or solicitors. There was a decision of the Court of Common Pleas in "Weymouth v. Knipe," 3 Bing. N. C. against the taxation of such bills. (a)

Mr. Pemberton said the jurisdiction of the Court had been established in the case of "v. Nuttall," 2 Myl. & Ker. 284, (b) before the Vice-Chancellor. There was an order of the Master of the Rolls in 1745 for taxation, and an attempt to discharge that order before Mr. Hardwicke was not successful. His judgment was that the petitioner was entitled to an order for all the bills upon the ground of principal agent, and not of solicitor and client.

Jan. 13.

LANGDALE said he had referred to the case, and that, with the exception of Weymouth v. Knipe, cited by Mr. Dixon, he found nothing in conformity with all of them, and must therefore grant the prayer of this rule made accordingly.

In that case proceedings had been brought by a London attorney against a counsellor, for whom the plaintiff had employed as town agent, and the latter sought a rule that the plaintiff should shew by his bills of costs should not be referred to the prothonotary to be taxed, as an undertaking to pay into Court 4*l.*, without prejudice to his pleadings, and taking short notice of proceedings in the mean time to be contended against the rule that the Court had no power to order the taxation of bills, as the Stat. 2 G. 2, c. 23, s. 23, applied only to cases between an attorney and his client: and that to exclude all upon the subject, the Stat. 12 G. 2, c. 6, was cited,—That it was indeed so in Wilson v. Gutteridge (3 Barn. & Adol. 157.) that the Court has a para-jurisdiction, independently of the Stat. c. 23, to refer an attorney's bill for taxation in all cases. But this doctrine was overruled in the subsequent case of Dagley v. Ash, (2 Barn. and Adol. 411,) which applied the application to tax the bill of an attorney against an ordinary client, when the bill contained no taxable item; and after taking time to consider, Lord DENHAM, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said—"We have referred to the authorities in this case, and so much doubt is maintained on the point, that we cannot order the bill to be taxed." And in Clutterbuck v. Coombes, (5 Barn. and Adol. 400.) the common law jurisdiction of the Court over attorney's bills appears to be again

In support of the rule, it was argued that the present case was distinguishable from all those which had been previously brought under the consideration of the Courts. There being an actual suit pending, and the litigants being both officers of the Court, the Court had a jurisdiction over them in the double character of suitors and officers. To discharge the rule, would be virtually to decide, that the judge and jury at Nisi Prius should examine the propriety of the items charged, and the correctness of the amount claimed for each portion of the bills. Unless the power to direct taxation in such case existed, no limit could be affixed to agency charges. Wildbore v. Bryan, (8 Price, 677.) decides that the Court will not interfere on the application of the client in the cause, but that the application must be made by the immediate employer of the agent, is an express assertion of the general power. In Innes v. Hake, (2 Cox, 173.) the Chancellor, on the production of several precedents sanctioning the motion, made an order on an agent to submit his bill to taxation. And in ex parte Bearcroft, (1 Doug. 190.) it is stated to be the settled practice of the Court of Common Pleas to order the taxation of agent's bills. It was also insisted that the argument in opposition of the rule rests upon the supposition that the application has been made under the statutes referred to: but the Court possesses a common law jurisdiction over its own officers.

The COURT were of opinion that the only authority possessed by them of ordering the taxation of an attorney's bill was conferred by statute: and that as the sixth section of 12 G. 2, c. 13, had expressly exempted agents' bills from the operation of the former statute of 2 G. 2, c. 23, s. 23, they had no power to refer those bills to the prothonotary to be taxed, and accordingly the rule was discharged.

An agent need not deliver a signed bill of costs under the statute, before he delivers his bill for agency, (Sandys v. Hornby, Mo. and R. 33.) though a delivery of a bill for business done for another attorney in the superior Courts, is in other cases necessary, (Reynal v. Smith, 2 Barn. and Adol. 469.; Heming v. Wilton, 1 M. and M. 529.).—

EDITOR.

(b) The question in that case in fact was, whether the Court will permit a solicitor to obtain an order as of course for the taxation of his agent's bills which there had been obtained, and a motion was made to discharge such order. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS observed, that in a matter so much the same as the taxation of bills of costs, both at law and in equity, it was desirable that the same rule should prevail; and the rule of law, that upon an application by a solicitor for the taxation of his agent's bill, the amount of the bill should be brought into Court, was recognized by LORD ELDON, in Ostle v. Christian (1 Tur. & Russ. 324), as being equally the rule with respect to similar applications in the Court of Equity. That in Paget v. Nicholson, (Beames on costs, 361.) the rule was dispensed with under special circumstances; for as there was a fund already in the hands of the agent, which might have exceeded the amount of his bill, it was unnecessary that the amount should be brought into Court. That the defendant could not be heard to say that the bills were not agents' bills, because that was the very ground upon which he applied for an order to tax them, this order was obtained upon a suppression of facts. The order was therefore discharged with costs, as well upon the merits as upon the ground of irregularity.—

EDITOR.

BAIL COURT—Feb. 1.

(Before PATTESON, J.)

HOGSON v. CASLER.

PRACTICE—JUDGE'S SUMMONS—Whether it operates as a stay of proceedings.

Mr. Roberts had obtained a rule for setting aside a judgment the plaintiff had signed in this cause for want of a plea, the defendant having taken out a summons for time to plead, which the plaintiff had abandoned; and the question was, whether the summons operated as a stay of proceedings.

Mr. Hoggins now showed cause, and contended that the proceedings were regular; that as the summons taken out was not afterwards acted upon, it was no stay of proceedings; and from the affidavits it appeared that the present application was for the mere purpose of gaining time and putting the plaintiff to inconvenience.

Mr. Roberts—On the other side, contended that all summonses operated as a stay to proceedings till the time they were returnable. It was true that the present summons was abandoned by the plaintiff; yet the defendant, according to the rules of practice, was entitled to his second summons, and, in the interval, the proceedings would necessarily be stayed—otherwise any plaintiff might entrap a defendant into the supposition that a first summons was bona fide, prevent the defendant from pleading, and then sign judgment the moment the time had expired. The present case was one by which the defendant had been greatly deceived.

Mr. Justice PATTESON—After consulting the master, said that this judgment ought not to be set aside, as prayed by the rule, and the costs ought to be paid by the plaintiff.

Rule made accordingly.

PREROGATIVE COURT—Feb. 13.

WILL OF BARTHOLOMEW BROWN, DECEASED.
NEW WILL ACT, sec. 9.—Attestation Clause

The testator in January, 1838, made his will and added a codicil in the following December, both of these papers were duly executed and attested. In November last he made another codicil, and signed it in the presence of two witnesses, but left the room after signing it, as the witnesses signed their attestation in his absence.

Pratt, Dr. moved for probate of the Will and two codicils, insisting that the intention of the testator being so clear, the Court should not refuse it merely on account of the circumstance of the second codicil being attested while the testator suddenly was absent from the room.

Sir H. JENNER said—It does not depend upon the intention of the testator, but upon the express words of the Act, and cited section 9. In this case the testator left the room before the witnesses subscribed the second codicil, and was absent when they signed their attestation.

Probate refused of the second codicil—and of the will and first codicil.

SOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.—Jan. 8.

CASE OF ABRAHAM HENRY CHAMBERS.

(Continued from p. 160.)

for abolishing Imprisonment for Debt, s. 66.—JURISDICTION of the COURT as to committing a person to Newgate for contempt in not filing his Schedule after a creditor had obtained a VESTING ORDER.

Mr. Woodroffe renewed his application to commit Mr. Chambers to the common gaol of the county in which he lived for a contempt of law.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER.—This is the case in which it appeared the party had had about four days notice to file his schedule.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—In what gaol is Chambers confined?

Mr. Woodroffe.—In the Fleet, and the application is to commit him for contempt in not filing his schedule under a vesting order.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—We have discussed the question over and over again, and we have no power to take him out of the custody of the warden.

Mr. CHIEF COMMISSIONER concurred with the learned colleague.

Mr. Woodroffe said he was on the other side of the case of Jeremiah Board, which was the allusion to by the learned Commissioner; he contended that the section had only reference to assignees, but the Court was not with him on that point. The Court thought it had reference to default under a vesting order, and that they must entertain the question; but as the man was in the custody of the warden of the Fleet, he must not be removed. He was not aware that a definitive decision had been given; and a similar case was now brought before the Court. There was a sum of £23,000 in this case, and it would be a deplorable state of things if the Court was not sufficiently strong to reach such a result.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—On whose behalf is motion made?

Mr. Woodroffe.—Mr. Henry Wilton, a solicitor, who obtained the vesting order; he is the detaining creditor. Mr. Wilton was the attorney assisting the bankruptcy, and, to acknowledge the bankruptcy, it had been agreed, by the said assignees, that Mr. Chambers should be paid £23,000, of which sum we say he has received £2000.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—Has not Mr. Chambers been discharged under the act?

Mr. Woodroffe.—He has, sir, but the present debt was subsequently incurred.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—When was Mr. Chambers discharged?

Mr. Woodroffe.—In 1836, when his claim was £16,000. Mr. Wilton is a detaining creditor for a subsequent debt.

Mr. Cooke.—It is for subsequent costs.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—Go on.

Mr. Woodroffe proceeded to read the affidavit of Mr. Wilton in support of the present application. It set forth that the vesting order was granted in this case on the 19th of December, and on the same day Mr. Chambers was served with a notice to file his schedule within fourteen days; he had not done so, and up to the present hour no schedule had been filed. That the said A. H. Chambers had, since he had been in the Fleet Prison, received £2000 from the accountant-general of the Court of Bankruptcy; that he had ample funds to obtain his discharge from prison, or to file a schedule, but had wilfully disobeyed the order served upon him; that deponent was a creditor for £16,000; that it had been proposed to pay Mr. Chambers out of the estate £23,400 to acknowledge the validity of the commission, and which he had agreed to accept, although he (Mr. Wilton) had for ten years resisted the act of bankruptcy, and Mr. Chambers and his family had on oath denied the commission of an act of bankruptcy; that the payment of £2000, part of the sum agreed upon, had been made in fraud of deponent, and he believed that no distribution of the assets would be made unless enforced by this Court. The learned counsel said this case showed the impotency of the Court of Bankruptcy, and his object was to show that this Court was not so useless. There were ample funds, and one of two things must be clear to establish the total inefficiency of the jurisdiction under which the matter had been in agitation since the year 1825. If Mr. Chambers was not a bankrupt, it was extraordinary that the Court should have been so many years trying the question; and if he was a bankrupt, it was strange, and showed the impotency of the Court, that the estate should give £23,400 to induce him to acknowledge that he had committed an act of bankruptcy. He (Mr. Chambers) refused to acknowledge the validity of the commission, unless he got £23,400; and was he in the same way to set this Court at defiance? He had under his control a considerable sum, and this Court was called upon to take such steps as would cause justice to be done to the creditors. The first was to order his commitment for refusing to file a schedule.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER asked under what clause the application was made;

Mr. Woodroffe referred to the 66th sec. of 1 & 2 Vic. c. 110, which he read, and under which the Court was empowered to commit for the disobedience of an order to the Queen's Bench or common gaol of the county in which the party was resident at the time. Mr. Chambers was in the Fleet, and the common gaol was Newgate. In the case of Board, he (Mr. Woodroffe) had appeared on the part of the warden respectfully to state that he would not obey an order for the removal from his custody. If such was the case, all he could say was that the act was a very inefficient one, and must have been drawn by an inefficient person. Was this person to remain in prison and not pay his creditors, but to receive a large sum of money?

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN said the act was so worded that their power was only to commit to the Queen's Bench or Newgate, but they had no power to detain a person in the Fleet Prison.

Mr. Woodroffe remarked that the Court had power to commit to the county prison, which had reference to the country; and the prison of the Queen's Bench was also mentioned. It was difficult to comprehend the meaning of the Act. Here was a wrong without a remedy. The Act was to be compulsory—was, according to the recital, to give creditors a power over property, and to make debtors give up the same; and, after all, it could not touch a case of this description.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER said the question for the Court to determine was whether they had the power. Here was a man in the Fleet Prison, and could they send him to Newgate or the Queen's Bench Prison—could the Court take him out of the custody of the warden?

Mr. Woodroffe observed that the detainer could be lodged with the warden for the contempt, as in a case of felony; and, when he was free from his power, it could be acted upon, and Mr. Chambers taken to prison.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—That is utterly impossible. A man could not be taken without a habeas corpus.

Mr. Woodroffe regretted the state of the Act. The impotency of bankruptcy for fifteen years had been evident enough. The Court would not think they had been treated with disrespect if an application was to be made to the Court of Queen's Bench for a mandamus to try the power of the act.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN.—I wish there was some other Court to overhaul our decision. I shall be pleased if you do apply for a mandamus.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER expressed a similar opinion.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN was quite satisfied the Court had no power to grant such an order to remove Mr. Chambers; he should, however, be glad to see the question raised on an application for a mandamus.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER was not quite disposed to concur, but he would wish to have the opinion of a learned brother, as he had some impression on the clause in question.

Mr. Commissioner BOWEN said the learned Commissioner must attend so as to form a majority. He was of opinion that the Court had no powers.

SHERIFFS, IRELAND.

- ANTRIM—T. Gregg, Esq., Ballymunch, Holywell.
 ARMAGH—W. J. Armstrong, Esq., Elm Park, Armagh.
 CARLOW—H. Rochfort, Esq., Clogrennon, Carlow.
 CAVAN—J. Nisbitt, Esq., Lismore Lodge, Cavan.
 CLARE—J. B. Scott, Esq., Cahircon, Kildysart.
 CORK—J. C. Fitzgerald, Esq., Clogroe, Cork.
 DONEGAL—R. G. Montgomery, Esq., Convoys, Raphoe.
 DOWN—M. Forde, Esq., Seaford, Clough.
 DUBLIN—J. Godley, Esq., Ramount, Lucan.
 FERMANAGH—S. Armstrong, Esq., Hollymount.
 GALWAY—F. W. Trench, Esq., Woodlawn, Kilconnell.
 KILDARE—H. Barton, Esq., Straffan, Celbridge.
 KING'S CO.—G. O'More, Esq., Cloghan Castle, Kinnitty.
 KERRY—S. D. Lawler, Esq., Castlelough, Kilarney.
 KILKENNY—L. N. Izod, Esq., Chapel Island, Kells.
 LEITRIM—H. L. Montgomery, Esq., Belhew, Drumkeerin.
 LONGFORD—S. Galbraith, Esq., Newgrove, Summer-hill, Dublin.
 LIMERICK—R. Hart, Esq., Coolrus, Croom.
 LOUTH—J. M'Clintock, Esq., Dramear, Duleer.
 MAYO—Colonel A. Knox Gore, Beleck House, Ballina.
 MEATH—R. C. Wade, Esq., Clonabraney, Kesh.
 MONAGHAN—W. Hamilton, Esq., Castleblanney.
 QUEEN'S COUNTY—J. Tibeaud, Esq., Portlinc, Emo.
 ROSCOMMON—N. Balfe, Esq., South Park, Clontarf.
 SHERIFFS—J. Wynne, Esq., Hazlewood, Sligo.
 TIPPERARY—H. Prittie, Esq., Corville, Rossmore.
 TYRONE—J. Lyndesay, Esq., Loughry, Dungannon.
 WATERFORD—W. Moore, Esq., Moore, Tullow.
 WESTMEATH—W. Pollard, jun., Esq., Kanturk, Castlepollard.
 WEXFORD—Sir T. Esmonde, Bart., Ballinacorney, Gorey.
 WICKLOW—R. Hudson, Esq., Springfarm, Newtown, Mount Kennedy.

SPECIAL COMMISSION — MONMOUTH.

FROST'S TRIAL.

(Continued from p. 330.)

ch evidence was at all times admissible before y, who were to estimate it according to the e of confidence they could repose in the is. In doing so they ought principally to erved by observing how far his testimony rroborated by other witnesses. The cre- y of this witness was also said to be ched on another ground. He did not come d immediately: the disclosure he made was he had remained twelve days in prison. for the jury to decide whether such dis- e, made by a person under the same dread he prisoner, was consistent with the credi- of his evidence. Undoubtedly these facts tract from the weight of his testimony, but ld be for the jury to estimate its value ing to the best of their judgment.

Mr. T. Jones Phillips's evidence one very ar circumstance appeared, that when was apprehended he was found armed in inner described by this witness. On his examination, however, this witness said the cripts in Frost's handwriting were handed n by a member of Frost's family. This ut forward on the part of the prisoner at r, by showing that inasmuch, when his cripts were searched at Partridge's house is own residence, there was nothing found to criminate him in respect to transactions reasonable nature; no letters from him or unication with him from them on the sub- no planning—no designs of his own—no —as you would naturally expect to find if was so large a conspiracy intended as was on the present occasion. But they must well that matter, and give it all the consi- on to which it was entitled. That was the part of the prosecution. Witnesses, ly a few, had been called for the prisoner, e of them gave evidence to show that the "Surrender yourselves prisoners" were oken, but that the words said were, "Sur- us our prisoners." That had, however, conceded on the other side; but, un- dly, it was a more favourable interpretation r prisoner, in respect of the proceeding at estgate, and, therefore, it was right to look o the evidence of those witnesses. In r part of the evidence witnesses were to show that Frost had, at different public gs, advised the people to keep the peace. was a matter for their grave consideration they were to determine whether the pri- was guilty of high treason; but it was by ans decisive in his favour, and they must well what was due to that testimony. It was evidence, in the nature of speaking to cha- racter, to shew that a person of a peaceful dispo- sition would not directly make such affrays and tumults as had led to this charge; that such a person was not likely to be guilty of a charge of treason by levying war against her Majesty the Queen; and that his character was such as would make it very improbable he would commit the act now imputed to him. A man known for honesty was not likely to commit a theft; and so a man of peaceful disposition was not likely to be a party to and commit himself by an act of high treason in levying war against the Queen. But it was no more than a question of probabi- lity, and to be put in opposition to and be weighed against other evidence. If that evi- dence which went to the principal points was sufficiently strong, then it was for the jury to consider well whether that act of criminality was likely to have been done by such a person; and if they should doubt that fact, then let them give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt of his having been guilty of it, from his peaceful dis- position, character, and previous conduct in pri- vate life; but let them not bring it as positive evidence to contradict evidence on the other side of that act having been done. The jury would say to what extent the contradiction was worthy of consideration. The next witness adverted to by the learned judge was a grocer at Newport. He stated his belief that the mail from Newport went through Bristol, and the object of putting that question was for the purpose of showing that it would be absurd in the prisoner to have entertained the idea of stopping the mail, be- cause the coach did not go all the way to Bir- mingham, but was changed at Bristol. The fact, however, that the object in stopping the mail would be nugatory did not decide the question; because, though nugatory, it might not have been attempted. At all events the engagement to stop the coach might have given encouragement to persons in other districts. It must also be observed that the word coach was not always used, but the mail was mentioned, so that the communications failing in any particular part, that circumstance must soon become known. This point, however, he need not repeat, the jury must determine. With respect to the "bill," the learned judge observed that it did not appear that any particular provision for its payment was made. All that was known was, that when the bill became due it was paid in ordinary course. The examination of Henry Williams was next adverted to. That witness deposed that the demand made by the mob at the Westgate was, not "Surrender yourselves prisoners," but "Surrender our prisoners," which was the expression really used, observed the learned judge, it was for the jury to decide.

This was the whole of the evidence on which the jury had to decide; and they must say whether it amounted to a levying war against the Queen. That there was a violent personal attack on a number of persons assembled in the Westgate Inn, on the 4th of November, is placed beyond doubt. A very large body of men came into the town at a very early hour of the morning, not from one direction, but brought from different parts, and uniting before they came to the town. Of this there was no question, nor that the prisoner at the bar appeared and put himself at the head of this armed multitude. The ground on which it is sought to fix the prisoner with the heavy offence of high treason partly consists in the share which he appears to have taken in the transactions, and partly from declarations alleged to have been made by him. On both these points you must bring your judgment to bear in considering your verdict in the present case, and he thought it might not be unadvisable again to call their attention more particularly to the exact share which, according to the evidence, Mr. Frost had taken in those proceedings, and to the declarations attributed to him, and to the objections taken to the evidence by the prisoner's counsel. The learned judge accordingly read over the whole of his notes referring to those particular parts of the evidence. He then observed that the jury must make up their minds as to what was the intention of this armed multitude in the proceedings of which Mr. Frost had, to a certain extent, interfered. If it was their design either to destroy the Government or Constitution, or to march into Newport to take violent and forcible possession of the town, or to attack the Queen's troops for the purpose imputed to him, that would amount to the crime of high treason; but if, as the prisoner alleged, the mob was merely intended as a demonstration of moral force to induce the magistrates to treat Vincent with greater favour, and if it was found that they had no general design, that was an offence which did not amount to high treason. The question, however, did not rest there, for an attempt to attack the soldiers for the purpose of releasing the prisoners was liable to be visited with severe punishment. The jury had to decide whether it was the intention of the mob to attack the soldiers, and whether, if they had entertained any such design, they would not rather have attacked the poor-house, where the soldiers were quartered, when they heard that a detachment had left it. His Lordship having then adverted to the other declarations alleged to have been made either by the prisoner, or in his presence, proceeded to say "These were the declarations alleged by the witnesses to have been made by the prisoner; whether made or not they were to be the judges."

It was for them to say whether they inferred from such declarations, accompanied with the other statements, whether they inferred an intent and a mind on the part of the prisoner, by means of these preparations, to alter and effect any great and general movement among the people; whether it was an object with him, by the terror these armed men would inspire, by the force he carried with him, to seize the town of Newport and keep possession of it, or whether his intention was to make the beginning then, that there should be a further spread of such conduct, which would then be carried into effect. They were to say whether there was such an intention, or whether they were not satisfied by the evidence that such could fairly be imputed to him. The ground he took was one of a much more moderate complexion. He said all he intended to do was, by showing the force of the men, that they should be able to carry a measure of a more limited nature, the amelioration of Vincent's treatment. They would recollect that it lay upon the Crown fully to establish the guilt of the prisoner; and, if they considered it had been established, then, however painful the duty, still it was necessary for them to fulfil it. It was a case for their consideration alone; the Court could not interfere with it, and, therefore, he left it in their hands, quite convinced that they would come to that conclusion which truth and justice required.

---

VERDICT.—GUILTY.

The foreman of the jury then said, "We wish my Lords, to recommend the prisoner to the merciful consideration of the Court."

The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.—That shall be forwarded through the usual course.

---

Spring Assizes.

1840.

---

NORFOLK CIRCUIT.

---

HUNTINGDON—March 17.

(Before Alderson, B.)

DOR DEM. PRYME v. GIFFORD.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.—Construction of tenancy "for the term of seven years, and so on from year to year."—What notice to quit is necessary.

This was an action to recover the possession of a farm in the parish of Wistow.

The plaintiff, by a lease dated in January 1832, demised this property to the defendant. He held from October, 1831, "for the term of seven years, and so on from year to year," &c.

as he contended, expired in 1833. Being anxious of putting an end to the tenancy, Mr. [unclear] gave the defendant notice at Lady-day to quit at Michaelmas last. The defendant notwithstanding in pursuance of this notice, the present action was commenced. The defence turned on effect to be given to the terms "and so on from year to year" in the lease under which the defendant held. For the defendant it was contended that it constituted a tenancy for two years, commencing at the termination of the first year. For the plaintiff the case of Doe v. Chadborn v. Green, 1 Per. & Dav. 454. (a) was cited. There a farm was leased for "one year and so on from year to year;" and the court decided that the landlord might put an end to the tenancy at the end of the second year by giving six months' notice to quit. If, therefore, "one year, and so on from year to year" meant two years, "seven years, and so on from year to year," must mean eight years, at the end of which time the plaintiff was entitled to possession, having given due notice to quit. JERSON, B. was of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The Jury returned a verdict accordingly (b).

(b) That case differed from the present, in that the parties also agreed to determine the tenancy by either of them giving to the other three months' notice to quit, and the lessor of the plaintiff gave the defendant six months' notice to quit, at the end of the first year. The case was tried at the Gloucester Spring Assizes, 1838, before Parke, B. who thought it was a demise capable of being terminated at the end of the first year, on the authority of Thompson v. Maberly, 5 Campb. 573.) and a verdict was given for the plaintiff. A rule for a new trial was granted, on the ground of misdirection, which came before the Court for argument on the 29th January, 1839, when, after some time to consider the judgment, Lord DENMAN said, the decision turned on the sufficiency of the notice to quit. I think the case Thompson v. Maberly is very distinguishable, as the terms of the agreement there, by stating the holding to be for twelve months certain, and six months afterwards, limited all that was definitely agreed on between the parties to the first twelve months. In this case the agreement was for one year, and so on from year to year, which, in conformity with Birch v. Wright, 1 Term. Rep. 378. and other cases, we think constitutes a tenancy for two years certain, and therefore the notice to quit at the end of the first was insufficient. S. C. 1 Per. & Dav. 456.—ED.

(b) See 4 Bacon's Ab. Tit. Leases (L. 3.), and Sir H. Gwillim's observations on Harris v. Evans, 1 Wils. 262. S. C. Ambler 329. ED.

The LORD CHANCELLOR'S new Bill for FACILITATING the ADMINISTRATION of JUSTICE.

ANALYSIS.

(Continued from page 325.)

18. That from time to time, when and as often as any vacancy shall occur in the said office of Vice Chancellor, by the death, resignation, or removal from office of any Vice Chancellor for the time being, it shall be lawful for her Majesty, by letters patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to appoint a fit person to supply such a vacancy.

19. That each such Vice Chancellor shall have full power to hear and determine all causes, matters, and things which are or shall be at any time depending in the Court of Chancery in England, either as a Court of Law or as a Court of Equity, or incident to any ministerial office of the said Court, or which have been or shall be submitted to the jurisdiction of the said Court, or of the Lord Chancellor, by the special authority of any Act of Parliament, as the Lord Chancellor shall from time to time direct; and all decrees, orders, and acts of such Vice Chancellor so made or done shall be deemed, and taken to be respectively, as the nature of the case shall require, decrees, orders, and acts of the said Court of Chancery, or of such incident jurisdiction as aforesaid, or under such special authority as aforesaid, and shall have force and validity and be executed accordingly, subject nevertheless in every case to be reversed, discharged, or altered by the Lord Chancellor; and no such decree or order shall be enrolled until the same shall be signed by the Lord Chancellor: Provided always, that such Vice Chancellor shall have no power or authority to discharge, reverse, or alter any decree, order, act, matter, or thing made or done by any other Vice Chancellor to be appointed under this Act, not being a predecessor in office of such Vice Chancellor, or any decree, order, act, matter, or thing made or done by any Lord Chancellor, unless authorized by the Lord Chancellor so to do, nor any power or authority to discharge, reverse, or alter any decree, order, act, matter, or thing made or done by the Master of the Rolls, or the Vice Chancellor for the time being, appointed in pursuance of an Act passed in the fifty-third year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Administration of Justice," or any order, act, matter, or thing made or done by the Court of Review in bankruptcy.

20. That each or either of the Vice Chancellors to be appointed in pursuance of this Act shall sit for the Lord Chancellor, whenever he shall require him so to do, and shall also, at such other times as the Lord Chancellor shall direct, sit in a separate Court, whether the Lord Chancellor, or the Master of the Rolls or the Vice Chancellor appointed in pursuance of the said Act shall be sitting or not, for which purpose the Lord Chancellor shall make such orders as to him shall appear to be proper and convenient from time to time as occasion shall require.

21. That every person holding or who shall have held the office of Vice Chancellor under this act shall, if a member of her Majesty's Privy Council, be a member of the judicial committee of the Privy council.

22. That the Vice Chancellors to be appointed in pursuance of this act shall, during the continuance in office of the present Vice Chancellor, respectively have rank and precedence next to the Lord Chief Baron of her Majesty's Courts of Exchequer at Westminster; and that the Vice Chancellor to be appointed in pursuance of this said act of the fifty-third year of the reign of King George the third, and the Vice Chancellors to be appointed in pursuance of this act, shall after the death of the present Vice Chancellor, or his resignation or removal from his office respectively, have rank and precedence next to the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer at Westminster, and as between themselves shall have rank and precedence according to seniority of appointment to their respective offices.

23. That it shall be lawful for her Majesty, in and by such letters patent as aforesaid, and in and by any other letters patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to direct that each such Vice Chancellor to be appointed in pursuance of this act shall have a secretary, usher, and trainbearer, to be from time to time appointed and removed by such Vice Chancellor at his pleasure; and that the secretaries, registrars, and other officers appointed to attend the Lord Chancellor shall attend such Vice Chancellor when sitting for the Lord Chancellor, and also when sitting in his separate court, as circumstances shall require, and as the Lord Chancellor shall order and direct.

24. Vice Chancellor to hold office during his good behaviour, but may be removed upon address, &c.

25. Oath.

26. That from and after the appointment of the Vice Chancellors under this act, it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor, with the advice or concurrence of the Master of the Rolls and Vice Chancellors for the time being, or any two of them, and he is hereby authorized and empowered to do all such acts, and to make and issue all such rules and orders, as by any act or acts of parliament now in force the Lord Chancellor, with the advice or concurrence of the Master of the Rolls and the Vice Chancellor for the time being, or one of them, is empowered to do, make, or issue.

27. That it shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor and the Master of the Rolls from time to time to direct that any causes or matters, which shall be at any time or times depending for hearing or determination before the Master of the Rolls for the time being, shall be heard and determined by the Lord Chancellor or by one of the Vice Chancellors for the time being; but all decrees and orders to be made by any Vice Chancellor in pursuance of such direction shall be subject to be reversed, discharged, or altered by the Lord Chancellor.

28. Appointment of Richard Richards, Esq. to be a Master in Chancery. References depending before the Masters on Equity Side of Exchequer transferred to him, and such other references as the Lord Chancellor shall direct.

29. Her Majesty empowered by letters patent to appoint successors to Mr. Richards.

30. Appointment of — Buckland, the present clerk to the Masters in Exchequer, to be chief clerk to Masters in Chancery, &c.

31. Salaries to Vice Chancellor and his officers, and to Master, to be paid out of interest and dividends arising from Suitors' Fund.

32. Her Majesty empowered to grant annuity to Vice Chancellor on his resignation. Such annuity may be limited as herein mentioned. Period of service.

33. So much of 53 Geo. 3, as directs payment to Vice Chancellor of the salary of £5000 repealed.

34. Regulating future salaries of Vice Chancellor appointed under 53 Geo. 3, c. 24.

35. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 94. Number of registrars increased to ten. Provisions for filling vacancies.

36. Registrars to attend each judge of the as Lord Chancellor, &c., shall direct. In case of illness they may appoint a deputy.

7. Clerks to the registrars increased to twelve. Vacancies to be filled up by seniority. Lord Chancellor empowered to fill up vacancies in case of twelfth clerk to the registrars

8. Preserving rights to the present registrars clerks.

9. Proviso as to succession of sworn clerks,

10. Office of master of reports and entries.

1. Duties of registrars and clerks.

2. Accountant General empowered to appoint additional clerks, 55 G. 3, c. lxxiv.

3. Masters, registrars, and clerks to register, to hold their offices during good behaviour; with other officers, to be subject to provisions, &c.

4. Repeal of certain powers of 3 & 4 W. 4, 4.

5. Salaries to registrars, and clerks, and masters and clerks, paid out of Suitors' Fee fund.

6. Compensation to Master of Exchequer and other officers of Court of Exchequer, to be paid out of Suitors' Fund in Chancery. Act of compensation to be laid before Parliament.

7. Interpretation clause.

8. Act may be altered, &c.

Schedule referred to by the foregoing Act.
Salary.

|                                                                             |                          |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------|
| first registrar                                                             | - - £2,000 per ann.      |
| second, third, and fourth registrars                                        | - - 1,800 per ann. each. |
| fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth registrars                                | - - 1,500 per ann. each. |
| ninth and tenth registrars                                                  | - - 1,250 per ann. each. |
| first and second clerks to the registrars                                   | - - 800 per ann. each.   |
| third, fourth, fifth, and sixth clerks to the registrars                    | - - 600 per ann. each.   |
| seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth clerks to the registrars                  | - - 400 per ann. each.   |
| eleventh and twelfth clerks to the registrars                               | - - 300 per ann. each.   |
| chief clerk to the master in ordinary in Chancery, appointed under this act | - - 1,000 per ann.       |
| junior clerk of such master                                                 | - - 150 per ann.         |

March 19.

The order of the day for the 2nd reading of the Bill was discharged on the motion of the Lord Chancellor.

SIR E. SUGDEN'S PROPOSED RESOLUTIONS ON THE APPELLATE JURISDICTION OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS AND COURT OF CHANCERY.

" 1. Resolved, That it is expedient to abolish the Court of Review in Bankruptcy, as far as regards the judges of that Court, and to restore the jurisdiction of the Great Seal and the Vice-Chancellor.

" 2. That it is expedient to abolish the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and to remodel the Court.

" 3. That it is not expedient to take away any equity judge from his court for the performance of judicial functions elsewhere without an absolute necessity.

" 4. That it is expedient, in the contemplated creation of new courts of equity, to make provision for the independence of the judges, and for the regular hearing of causes according to their priority, so that no cause may be advanced out of its turn without sufficient cause, and for the regulation of the hearing of short causes, so that important points of law may not be decided hastily, and without due deliberation; and also provision for having in each court a list of the judgments in arrears always hung up in court, and a copy thereof delivered to the judge by the registrar on the first Monday's sitting in every month; and likewise provision that no case be postponed in hearing on account of the absence of counsel in another court, unless (if the judge shall think fit) where the counsel has followed a cause upon appeal.

" 5. That it is expedient that the appointment of the Masters in Chancery should again be vested in the Lord Chancellor instead of the Crown, and that the Masters' notices should be remodelled, and their sittings be made public.

" 6. That it is expedient that the Lord Chancellor shall continue to hear motions, appeals, and other matters in the Court of Chancery, and that causes be reheard in the courts below, but that no appeal be reheard by the Lord Chancellor.

" 7. That it is expedient that the decision of the Lord Chancellor shall be final where both parties have entered with the register a consent that the appeal be heard by the Lord Chancellor, and that the Lord Chancellor's decision, whether in the first instance or upon appeal in interlocutory matters, should be final, subject to certain exceptions.

" 8. That it is expedient that the Court of Appeal in the House of Lords should consist of the Lord Chancellor and two Judges, to be appointed during good behaviour, and to be called Lords President, but not necessarily to be peers, and that the Lords President be at liberty to act as judges during the hearing, and to openly declare their judgments; but not to have voices if not peers.

"9. That it is expedient that the House of Lords, when the arrear of appeals may render it necessary, should sit to hear appeals only, notwithstanding a prorogation.

"10. That it is expedient that the House of Lords should have the power of summoning the equity judges upon the hearing of appeals, in like manner as they have the power of summoning the 15 judges.

"11. That it is expedient that the appeals in the House of Lords should be heard with as many of the forms and regulations of the superior courts of justice, as are consistent with the jurisdiction and authority of the house.

"12. That it is expedient that the two Lords President should sit and hear the matters now referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and with that view that the Privy Council should be remodelled as a court.

"13. That it is expedient that the Lords President sitting on the Privy Council should have power to call to their aid any other judge except the Lord Chancellor, and that the Lord Chancellor might attend upon their request if he should think it proper.

"14. That it is expedient that one of the Lords President should be styled Chief Lord President, and should preside at the Privy Council whenever another judge is called in.

"15. That it is expedient that where the two Lords President sit alone, but cannot agree, the case should be adjourned into the House of Lords, to be there heard and settled like any other cause.

"16. That it is expedient that the hearing of the appeals before the House of Lords and the Lords President respectively, should as far as possible be so regulated as to give to the House of Lords and the Court fixed days for hearing of trials throughout the sitting."

NEW FORMS OF WRITS.

(Continued from p. 335.)

No. V.

Writ of Capias ad Satisfaciendum, on an order of an inferior Court for payment of money, removed into the Court of Queen's Bench.

Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith;—To the Sheriff of —, greeting. We command you that you take C. D. if he shall be found in your bailiwick, and him safely keep, so that you may have his body before us at Westminster, immediately after the execution hereof, to satisfy A. B. £—, which lately in [insert the style of the Court,] by a rule of our said Court, entitled, &c. [as the case may be], were by the said Court ordered to be paid by the said C. D. to the said A. B., and which rule was afterwards on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —, removed into our Court before us at Westminster, by an order of our said Court before us at Westminster [or of —, one of the Justices of our said Court before us at Westminster, as the case may be,] in pursuance of the Statute in such case made and provided, and the costs attendant upon the application for the said last-mentioned order, and upon the said removal, were on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord, taxed and allowed by our said Court before us at Westminster, at the sum of £—, and also to satisfy the said A. B. the said sum of £— (a), together with interest on the said two several sums of £—, and £—, at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum, from the said — day of — in the year of our Lord — (b) and have there then this writ.

Witness, Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —.

No. VI.

Writ of Capias ad Satisfaciendum, on an order of an inferior Court, for payment of a sum of money and costs, removed into the Court of Queen's Bench.

Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith;—To the Sheriff of — greeting. We command you that you take C. D. if he shall be found in your Bailiwick, and him safely keep, so that you may have his body before us at Westminster, immediately after the execution hereof, to satisfy A. B. £— which lately in [insert the style of the Court by a rule of the said Court, &c. [as the case may be,] were by the said Court ordered to be paid by the said C. D. to the said A. B., and also £—, for the costs of the said rule of the said Court, also ordered to be paid by the said C. D. to the said A. B., which said rule was afterwards on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —, removed into our Court before us at Westminster [or of — one of the Justices of our said Court before us at Westminster, as the case may be,] in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, and the costs attendant upon the application for the last-mentioned, and upon the said removal, were on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord —, taxed and allowed

(a) The costs of removing the rule of the inferior Court into the Court of Queen's Bench.

(b) The day on which the costs of removal were taxed.

ur said Court before us at Westminster, at sum of £——, and also to satisfy the said the sum of £—— (a), together with rest on the said three sums of £——, and —, and £——, at the rate of four pounds centum per annum, from the — day of —, in the year of our Lord — (b), and there then this writ.

itness, Thomas Lord Denman, at West-ster, the — day of —, in the year of Lord —

|               |                  |
|---------------|------------------|
| ENMAN,        | J. GURNEY,       |
| C. TINDAL,    | J. WILLIAMS,     |
| BINGER,       | J. T. COLERIDGE, |
| LITLEDAL,     | T. COLTMAN,      |
| PARKE,        | T. BRISKINE,     |
| B. BOSANQUET, | W. H. MAULE,     |
| H. ALDERSON,  | R. M. ROLFE.     |
| PATTESON,     |                  |

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

SESSION 1840.

FACULTY OF LAWS EXAMINATION.

What is the first process in a personal n?

What is the first process in a real action?

Over what actions have the Courts of n's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, current jurisdiction?

Over what actions has the Court of Com-Pleas an exclusive jurisdiction?

To whom is the writ of summons directed?

What are the endorsements required to be on a writ of summons?

What are the purposes for which a plain-ay obtain a writ of distringas?

Under what circumstances is a plaintiff at y to enter an appearance for the defendant?

Under what circumstances may a capias btained against a defendant before final nent?

. To whom is the capias directed?

. What is the effect of an arrest upon the dant?

. What security does a plaintiff obtain by ing the defendant?

. If after being arrested the defendant es-, what remedy has the plaintiff, and against n?

. What is the difference between a negli-escape and a voluntary escape?

. What is the principal distinction between tion of trespass and an action on the case?

. What is the nature of an action of trover?

. What is the difference between a simple act and a special contract?

. The costs of removing the rule from the inferior into the Court of Queen's Bench.

. The day on which the costs of removing the rule the inferior Court were taxed.

18. Are there any causes of action in respect of which a plaintiff has the option of suing either in assumpsit or debt?

19. Are there any causes of action in respect of which the plaintiff has the option of suing either in assumpsit or case?

20. Are there any causes of action in respect of which the plaintiff has the option of suing either in assumpsit or covenant?

21. In an action of assumpsit on a promise to pay the debt of a third person, what is put in issue by the plea of non assumpsit?

22. In an action of indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, what is put in issue by the plea of non assumpsit?

23. In an action of assumpsit against a carrier for not delivering goods, what is put in issue by the plea of non assumpsit?

24. In an action upon the case against a car-rier for the loss of goods delivered to him, what is put in issue by the plea not guilty?

28. What is the rule as to the inadmissibility of a witness on the ground of interest?

29. Under what circumstances may the ob-jection to a witness be removed by indorsing his name on the record?

30. What was the point as to the admissibility of evidence decided in Price v. Torrington?

31. What were the two points as to the ad-missibility of evidence discussed in Doe on the demise of Tatham v. Wright.

32. What is a nonsuit?

33. What is the difference between a special verdict and a special case?

34. What is sufficient ground for a motion in arrest of judgment?

35. If new matter of defence arise after plea pleaded and before trial, in what manner can the defendant take advantage of it?

36. If new matter of defence arises after verdict, in what manner can defendant take advantage of it?

37. What lands may be extended under a writ of elegit?

P. S. CAREY, Professor.

POST OFFICE RETURNS.

UNDER THE FOURPENNY AND PENNY RATES TO THE 3d. FEB. 1840.

The Post-office returns to the order of the House of Commons exhibit the working of the present compared with the former system. The first table shows the amount of postage collected in the London district during the fourpenny rate—viz., from the 5th of December, 1839, to the 9th of January, 1840, compared with the cor-responding period of 1838-9, as far as regards the General Post-office, and gives 57,300*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* as the total amount of the period in question in 1838-9, and 38,692*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.* as that of the similar period in 1839-40. Of the former of these sums, 3,637*l.* 8*s.* was received from Government departments: of the latter sum, 38,692*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.*, the sum of 1,316*l.* 2*s.* was received from Government departments.

The second table gives the total amount of postage collected in the London district during the penny rate from the 10th January to the 13th February, 1830, so far as regards the General Post-office, with the amount in the corresponding period of 1839. This gives 60,060*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* for the period of 1839, of which 4,624*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* was received from Government departments, and 40,527*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.* for 1840, of which 858*l.* 11*s.* 1*d.* has been received from Government departments, and 11,044*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.* remains due.

The return of the amount of postage for the London district post during the fourpenny rate, gives 10,382*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* as the sum collected from the 5th of December, 1839, to the 9th of January 1840, while the amount collected in a similar period in 1838-9 was 12,933*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* The return of postage for January 10 to February 13, 1840 (during the penny rate), for the London district post, gives 10,368*l.* 15*s.*, while the amount for a similar period in 1839 was 13,714*l.* 10*s.*

A fourth account, in which both general and district post letters are included, gives the following result:—

|                         |         |   |    |
|-------------------------|---------|---|----|
| 1838-9 Dec. 5 to Jan. 9 | £70,234 | 0 | 10 |
| 1839-40 Ditto           | 49,075  | 0 | 2  |

Decrease under the fourpenny rate 21,159 0 8

|                         |         |    |   |
|-------------------------|---------|----|---|
| 1839 Jan. 10 to Feb. 13 | £73,774 | 15 | 6 |
| 1840 Ditto              | 50,896  | 3  | 7 |

Decrease under the penny rate 22,878 11 11

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

The nephew of Sir William Gossett, the Sergeant-at-Arms, has been to Hertford to serve notices on the executive there, cautioning them against executing the writ issued into that county in this cause. The notices are similar to those served upon the Sheriff, Under-Sheriff, &c. of Middlesex; and it is understood that the authorities of Hertfordshire have declined to execute the inquiry until they have had an opportunity of applying to the Court of Queen's Bench for further directions.—Morning Herald, Mar. 26.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. B.—Our best thanks for your letter.

W. M.—R. H.—A. P.—I. T.—N. R.—A Subscriber.—T. W.—W. H.—J. L.—J. G.—

W. C.—J. R.—T. A. L.—An Articled Clerk, Dublin.—W. J.—all under consideration.

R. C. J.—It is against our rule to insert such questions. We are disposed to assist all our subscribers as far as we can consistently upon any personal question, where the facts are clearly stated to us. Your letter we take to be not according to the fact: instead of the 27th and 28th sections, do you not allude to the 37th and 38th sections of the statute?

R. J. T.—In reply to your letter dated 4th inst. see Ex parte Ann Rebecca Richardson in re Christopher Richardson, a bankrupt, ante vol. I. p. 266.

On April 1, will be published, price 4*s.*, to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part III.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the Present State of the Law Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES OF ENGLAND for granting LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17*s.* Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10*s.*

Vol. IV. Part II. contains
ASSIGNMENTS.

Part III. will contain

A NEW FORM of Assignment of several Terms to attend the inheritance to one Trustee, save the expense of several Trustees—and the law relating to such Terms—and

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS,
With the Law relating to USES, REMAINDERS and POWERS.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-Fields, in the City of London.—Saturday, March 23, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

III.]

SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1840.

[No. 23.]

THE DUBLIN LAW SOCIETY.

I have been much gratified by a perusal of the proceedings of the excellent Law School established in Dublin, called "THE DUBLIN LAW INSTITUTE," the PRINCIPAL of which is TRISTRAM KENNEDY, Esq., a Barrister at Law and Member of Lincoln's Inn, and the PROFESSORS are as follow:—

W. M. MOLYNEUX, Esq. Equity.

J. HARDEY, Esq. Law of Property and Conveyancing.

W. NAPIER, Esq. Common Law.

W. BRADY, M.D., } Medical Jurisprudence.
Lecturer in the College of Physicians,

This Institution appears to have been established to meet the almost universal public demand for a preparatory system of legal education; to elevate the standard of knowledge in both branches of the legal profession; to cultivate diligence; to encourage the study of law as a science; to enable the members of the profession to participate in the guidance of the experienced; and to provide for regular and permanent benefit. a system more intended for utility than for display. (It is a misfortune that the House of Commons in Chancery Lane had not adopted this system.)

Observe that the school is divided into four departments.—A CLASS for COMMON LAW; another for MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE; a third for EQUITY; and a fourth for CONVEYANCING; in which lectures are delivered by the Professor presiding over each, and the examination of the students is conducted upon the same principle as our PROBLEMS; that is, by means of printed questions and written answers, with fictitious signatures, so that persons may attend without being in any way subjected to any species of examination. The answers are voluntary.

Mr. NAPIER in his introductory lecture says: "The result of our diligent examination of the plans of other Law Schools has convinced us that the most profitable to the students will be, by examination upon approved text books, through the medium of printed questions. These questions can be answered in writing; and by the judicious selection of the questions, and the observation of the bearing of the answers, a test will be supplied for ascertaining the extent of the student's knowledge, and the precise difficulties with which he may be embarrassed in his progress. This will secure the advantage of combined emulation and individual instruction. The Professor will be guided in his explanation, to confine his remarks to what is really useful and absolutely necessary, and the repetition and enforcement of that which all can comprehend, of their own capacity, will be profitably superseded." We have by our own WORK, originated and opened here a school of precisely the same sort. It is true, a curtain is drawn between us and our pupils: we get no lecture fees, and we have persevered in our course malgré all opposition. We hope the learned Principal and Professors of the Dublin Law Institute will fearlessly pursue THEIR course. An entire new system of Legal Education is required in England; one "more intended for utility than display;" from whence solid instruction can be gained, and it is to be lamented that a similar institute, with its advantages, is not to be found in London. "THE DUBLIN LAW INSTITUTE" has our best wishes for its success. We observe that a deputation from this Institute waited upon Lord Morpeth last week, for the purpose of obtaining a CHARTER of INCORPORATION, when Mr. WYSE, M.P. Chairman of the late Select Committee on Education in Ireland, forcibly endeavoured to impress upon his Lordship the want, so sensibly experienced in Ireland, of a system of legal education, so different from the course pursued by all other European nations, and that this Institute required a Charter in order to its perpetuity, and the better to secure an improved system of Legal Education. His Lordship appears to have viewed the application favourably, (and why should he not do so?) and promised to submit it to the consideration of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland. We take for granted that LORD PLUNKETT will readily do for IRELAND what has already been done for ENGLAND, when we find the Attorney and Solicitor General for Ireland, Serjeants Jackson and Curry, all the Queen's Counsel and the principal members of the Irish bar, advocates for this Charter. "Such a scheme," says the Solicitor General, "as this, which the projectors of the Law School have begun, must, if well supported, and well worked, do much towards supplying the learners of the law the want of a safe and early guide, and teaching how to secure the two great objects of a student, method in his studies, and economy of his time." It is the first attempt which has been made in Ireland to teach law as a science, and "such a school," Mr. Litton, Q.C. says, "has been long wanted in Ireland. The Institution will be one of the greatest practical utility, and in my opinion one which will much advance the interests of the country at large, not only by leading to better practical information, our barristers and solicitors, but by affording to the community in general the easy means of acquiring a knowledge of the laws and constitution of the country." No society can be pronounced to be well constituted, whose form of government and institutions do not admit this essential principle; the unlimited extension of knowledge to the whole of its constituent members. The Attorney General says: "The necessity of such a school for directing the studies of those embarking in legal pursuits, is particularly apparent in Ireland, where the habits and arrangements of business have not heretofore admitted those means of instruction and early initiation in practical studies to be found in the offices of the several branches of our profession in London." If the axiom we have put, therefore, be just, the Charter cannot be refused, or a limit will be put by such refusal to legal education in Ireland. Mr. Watkins, in his introduction to the "PRINCIPLES OF CONVEYANCING," observes that "among the many discouragements which attend the study of the law, there is no more obvious, or more generally complained of, than the want of method and direction. To take a young person from an university or a school, where his mind has been occupied with other pursuits, and to toss him headlong into the practice of the law, wholly unprepared, or with little preparation, for so arduous a study, is in itself so absurd, that we can only wonder at its occurrence. What must be the embarrassment of such a person amid business of such nicety as to call for the full exertion of the veteran in practice. It is folly to expect from the human mind what a moment's reflection would tell us ld be impossible for the human mind to form. Conveyancing is not intuitive any more than the mathematics. The mind cannot draw conclusions without having been previously furnished with premises. And ever the individual may be prepossessed in favour of a peculiar mode of study, we are, and while the human mind continues to be what it is, there must be, generally, rules which ought to be attended to in acquiring of knowledge." In another part of the same Introduction, Mr. Watkins observes that "law should be considered as a moral science, as the rule of rational and accountable beings, and he concludes properly that the day was very fast approaching when knowledge shall be justly appreciated; when systematic pedantry shall no more acquire the reputation of learning; when those literary pursuits which encumber the memory without calling forth the exertion of intellect, or amending the heart, shall be deservedly reprobated; when prejudice shall melt away before the genial beams of investigation and truth; and when learning shall only be esteemed as it becomes subservient to the virtue and of consequence to the happiness of mankind."

the wide sphere of moral science, in common with all other sciences, but which, like others, is doubtless the most important, number of self-evident truths have existed. To discover these moral truisms, and apply them to their definite and appropriate objects; or, in other words, to allow them their most extensive and beneficial sphere of influence and agency, is to conform the more closely to the highest and best principles of humanity—correlative with, and constituting individual and social duty. It is then at once manifest, that this complicated sphere of right and duty resolves itself into two distinct and leading branches of social life;—one constituting the diversified and complementary elements of LEGISLATION, and the other comprising the important and delicate art of EDUCATION; the last named being the first in importance, as claiming the priority, since its professed object is, to foster and direct the latent and the best principles of human nature into their proper channels. "Happy," says Lord Coke, "were arts, if professors would contend and have a conscience to be learned in them, and if none but the learned would take upon them to give judgment of them."

PROBLEM XXIII. VOL. III.

LAW OF EVIDENCE.

What will under ordinary circumstances be received at Law as a sufficient proof of hand writing?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,—I herewith send an answer to Prob. II. Vol. III. on the Question, "When a Contract is to be performed?" and as I have taken a different view of the subject from that of Alphonso—whose answer does not appear to me exactly to meet the Problem—I trust you will excuse my troubling you with this answer, which will form a kind of supplement to that already inserted in your valuable Guide. Yours obediently,

J. A. M.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM II. VOL. 3.

Contract—when it is to be performed.

In deciding on the question when a Contract is to be performed, the intention of the parties will in a great measure guide us, and the following rules and decisions ought also to be considered.

When a Contract is silent as to the period of performance, the law infers an engagement that it shall be executed within a reasonable time. Chippendale v. Thurston, 4 C. and P. 98. For example, in the case of a covenant at all times to make further assurance, a reasonable time to levy a fine, advised by counsel, would, before the recent

Answer to Proposition 2 Part III

the meaning of Days and Months, is contained in the nature of the thing to be done. Parry v. Thompson, 1 T. R. 202. But if the words "from the making of the agreement" are used, it is to be construed as meaning "from the time the agreement was made." Parry v. Thompson, 1 T. R. 202. But if the words "from the making of the agreement" are used, it is to be construed as meaning "from the time the agreement was made." Parry v. Thompson, 1 T. R. 202.

When a contract is made, it is presumed that the parties mean a calendar month; unless there be something in the contract, or some custom in the trade, in reference to which the agreement is made to rebut the presumption, and show that a calendar month was intended. Long v. Hale, 1 M. and Sel. 111; Barksdale v. Morgan, 4 Mod. 185; Jocelyn v. Hamblin, 1 Stra. 446; Titus v. Lady Prosser, id. 632; Chitty's Statutes, tit. Time, note 1044; Jolly v. Young, 1 Esp. R. 186.

A day is natural which consists of 24 hours, or artificial which contains the time from the rising of the sun to the setting. Co. Litt. 135 a. A day is usually intended as of "natural day, as in an indictment for burglary we say in the night of the same day." Co. Litt. 135 a. 3 Inst. 818.

A legal act done at any part of the day is in general relate to the first period of the day. 17 Inst. 408. The law generally treats fractions of a day. 15 Ves. 257. Co. Litt. 135 b.

When a computation is to be made from the day of the party, the day of the act shall be included, but not the day of the day. Fellen v. The Inhabitants of B. and C. 144 per Lord Tenison. Where a contract is to be performed within ten days after the date, or date, it seems that the day of the date is excluded. Id. Pugh v. Duke of Devon 714; Watson v. Pears, 2 B. and C. 142. See the cases of Boydell v. Drummond, 9 B. and C. 392.

In marriage contracts, the engagement is binding, although the precise time for completing is not agreed upon; and in such cases the law presumes that the parties presumed intermarry within a reasonable or convenient time, upon request. Harrison v. George, Carth. 467. 1 Lord Raym. 386, S. C. Atter v. Deboos, 1 Stark. R. 82. Atchinson Baker, Peake's Addl. c. 103.

Let us now consider a few cases where the question is of importance between the vendor and purchaser of real property.

Where an abstract is to be delivered or a conveyance to be executed, on or before a certain specified day, the time fixed is considered to be of the essence of the contract; the vendee may rescind the contract, if the vendor be not ready before or on the appointed day, although the vendor has not in the interim to insist on so strict an execution of the contract. See Sugd. Vend. and Purch. Edit. 359 to 363, and 370, 371.

If neither party be ready at the appointed time, and both are in default, the contract is to be ipso facto dissolved, and the debt is recoverable unless the time has been waived by consent. See Clarke v. King, 1 M. & C. 394. 2 C. and P. 286. S. C. It seems that where no time is fixed for completion, it suffices that the vendor who brings his action, has a complete title at the time of the trial, although he acquired it after the action brought; provided the vendee has not, prior to the action, applied for a writ.—Thompson v. Miles, 1 Esp. R. 184.—If the vendee has abandoned the contract on a valid objection to the title.—Bartlett v. Tuckin, 1 M. & C. 583. J. A. M.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XVI. VOL. 3.

Before the Statute of Frauds, no agreement for the sale or purchase of an estate was valid, unless it was sealed as well as signed. It is now however clearly established that sealing is not necessary; and if a man has the habit of printing or stamping instead of writing his name, he will be considered to have signed by his printed name.—Saunders v. Jackson, 2 Bos. and Pull.

238. Schneider v. Norris, 2 Maule and Sel. 286. Where the name is inserted in such a manner as to have the effect of giving authenticity to the whole instrument, it does not signify in what part of the instrument the name appears. Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169.

Therefore the signing of the name at the beginning of the agreement will be sufficient; even though a place be left for such signature at the bottom of the instrument. Saunders v. Jackson, supra.

If the party know the contents of the agreement, a subscription as a witness will be a sufficient signing; as where an agreement was signed "Witness A. B. for C. D. agent to the seller," it was held to be sufficient. Welford v. Beazely, 3 Ask. 503. Blore v. Sutton, 3 Meriv. 237.

And it seems to be sufficient if merely the initials of the name are set down. Phillimore v. Barry, 1 Camp. 513.

It seems that the signature of the purchaser by himself or his agent, on the back of the particulars of sale, will be a sufficient compliance with the Statute. Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38. (a) J. S.

(a) The law upon this subject will be found very clearly explained in Sugden's Vendors and Purchasers, Vol. 1. chap. 3. sec. 4. We have an Answer to this Problem signed W. M. copied entirely from this useful work, without a single variation or comment made by the writer. This is not as it should be.—It certainly is not the way to gain solid information and instruction, for which useful purpose alone these Problems are intended.

EDITOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—ENGLAND:

March 30.

MR. SHERIFF EVANS.

Capt. POLHILL put a question to Lord John Russell with respect to Mr. Sheriff Evans, that as the order now stands on the books, he is to appear at the bar of the House on the 6th of April. He wished to know whether it was the intention of the Noble Lord to enforce that order or no. The Noble Lord's reply was, that in a few days he would move his attendance be postponed till after Easter.

JUDGE OF THE ADMIRALTY COURT—SALARY.

Matter considered in Committee. (In Committee.) Motion made, and Question proposed—“That a yearly sum of 4,000*l.* be paid to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.” Whereupon Motion made, and Question put,—“That a yearly sum of 3,000*l.* be paid to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.” The Committee divided—Ayes 17, Noes 83.

March 31.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

On the motion of the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, the Sergeant-at-Arms appeared at the bar, and acquainted the House that on Saturday last the Assistant-Sergeant and four other officers of the House were served with a notice that a declaration in an action had been filed against them in the Court of Queen's Bench, at the suit of Thomas Barton Howard, and he had thought it his duty to obtain a copy of that declaration.

The declaration was then delivered in, and read by the clerk at the table. The damages were laid at £1000.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL then rose and stated, that, in the absence of his noble friend the Secretary of State for the Colonies, it became his duty, with his noble friend's concurrence, to make a motion on the subject. From the verbiage of the document which had been read, it was exceedingly difficult to learn the real cause of action. But there seemed great reason to believe that Howard did not at all call in question the privileges of the House, or the regularity of the warrant or writ which had been issued against him. What he said was, that there had been excess on the part of the officers of the House; and the question now was, what course the House should adopt under the circumstances? Where an action was brought questioning their privileges, the House had not only a right, but was called on to interfere in a summary manner; and in Stockdale's actions they had, in his opinion, exercised a constitutional and wholesome jurisdiction. In this case, however, their authority was not called in question; the complaint was, that the officers had been guilty of excess in the execution of their duty. The Court of Chancery, if such a complaint were made against one of its officers, would not suffer its jurisdiction to be questioned in a court of law; but would on petition ascertain whether the complaint was well founded, and if so, would punish the officer, and award compensation to the party aggrieved. If Mr. Howard had taken that course and presented a petition to the House, stating that one of its officers had acted improperly in entering his house, or seizing his person, the House, on being satisfied that there was some foundation for the complaint, would no doubt have punished the officer, and given compensation to the complainant. But the notice of action in the Court of Queen's Bench having been served upon their officers, he humbly recommended, that as their privileges were not questioned, the better course would be, not to instruct or command the Attorney-General to appear and defend the action in the name of the House of Commons, but that leave should be given to the defendants to appear and defend it, when he had no doubt they would be enabled to show satisfactorily that they had been guilty of no excess and had done nothing but what they were justified and required to do; that they had entered the house after Howard had long evaded the service of the process against him; that they had entered it with the consent of the inmates, and that an exchange of civilities even took place during the time they remained there. Upon such evidence being given in justification, there would be no difficulty in returning a verdict in favour of the defendants. The honourable and learned gentleman concluded by moving that the officers of the House who had been served with notice be at liberty to appear and defend the action.

Lord HOWICK, though he was persuaded after what the House had done, that this motion would be carried by a large majority, could not silently consent to a course which he thought still more humiliating than the proceedings already taken. Why should the House allow what the Court of Chancery would not? (He told him, because the House has not what the Court of Chancery has—an officer called Master, constituted for the very purpose of inquiring into facts, and possessing authority to administer an oath). The Attorney-General continued Lord Howick, talked with confidence of a verdict for the defendants; his own confidence would be quite the contrary way, after the late decision of the Queen's Bench. If a verdict should be against the defendants, they would again be told that you had submitted, and were precluded from interfering. But all this was the consequence of the recent Bill, which had placed all the privileges of the House at the discretion of the courts of law.

Mr. O'CONNELL protested against this shrinking of the House from the assertion of its privileges.

Sir W. FOLLERT entirely approved of the course which the Attorney-General had recommended to the House. It had been repeatedly decided in former cases, that the legality of the Speaker's warrant could not be disputed, and it was conclusive against any action for trespass, assault, or false imprisonment, and it had so been decided in the case of Sheriffs and Wheelton when brought before the Queen's Bench by writ of habeas corpus. But it was not necessary for him to remind the House of the well-known case of Sir F. Burrell. Could the House prevent those proceedings being taken? Instead of an excess being committed, suppose a life had been lost in the execution of the Speaker's warrant, was it possible for the House to prevent the question being committed to a judge and jury? He did not understand why the House should throw its protection around its officers, if they had exceeded their duty.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL utterly denied that the course he now proposed to pursue was inconsistent with any single vote he had given on the question.

The SOLICITOR-GENERAL entirely dissented from the course about to be taken. Having repeatedly expressed his opinion on the subject, not supposing that anything he could now say would alter the opinion of the House, he did not occupy the attention of the House further than by observing that he should vote against the motion.

The House then divided—

|                         |      |
|-------------------------|------|
| For the motion          | 142  |
| Against it              | 51   |
| Majority for the motion | — 91 |

SCOTLAND.

LAW OF EVIDENCE BILL.

The LORD ADVOCATE moved that the Speaker leave the chair for the purpose of going into committee on this bill.

Mr W. RAE thought that a measure of this kind should not be brought in at once, but that change should be made gradually. He had attended the second reading of this bill, under the impression that it had the assent of the bar generally, but since that time he had received letters from judges on the bench and lawyers at the bar, which expressed a strong wish that the bill should be delayed until the subject was thoroughly investigated. He should therefore move that the Speaker do leave the chair that day six months.

Mr. H. DRUMMOND supported the amendment.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL was of opinion, that the bill, even as it stood at present, would be a great improvement upon the existing law. At present a father could not give evidence in favour of his son, nor was a man a competent witness in the case of his brother or sister—nay, the law went further still, and prevented uncle and nephew from giving testimony in one another's behalf. It was obvious that in many cases—such as that of an alibi, for instance—rules like these must deprive a prisoner of the only evidence which the nature of the case admitted.

The amendment was withdrawn, and the House went into committee.

The clauses were agreed to.

The House resumed, and the report was ordered to be brought up to-morrow.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Jan. 14.

RUDD v. SEWELL AND ANOTHER.

SOLICITORS purchasing property of their Clients—Whether in the absence of fraud, and with long acquiescence, such a Sale will be disturbed by the Court.

Mr. Joseph Rudd, the plaintiff's father, had employed the defendant's Solicitors at Norwich, as his Solicitors. In the year 1809, he was desirous of purchasing an estate that was then for sale in the County of Norfolk, for £5000. but Mr. Joseph Rudd, the plaintiff's father, in order to make up that sum found it necessary to sell an estate of his own for £2,400., for which sum a Mr. Murray agreed to buy it, but that agreement was afterwards rescinded, the purchaser discovering an objection to the title. Messrs. Sewell and Blake were employed by Mr. Rudd in these transactions. When the contract with Murray went off Rudd agreed to sell his estate to Mr. Blake for £2,200., in June, 1809. No conveyance was then executed, but in the September following, Mr. Blake sold the estate for £2,500. to a Mr. Middleton, who paid £1,000. of that sum, leaving £1,500. a charge on the estate. A conveyance was executed by Rudd directly to Middleton. Rudd received the £2,200. from Mr. Blake, and did not, for upwards of twenty years, make any complaint of the conduct of Messrs. Blake and Sewell; but after his death, a few years ago, his executor hearing the circumstances, with some exaggerations, from a clerk to Sewell and Blake in 1809, called upon them to pay over to Rudd's estate £300. the difference between the price Mr. Blake paid for and received for the estate.

Mr. Wigram, for the plaintiff, contended that Sewell and Blake being the solicitors for Rudd, in the negotiation for sale of the estate, were themselves precluded from being the purchasers, by reason of the judiciary character with which they were clothed. That they availed themselves of a formal objection to the title to purchase the estate at less than its value from their client, and almost immediately afterwards obtained from a purchaser, with whom they had been previously in treaty, a profit of £300. and then got Mr. Rudd to convey the estate, not to themselves, but to the new purchaser, without informing him of the nature of the transaction. All these circumstances were features, if not of fraud, at all events of gross impropriety in solicitors towards their client, and the transaction altogether was one which a court of equity could not sanction.

Mr. K. Bruce, for Messrs. Blake and Sewell, characterised the suit as an impudent attempt to extort money from the defendants. The transaction took place 30 years ago. Mr. Rudd never complained of the matter; he well knew all the circumstances attending it. He was now dead, so was Middleton, and every other person who could explain the true nature of the transaction. A discarded clerk of the defendants set the plaintiff in motion by false representations of the transaction. The defendants solemnly denied the breach of trust imputed to them. Mr. Rudd was most anxious to sell his estate to purchase the other, and the agreement with Murray failing by reason of the fault in the title, he importuned Mr. Blake to purchase. Sewell and Blake offered to raise money for him on the estate, but he preferred to sell; upon which Mr. Blake said, if he were to buy, it would be on speculation merely, as he did not want to keep the estate, and he paid down £2,200. to Rudd. But though he got £2,500. from Middleton, he did not get in hand more than £1,000.; so that it suited Rudd's purpose better to sell for £2,200. ready money. This was altogether a stale demand, and the court would not do ample justice to the defendants unless it dismissed the bill with costs.

Jan. 20.

The LORD CHANCELLOR delivered judgment. The bill was filed by the son and executor of a gentleman of the name of Rudd, who in 1809 sold an estate to the defendants, Messrs. Sewell and Blake, solicitors, of Norwich, for £2,200. and they in three months afterwards sold the same estate for £2,500. The object of the bill was to recover from the defendants the difference between the two sums, on the ground that, they being the solicitors of Mr. Rudd, generally and particularly, in negotiating the sale of the said estate, before Mr. Blake himself, one of the solicitors, bought it, they could not in equity be allowed to derive any profit from the sale of the estate; and the bill imputed fraud to them in the transaction. They, in their answer and in their defence, denied that they took any advantage of Mr. Rudd, who, being in want of money, to purchase another estate, and a former contract to dispose of his own failing in consequence of an objection to the title, pressed Mr. Blake to buy. Mr. Blake distinctly told Mr. Rudd, that if he bought the estate it would be to sell it again. He did buy it, and advanced forthwith the £2,200. and though he sold the estate soon after for £2,500. he received only £1,000. in hand, and the balance was unpaid for years. Mr. Rudd was well aware of all the circumstances, and he never complained during his lifetime. The defendants further said that though they were not conscious of any misconduct in the affair, yet rather than come into court they offered the plaintiff to pay him the difference in price of the estate with interest, and he refused the same.—The Lord Chancellor, having shortly stated the facts, proceeded to observe that the rule which prohibited solicitors from purchasing the property of their clients was well established and admitted of no exceptions. Nothing that the court did with reference to the present case would in the slightest degree affect the principle of the authorities on that important subject, and it ought to be well known to all professional men that they never could be allowed to take any gain from such transactions, while there was the greatest risk of their losing much in professional character. The present case was, however, a very peculiar one. The bill alleged fraud but no fraud was proved. It was undoubtedly wrong in the defendants to purchase their client's property under any circumstances, but it appeared that the plaintiff's father knew of the sale and the profit made on it; that he never complained of it, and that he never contemplated any measure to obtain redress. After the lapse of more than a quarter of a century, and without any proof of fraud, but on the contrary a failure of such proof, it was not possible that the court could disturb the transaction between the parties. The bill must therefore be dismissed, and the question then arose how it was to be dismissed. If there had been fraud proved, the court could not have allowed lapse of time to be a bar to the plaintiff's claim; but it appeared that the father of the plaintiff acquiesced: and the plaintiff, whether misled by his witness or not, allowed himself to make a charge of fraud; and then when the defendants put in their answer, denying the fraud, and stating their evidence, the plaintiff persisted in the cause, although the defendants offered to make what reparation they could, by returning the £300. with interest. Lord Eldon, in a case which came before the House of Lords, expressed an opinion that, with proof of fraud failed, the bill ought to be dismissed, but without costs, in order that solicitors' clients might know that when suspicious prices took place, the solicitors would have to pay the costs of the inquiry. In the present case the plaintiff, by his mode of dealing with the defendants, had deprived himself of that advantage, and the bill must be dismissed with

Feb. 28.

NEWLANDS v. HOLMES.

SEPARATE USE.

We have already reported this case fully, (a) as heard before the Vice-Chancellor; and so gave a copy of the order then made, (b) which we were favoured by a solicitor in case.

The question raised was, whether chattels attached to a feme sole to her separate use, who after the death of the testator becomes a feme sole, but has no settlement, are liable to be taken in execution by a judgment creditor of her husband. An injunction was had restraining the sheriff from selling the chattels upon terms ordered upon the plaintiff; and upon appeal to the Lord Chancellor, pending the case of Tullett v. Armstrong, (c) his Lordship ordered the Vice-Chancellor's order to be suspended; that the plaintiff should resume possession of the chattels, and a restraint against his selling them until further order should be made, unless the plaintiff should go before the master and give security for the defendant's debt and costs, or pay the costs into court until the hearing of the case for further order of court. Upon that order being made the defendants resumed the possession of the effects, having obtained an alias writ of execution, and they have been in possession ever since.

The Lord Chancellor having lately given judgment in Tullett v. Armstrong, establishing a wife's exclusive right to property left to her for separate use before her marriage.

Mr. Wigram now moved to restore the injunction, and to make it perpetual, as being a coming within the principles laid down by his Lordship in Tullett v. Armstrong; observing that the only doubt that could be raised by any argument on the other side, was as to the identity of the effects in the house being part of the property bequeathed to Mrs. Newlands.

Mr. Bethell, for the defendant Holmes, said, that the property in this case was partly leasehold and partly moveable property, all bequeathed to the plaintiff when she was single and unmarried. When single she had unquestionably a right to dispose of all or any part of the property. The question was, whether upon her subsequent marriage that clause in the will against the control, interference, or debts of any husband she might marry, operated as a restriction on the absolute power she had before marriage, and fixed such a trust to the property as excluded all marital right. It was to be remarked, that much of the property so bequeathed was moveable property, and that there was no trustee interposed to support the distinction between legal and equitable ownership. The general law was, that where a woman has moveable property of which she can dispose absolutely, that property by her marriage becomes the property of her husband. Of choses in action and other property, the husband, by his marriage, obtained capacity to reduce them into his possession; but they did not become his absolutely by the marriage. In this case the defendants had no notice of the alleged trust before they executed the writ. It would be a dangerous doctrine to extend the protection of the court to unknown trusts between husband and wife—it would open a wide door for fraud on creditors. The wife might have given all this property to the husband at the marriage. The law would give him the moveable property without any act on the part of the wife.

Mr. Painter, for the sheriff, submitted to any order the court would make.

The LORD CHANCELLOR. The principle is, that when property is given to a woman for her separate use, upon her subsequent marriage, a trust attaches on that property for her use during the coverture. At present, he could not say whether such was the case here, but he suggested an inquiry before the master to ascertain how much, if any, of the property seized by the sheriff and now in his possession, was the property left to the plaintiff by her father's will, and also (on Mr. Wigram's suggestion,) how much of it was purchased by the wife by the property so left to her.

Mr. Wigram. And the sheriff ought to withdraw, as the leasehold houses are ample security for the debt, and it is not likely the plaintiff will remove the property, or any part thereof, during the proposed inquiry. According to the evidence now before the court, all the property was the wife's.

The LORD CHANCELLOR. I cannot remove the sheriff's officer, nor say this is the wife's property. That is the subject for inquiry before the master.

Mr. Wigram. We are ready to give a charge on the whole of the property, for so much as may be found by the master not to be the trust property of the wife.

The LORD CHANCELLOR. I cannot vary the former order. The security must be for all that the judgment creditor and the sheriff may be entitled to,—the costs to be reserved to the hearing.

(a) Ante, p. 184.
(b) Ante, p. 216.

(c) Ante, p. 215.

It was then arranged, that on the plaintiff giving security for whatever the defendants would be found entitled to, the sheriff should give up the possession.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER—Jan. 31.

Sittings in Banco.

TAYLOR v. NICHOLL.

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY—As to its due execution under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. & R. 72. Hil. 2. W. 4. (a)—Whether the party must himself originate and primarily suggest the name of an attorney to attest its execution.

In this case a rule nisi had been obtained to set aside a warrant of attorney. The ground of the rule was, that the provisions of the 1st and 2d Victoria, c. 110, relative to the nomination and attendance of an attorney on behalf of the party executing such an instrument had not been complied with. It appeared by the affidavits that the defendant had been written to by the plaintiff's attorney to come to Halifax from a neighbouring town, for the purpose of giving the warrant of attorney. He attended at the office of the attorney, when the instrument was prepared, read over, and explained to him, and he was informed that it would be necessary for him to procure the attendance of some attorney on his behalf to witness the execution. In reply to this he said he knew no one on whom to call for that purpose, and then the plaintiff's attorney suggested the name of Mr. Crossley. The defendant assented, and repaired to that gentleman's office with the clerk of the plaintiff's attorney, when, the nature of their business being explained, Mr. Crossley asked him if he wished him to attest the execution of the warrant as his attorney, to which he replied in the affirmative. Mr. Crossley swore that he asked if he knew the contents of the instrument, and whether he wished him to read it to him, when he said that he did know them, as the warrant had been read over to him by the plaintiff's attorney, and that he would not trouble him. Upon this, the instrument was signed. In answer to this the affidavit of the defendant himself, swore that he never knew Mr. Crossley's name at the time, that he did not name him as his attorney, and that the nature and contents of the warrant were not explained to him, and that if he had thought that it would have been put into execution so soon, he would not have signed it.

Mr. Cresswell shewed cause against the rule, and relied upon Bligh v. Brewer, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 651. (a).

Sir F. Pollock contended, that as the name of Mr. Crossley had been suggested by the plaintiff's attorney, the act had not been complied with in its spirit or terms, as it was meant to guard against any interference of the plaintiff or his attorney.

The COURT, however, thought that nothing had been shown to lead them to swerve from the decision in "Bligh v. Brewer." It can only put a construction on the actual words of the statute, which does not say "originally named or suggested," thereby meaning that the defendant must himself originate and primarily suggest the name of the attorney who is to attest his execution of a warrant of attorney. The suggestion may come from a third party, and there is no reason why that should not be the plaintiff's attorney. When that is so, the Court would narrowly watch the case; but there is no imputation of fraud here, and as it is made necessary by the act that the attorney named should actually read over and explain the document to the party about to execute it, I think enough was done here to bring the case within the statute, and that this warrant was attested by Mr. Crossley, an attorney expressly named by the defendant on his behalf.

The rule discharged with costs.

(a) In that case a defendant was in custody and about to execute a cognovit, and his attorney being absent from home, the plaintiff's attorney suggested the name of another attorney to attend and act for the defendant if he had no objection, and he replied "I did not care much who it was." They then went to the office of the attorney so suggested, and he enquired of the defendant whether he wished him to attest the execution as his attorney. The defendant replied in the affirmative, and prevented the cognovit being read over to him by stating he had heard its contents. A rule had been then obtained to set aside the cognovit, on the ground that the rule (Hil. 2. W. 4. 72.) had not been complied with. Upon shewing cause PARKER B. said,—In this case every thing which the rule demands has been complied with. The rule requires two distinct things:—first, that there shall be an attorney attending on the behalf of the person in custody; secondly, that it shall be a different person from the plaintiff's attorney.

(a) See Rising v. Dolphin, ante, p. 310.

thirdly, that he shall be expressly named the defendant, and shall attend at his request. Now, in this case, it appears that the defendant having consented to give a writ, the clerk of the plaintiff told him that an attorney must be present for him, and suggested that Mr. Cummins was in attendance. He replied that he did not care if it was, he had no objection to him. I do not say how it would have been if he had stopped there; but the defendant went to Cummins's office, and Cummins asked if he wished to have him as his attorney, to which he answered in the affirmative. The rule requires the attorney to be expressly named by the person in custody. It seems to me that this case comes within those words; for it is the same thing, whether the defendant states affirmatively that he adopts Mr. Cummins as his attorney, or says in the first instance, I wish you to be my attorney. The effect of the words cannot make any difference. Then did he act at his request? It is immaterial whether the attorney comes to him, or he goes to the attorney, if he gets actually to see to the transaction. The effect of the rule is, that he shall be informed of the effect of the act, and there is no need for the attorney's reading over the writ, if the party be already acquainted with it. Here the attorney was a different person from the plaintiff's attorney: he was expressly named by the defendant, and acted at his request. In Fisher v. Papanicholas (2 C. & M. 215.) the defendant made nothing; he merely made no objection. In Walker v. Gardner, (4 Barn. & C. 371.) the conversation, by which the presence of the defendant was supposed to be proved, was denied; and therefore the court must be presumed to have treated the case as though such conversation had existed.

PERSON B.—observed, that in Walker v. Gardner, the nomination was only to be inferred from the circumstance of the defendant having afterwards paid him; so in Fisher v. Papanicholas, there was merely an inference arising from the party making no objection. The rule does not require that the individual named should be mentioned; it is sufficient, if he is the person particularly appointed. The rest of the Court concurred, and the rule was discharged, with costs.

EDITOR.

INSOLVENT DEBTOR'S COURT, March 9.

CASE OF ABRAHAM HENRY CHAMBERS. (a) As to annulling a Vesting Order.

Mr. Cooke applied to the Court to annul the vesting order obtained by Mr. Wilton under the compulsory clause of the statute. He said the Master of the Rolls had set aside the attachment because it had not been served within the three weeks. An appeal had then been made to the Lord Chancellor, who confirmed the decision of the Master of the Rolls. Mr. Wilton was not, therefore, in a situation to detain Mr. Chambers.

March 25.

Mr. Woodroffe said, he was instructed by Mr. Wilton to consent to the application to annul the vesting order. Mr. Wilton was desirous to give full force to the dismissal of the vesting order.

The Chief Commissioner said, he was not quite certain, that if the creditor who obtained the vesting order had his debt discharged and satisfied, that would be a reason why the vesting order, as a matter of course, should fall to the ground.

Mr. Woodroffe said, Mr. Wilton's debt had not been satisfied. The attachment at the suit of Mr. Wilton had been set aside, but his debt remained.

The Chief Commissioner ordered the vesting order to be discharged.

SHERIFF'S COURT, LONDON.—Jan. 21.

REGINA v. BICK.

OUTLAWRY—Special Writ of CAPIAS ULTAGATUM—As to the right to SEIZE MONEY.

In this case, the defendant having been outlawed, a writ had issued commanding the Sheriffs of London to enquire, by a jury, of the defendant's goods and chattels, lands and tenements, in the City of London, and to extend and appraise the same, and to take them into the Queen's hands and safely keep them; so that they may answer to the Queen for the value and issues of the same.

(a) See ante, p. 343.

Mr. Lay, solicitor, stated the proceedings were taken on behalf of a Mr. Salt, to whom the defendant was indebted. The property, of which evidence would be given, were two sums of money, one of 109*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* in the Bank of England, standing in the name of the Accountant-General; and the other 58*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* which was in the hands of the Sheriff of Stafford.

The SECONDARY—How do you make it appear that money in the Bank, in the name of the Accountant-General, belongs to the defendant?

Mr. Lay—Proceedings had been taken in another suit, and 810*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* had been paid in by order of court; and after the debt and costs in the first action had been paid, there was the balance of 109*l.*

A certificate of the Accountant-General was put in, to the effect that such balance stood in his name.

Mr. Whitmore, of the firm of White and Whitmore, agents to the Under-Sheriff of Stafford, produced the sum of 58*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* which was a surplus of monies seized under an extent by the Sheriff of Stafford.

The SECONDARY said they had no power to take the money; first, because the writ was only to inquire what goods and chattels, lands and tenements, in the bailiwick of the sheriffs of London, and to extent and appraise the same; secondly, because under the writ they could not take money; and thirdly, they could not take what was out of their reach. The money was in possession of Mr. Whitmore, who lived out of the bailiwick, and after showing it to us he may put it into his pocket, and walk away with it.

Mr. Lay—Money is certainly a chattel, and can be seized.

The SECONDARY—Under a different writ it might, but by this we are to appraise the value. It would puzzle a conjuror to value bank notes so as to please legal gentlemen. Besides, it is not legally in the city.

Mr. Lay—Why here it is in my hand.

The SECONDARY—No, fact and law are at loggerheads there. If you can induce Mr. Whitmore to take a lodging in the city, perhaps we could do something. Or if he likes to leave it, and we find it, that's another case, but we can't seize it—in truth, according to law it is not here at all.

Mr. Whitmore said he should have nothing more to do with it, and if any one found it all very well.

The SECONDARY (putting the money in his pocket)—Well, now mind this, we don't seize it. We only find it in the city.

The jury found a verdict for 109*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*

PREROGATIVE COURT—March 5.

WILL OF SIR GEORGE TEESDALE.

NEW WILL ACT, Sec. 21.—Obliterations unattested, admitted upon presumption.

Major-General Sir George Teesdale, K.H. left a will attested by two witnesses, without date, but in a legacy of 1,000*l.* bequeathed to nephew, the word "one" was written upon an erasure, and the registrars had refused to receive it without affidavit that the alteration had been made prior to the execution. The only attesting witness in England could not speak to this point, having attested the paper in March and April, 1838, without minute inspection. The other witness to the will was out of the country, but the word "one" was proved to be in the handwriting. The widow, her sister, and the executors, proved that at the finding of the will which was contained in a sealed envelope in the General's writing desk (but which envelope had been destroyed), they noticed the alteration. A copy of the paper in the deceased's handwriting was found, enclosed in the same envelope in which the word "one" was written with an erasure.

Dr. PHILLIMORE submitted that, under the circumstances, the legal presumption was that the alteration was made before the execution.

Sir H. JENNER decreed probate of the paper as it stood with the alteration, upon the presumption that it was made before signature.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

Lincoln's Inn Fields, March 25, 1842.

SIR,—In the solution of the Problem included to by your correspondent, S. A. W., experienced some little difficulty in deciding upon the nature of the required Answer: I was fortified in the view I ventured to take of the subject, by the opinion of an eminent legal friend to whom I read the question, this opinion being further strengthened by your silent acquiescence in its propriety. Your correspondent will also see (if he will take the trouble of perusing my Answer) that in my few prefatory remarks, I indirectly admitted the possibility of its being liable to another interpretation, confidently leaving the matter to your decision.

I was therefore somewhat surprised at the tenor of your correspondent's remarks, who disclaiming all idea of imputing "carelessness or partiality" to yourself, virtually accuses you of both.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your very obedient servant.

R. F.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

27 March, 1840.

THE MASTERS v. THE JUDGES.

SIR,—Allow me through the medium of the Legal Guide to call the attention of the public to a glaring instance of the taxing officers acting in direct opposition to the decision of the Court of Exchequer in the case of Wick v. Hunt, 7 Dowl. 397, and 5 M. & W. 61.

In that case the Court held upon the construction of the rule of H. T. 4 W. 4. [which provides for a reduced scale of costs "in all actions of Assumpsit, Debt, or Covenant, when the sum recovered or paid into Court, and accepted by the plaintiff in satisfaction of his demand, does not exceed £20. exclusive of costs"]; that when in an action for unliquidated damages an order is made for staying proceedings on payment of a sum under £20. the costs to be taxed, the plaintiff is only entitled to costs on the reduced scale.

Having consented to a similar order as in the case in a special Assumpsit for a trifling breach of a contract, I yesterday submitted to the taxing officers of the Court of Exchequer, that the plaintiff was only entitled to costs according to the reduced scale, and reduced the case above cited. Whereupon I was coolly informed that the masters would not concur in the propriety of that decision, and the plaintiff was allowed his costs according to the higher scale.

Upon the impropriety of the conduct of the taxing officers in taking upon themselves to overrule the judgments of the Court, there is but one opinion; and the mischievous consequences of such conduct is apparent in the confusion it produces. The case which has been thus overruled is quoted in the Legal Guide as law. It will therefore be important to practitioners to know that the taxing officers refuse to recognise it.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

M. J. M.

CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS.

Report of the Select Committee appointed to consider in what manner the regular service of the notices required by the Act to amend the Jurisdiction for the Trial of Controverted Elections may be best secured.

The Committee, in the first place, proceeded to inquire in what manner and under what regulations the notices ordered by the House, or Committees, are at present served on the several parties to whom they are addressed.

It appears from the evidence of Sir William Gossett, that the messenger whose duty it is to serve notices is required to keep a book, in which he is to enter all orders and notices, with the names of the parties to whom they are addressed, the subject matter to which they refer, and the manner in which he has served them on the parties.

The Committee are of opinion, that if this book is regularly and correctly kept, no further regulations are required to insure the correct service of the orders of the House; and had the several columns been correctly filled up in the case of the notices in the matter of the Ludlow election petitions, the mistake as to the service of those notices could not have occurred.

The Committee have subjoined in the appendix the entries of the service of the first notices in the Ludlow case, and also the entries of the second set of notices which have been issued by the General Committee.

The Committee are, however, of opinion, that on account of the importance of the subject it is expedient that the House should give some further directions to insure the correct and early delivery of the notices required under the Act for amending the Jurisdiction for the Trial of Controverted Elections, as difficulties have in some instances been found to exist in discovering the address of the parties; and they therefore beg to suggest, as the best mode for obviating this difficulty, and securing the regular service of the notices required to be given by the above-mentioned Act, that the House should make an order that every election petition shall have endorsed thereon the name of the agent or other person to whom, and the place where, the notices for the parties petitioning are to be served.

The Committee are also of opinion, that the clerk attending the General Committee should be directed to keep a book, in which he should enter all notices issued by order of the Committee, with the date and manner in which they have been served by the messenger, who should be ordered to make a report to that effect to the clerk attending the General Committee, on the day following that on which any such notices may have been given to him for delivery.

March 19, 1840.

CIRCUITS

OF THE COMMISSIONERS FOR THE RELIEF OF INSOLVENT DEBTORS.

| 1840.            | Home Circuit.                       | Southern Circuit.                               | Northern Circuit.                      | Midland Circuit.                      |
|------------------|-------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Summer Circuits. | W. J. Law,Esq.Commissioner. | H. B. Reynolds,Esq., ChiefCommissioner. | J. G. Harris,Esq.Commissioner. | T. B. Bowen,Esq.Commissioner. |
| Wednes. June 10  | .                                   | .                                               | Oakham . .                             |                                       |
| Friday . . 12    | .                                   | .                                               | Sheffield . .                          |                                       |
| Monday . . 15    | .                                   | .                                               | Wakefield . .                          |                                       |
| Monday . . 22    | .                                   | .                                               | Kingston-upon-Hull . .             |                                       |
| Tuesday . . 23   | .                                   | Reading                                         |                                        |                                       |
| Wednesday . . 24 | .                                   | .                                               | York and City                          |                                       |
| Thursday . . 25  | .                                   | Oxford . .                                      |                                        |                                       |
| Saturday . . 27  | .                                   | Worcester & City                                | Richmond . .                           |                                       |
| Monday . . 29    | .                                   | .                                               | Durham . .                             |                                       |
| Tuesday . . 30   | .                                   | Hereford                                        |                                        |                                       |
| Wednes. July 1   | .                                   | Presteigne                                      | Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Town       |                                       |
| Friday . . 3     | Horsham . .                         | Cardigan                                        |                                        |                                       |
| Saturday . . 4   | .                                   | Haverfordwestand Town                       | Carlisle                               |                                       |
| Monday . . 6     | .                                   | .                                               | Appleby . .                            |                                       |
| Tuesday . . 7    | .                                   | Carmarthen andBorough                       | Kendal . .                             |                                       |
| Thursday . . 9   | .                                   | Swansea                                         | Lancaster . .                          |                                       |
| Saturday . . 11  | Dover . .                           | Cardiff . .                                     |                                        |                                       |
| Monday . . 13    | Canterbury                          | Brecon . .                                      |                                        |                                       |
| Tuesday . . 14   | Maidstone . .                       | .                                               |                                        |                                       |
| Wednesday . . 15 | .                                   | Monmouth                                        |                                        |                                       |
| Friday . . 17    | .                                   | Gloucester & City                               | Preston . .                            |                                       |
| Saturday . . 18  | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Chelmsford                            |
| Monday . . 20    | .                                   | .                                               | Mold . .                               | Colchester                            |
| Tuesday . . 21   | .                                   | Bristol . .                                     | .                                      | Ipswich                               |
| Wednesday . . 22 | .                                   | .                                               | Ruthin . .                             |                                       |
| Thursday . . 23  | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Yarmouth                              |
| Friday . . 24    | .                                   | Bath . .                                        | Beaumaris . .                          | Norwich & City                        |
| Monday . . 27    | .                                   | Wells . .                                       | Carnarvon . .                          | Lynn                                  |
| Tuesday . . 28   | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Bury St. Edmund                       |
| Wednesday . . 29 | .                                   | .                                               | Dolgelly . .                           | Cambridge                             |
| Thursday . . 30  | .                                   | Plymouth                                        |                                        |                                       |
| Friday . . 31    | .                                   | .                                               | Welchpool                              | Huntingdon                            |
| Same day.        | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Peterborough                          |
| Saturday Aug. 1  | Hertford . .                        | Bodmin                                          |                                        |                                       |
| Monday . . 3     | .                                   | .                                               | Liverpool . .                          | Lincoln & City                        |
| Tuesday . . 4    | .                                   | Exeter and City                                 |                                        |                                       |
| Wednesday . . 5  | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Nottingh. & Te                        |
| Thursday . . 6   | .                                   | .                                               | Chester and City                       |                                       |
| Friday . . 7     | .                                   | Dorchester                                      | .                                      | Derby                                 |
| Saturday . . 8   | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Leicester                             |
| Monday . . 10    | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Lichfield                             |
| Tuesday . . 11   | .                                   | Salisbury                                       | .                                      | Stafford                              |
| Wednesday . . 12 | .                                   | Southampton                                     | .                                      |                                       |
| Thursday . . 13  | .                                   | Winchester                                      | .                                      |                                       |
| Friday . . 14    | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Shrewsbury                            |
| Monday . . 17    | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Oldbury                               |
| Tuesday . . 18   | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Birmingham                            |
| Thursday . . 20  | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Coventry                              |
| Friday . . 21    | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Warwick                               |
| Monday . . 24    | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Northampton                           |
| Tuesday . . 25   | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Bedford                               |
| Wednesday . . 26 | .                                   | .                                               | .                                      | Aylesbury                             |

EXAMINATION OF ARTICLED CLERKS.

EASTER TERM, 1840.

It is stated that this examination will probably place on Thursday, May the 5th.—The number of candidates is 133.

LEMENT to a letter to the RIGHT HON. EDWARD KNATCHBULL, BART. relating the Bill before Parliament, for the FRANCHISEMENT of LANDS of COPYHOLD TENURE, and other lands subject to hereditary rights. London: Payne and Sons, 81, Pall Mall. 1840

In the 2nd Vol. of this work (a) we had occasion to review the letter to which this is a supplement, and which in our opinion took a biased view of this very important subject.

The present letter bears principally upon LORD BROUGHAM'S Bill being compulsory or voluntary. In the progress of the bill introduced in the House of Commons last session, the compulsory clause was struck out. In Lord Brougham's Bill the same appears. The writer says,

It is presumed that the compulsory clause can be permitted to remain, but must be struck out altogether, for the reasons already stated; it is strongly urged that the only proper, and correct act of legislation, should consist in a separate bill for the regulation of HERIOTS; and for dealing in the case of particular estates, the duration of the term on building leases, on similar regulations also.

It is further submitted, that whether the bill be compulsory or voluntary, that every condition should be fixed which can be fixed; and the commissioners should have only so much discretionary power as may be thought to be necessary.

It is submitted also, that it should be extended to such cases where the tenant's right is of inheritance. There are many copyhold tenures, not of inheritance, but upon lives. In some instances the grant for each life forms in a distinct and separate estate: any future extension is optional. In some cases both parties are bound, in some only one, in some neither; sometimes the lord only, and sometimes the tenant only. To make these parties renew the lease at their will, or against the will of one of them, would oblige the lord who has the whole interest vested in him, to sell to the tenant his own interest; or to oblige the tenant to buy a new interest, where he has neither the means nor inclination so to do. This description of tenure then ought to be excluded in distinct terms.

“If the act is to be compulsory, the fixing of the average of heriots by the three last compositions (see clause 28), ought no longer to remain; and for this plain reason, that they will afford nothing like a criterion of the real value. In Manors where the copyholds are of inheritance, the lord is apt to take what is below the value of the heriot; and where the copyholds are for lives, this is still more frequently the case. Hitherto it has been thought a sufficient protection, either to vary the amount of the composition, or to state it to be ‘pro hac vice’ only. But if the lord's right is to be taken from him without his sanction, surely he is entitled to that full compensation which he must receive had his heriots been taken in kind; and is not to be made a sufferer through his own good nature and forbearance.

“Another strong argument arises against the compulsory clause, where buildings are required in towns and other populous places.

“It has been already shewn, that in the present state of things, buildings can be raised with advantage to the copyhold tenants, and a method has been pointed out by which such a measure may be accomplished. But no fair compensation at all can be given to the lord under this bill. If the town increases in rent, the houses increase also in value and in rents. The future improvement is certain, although the extent is uncertain; and the Lord of the Manor can have no compensation at all given him upon any practical principle, and is certain of becoming a loser in the long run. He ought at least to have a ground rent varying according to the value. Again, soil, at present valueless, suddenly becomes of the highest value, through some accidental or scientific discovery; and the lord is cut off from all participation in this future accumulation of wealth. He may live to see his copyholder in possession of immense riches, whilst himself remains in a state of stationary poverty.

“It is further submitted that some gentlemen of the highest attainments, have been taught to view this measure in an erroneous manner, and have been led away from the main question. I must humbly remind these gentlemen, that the basis upon which this bill must stand or fall is, that the copyhold tenures operate prejudicially to the interests of agriculture. If they say “I would never buy a copyhold estate,” and this observation is made to apply to a purchase as a residence, say for instance, a few acres for the erection of a villa, I at once accede to the remark, I should certainly prefer building on my own, in preference to another's soil; but if they mean to say that an investment of money in the purchase of copyhold land, is not a profitable concern, I must say that they are labouring under a great error; and that in many instances a copyhold purchase will return them a better interest for their money than any freehold.

"Lastly, it is submitted, that no one can look through all the clauses of this bill without being satisfied that the consequent expense must be enormous; and, I fear, absolutely ruinous in many instances to the smaller tenants. Every individual case must stand by itself, if justice is to be arrived at, and must be settled by its own peculiar position, and the particular evidence belonging to it. With respect to many of the less affluent copyholders, the small capital which they now expend on their land will be exhausted in the redemption of these rights and services; and they will be driven either to part with their estates, or to cultivate them in a very inadequate manner."

The writer then proceeds to make some very pertinent remarks upon the clauses of the bill. We wish however he would look to the tenant as well as the lord. The letter bears the same one-sided stamp as the former.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We have made room for Answers to Two Problems this week.

"An Articled Clerk and Subscriber".—Yes, if in the ordinary occupation and employ of the gentleman to whom you are articled, as an Attorney.

J. T. T.—Where an Articled Clerk or his parents are in justice entitled to a return of part of the premium given with him, the Court will in general interfere summarily, and refer it to the Master to say what sum shall be refunded.

R. J. T.—You deserve much praise for your industry, but some of your Answers betray a want of close reading upon your subject; as an instance, your Answer to the Problem—"Damage Feasant." We wish many others of our correspondents would apply themselves to the Cases they refer to, and the arguments pro and con, so as to be enabled to form judgments of their own, and not copy so closely from the text books.

W. M.—Your Answer to Problem XVI. in this volume is copied verbatim from Sugden's Vendors and Purchasers.—You have even adopted one of that learned writer's MSS. as your own. This is not as it should be.

Alphonso.—See letter by J. A. M.

Δ.—We can find no precedent to meet your Case, and we have taken some trouble with it. We will think about your last questions;—they call upon our leisure, of which we have none, and from being personal they have become somewhat professional, which we do not admit.

G. G.—Is not the remedy with yourself?—In our 2nd volume you will find a letter from a correspondent on the same work.

S. A. W.—See letter by R. H.

Our many correspondents during the week shall all have due attention.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We can only say to those who express their wishes for and against the Lists and Court Papers which we are in the habit of inserting, as necessary and useful information, that—Frustra laborat qui omnibus placere studet. We must therefore be guided by our own judgment.

On April 7, will be published, price 4s. to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part III.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The NOTES are to the purpose only. Among these, the term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

Vol. IV. Part II. contains
ASSIGNMENTS.

Part III. will contain

A NEW FORM of Assignment of several Terms to attend the inheritance to one Trustee to save the expense of several Trustees—also the law relating to such Terms—and

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS,

With the Law relating to USES, REMAINDERS and POWERS.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 104, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 104, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, April 4, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

[LIII.]

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1840.

[No. 24.]

LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

ESSAY II.

3 & 4 Wm. IV. cap. 74.

Act for the Abolition of Fines and Reversions, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance.

(Continued from page 337.)

BASE FEES.

§ 29 enacts, That if a base fee in any lands, and the remainder or reversion in fee simple of the same lands, shall, at the time of the passing of this act, or at any time afterwards, be in the same person, and at any time after the passing of this act there shall be no intermediate estate between the base fee and the remainder or reversion, then and in such case the base fee shall not merge, but shall ipso facto be enlarged into as large an estate as the tenant in tail, with the consent of the protector, if any, might have created by any will or deed under this act if such remainder or reversion had been vested in any other person.

AN ESTATE IN FEE, qualified or base, is an estate to A. and his heirs, till a certain event happen, or to be defeated if such an event occur: as to A. and his heirs, tenants of the Manor of Dale. Here, so soon as A. and his heirs cease to be tenants of that Manor, the estate will cease (a) So when Henry VI. granted to John Talbot, Lord of the Manor of Kingston-Lisle in Berks, that he and his heirs, Lords of the said Manor, should be peers of the realm, by the title of Barons of Lisle, here John Talbot had a base or qualified fee in that dignity (b); and the instant he or his heirs quitted the seignory of this manor, the dignity was at an end. So when a person holds his estate to him and his heirs, so long as A. has heirs of his body he has a base or qualified fee (c): which occurs in cases where, formerly, tenants in tail, not being seised of the immediate reversion in fee, levied a fine with proclamations to a stranger in fee, in which case the issue under the entail were barred by the fine of their ancestor from claiming the estate, and the stranger had a fee so long as there was issue under the entail; or where now, under this statute, such tenants in tail execute a quasi-fine to such a stranger, without the consent of the protector of the settlement, when a similar base fee arises. When a base fee, and the remainder or reversion in fee simple of the same lands, become united in the same person, with no other estate intervening, the base fee becomes ipso facto enlarged into as large an estate as the tenant in tail, with the consent of the protector of the settlement (if any) might have created under this section of the statute, if such remainder or reversion had been vested in any other person.

(a) Watk. Conv. ch. 9.

(b) Co. Litt. 27.

(c) 10 Rep. 97 b.

The Real Property Commissioners, in their observations upon merger of base fees, (d) say—"If a tenant in tail, claiming the immediate remainder or reversion in fee, bars his estate tail by means of a fine instead of a recovery, he frequently prejudices his title by merging, in the remainder or reversion, the base fee acquired by the fine, as he thereby not only lets in all the charges and estates made and created by the persons through whom he derived the remainder or reversion, but also renders it necessary afterwards, to make out his title to the remainder or reversion, which, in many instances, is attended with great difficulty and expense." This difficulty is removed by the present section of the Act, by preserving base fees from merger, and enlarging them, when united with the immediate reversion, in as large an estate as the tenant in tail, if in possession, could have created. Indeed, it provides generally for the enlargement of the base fee, whenever it shall happen to be united with the immediate remainder or reversion in fee, whether the base fee shall have been created by a fine prior to the Act, or shall be created by an assurance under the Act itself.

All the New Real Property Acts, commence by defining the words or expressions employed, and frequently giving several meanings to the same terms, thus, the expression "base fee," the Act says, shall mean exclusively that estate in fee simple into which an estate tail is converted, where the issue in tail are barred, but persons claiming estates by way of remainder or otherwise are not barred. As—where A, tenant in tail in remainder, expectant on a life estate in B, with remainder over, makes a disentailing assurance, without B's consent as protector, and acquires to himself and his heirs (general), or conveys to a stranger and his heirs, an estate to endure so long as there shall be issue in tail; which estate is descendible, alienable, and devisable, like an estate in fee simple. (e) An estate tail means not only the thing it properly imports, but likewise "a base fee into which an estate tail shall have been converted," though a base fee has just been classed with a fee simple, because it has not the limited qualities of an estate tail. An "actual tenant in tail" is "exclusively the tenant of an estate tail which shall not have been barred," notwithstanding that "the estate tail may have been divested or turned to a right." Thus, if an estate tail had been discontinued before the Act, the person having the right of action would still be actual tenant in tail, and a fortiori if the tenant in tail were merely dispossessed.

The simple term "tenant in tail" includes not only the idea of an actual "tenant in tail," (understood of course in the sense in which that term is previously defined), but also "a person who, where an estate tail shall have been barred and converted into a base fee, would have been tenant of such estate tail, if the same had not been barred;" so that in the case above supposed of a disentailing assurance by B, tenant in tail in remainder, A and his issue, though deprived of the estate tail, and all right to the estate tail, would yet be tenant or tenants in tail, within the scope of this definition, for the purpose of barring the remainders over, whatever may be the destination of the base fee created by the assurance.

The next term "tenant in tail," entitled to a "base fee," is explained to mean "a person entitled to a base fee, or to the ultimate beneficial interest in a base fee, and who, if the base fee had not been created, would have been actual tenant in tail." Thus, if in the case before stated, A. had conveyed to the use of himself and his heirs, then, as he would have taken the base fee, created by assurance, and would, but for the assurance, have had the estate tail, he would be tenant in tail entitled to a base fee" with the meaning of the definition; and if he could die, without disposing of the base fee, leaving an eldest son, such son being once owner of that fee, and nominal heir to the entail, would fall within the same definition.

(d) 1st Rept. p. 28.

(e) See Hayer's Convey. 165.

Lord Coke thus defines the base fee here referred to. Where a tenant in tail bargains and sells the estate to another and his heirs, afterwards levies a fine to him and his heirs with proclamations, he has an estate in fee simple, as long as the tenant in tail has issue of his body, derived out of the estate, this being an inferior release, bargain, sale, or covenant to stand seised by a tenant in tail would create a base fee voidable by the issue in tail; see Co. Litt. 328. 2. Ld. Raym. 779. Doe dem. Neville v. Percys, 7. T. R. 278. Lord Kenyon thus describes the effect of a fine in merging a base fee in the reversion. If a tenant in tail with reversion in fee to himself, levy a fine, the effect of that on the estate tail is creating a base fee, and that becomes merged in the reversion in fee, and lets in all the incumbrances of the ancestor, which has frequently happened, in practice, from such a person being ill-advised to levy a fine instead of suffering a recovery; generally speaking, when two estates unite in the same person, in the same right, the smaller one is merged in the other, except in the case of an estate tail and a reversion in fee, which may exist together; in such a case, by the operation of the statute Quia Emptores, the estate tail is kept alive, not merged by the reversion in fee. See Roe v. Crow v. Baldmore, 5. T. Rep. 110.

PROBLEM XXIV. VOL. III.

DEVASTAVIT.

What shall amount to a Devastavit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XIX. VOL. 2.

TRUSTS.

What is a simple trust? and

PROBLEM XX. VOL. 2.

What is a special trust?

Let us divide this subject, and consider—

1st. A simple trust.

2ndly. A special trust.

1st. A simple trust is what a use was before the statute of Henry VIII. and is thus described by Lord Coke: "A use is a trust or confidence reposed in some other, which is not issuing out of the land, but as a thing collateral thereto, and is annexed in privity to the estate of the land, and to the person touching the land, scilicet, that cestui que use shall take the profit, and that the tenant shall make an estate according to his direction." Co. Litt. 272 b. See Hayes' Conveyancing, p. 27. Or to speak in less ambiguous terms it is—where property is simply vested in one person upon trust for another, and the nature of the trust, not being qualified by the settlor, is left to the construction of law.

In the case of a simple trust, as the statute of Henry operates on the first use only, whether designated in the instrument as a use or a trust, if the conveyance or devise be to A. and his heirs "in trust for B. and his heirs," the possession will be executed in B. As in Austin v. Taylor, 1 Ed. 361; Robinson v. Grey, 9 East. 1; Broughton v. Langley, 2 Salk. 679; and the statute must operate notwithstanding the intention of the settlor to the contrary. In order therefore to make a simple trust effectual as such, the conveyance or devise must be "to the trustee and his heirs to the use of the trustee and his heirs, or unto and to the use of the trustee and his heirs," in trust for cestui que trust and his heirs. See Lewin on Trusts, pp. 21, 102.

In cases of simple trust the cestuique trust, or person having the equitable ownership, is entitled to the permanency of the profits, and the disposition of the estate, the jus habendi and jus disponendi, Smith v. Wheeler, 1 Mod. 17, per Pemberton, J.; and cestuique trust hath neither jus in re or jus ad rem, but only a confidence and trust, for which he hath no remedy by the common law; but for breach of trust his only remedy is in chancery. Co. Litt. 272 b.

2ndly. A special trust is where the conveyance to the trustee is to answer some particular and immediate purpose. Such as trusts to sell for payment of debts, &c.; for the separate use of a married woman; to preserve contingent remainders, &c. In which cases the trustee is not, as in the case of a simple trust, a mere passive depository of the estate, but is bound to exert himself actively in the execution of the settlor's intention.

Special trusts are not within the statute of uses; and therefore if any agency be imposed on the trustee, as by a limitation to A. and his heirs upon trust to pay the rents, Robinson v. Grey, 9 East, 1; or to convey the estate, Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Ves. 643 &c.; or any controul is to be exercised, or duty to be performed, as upon trust to apply the rents to a person's maintenance, Sylvester v. Wilson, 2 T. R. 444; or in making repairs, Shalpand v. Smith, 1 Bro. C. C. 75; to hold for the separate use of a feme covert, Harton v. Harton, 7 T. R. 652; or to preserve contingent remainders, Biscoe v. Perkins, 1 V. & B. 485; and a fortiori if to raise a sum of money, Wright v. Pearson, 1 Ed. 119; or to dispose of land by sale, Baglam v. Spencer, 1 Ves. 142; in all these cases, as the trust is of a special character, the operation of the statute of uses is effectually excluded. Lewin, 103.

The cestuique trust's estate in the case of a special trust is the right to enforce in equity the specific execution of the settlor's intention, to the extent of that cestuique trust's particular interest. Id. 495.

J. A. M.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XVIII. Vol. 3

CHANCERY.

Plea to a Bill—What is its object? What constitutes a good plea?

A Plea is put in to a Bill to avoid a discovery, or for the purpose of reducing the same, or some part of it to a single point; and from thence to create a bar to the suit. Mitf. Pl. 177. The office of a plea generally is not to deny the equity, but to bring forward a fact, the result, perhaps, of a combination of circumstances which, if true, displaces the equity. Rowe v. Teed, 15 Ves. 377. It is not every good defence in equity that is likewise good as a plea: for where the defence consists of a variety of circumstances there is no use of a plea, the examination must still be at large, and the effect of allowing such a plea would be that the Court would give their judgment on the circumstances of the case before they were made out by proof. Chapman v. Turner, 1 Atk. 53. Two inconsistent facts cannot be joined in one plea, Whitbread v. Brockhurst, 1 Bro. C. C. 404, nor can various facts be pleaded in one plea, unless all are conducive to a single point of defence, Ritchie v. Almy, 15 Ves. 82. But on a special application to the Court (where circumstances require it) leave will be given to the defendants to plead doubly, Kay v. Marshall, 1 K. 190. Gibbs v. Whitehead, 4 Madd. 241. The leading distinction between a plea and demurrer is that the former is used as a defence when the defect is not apparent on the face of the Bill, while the latter is the proper defence where the defect is apparent on the Bill. Cockburn v. Thompson, 16 Ves. 325. Dillist v. Flight, 1 Mad. 230. If a plea be replied to it is thereby admitted to be good, if it is.

ne, and the validity of the plea cannot be controverted, but only the truth of it as he avers it, or the plaintiff disproves it. 2 Mad. 235. A plea may be good in part and bad in part, Plunket v. Benson, 2 Atk. 51. which it differs from a demurrer. But if a part of the plea be inconsistent with the other it will be overruled. 4 Bro. C.C. 254. A plea may be to the whole Bill, or to part only. A plea therefore with an exception, may be good, but a plea with an exception generally, "of what is not answered" is not good, for, in such case, the Court could not know what the plea covers, without looking to the answer, Salkeld v. Science, 2 Ves. 3 and 3 Atk. 70, but if the exception is fully stated, it is unobjectionable, Hove Duppa, 1 Ves. and Bea. 514.

R. J. T.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—April 6.

PRINTED PAPERS BILL.

We cannot spare room for the important speeches of Lord DENMAN and the LORD CHANCELLOR upon this Bill. We have therefore adapted the summary of a contemporary.

The second reading of the Printed Papers Bill was moved, last night, in the House of Lords, by the LORD CHANCELLOR. A discussion on the far-famed privilege question naturally attracted a full attendance of peers. Neither Lord LYNTHURST nor Lord BROUGHAM were present.

The speech of the LORD CHANCELLOR was calm and temperate—with a leaning, it may be, towards the assertors of privilege. Lord DENMAN moved in a speech of the most admirable character—a speech, learned, luminous, argumentative in the highest degree—and pervaded, more than by a spirit of the most devoted attachment to constitutional freedom. Lord DENMAN's nomination of the majesty of English law, and his defence of the conduct of that court over which he presides, ought to be circulated in every part of the kingdom.

Lord DENMAN, while he distinctly recognised the possession by the House of Commons of certain most important privileges, pointed out clearly the recent assumption by that body of powers never, in former times, claimed by either of the branches of our Legislature. The House of Commons, it is true, as Lord DENMAN observed, claimed for the House of Lords the same privileges which it arrogated for itself; but his Lordship ventured, in behalf of the members of the Upper House, to disclaim all pretension to the possession of any power, in virtue of which 'whatever they printed should be privileged, and whatever they did should possess the force of law.' By reference to a resolution on their Lordships' journals—a resolution yet unrescinded—Lord DENMAN proved that the House of Lords had solemnly recognised the supremacy of law over parliamentary privilege.

"In illustration of the tendency of the House of Commons to grasp at power which does not constitutionally appertain to that body, Lord DENMAN stated the very instructive case of Floyd—a case determined in the reign of James I. His Lordship showed, however, that in that case the House of Commons, when their usurped power was challenged by the House of Lords, resigned it; and his Lordship proceeded to point out the very striking consequences that might, in certain circumstances, have followed, had the House of Commons persisted in exercising the unconstitutional functions which it, in the first instance, claimed. His Lordship assumed the case of the sheriff having been called on to do justice to Floyd's heirs, in opposition to the pleasure of the House of Commons—and adverted to his probable fate—incarceration, aggravated by that 'base buffoonery' of which England has recently seen so disgusting an example. The lofty indignation with which Lord DENMAN spoke of the treatment to which the sheriffs of London have been subjected, well became his high character and lofty position.

"The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE then dealt most forcibly with the pretended 'necessities' which are said to justify the privilege of unrestricted publication by the House of Commons. 'We are told,' exclaimed his Lordship, 'that that power is essential to the exercise of legislative functions! How is it essential? We are told, in the first place, that the privilege in question is essential—because it is desirable that the House of Commons should lay before the public the grounds of their legislation. To this I answer, that the grounds of their legislation can never be assumed to be, a mass of ex parte statements, of libellous charges, of unsustained attacks on private character. Again, we are told, that members of the House of Commons must justify themselves to their constituents—and that, in the exercise of their functions as the grand inquest of the nation, they must exercise the privilege in question. Again I answer, that out of such materials as I have described, men hers of the House of Commons can neither find the means of justifying their conduct to their constituents, nor, of exercising, with advantage their inquisitorial powers.

"Lord DENMAN pointed out, in a manner most befitting the subject, the insolent attempts of the House of Commons to interfere with the administration of justice—and to browbeat and overbear the judges. The famous 'resolutions' of the House were, in fact, nothing but an outrage on the dignity of the judicial bench.

"The history which the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE furnished of the whole transaction is admirably illustrative of the nature of the tyranny which the majority of the House of Commons desires to establish. In the first instance, the Attorney-General pleaded the truth of the alleged libel—and was successful. Then the Attorney-General rested his defence on the ground of unlimited privilege—and was beaten. Then commenced the war against the judges. Then the cases were left altogether undefended—no writ of error was sued out—no appeal against the judgment of the court was hazarded. No—the constitutional course adopted by the Attorney-General was, to vilify the authority of the Court of Queen's Bench—to calumniate the judges—and to treat the sheriffs with greater brutality than is exhibited towards many convicted felons."

Morning Herald.

Lord DENMAN said that it was perfectly well known and understood that it was lawful to print for the use of the members. The law being understood, the printers defended themselves before him by an order to sell also for the use of members. That was so far an indiscriminate publication. The sale had taken place, by order of the house, for a great number of years. He wished for entire publicity, and he did not think that the circumstances of the sale would make any material difference. He must say that he thought they ought to give publicity to all papers that should be really and bona fide prepared by Parliament.

The bill was read a second time.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, as the bill was intended to put a stop to certain proceedings at law, and Wednesday week was the first day of term, it was necessary that it should go through all its stages this week.

The Duke of WELLINGTON had been told by Lord Lyndhurst that he wished to take a part in the debate; he should submit that they should go into committee on it on Friday.

The LORD CHANCELLOR was ready to go into committee on Friday; but in that case their lordships should be prepared to sit on Saturday.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH proposed that they should fix on to-morrow (Tuesday) for going into committee, on the understanding, however, that if Lord Lyndhurst wished to express his opinions in committee rather than on the bringing up of the report, they should postpone going into committee till Friday.

The LORD CHANCELLOR acceded to this suggestion.

"What is called 'The Printed Papers Bill' involving the new privilege claimed by the House of Commons, is now on its way through the House of Lords, and will be discussed in detail as soon as Lord Lyndhurst is able to take his seat. For our own parts, we retain the opinion which we first gave on this subject—that neither House has a rational right to any privilege whatever, but that of deliberating and deciding without impediment, hindrance, or future responsibility, on the public matters which are subjected to its consideration. If physically obstructed they may remove the obstruction by summary imprisonment during the session. If libelled the courts are open to them, they may prosecute by the law officers. With these privileges, the whole duty of legislation may be fully and effectually performed. And what right can a legislative body have to more?"—Times.

PRINTED PAPERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

"There is no publication by order of the House which is not checked by the previous responsibility of some authority competent to supply. The speaker, the senior clerk at the table, persons appointed by act of parliament or by the crown to situations of trust, committees selected by the House itself, and especially the chairmen of such committees, are the authorities on whom respectively, according to the nature of the documents, the House relies.

"Whether these checks are sufficient, or whether they would admit of improvement, it must be for the House to decide. Your Committee conceive that they shall best discharge their duty by abstaining from expressing an opinion on that point; it only therefore now remains for them to point out what means of obtaining redress are open to individuals to whom injury may be done by any publication by order of the House. In the event of such injury being sustained, the course which might be adopted by the party aggrieved is that of appealing for redress to the House itself by petition. To s petition, if well founded, it is not reasonable to suppose that the House would refuse to listen; and whenever a wrong shall appear to have been really sustained, there would be no difficulty making such reparation as the circumstances the case might appear to demand. Let it be supposed, for instance, that the inspectors of prisons had been mistaken in the character they gave of the work published by Stockdale, and that it had really been a scientific work, which had been properly permitted to come into the possession of a prisoner, either the court of aldermen which was responsible for the management of the prison where the alleged abuse had existed, or the publisher of the book to which an obscene character was imputed, would on their petition readily obtained an inquiry into the truth of the statement they complained of, and, if disproved, the contradiction would have obtained the same circulation with the statement itself. A similar course might be adopted with respect to any unjust reflections on private character contained in papers published by authority of the House, and it would likewise be in the power of the House, if satisfied that such reflections were untrue, to declare its opinion to that effect by resolution, at the same time putting a stop to the further circulation. But although an injury of this description might thus be redressed, your Committee must repeat that too much pains cannot be taken to avoid giving in the first instance ground for complaint, and they therefore think it important to remark, that persons who would make their evidence before committees of the House the vehicles of calumny against others could not calculate upon doing so with impunity. The House has always been in the habit of punishing, as a contempt, any wilful departure from the truth by a witness, and this punishment would naturally and properly be more severe if the deception of which a witness had been guilty should appear to have been prompted by a malignant motive. The same principle would apply to the case of a malicious falsehood uttered in a petition.

Your Committee do not desire to offer any opinion as to whether the remedy thus attainable by individuals for any injury sustained by them by publication by order of the House is insufficient or otherwise, but, as an impression seems generally to prevail that if the privilege conferred for by the House is maintained, no such remedy whatever would exist, they have thought it not to show the idea to be unfounded, and to point out in what manner redress for injuries of this description might, consistently with parliamentary usage, be obtained.

March 18, 1840."

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Feb. 1.

ATTWOOD v SMALL.

Appeal from Vice-Chancellor—PRACTICE—DEMURRERS for want of Equity and want of Parties.

This was an appeal from the order of the Vice-Chancellor.(a)

The LORD CHANCELLOR said, he was of opinion that the bill was good, but good only as an ordinary bill for specific performance, and therefore to be enforced only against those persons who were parties to the contract, Small, Shears, and Taylor. The result of the decision of the Vice-Chancellor appears to me to be that the plaintiff would have no remedy at all, because it is part of the contract that those persons shall not be personally liable. There are now no persons before the Court, but those three persons, and they only as being parties to the contract. But if the contract is to be performed in the way in which it was arranged between the parties, and if no equity has arisen from the subsequent transactions, to give a better remedy to the plaintiff, why then (being the owner of the whole, and the estate being in the possession of the purchasers, and they not having paid the purchase-money) the Vice-Chancellor's judgment appears to me to have left the plaintiff in this situation—that he is only to prosecute his suit for the purchase-money against the three persons, who are not personally liable for it. So that the plaintiff would have no remedy at all, provided the contract is to be performed as it appears on the face of the bill, and that nothing has happened since to give the plaintiff any new equity. Therefore his only remedy is upon the written contract. The bill states that the plaintiff was owner of property of mines of very great magnitude; that he entered into a contract with certain persons, on behalf of the company, in their own names; that the effect of which was to give those persons (the defendants) the property in the mines, for which he was to be paid by certain instalments; that they were not to be personally liable; that the instalments were to be paid at certain stipulated periods; and the plaintiff was to look to the estate for payment. That in fraud of that contract, they instituted a suit, containing a variety of false charges, which at one time were supposed to be well-founded, but which, by the ultimate decision of the House of Lords, have been declared to be ill-founded, and that by those means, and by undertakings in the cause when it was pending in the Court of Exchequer, they have protracted the day of payment, (the last payment was to be in 1827,) and that the result has been that, during the whole of this period, they were continuing to work the mines and exhaust the property to which the plaintiff was to look for the purpose of working out his security; and that the result of that has been that 300,000*l.* remains due, the property itself having, by the working of the company in the meantime, become an inadequate security for that sum. My opinion is, that upon this statement in the bill, there is a remedy for the plaintiff. Whether the facts are made out or not, of course is not now to be considered; but if he makes out his case as stated on the face of his bill, this Court will find the means, so far at least as the circumstances enable the Court to do so, to restore the plaintiff, as far as possible, to the situation in which he ought to have stood, looking at the contract now established between the parties, as a valid contract, as that which is to regulate the rights of the parties. In the first place, I take it to be quite clear that, according to the contract itself, he has a right to look at his remedy against the property as it remains. There is another part of the case which I do not allude to, because, if the other parties ought to have been parties to the suit—I mean in respect of the other property which the company are said to have possessed, and which is not part of the property comprised in the contract—it is quite sufficient for the present purpose if the case shows a right in the plaintiff to pursue his remedy against the property itself. Now, with regard to those persons who were directors at the time the contract was entered into, if the case be as is stated, there is abundance of authority to shew that persons who have interposed between the party and his rights shall in some way or other be liable to make compensation for the injury of which they have been the authors. I think there is quite enough stated in the bill to shew that those, who took upon themselves in the other suit to interfere with the plaintiff's right under his contract, cannot be permitted now to state that they are not parties to the transaction, and that they ought not now to be made parties to a bill in which the plaintiff asks compensation for the unquestionable injury which he has sustained. Being of that opinion, of course it follows that the general demurrer cannot be maintained, the demurrer for want of equity. It applies as well to those who were directors and plaintiffs to the original suit, as to those who are now demurring parties, being representatives of persons who were in that situation, but who are now dead. As to the demurrer for the want of parties, it is said that assuming the suit to be properly constituted in other respects, there are three descriptions of persons who are not brought before the Court.

(a) See this case, fully reported ante vol. i. p. 376.

The one set of persons are all the shareholders of the company; the second are those who were directors of the company at the time the bill was filed; and thirdly, it is stated that one of the old directors being dead, that his representatives are not brought before the Court, and that there is not sufficient stated upon the bill to explain the reason why they are not brought before the Court. Now with regard to the first, what is stated in the bill, looking at the authorities upon this question, there is no ground upon which the objection can be maintained. The bill alleges that there are 600 shareholders, and that they are constantly varying, the shares being transferable, and states a case, therefore, that makes it utterly impossible that the plaintiff could pursue his remedy, if he must pursue it by bringing before the Court, and keeping before the Court, all persons who are shareholders. The cases of Adair v. The New River Company, (a) and Meux v. Multhby, (b) have saved me the necessity of doing that which I certainly should have done, if I had not found authorities already standing, of adopting the rule which it was necessary to adopt in order to prevent the grossest injustice being practised by companies of this description. To say that they are to be permitted to sue on behalf of themselves and others, because they are so numerous that they cannot be brought before the Court; and then to say that persons by whom they are sued are not to be at liberty to bring those who are plaintiffs against them before the Court without bringing all the shareholders, would enable them to commit any injustice which they pleased, without the possibility of being made responsible for it. I am of opinion that it is not necessary to bring the shareholders before the Court as such.

The plaintiff now avers that, the contract being contracted to be carried into execution, he wants that remedy which the contracts and the subsequent transactions which have taken place give him in order to obtain the consideration money. But I have nobody here representing the company. I have only those who may be said to have represented the company at a period long past, when the original bill was filed in the Court of Exchequer, but who are stated to have ceased to hold that situation, and to have handed over the possession of the property which as directors they then held, to other persons who have subsequently become directors of the company. The partnership deed puts the directors in the place of the company, and makes the defendants for the purpose of any litigation between themselves and others, in my opinion, proprietors of the company. I have said, that the six hundred shareholders are not necessary parties to the

(a) 11 Ves. J. 429.

(b) 2 Swanst. 277.

but if they are not necessary parties as holders, there must be some persons whom in contest with the company are at liberty

The only other persons held out by the owners of the property of the company, competent to deal with individuals who may transact with them, are the directors. If the directors, who held the property at the time this litigation commenced, were to be parties to the suit, they must be considered for the purpose of the contest with any other persons, as the owners of the property, and persons with whom this contract was made; they are not made parties to the suit, and no persons are made parties to the suit, can be considered in any sense as representing the company, or as against whom a remedy can be enforced, except the trustees: they are not, but then there are no custodis que trusts—except so far as they are trustees for themselves. I don't find, therefore, on this record, persons defendants who represent the interests of the company, or as against whom any remedy the plaintiff may have against the company can be enforced. My opinion is, therefore, that the plaintiff cannot upon this bill proceed, and the plaintiff cannot get what he asks, and which, according to the case he makes, no doubt he is entitled to, (if he makes out the case), to a sum for the consideration money unpaid against the value of the property which remains now available for that purpose. I find no person representing the interest, and no person against whom such a right can be enforced. I think, therefore, that the actual proprietors of the company are necessary parties to the suit, and that the bill makes it unnecessary.

Dismissed for want of equity—over-ruled. Decree for want of parties—allowed. Liberty for the plaintiff to amend.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT,

March 19.

KEYMER v. PERRING.

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.—Power of the Court to alter a Settlement where not prepared according to the intention of the parties.

This was a suit instituted on behalf of a married woman by her next friend, to have a settlement executed on her marriage rectified, so as to give her an absolute power of appointment over the trust property comprised in the settlement, which only a life-interest had been secured to her, and to have an account taken of what the trust property consisted at the time of the settlement, and how it had been disposed of; and that the plaintiff might be at liberty to make her election whether she would adopt certain investments of the trust fund which had been made. The bill stated that on the marriage of the plaintiff, Alice Perring, with Mr. Keymer, a treaty was entered into on behalf of the intended husband, by which it was understood and agreed by all the parties that the trust property should be so settled as that the lady should have a full and absolute power of appointing it over the whole; and in default of appointment, that it should be in trust for her during her life to her separate use, and after her decease to the issue of the marriage, as she and her husband or the survivor should appoint, and in default of appointment to the children equally; but if there should be no child, then to be distributed among the lady's next of kin; and that Mr. Allen Perring the brother, who had formerly been a solicitor, but who was not then in practice, having been intrusted with the preparation of the settlement, had caused a deed to be prepared and ultimately executed, in which no power of appointment was given to the wife, but in which every other part of the arrangement was given effect to. The lady was about 40 years old at the time of the marriage, which took place in Feb. 1825, and her husband about 20 years older.—There was no issue of the marriage in existence, and though Mrs. Keymer had made a will eight days after her marriage, appointing all her property to her husband, the defect in the settlement was not discovered until a very short time ago. The bill, without imputing any wrong intention directly against Mr. Allen Perring in the preparation of the settlement, set forth all the circumstances connected with the transaction in such a manner as to make it appear to the Court that the events which had occurred by which he would become entitled to a distributive share of the lady's property on her death were not unforeseen by the brother, and that the omission of the power of appointment was not in fact an accident. The evidence on the part of Mr. Perring entirely rebutted the imputation, by showing the omission had occurred entirely through inadvertence in the preparation of the draught by a young conveyancer, and friend of the family, and that on its discovery Mr. Perring at once admitted the intention to have been to give his sister an absolute power of appointment, and offered himself to bear the expense of having the settlement rectified by the Court. The other allegations in the bill related to improper investments of the trust property in houses on Tulse-hill, Brighton-terrace, Brixton, and at Norwood, and sought an account against the trustees of the marriage settlement. Mr. Colesworth by his answer stated, that he had never acted in the trusts, and was anxious to be discharged, and that the sole management of the trust property had been intrusted to Mr. Perring, with the approbation of the plaintiff, who had never applied to him to have any part of the property transferred into his name, or to act in the management of the trusts. The evidence in support of the allegations of mismanagement, and that given in reply to disprove the charges, and show that proper accounts had been rendered, and that the plaintiff was fully aware and approved of what was done, was very voluminous, and with the arguments of counsel has occupied the Court four whole days.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said the settlement was plainly wrong. It was admitted to be so, and it was manifest upon the face of it something else was intended. It appeared to have been understood on all hands that Mrs. Keymer was to have a general power over the whole fund, so as to dispose of it in any way she pleased. What instructions were given to the conveyancer did not appear. He said (speaking from his recollection of what took place 16 years ago) the settlement was prepared according to the instructions which were given him. He could not but think, though the instructions were not produced, it was to be inferred from the aspect of the draught that the instructions did contain a direction there should be that general power of appointment given to the wife which was stated in the bill. His Honour then examined different parts of the draught, many sheets of which he apprehended were originally blank forms of common clauses in settlements, which it was the practice of conveyancers to keep ready written, and that an intention appeared to have introduced a general power of appointment, which was afterwards, by some gross mistakes, passed over. So far, therefore, as the draught furnished any evidence, he was of opinion instructions were given to the conveyancer to draw a settlement with a general power of appointment. There was other evidence afforded from the manner in which the parties themselves had acted. Mrs. Keymer's will, made eight days after the settlement, supposed it to contain that general power, and the responsibility which Mr. Pering had brought upon himself personally by his mode of dealing with the trust property, if there was no such power, clearly showed that he had acted on the assumption that there was. However, the parties went on dealing for several years, and at last the error was discovered, and then it was said Mr. Pering ought to bear the costs of rectifying the mistake.

His Honour could not look upon it as a professional act of Mr. Pering, as he had ceased to be a solicitor in 1806. The settlement must, however, be rectified, and Mrs. Keymer might have it done in what manner she pleased, but she must bear the expense of rectification. Upon the other parts of the case there had been a great deal of discussion and time taken up, which his Honour was astonished at, when he looked at what it was the bill asked. With regard to the investments of the trust fund, he could not think they were wrong, and that it would turn out the mode of dealing between the parties showed such a knowledge and concurrence on the part of the plaintiff as would afford sufficient protection to the trustee for all he had done. There could, therefore, be no objection to directing an account, with liberty to the Master to state special circumstances. The costs of this part of the suit must be reserved. His Honour could not help observing, from the manner the plaintiff had shaped the case, she was aware of all that was going on; but he was sorry to see that the whole was conducted with a view to run down the character of Mr. Pering. He had, therefore, gone the more carefully through the whole of the charges, to see if there was any ground for the attack; and his mind was free from any impression which it was intended to create by the imputations of improper conduct on the part of Mr. Pering with regard to any of the subjects mentioned in the bill. His Honour then directed the terms of the reference to the Master to approve of a proposed settlement.

ROLLS COURT, Feb. 17.

STEPHENSON AND WIFE, v SMITH AND OTHERS
EXECUTORS—Their liabilities for the Accounts against each other.

Mr. Pemberton stated this case for the plaintiffs. The suit was instituted by Mr. Stephenson and Rhoda his wife, one of the daughters of Robert Lyford, who died in 1834, and by his will, after giving an annuity of 30*l.* a year to his wife durante casta viduitate, divided his property among his children; his daughters to receive one-third less than his sons, and appointed as defendants Smith, Tyrrel, and Windiate executors. The real estates of the testator, who was a landowner in Berkshire, were put up to sale by auctioneer and Tyrrell, one of the trustees and executors, and himself became the purchaser of three of the estates. The amount of the purchase-money was 31*l.* The crops of the farm were also put up to auction and the conditions of sale were, that 70 per cent of the purchase-money should be paid by way of deposit, and security be given for payment of the remainder at six months. A portion of the crops was purchased by a Mr. Collingwood for 170*l.*, but no security was given, and he at the end of six months became bankrupt. Windiate employed Collingwood as a purser at the sale, and he exceeded his authority, and was found to take the purchase on himself. Differences arose the testator's daughter, Rhoda, having married Stephenson, they filed their bill praying that all of the testator might be established and costs carried into execution; that the trustees be charged with all monies which they had but for their wilful default, have received: they might make good the purchase-money of crops sold to Collingwood, and account for £297. which ought to have been received from Mr. Barrett, a purchaser of part of the estate.

Kindersley, for the defendant, said the defendant or himself was in treaty to sell to Tyrrell the land he had afterwards purchased; and not only the widow of the testator, but all his sons and children, expressed their concurrence in the sale, and were satisfied that Tyrrell had given full price; Rhoda, before her marriage, approved of the sale, but the plaintiffs, after their marriage, prayed that the sale might not stand. Collingwood did not adhere to the directions of the late, the executor, by whose desire he attended the sale, and the lots were knocked down at prices exceeding what Windiate had offered him to bid. The purchase-money of the land was not paid to the auctioneer; Windiate was gone to America, and Collingwood took the crops were delivered, had become corrupt. They submitted that Smith and Windiate were not personally liable for Collingwood's conduct. Trustees had sold a portion of the testator's land to Barrett, and had let him into possession. The agent of Barrett who attended the sale would not have done so unless the conditions of sale were relaxed as to payment of interest on the purchase-money, and it was agreed such interest was only paid in the event of the completion of the sale being impeded by the fault of the purchaser. Differences arose respecting the possession of the land, and £297. was deducted from the sale. It was on the alteration of the conditions that the agent of Barrett was induced to attend the sale.

Lord LANGDALE said, as to the land purchased by Tyrrell, it should be put up again at the same price paid for it by Mr. Tyrrell. The three trustees had permitted the sale of the crops to be effected by one of them; they must be personally answerable for everything that took place in conformity with the commission they gave. Windiate was the person, and he employed Collingwood to bid up to a certain sum; he exceeded his authority, bid more, and became a purchaser on the same conditions as would be imposed on other parties. He ought to have been, but was not, required to make a deposit, and he became a bankrupt. Inquiry must be made if the money was lost from the wilful default of the trustees, and there must be a similar inquiry as to the £297. (1).

(1) One trustee shall not be liable for the acts or defaults of his co-trustee, whether a proviso to that effect be inserted in the original settlement or not. This was established by the decision of the Judges in Townley v. Sherborne (Bridg. 35.) A. B. C. and D. were trustees of some leasehold premises. A. and B. collected the rents during the first year and a half, and signed acquittances; but from that period the rents were uniformly received by an assign of C. The liability of A. and B. during the first year and a half was undisputed, but the question was raised whether they were not also chargeable with the rents which had accrued subsequently, but had never come to their hands?

"The Lord Keeper Coventry considered the case to be of great consequence, and thought not to determine the same suddenly, but to advise thereof; and desired the Lords the Judges' Assistant, to take the same into their serious consideration, whereby some course might be settled that parties, trustees, might not be too much punished, lest it should dishearten men to take any trust, which would be inconvenient on the one side, nor that too much liberty should be given to parties, trustees, lest they should be emboldened to break the trust imposed on them, and so be as much prejudicial on the other side. And the Lord Keeper, and the Lords the Judges' Assistant, afterwards conferring together, and upon mature deliberation conceiving the case to be of great importance, his Lordship was pleased to call unto him also Mr. Justice Crook, Mr. Justice Barclay, and Mr. Justice Crawley, for their assistance also in the same, and appointed precedents to be looked over, as well in the Court of Chancery as in other Courts, if any could be found touching the point in question; whereupon several precedents were produced before them, some in the Court of Chancery, and some in the Court of Wards, where parties, trustees, were chargeable only according to their several and respective receipts, and not one to answer for the other; but no precedent to the contrary was produced to them. Whereupon his Lordship, after long and mature deliberation on the case, and serious advice with all the said Judges, did this day in open Court declare the resolution of his Lordship and the said Judges:—That where lands or leases were conveyed to two or more, upon trust, and one of them receives all or the most part of the profits, and after dyeth or decayeth in his estate, his co-trustee shall not be charged or be compelled, in the Court of Chancery, to answer for the receipts of him so dying or decayed, unless some practice, fraud, or evil dealing, appear to have been in them to prejudice the trust; for they being by law joint tenants, or tenants in common, every one by law may receive either all or as much of the profits as he can come by. And it being the case of most men in these days that their personal estates do not suffice to pay their debts, prefer their children, and perform their wills, they are enforced to trust their friends with some part of their real estate, to make up the same, either by the sale or the perception of the profits thereof; and if such of their friends who carry themselves without fraud, should be chargeable out of their own estate for the faults and deficiencies of their co-trustees who were not nominated by them, few men would undertake any such trust. And if two executors be, and one of them wastes all or any part of the estate, the devastavit shall by law charge him only, and not the co-executor. And in that case æquitas sequitur legem, there being many precedents resolved in Chancery, that one executor shall not answer nor be chargeable for the act or default of his companion. And it is no breach of trust to permit one of the trustees to receive all or the most part of the profits, it falling out many times that some of the trustees live far from the lands, and are put in trust out of other respects than to be troubled with the receipt of the profits. And albeit, in all presumption, this case had often happened, yet no precedent had been produced to his Lordship or the Judges, that in any such case the co-trustee had been charged for the act or default of his companion; and therefore it was to be presumed that the current and common opinion had gone that he was not to be charged; it having not till of late been brought into question in a case that by all likelihood had often happened. But his Lordship and the said Judges did resolve, that if upon the proofs or circumstances, the Court should be satisfied that there had been any dolus malus or any evil practice, fraud, or ill intent in him that permitted his companion to receive the whole profits, he should be charged though he received nothing."

LORD HARDWICKE, in Leigh v. Barry, 3 Atk. 584. said—In the case of trustees though there are not negative words in a deed that they shall not be liable for the acts of one another, yet the Court of Equity will not make them liable for more than each has received, and that the Court has even gone further; for when they all join in a receipt for money, it will make that trustees liable only who received it, for they are all obliged to join in the receipt; otherwise as to executors,—for there is no necessity for their joining, but may act severally if they think fit.

The rule is general that executors joining in a receipt, shall all be answerable. See Fellowes v. Mitchell, 1 P. Wms. 81. Lip Belchier, Ambl. 219. Sadler v. Hobbs, 3 Bro. Ch. Rep. 116.; but see Churchill v. Hopson, 1 Salk. 318. Scurfield v. Howard, 3 Bro. Ch. Rep. 94. where the rule was held to be universal.

SIR JOHN LEACH, M. R. in Davis v. Spackling, 1 Russ. and My. 66. held that where an executor, possessing assets of his testator, hands over those assets to a co-executor, and they are misapplied by that co-executor, then, the executor, who so hands them over, shall be answerable for their misapplication.

use he had a legal right to retain them, might have preserved them; and it was duty to do so, unless, indeed, they were added over for the express purpose of a special administration by the co-executor, as to the payment of a particular debt.

In all the cases it appears to be clearly established that where, by any act done by one executor, any part of the estate comes to the hands of his co-executor, the former will be answerable for the latter, in the same manner as would have been for a stranger, whom he had enabled to receive it: but where one executor places the property in the hands of another, and the act is not an improvident one, he shall not be answerable for loss.

MR. J. ELDON, in Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Jur. 197, 198. thus explained the result of an investigation of all the cases. Executors were by the old law contradistinguished from trustees thus far.—It was laid down as a general rule, that, where executors joined in receipt, both having the whole power over the fund, both were chargeable. Where they were joined, each not having the whole power, and the joining being necessary, only the person receiving the money was by the general rule chargeable. It is impossible to say that the rule as to executors has been laid down in some degree by some of the authorities; and I will add, in a much lesser degree by those authorities than by precedents, to which they refer: for with regard to some of those cases, where executors were not charged for joining, it might be maintained, that if a sole executor had, under the same circumstances, put the money into the hands of the banker or of a stranger, the sole executor would not have been chargeable; and then, if one executor puts the property into the hands of the other, who happens to be the banker, or in such a situation, the act is not improvident, those authorities upon such circumstances, cannot afford a fair distinction.

EDITOR.

IN RE BOORD. SOLICITOR.

COUNTRY ATTORNEYS and their LONDON AGENTS.—Whether the Bill of Costs of a London Agent, upon the application of the Country Solicitor, is or is not taxable; and if so, whether as of course or upon terms.

The decision of the Master of the Rolls in this case (a) is under appeal before the Lord Chancellor, which will probably be heard next term.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—Feb. 3.

(Sittings at Nisi Prius.)

STUART v. CARROLL, Knt. and ANOTHER.

SHERIFF LAW.—Liability of Sheriffs for negligence in the execution of their duty—False return to Writ of Ca. Sa.

This was an action against the late Sheriff of Middlesex, for a false return to a writ of ca. sa.

It appeared that the plaintiff had recovered a judgment against a person of the name of Hardiman, and issued an execution against him for £25. The writ was put into the hands of a sheriff's officer, and after the lapse of a considerable period the sheriff was ruled to return the writ, in obedience to which he returned that the defendant was not to be found in his bailiwick; whereas it was proved, on the part of the defendant, that Hardiman, who was an omnibus driver, was seen frequently in the course of several months, sometimes acting as driver and sometimes as conductor of his omnibus, plying along the New-road between Paddington and the Bank.

Verdict for the plaintiff—Damages, £12.10s.

QUARTER SESSIONS, MIDDLESEX.

April 5.

CHARGE OF MR. SERGEANT ADAMS TO THE GRAND JURY.

As to the possession of Stolen Goods.

The CHAIRMAN said, that the labour they would have to perform at the present session, he regretted to say, would be very heavy. There were already 50 cases of felony in the calendar; but, at the same time, it was satisfactory to a certain extent to know that most of the offences were of a trifling character, and had been very properly brought back from another tribunal to this court, where they were originally intended to be tried. He then referred to the establishment of the grand jury, and the nature of the duties it was called upon to perform, and remarked that it was for those gentlemen he was then addressing to stand between the malignant passions of some

(a) See ante, p. 340.

and the erroneous judgments and officiousness of conduct of others, who might be induced to accuse parties of crimes without reasonable or probable cause, and determine whether there was sufficient to send them before that court for trial. He next alluded to Parkhurst prison in the Isle of Wight, which had been established for the reclaiming juvenile offenders, and giving them a tough education, in addition to rendering them industrious and useful artizans, and observed that the experiment had been tried most successfully. He hoped the day was dawning upon them when the law would be so improved as to empower the criminal tribunals of this country, in the administration of it, to distinguish between the adult, the adept in crime, and the uneducated and unpractised offender, and he need hardly say that the justices of this country would rejoice when such a period arrived. There was one point to which he wished to draw the attention of the jury, as some misconception occasionally existed respecting it:—the time that stolen goods remained in possession of the accused was quite immaterial, it was sufficient that the owner had parted with them, if it was only for a few minutes. For the purpose of laying down a principle for their guidance, he would mention two cases. A thief once tore an ear-ring out of a lady's ear, and he dropped it in her curl, the judges in that case, held that the accused had had sufficient possession, although but for two or three seconds, to convict him of the robbery. The other case came before him at the Warwick assizes, about two years ago:—a shopkeeper, who had been several times robbed, at length adroitly placed some string round his cheese, which he fastened to the counter. The thief came in, and popped the cheese, into a basket, and off he ran; but, before he had got far, the cheese jumped out of the basket, and inasmuch as it was fastened to the prosecutor's counter, the court held that it was never out of his possession, and the accused was acquitted. The learned sergeant added that, absurd as these distinctions might appear, it was necessary for the ends of justice that some defined and correct principle should be laid down.

Spring Assizes.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.

NORTHAMPTON, Mar. 4.

REGINA v. MOULD:

MASTER and SERVANT.—Whether a Servant taking his Master's goods for his Master's use shall be held guilty of stealing and be punished accordingly.

J. Mould was indicted for stealing some wheat from his master. It appeared that the prisoner took the wheat to give it to his master's horses, because they were out of condition. LOAN DENMAN, after referring to 1 or 2 reported cases on the Home Circuit, told the Jury, that if a prisoner took the wheat without his master's permission even to give it to his master's horses, that constituted a felony. Guilty of stealing wheat to give it to his master's horses.

Sentence one month's hard labour. (1)

(1) For illustrations upon the fluctuation of the Common Law, and the adoption of subtle distinctions, and the difficulties which result from the mere want of certain rules for defining offences. See Western's Commentaries, 2d Ed. pp. 227, 228, 422.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.

LIVERPOOL, April 7.

GAY v. MARTIN.

Special Jury.

Innkeepers.—Their liabilities for property belonging to Travellers.

This action was brought by the plaintiff, a traveller for a jeweller's house, to recover from the defendant, the landlord of the Saddle Lane, Dale-Street, the value of a large amount of jewellery alleged to have been stolen from the plaintiff while the plaintiff was stopping there as a guest.

Mr. Wightman, for the plaintiff, stated that an arrangement had been come to which would render it unnecessary for the case to proceed. The plaintiff although a loser to a large amount (nearly 1,700*l.*), felt the hardship of making Mr. Martin pay the full loss, although he was legally liable, and had therefore consented to an arrangement by which he would lose two-thirds of the value of his property.

Mr. Cresswell, on behalf of the defendant, said he was well aware the law was against his client in the absence of any previous intimations that he would not take care of the property, and he had told him so, although the facts might be in his favour; Mr. Martin had, therefore, consented that a verdict should be found for the plaintiff.—Damages, 500*l.*

Innkeepers are clearly chargeable for goods of guests stolen or lost out of the inns, and this without any contract or agreement for that purpose: for the law makes them liable in respect of the reward, as well in respect of their being places appointed and allowed of by law, for the benefit and security of traders and travellers. See Ab. tit. Innkeepers, c. 4. See also D. 266. 8 Co. 32 n.

THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

—In the last number of your valuable publication is inserted an answer to Problem VI. vol. 3. of the question, "When a contract is to be performed?" by J. A. M., in a prefatory letter, states that he has a different view of the subject from ALPHONSO; whose answer, according to J. A. M.'s dictum, does not appear to exactly meet the problem. Now it may follow that because J. A. M. takes a different view of your problems than your correspondents, that he is to be infallible; for when you state a problem, assume you intend in the answer that the law on the subject should be stated; more especially that a rule of equity, or a different rule on the same point prescribed by law, ought to be noticed as well as the other; and, therefore, I apprehend that you will agree with me, that before J. A. M. ventures by a side-wind to cast a slur upon the production of ALPHONSO, he ought to be satisfied that his own production is free from appearance of inattention which at present seems to possess. The paragraph in J. A. M.'s reply which I would call your attention to, is doubtless "intended" as a direct extract from the valuable work he alludes to, and which I must say he seems to have on this occasion abused. It is, "where the contract is to be delivered, or a conveyance executed, on or before a certain specified time fixed is considered to be of the essence of the contract; and the vendee may rescind the contract if the vendor be not ready before or on the exact day, although the vendor has not in the interim to insist on a strict execution of the contract." If the verbal sense of this passage was clear, one might have less trouble in arguing on the law of it; but as I find, I take it, and inform J. A. M. through you, that this rule, if he had read the subject, not only presumes to write but to criticise what he would find, does not prevail in the law (and does not J. A. M. know that place is where these contracts are mostly called into question), for there it is considered equally incumbent on the purchaser to ask for the abstract as for the vendor to deliver it; and if the abstract be not delivered in time, or objections arise to the title, although the vendee may bring an action at law for non-performance of the agreement, yet the vendor, if he can insist on the contract being specifically performed, may file a bill for a specific performance, and an injunction to restrain proceeding at law; and the vendor may file his bill for a performance in specie, although the vendee may have recovered his deposit at law; and this interference of the court of equity, be it known to J. A. M. and all those whom his sublime hallucinations may have misled, can only be prevented (where the title cannot be made out within the time limited) by expressly declaring in the agreement that the contract shall be void if the title cannot be made by a stated time. In conclusion, as J. A. M. does not seem to understand or notice the difference between rules of law and rules of equity, I would advise him before attempting to criticise the productions of others to clear his own vision, and make himself master of his subject.

I am, Mr. Editor,

Your obedient servant, E. A.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

Sir,—Your correspondent E. A. has answered Problem VI. vol. 3, p. 338, "What is an estate tail by implication?" and has supported the view he has taken of the subject by several examples or cases which have been decided, but not one authority has he given for what he has advanced. The object of the present therefore is (through the medium of your valuable journal) to request that E. A. will be good enough to furnish the references to the several cases he has quoted, as I wish to examine the same; and by so doing he will oblige, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

H. D. M.

chattels to somebody who is to carry them, or do something about them gratis, without any reward for such his work or carriage.

As to the first sort, where a man takes goods in his custody to keep for the use of the bailor, I shall consider for what things such a bailee is answerable. He is not answerable if they are stole without any fault in him, neither will a common neglect make him chargeable, but he must be guilty of some gross neglect. There is, I confess, a great authority against me; where it is held, that a general delivery will charge the bailee to answer for the goods if they are stolen, unless the goods are specially accepted to keep them only as you will keep your own. But (b) my Lord COKE has improved the case in his report of it; for he will have it, that there is no difference between a special acceptance to keep safely, and an acceptance generally to keep. But there is no reason nor justice in such a case of a general bailment, and where the bailee is not to have any reward, but keeps the goods merely for the use of the bailor, to charge him without some default in him. For if he keeps the goods in such a case with an ordinary care, he has performed the trust reposed in him. But according to this doctrine the bailee must answer for the wrongs of other people, which he is not, nor cannot be, sufficiently armed against. If the law be so, there must be some just and honest reason for it, or else some universal settled rule of law upon which it is grounded, and therefore it is incumbent upon them that advance this doctrine to show an undisturbed rule and practice of the law according to this position. But to show that the tenor of the law was always otherwise, I shall give a history of the authorities in the books in this matter, and by them show, that there never was any such resolution given before Southcote's case. The 29 Ass. 28. is the first case in the books upon that learning, and there the opinion is, that the bailee is not chargeable if the goods are stole. As for 8 Edw. 2. Fitzh. Detinue. 59. where goods were locked in a chest, and left with the bailee, and the owner took away the key, and the goods were stolen, it was held that the bailee should answer for the goods; that case they say differs because the bailor did not trust the bailee with them. But I cannot see the reason of that difference, nor why the bailee should not be charged with goods in a chest, as well as with goods out of a chest; for the bailee has as little power over them when they are out of a chest, as to any benefit he might have by them as when they are in a chest, and he has as great power to defend them in one case as in the other. The case of 9 Edw. 4. 40. b. was but a debate at bar, for Danby was but a counsel then, though he had been Chief Justice in the beginning of Edw. 4.; yet he was removed, and restored again upon the restitution of Hen. 6. as appears by Dugdale's Chronica Series. So that what he said cannot be taken to be any authority, for he spoke only for his client; and Genny, for his client said the contrary. The case in 3 Hen. 7. 4. is but a sudden opinion, and that by half the Court; and yet that is the only ground for this opinion of my Lord COKE, which besides he has improved. But the practice has been always, at Guildhall, to disallow that to be a sufficient evidence to charge the bailee. And it was practised so before my time, all Chief Justice PEMBERTON's time and ever since, against the opinion of that case. When I read Southcote's case before, I was not so discerning as to disallow that case at first; and came not to be of this opinion till I had well considered and digested that matter. Though, I must confess, reason is strong against the case to charge a man for doing such a friendly office for his friend; but so far is the law from being so unreasonable, that such a bailee is the least chargeable for neglect of any. I say if he keeps the goods bailed to him but as

(b) Lord Raym. 655.

ps his own, though he keeps his own but ligently, yet he is not chargeable for n; for the keeping them as he keeps his is an argument of his honesty. A for- i, he shall not be charged where they are en without any neglect in him. Agree- to this is Bracton, lib. 3. c. 2. 99. b.
apud quem res deponitur re obligatur,
ea re, quam accepit, restituenda tene- et etiam ad id, si quid in re deposita dolo
niserit; culpæ autem nomine non tenetur, et desidiæ vel negligentia, quia qui neg- ti amico rem custodiendam tradit, sibi et propriæ fatuitati hoc debet imputare."
 Suppose the bailee is an idle, careless, ken fellow, and comes home drunk, and s all his doors open, and by reason of the goods happen to be stolen and wn; yet he shall not be charged, beit is the bailor's own folly to trust such le fellow. (a) So that this sort of bailee, e least responsible for neglects, and r the least obligation of any one, being d to no other care of the bailed goods he takes of his own. This Bracton I cited is, I confess, an old author; but is his doctrine is agreeable to reason, to what the law is in other countries.
 civil law is so, as you have it in Justi-
s Inst. lib. 3. tit. 15. There the law
further; for there it is said, "Ex eo
tenetur, si quid dolo commiserit: culpæ
n nomine, id est, desidiæ ac negligentia, tenetur. Itaque securus est qui parum
inter custoditam rem furto amisit, quia
negligenti amico rem custodiendam tradit, sed suæ facilitati, id imputare debet."
 That a bailee is not chargeable without an rent gross neglect; and if there is such ss neglect, it is looked upon as an evi-e of fraud. Nay, suppose the bailee rtakes safely and securely to keep the is, in express words; yet even that would not charge him with all sorts of neglects: for if such a promise were put into writing, it would not charge so far even then. Hob. 34. a covenant, that the cove- nantee shall have, occupy, and enjoy certain lands, does not bind against the acts of wrong doers. 3 Cro. 214. acc. 2. Cro. 425.

acc. upon a promise for quiet enjoyment.
 And if a promise will not charge a man against wrong doers, when put in writing, it is hard it should do it more so when spoken.
Doct. & Stud. 130. is in point, that though a bailee do promise to re-deliver goods safely, yet, if he have nothing for the keeping of them, he will not be answerable for the acts of a wrong doer. So that there is neither sufficient reason nor authority to support the opinion in Southcote's case. If the bailee be guilty of gross negligence, he will be charge- able, but not for any ordinary neglect.

(To be continued.)

THE DUBLIN LAW INSTITUTE.

We have received another communication from TRISTRAM KENNEDY, Esq. the PRIN- CIPAL of this Institute, whose meritorious and unceasing exertions in its behalf are beyond all praise, and command the warmest gratitude from all connected with it.

We are much pleased to observe the opinions given by the PROFESSORS OF LAW in LONDON as to the great utility of this Institution, and the advantages it would derive from having a Charter of Incorporation, which should extend its influence and utility,
 and by such extension promote the object it has in view, viz.—to cultivate the study of Law as a Science. LAW like POLITICS, considered as an exact Science, that is to say—as a Science capable of actual demonstration —is infinitely deeper than many suspect.
 To seek for the demonstration, a system of legal education, based upon the origin of law, must be established, and such appears to be the plan of this excellent Institute. Virtue and vice, approbation and disapprobation,

(a) But see Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 Adol. & Ell.

1. The first of these is the fact that the
 2. government has been unable to raise the
 3. necessary funds to carry out its policy.
 4. This is due to the fact that the
 5. government has been unable to raise the
 6. necessary funds to carry out its policy.
 7. This is due to the fact that the
 8. government has been unable to raise the
 9. necessary funds to carry out its policy.
 10. This is due to the fact that the
 11. government has been unable to raise the
 12. necessary funds to carry out its policy.

[illegible][illegible]

"The education of students by the Incorporated Law Society, was one step towards the attainment of this object, but as these lectures are principally designed to assist articled clerks in preparing for their examinations, previously to their being admitted as attorneys or solicitors, they cannot well be made to meet the wants and wishes of the student for the bar, and the attorney actually in practice.

“ Your institution takes a wider range, it admits indiscriminately, students in either branch of the profession, and affords them facilities for acquiring a knowledge of law, which they would seek in vain to obtain

~~SECRET~~

[illegible][illegible]

THE FUTURE

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

STRENGTHS AND LIMITATIONS

MASTER OF THE HOUSE

See, — In consequence of the letter of the N. Y. Soc. requesting me through the editor of your valuable journal, to furnish the grounds of the several cases which I set in support of the view I had taken in considering this problem. I make the earliest opportunity of doing so, and the references I give are intended to apply to the several the illustrations in my Answer.

First, I refer H. D. M. to Lord Mow's decree in Knight v. Ellis, 2 M. C. C. 570.

Second—1 Roll. Ab. 837.; 1 Burrows.
15. S. 564.; 4 Russ. 283.; 2 Sim. 2
3 Ves. 99.; 1 Russ. 262.

Third—Ibid.

Fourth—5 Bing. 243.; 4 B. and A.

Fifth—Walter t. Drew, C. R. 372.

Sixth—Freem. C. R. 40.

Seventh—2 Atk. 307.

Eighth—Cro. Jac. 427.; Amb. 393.

Ninth—Cro. Jac. 448.

Tenth—Cro. Jac. 290, 695.; 7 T. R. 97.
17 Ves. 479. E. 4

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM XIX. Vol. 3.
TERMS OF YEARS TO ATTEND THE INHERITANCE.

What is the nature of a term to attend Inheritance?

By the known rules of law, an estate for years confers a title to the possession of land, distinguished from, and independent of, the freehold, and which entitles the termor, during the continuance of the term, to such possession of the land against the freeholder in whom the freehold remains, and against persons claiming under him subsequently to the creation of the term, notwithstanding the term (subject to the interest of the termor), the rights of the freeholder and those claiming under him as such continue in their full legal force.

Originally terms for years did not receive such protection from Courts of Law as freehold estates, they being then created for short periods only, in order to give the occupant some certain interest, independent of the freeholder, though not interfering in the slightest degree with the latter's relation as tenant to the lord. But it being discovered that such terms, when extended in their duration, might be applied with advantage in mortgage transactions, and in settling and managing real property according to the necessities or notions of an advancing state civilization, they were commonly introduced for various purposes, such as raising money for the payment of debts, securing mortgages, and jointures, for raising portions for younger children, or daughters, or for the use of money for the benefit of parties having no estate, or only a particular estate in the premises.

The beneficial interest in a term of this kind, where the person has no higher interest in the estate, is treated as a chattel, and is on that account transmissible to his personal representatives. But in order to preserve the more important interest which the freeholder has as owner of the fee, courts of equity hold that his beneficial interest in a term, the purposes of which have been satisfied, shall be attendant upon the higher estate of which he is seised, be consolidated with the fee, follow it, and be charged with all incumbrances subjected to by the owner of the fee.

The consequence is that this last mentioned equitable interest in the term is not treated as a chattel, and therefore it will not become liable to be forfeited if the owner of the fee commits felony; it was not previously to 3 & 4 W. 4. c. 104. liable to his simple contract debts, but was together with the fee on which it was attendant real assets. It does not, as against the heirs or devisees of the cestui que trust, prevent the attachment of dower or courtesy, and if the inheritance escheat, the term retaining its indissoluble quality will accompany it.

Long terms of years thus becoming in frequent use, an important consequence beyond the first objects of their creation was that of making them attendant upon the freehold and inheritance of the estates out of which they were carved, a term of years will become so attendant,—upon an express declaration providing and declaring that it shall be so,—where the same person is beneficially entitled both to the term and the fee, whether his interest in the former be equitable and in the latter legal, or vice versa, so that a merger would take place if the legal interests in both were united in the person beneficially entitled to them, or if such merger would not take place on account of intervening legal estates, yet if the same person is also beneficially entitled to those intermediate estates, or if they were created by him, or raised only for securing mortgages or other charges, the term is in all such cases attendant; where a termor purchases the inheritance, and takes a conveyance of the fee in the name of a trustee, the term in himself will be attendant upon his equitable fee simple.

The nature of the beneficial interest in terms attendant upon the inheritance having thus become settled, the advantage of preserving and assigning them from time to time, with an express declaration that they should be so attendant, became apparent, such assignment and acknowledgment of them as subsisting preventing the legal presumption of their having been surrendered. Through his trustee of a term the freeholder is in many instances enabled to deduce an earlier and more satisfactory title to the possession than he can to the inheritance; and if his title to the latter should be found defective or charged, he would still be entitled in right of the term to the possession of the land during its continuance, freed and absolutely discharged of and from all rights, dispositions, charges, or incumbrances whatsoever, made subsequent to the creation of such term, which is the grand object now sought for by conveyancers, in obtaining the assignment of a term to attend the inheritance.

The assignment of an outstanding term protects only purchasers for a valuable consideration, without notice at the time of their purchase of the incumbrance against which they seek to be protected. There are, however, two exceptions to this rule regarding notice, one of which is in the case of dower, against which a purchaser with notice is allowed to protect himself, if he takes an actual assignment of the term; and the other is in the case of specialty debts due to the crown, against which a term will not protect a purchaser even without notice. But it is not necessary that the person endeavouring to take the benefit of an attendant term should be without notice at the time he procures the assignment of it, so that he was clear of notice at the time of his purchase.

It will thus be seen that the advantage secured by the assignment of an outstanding term is the protection of the estate from being defeated or injured by prior titles and charges, of which the purchaser is unacquainted at the time of his purchase; however valid they may be, or by any subsequent disposition by the vendor. By neglecting to take such assignment, he exposes himself to the risk of some other person, whose interest may be acquired subsequently to his own, getting the benefit of, and using the term to his detriment.

In practice, it is now a rule, for the purchaser to require an assignment or surrender of all terms which have been previously assigned to attend, and an assignment or surrender of any outstanding terms, even where they have never been so assigned. (a)

A general declaration in a conveyance that a term left in the old trustees should be held by them in trust for the purchaser, will not protect against a title of dower, and is considered a very unsafe way of disposing of an attendant term.

Sometimes it is necessary to assign more than one term in the same estate, by reason of the uncertainty of which of them would be available for the protection of the owner. But where there is a term sufficiently old and of which every step of the title can be easily traced and indubitably proved, it is sufficient to assign that one only, and surrender the others (if any.)—E. A.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—April 13.

FRIVOLOUS SUITS AT LAW.

LORD DENMAN moved the second reading of this Bill. (b) His Lordship observed that the object was to prevent attorneys from bringing actions for small amounts, with the view merely of making costs. As, however, it might be very necessary to take legal proceedings for trespass upon land, although the damage might not be a greater amount than 40s., these cases would be exempted from the operation of the bill.

The bill was read a second time.

(a) See Western's Conveyancing, Vol. 4, p. 188, seq.—ED.

(b) See ante, p. 261.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—April 15.

PRIVILEGE QUESTION.

STOCKDALE v. HANSARD.

Sir R. INGLIS moved that the order of the 17th instant, for the attendance of Mr. Sheriff Evans on Wednesday, the 6th of May, be discharged.

Lord J. RUSSELL seconded the motion.

The motion agreed to.

Sir R. INGLIS also moved, "that Thomas Burton Howard, the younger, son of Thomas Burton Howard, attorney in the case of 'Stockdale v. Hansard,' be forthwith discharged without payment of fees."

Motion agreed to.

Sir R. INGLIS then moved, "that Thomas George Johnston Pearce, clerk of Thomas Burton Howard, the attorney in the cause of 'Stockdale v. Hansard,' be forthwith discharged without payment of fees."

Motion agreed to.

Sir R. INGLIS said, he had now to move another resolution, that Thomas Burton Howard be discharged.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said, if Mr. Howard exhibited any signs of submission to the House, or have tendered any expression of regret, he should himself at once have seconded the motion for that gentleman's discharge. On the contrary, the course pursued by Mr. Howard is most contumacious, and the case had been argued by the Hon. Baronet and others who supported him on grounds which would be subversive of the rights and privileges of the House.

The House divided on the motion :—

For the motion . . . . . 22

Against it . . . . . 42

Majority against the motion —20

Sir R. INGLIS proposing a similar motion with respect to Stockdale, which was negatived without a division.

party. The Vice-Chancellor allowed the demurrer, and, by an order, gave leave to amend the bill, and to strike out the name of the agent.

Mr. Wakefield moved to discharge the order. Such an order was erroneously supposed to be matter of course. It was never granted except for special reasons. In this case every possible reason was against allowing the amendment; indeed a suit between those parties should not be at all instituted in this country. They were all Spanish subjects; the dispute between them regarded a contract made in Spain, and which could be decided only by Spanish law, of which that court could obtain a knowledge for adjudicating on the question by sending out a commission to Spain.

Mr. Wigram opposed the motion, submitting that these orders to amend were always in the discretion of the court, in allowing demurrers. They saved time and expense to the parties, who could, of course, file a new bill at greater expense. The defendant had waived his objection to the order to amend by appearing to the amended bill and accepting costs of appearance. The object of first making the party in this country a co-plaintiff was for securing his costs to the defendant.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said he always understood it to be a matter in the discretion of the court to grant leave to amend after allowing a demurrer. He thought in this case the party ought to have leave to amend. The matter was not regularly brought before this court. These orders to amend the bill, and to strike out the name of one plaintiff, were made in December, and not until the month of March did the party come to complain of them. The defendant allowed the party to amend, and accepted costs for appearing to the amendment, and now gave no explanation of the delay. His Lordship could not perceive on what grounds he was asked to go out of his way to deprive the plaintiffs of the benefit of an order, to grant which was in the discretion of the court.

Application refused with costs.

March 20.

In re BOORD a Country Solicitor, and Messrs. MORRIS and VERBEKE, his Town Agents.

APPEAL FROM THE ROLLS. (a)

COUNTRY ATTORNIES & their LONDON AGENTS.

—Whether the Agency Bill of Costs of a London Agent, upon the application of the Country Solicitor, is or is not taxable, and if taxable, whether as of course or upon terms? whether the Court has jurisdiction?

Mr. Cooper opened a petition of appeal from

(a) See the case at the Rolls reported ante p. 340.

Law Reports.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—March 4.

HERIE v. REINA.

PRACTICE.—As to the discretion of the Court to grant leave to amend a Bill after allowing a Demurrer.

This was a bill filed by the agent resident here of two Spanish women residing out of the jurisdiction, against the Marquis Reina, a Spaniard, residing generally in France, but occasionally coming to this country. He demurred to the bill generally, and also on the ground that the agent had no interest in the subject of the suit, and, therefore, ought not to be made a the Rolls in this matter; the question is, whether the court has jurisdiction to order an agent's bill to be taxed. The parties litigant were Mr. Boord, a Country Solicitor, and Messrs. Morris & Verbeke, London Agents.—The MASTER OF THE ROLLS acting on the authority of the case of Jones v. Roberts, 8 Sim. 397, (b) decided in favour of the jurisdiction. He now contended that the decision in the case of Jones v. Roberts, was contrary to all the authorities on the subject from the passing of the Stat. of the 2 Geo. 2. c. 23, which regulated the taxing of bills of costs down to the present time. That decision was also contrary to the decisions of the courts of common law, where the question after much discussion had been at last set at rest by a denial of the jurisdiction. It appeared that some doubt was entertained whether his Lordship, when Master of the Rolls, did not give an opinion in favour of the jurisdiction, and it now became necessary to have the question decided by the Lord Chancellor.

April 1st.—Mr. Dixon followed on the same side, and submitted that the authorities on which the case of Jones v. Roberts professes to be decided, are by no means to the effect there stated: and that the subsequent act 12 Geo. 2. c. 13. s. 6, was in effect a legislative declaration, that an agent's bill is not taxable.

April 3rd.—Mr. Dixon having concluded, Mr. Wigram for Mr. Boord submitted that the question of law that had been so fully discussed by the other side did not necessarily arise, as the bills were admitted to be partly for business, as between solicitor and client, and no settlement had ever taken place.

The LORD CHANCELLOR seemed inclined to take that view of the case, but as part of Mr. Morris' affidavit, as to an agreement touching the earliest part of the bill relating to Earl Manvers had not been answered, his Lordship, on Mr. Wigram's request, allowed the further consideration of the petition to stand over to obtain an affidavit in explanation of that part of the case. (c)

(b) In that case, in 1835, E. Jones, the plaintiff's solicitor, employed Messrs. H. Jones & J. Fay of Ruthin, in Denbighshire, solicitors, as his country agents in the cause. Jones & Fay received from the defendant in the cause £250. of which they retained £70. on account of their bill of costs, and delivered their bill to E. Jones; who obtained an order in the cause, that it might be referred to the Master, on receiving proof of payment or tender by him to Jones & Fay, of £73. 4s. 8d. the amount of their bill, to tax the same as between solicitor and client. This order was made on an ex parte motion, supported by an affidavit stating as above, and adding, that E. Jones was ready to pay to Jones & Fay the remaining £3. 4s. 8d. of their bill.

Jones & Fay moved to discharge that order as being irregular on four grounds: first, that it was obtained not by the plaintiff, but by her solicitor; secondly, that it was an order for the taxation of an agent's bill; thirdly, it ought to have been made, if at all, on special motion, and on payment of the money into Court; fourthly, it was an order for the taxation of an agent's bill, as between solicitor and client.

The VICE CHANCELLOR said,—For a series of years, it has been the established practice of this Court, to direct the taxation of an agent's bill on the application of the solicitor who employed him. That practice was recognised, as established, by Lord Thurlow in the case of Corner v. Hake (a) in 1789; and it is plain, from the mode in which Lord Eldon treats the subject in Ostle v. Christian, (ante p. 342), that, in his opinion, it was the undoubted practice of this Court to direct the taxation of an agent's bill. If then I find that this practice has prevailed in this Court for a long series of years, it appears to me that I am bound to adopt and follow it, notwithstanding the opinion expressed by the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas in Weymouth v. Knipe.

The only question then is, whether the order sought to be discharged is wrong on the face of it, inasmuch as it leaves the Master at liberty to receive proof of the payment or tender of the £3. 4s. 8d. in the absence of the party whose bill was to be the subject of the taxation. Now I cannot but think that the order is erroneous in this pect; and consequently, it must be discharged with costs.

(a) Stated in the report of Weymouth v. Knipe, 3 Bing. N. C. as Innes v. Hake, see ante 341.

Edward Jones afterwards presented a petition which was entitled in the cause, and in the matter of Messrs. Jones & Fay; and after stating, amongst other things, that on the 28th of April last, the petitioner tendered the £3. 4s. 8d. to the town-agent of Jones & Fay for their use, it prayed that the tender might, under the circumstances mentioned in the petition, be deemed to be a valid and sufficient equitable tender to Jones & Fay; or, in case the court should judge otherwise, then that, on the petitioner bringing the £3. 4s. 8d. into court, it might be referred to the Master to tax Jones & Fay's bill.

Counsel for the petitioner, relied on Binsted v. Barefoot (1 Dick 112. See Beam Costs 306, 307), in which an order was made by the M. R. for the taxation of an agent's bill; and on the 17th of July, 1746, Lord Hardwicke C. refused to discharge the order. Lees v. Nuttall, (ante p. 342), and Barker, 6 Sim. 476, were also cited.

Counsel for Jones & Fay said, that the report of Corner v. Hahe was erroneous, (see Beam Costs, 308,) and that Dickens's report of Binsted v. Barefoot, and the entry of that case in Reg. Lib. were at variance with each other; that Ostle v. Christian, Lees v. Nuttall, were distinct authorities, that an order for taxing an agent's bill could not be obtained without bringing the amount of the bill into Court: but that, in Baget v. Nicholson (Beam Costs, 361), in Binsted v. Barefoot, the amount of the bill was not directed to be paid into court. In Shore v. Bryan, (8 Pri. 677) was held.

The VICE CHANCELLOR, in giving judgment said, If I find from a series of orders, and from the opinions expressed by Judges of this court, that it is the practice of the court to interfere in cases like the present, my opinion is, that I am bound by what has taken place here; and that it is of little importance to inquire how the jurisdiction was first assumed.

Now we have, first, the order made by the Master of the Rolls in 1745; and then, in 1746, an attempt was made before Lord Hardwicke to discharge that order, but the attempt did not succeed. That, therefore, was a recognition by Lord Hardwicke, that the order at the Rolls was right. Then setting aside the case before Lord Thurlow, which seems to be incorrectly reported, we find Lord Eldon stating in Ostle v. Christian, that a solicitor cannot obtain the taxation of his agent's bill without bringing the amount into court. It would have been quite frivolous for that great Judge so to state, if his opinion had been that the bill could not be taxed, whether the money was brought into court or not. We are therefore warranted in concluding, that it was his Lordship's opinion, in the abstract, that the court had jurisdiction, on the application of a solicitor, to tax his agent's bill. Then, in Lees v. Nuttall, the latter part of the judgment of the present Lord Chancellor when Master of the Rolls, necessarily shows that it was his Lordship's opinion that this court had jurisdiction to direct an agent's bill to be taxed on the application of the solicitor, provided the amount of the bill was brought into court: and his lordship discharged the order in that case, not on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction, but on the special circumstances and merits of the case. That opinion unquestionably binds me.

I can easily understand that this court might have assumed a larger jurisdiction than the courts of common law, as it has often taken the lead and suggested to the legislature what ought to be done. As for instance, in cases of set off and of landlords taking advantage of breaches of covenants for payment of rent, this court did interfere long before there was any statutory interference. It is reasonable therefore to suppose, that before either of the Statutes of Geo. 2 were passed, this court had the jurisdiction which it is now called upon to exercise: and there is nothing in either of those statutes to take away that jurisdiction. When the court says that the taxation is to take place on the amount of the bill being brought into court, it is taking a course which is quite independent of either of the statutes.

I am of opinion, therefore, that the jurisdiction does exist; and, consequently, on payment or tender to Mr. Williams, the town agent of Messrs. Jones & Fay, of the amount of the bill remaining unpaid, (such payment or tender to be verified by affidavit,) let the bill be taxed, and reserve costs.

EDITOR.

(c) If his Lordship should finally dispose of the case without deciding the important question raised, and so fully discussed, by Mr. Dixon, viz. the non-taxability of an agent's bill, the profession will have considerable cause of regret; particularly as the court below decided the case on the authority of Jones v. Roberts.—The case will probably be mentioned again early in the term.

REPORTER.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT, Jan. 29.

MANNERS v. ROWLEY, & OTHERS.

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES.—Construction of 7 Geo. 4. c. 46. in connection with 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96.—Whether the Registered Officers of a Joint Stock Company may sue in Equity, a Member of the Company jointly with a person who is not a Member.—DEMURRER for want of Equity.

Mr. K. Bruce appeared in support of this demurrer. The suit was instituted by the directors of a joint-stock banking company, with a view of fixing certain individual members of the company (jointly with other persons not members of the company) with a personal responsibility for a sum of about 1,400*l.*, which had been withdrawn from the company's funds for the purpose of establishing a newspaper "upon liberal principles of extensive reform," and which had been lost by the failure of the newspaper. The bill set forth the deed of settlement of October, 1835, constituting a public joint-stock bank in the city of Lichfield, entitled the Lichfield, Rugeley, and Tamworth Banking Company, and appointing Dr. Rowley, Jeremiah Ginders, and William Knight, the first directors, and Richard Eales Barrow manager of the company. The deed also contained the usual provision that the directors should have full power to prosecute and defend in the name of any of the registered public officers of the company appointed in pursuance of the provisions of 7th George IV., c. 46. any actions or suits against any person whatsoever, whether a proprietor of the company or not, for the purpose of enforcing any claim due to the company, or for any matter relating to the company's concerns. In the month of April, 1836, it was proposed and agreed by Rowley, Mottram and several other shareholders of the company, to establish a newspaper, to be published at Lichfield and to enter into a joint undertaking for the purpose. In furtherance of this proposal a list of subscriptions was opened, headed "The list of donations to the Staffordshire Examiner and Lichfield, Walsall, Tamworth, and Burton Advertiser;" and by the authority of the defendants their names and the names of several other persons were included in the list as subscribers, and a meeting was held on the 6th of April, 1836, at the George Hotel, at which the following minutes were drawn up:—"At a meeting of the subscribers to the Staffordshire Examiner, and Lichfield, Tamworth, Walsall, and Burton Advertiser; present, the Mayor, (the defendant Rowley) in the chair, Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. Webb, Mr. Brassington, Mr. Cato, Mr. Simpson, Mr. Barrow, Mr. Sultzer, Mr. Sharp—we, the undersigned, agree and determine to start the newspaper immediately, and for this purpose we will call upon all the subscribers to pay their subscriptions into the Lichfield, Rugeley, and Tamworth Bank; and seeing that the subscription is not at present, nor is likely to be, sufficient to commence the paper, with a prospect of giving a fair trial, we pledge ourselves to use every exertion to obtain support, and, in the mean time being anxious to establish the paper upon liberal principles of extensive reform, without further delay, we undertake to pay, in addition to our respective subscriptions, the different sums attached to our names, as a guarantee for the expenses incurred in the undertaking, under the management of the whole of us, five of whom shall be competent to act in the absence of the others; it being distinctly understood that the guarantee is not to endure beyond such expenses or liability as may be incurred in two years from the first publication, also understood that our call upon us will be in proportion to the sum which we now make ourselves responsible for." Then followed a list of the names alluded to, with the sum subscribed set against every individual's name, written in their respective hands. The newspaper was published on the 14th of May, 1836, an account was opened with the Lichfield, Leicestershire, and Tamworth Banking Company, in respect of the newspaper by the defendants, who, as proprietors and copartners of the newspaper, caused the banking business relating to it to be transacted with the banking company at their banking house, and that from time to time large sums of money were improperly and without the knowledge or consent of the other copartners in the banking company withdrawn by under the authority of Rowley, Barrow, Brasterton, Adie, Sultzer, Hitchcock, Mottram, Every, and Dorrington, as shareholders in the bank, out of the funds of the company, and applied for the purposes of carrying on the newspaper. The publication of the newspaper was continued, when it appeared that there remained due to the banking company from the defendants, on a balance of accounts a total of 1,411*l.* 2*s.*, with interest and commission. The suit was instituted by three of the directors of the company, in the name of the registered officer, and they admitted that the defendants, who were members of the company, ought to be held responsible jointly with the other proprietors of the newspaper, who were not members of the company, for the amount of this deficiency in the funds of the bank, and prayed an account against the defendants, and a declaration that the shares of the defendants were subject to a lien in the funds of the company for what should be found due from them. The defendant Mottram demurred to the bill on the ground that the plaintiff had a complete and effectual remedy in a court of law. The learned counsel contended, that if the sum alleged to be due was really owing, it was nothing more than an ordinary legal debt on a balance of account for advances made by the bank, and ought to be sued for under the provisions of 1 and 2 Victoria, c. 96, and if it did fall within the meaning of that statute, then the suit was for a debt due to the company, and the plaintiff had no right to represent. His Honour, without hearing the counsel in support of the bill, thought there was sufficient authority on the face of it to sustain it as against Mottram. By the articles of partnership it was provided that the directors for the time being should have full power to commence, institute, prosecute, and to defend in the name of any of the public officers for the time being of the company as the nominal plaintiffs or defendants, and on behalf of the company, any actions and suits against any person or persons whatever, whether a proprietor of the company or not, for recovering or enforcing any claims or demands due to the company or for any other matter relating to the concerns of the company, and to discontinue, abandon, release, or become nonsuit in any such action, suit, or proceeding, as the directors for the time being should think fit, and the money to be recovered in any such action, suit, or proceeding, should be brought into and deemed part of the capital of the company. Then it was expressly stated by the bill that large sums of money were from time to time improperly, and without the knowledge or consent of the other copartners in the banking company, withdrawn by, or under the authority, or with the concurrence of Mottram and the other defendants. Prima facie, that was quite equity enough to sustain the bill as against him. The only question was as to the form of the proceeding.

Mr. Jacob then proceeded to contend that the suit had been properly instituted by the directors in the name of their public officer, under the provisions of 7th George IV., c. 46. The 9th section of that act declared that all actions and suits in equity instituted on behalf of any copartnership against any person or persons, whether members of such copartnerships or otherwise, should be commenced in the name of the public officer nominated in the manner prescribed by the act. For some reason or other, in consequence of technical difficulties at law, it was necessary to pass the 1st and 2d Victoria, c. 96, which expressly provided for the case where some of the plaintiffs or defendants (members of a company) were suing jointly with persons who were not; but, as no such difficulty had ever arisen in equity, the statute of Victoria could have no application. The suit was therefore properly framed under the 7th George IV., where the remedy in equity remained.

Mr. K. Bruce insisted that the case was one for which a full remedy was given at law by the 1st and 2d Victoria, c. 96, and that the intention of the Legislature to exclude suits in equity as already within the previous statute would not have been expressed by the words "be it enacted," &c., if it had been enacted before.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR thought there was nothing in the objection, for it did not follow that because a remedy was expressly given at law there had not been a previous remedy in equity. His Honour should have thought the construction of the 7th of George IV. perfectly plain, that the Court would allow the registered officer of the company to sue a person who was a member of the partnership of which he was the public officer jointly with a person who was not. His Honour then read the words of the 9th section of the statute, 7th George IV., c. 46. There might possibly have been some difficulty in applying the statute at law, but for the purposes of a suit in equity all that was required was expressed in a few words. The only question was, whether the Court was forbid to put a construction on the 7th of George IV., because the 1st and 2d of Victoria contained the words "be it enacted." He thought he was not. His Honour, after referring to the words of that statute, observed, it was very odd it took no notice of the very case for which it professed to provide, because it applied to the case of members of a company suing jointly with persons who were not members, but it did not point out the very case on which the amendment was constructed.

Demurrer overruled, but without costs.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—April 16.
(Sittings in Banco.)

THE SERGEANTS' PRIVILEGES.

The Solicitor-General said that he believed there was some doubt, on the part of the gentlemen of the bar, as to the course intended to be pursued by the court with reference to new trials; the doubt was, whether the court was open for new trials to all.

TINDAL, C. J., said that he found the rule laid down by the court was expressly this—that the only reservation was that all barristers, not of the degree of the coif, were, nevertheless, to proceed with those cases, until they had been heard and brought to a termination. That spoke for itself.

PREROGATIVE COURT.—March 17.

WILL OF JANE RICHARDS, Deceased.

NEW WILL ACT.—Attestation Clause.—Evidence of Attesting Witnesses.

The testatrix, Jane Richards, died in last year, leaving a will apparently duly attested, but one of the attesting witnesses, in his deposition on the condidit, stated that they had signed their names not in the presence of the testatrix, but in the parlour below. The other witness deposed to the attestation having been signed in the room and presence of the testatrix. Upon the publication of the evidence, the former witness retracted his statement, and joined in an affidavit with other persons to the same effect as his fellow witness, stating that on mature recollection he was satisfied that the paper was subscribed by both witnesses in presence of the testatrix, and that he had confounded the circumstances of the witnesses having gone through the formality of "delivering as their act and deed," at the suggestion of one of the party with the act of subscription.

Sir H. JENNER refused to permit the re-examination of the witness to supply a deficiency of proof discovered after publication. The parties might apply at a future stage to have the conclusion of the cause rescinded, in order to examine other witnesses on this point. He did not, however, bind himself to comply with that application.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—SITTINGS IN EASTER TERM, 1840.

|           |      |    |   |   |                                         |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|-----------------------------------------|
| Wednesday | Apr. | 15 | - | - | Appeal Motions and Adjourned Petitions. |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | Petition Day.                           |
| Friday    | "    | 17 | - | - | } No Sitting.                           |
| Saturday  | "    | 18 | - | - |                                         |
| Monday    | "    | 20 | - | - |                                         |
| Tuesday   | "    | 21 | - | - |                                         |
| Wednesday | "    | 22 | - | - | Appeals.                                |
| Thursday  | "    | 23 | - | - | Appeal Motions and ditto.               |
| Friday    | "    | 24 | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                   |
| Saturday  | "    | 25 | - | - |                                         |
| Monday    | "    | 27 | - | - |                                         |
| Tuesday   | "    | 28 | - | - |                                         |
| Wednesday | "    | 29 | - | - | } Appeal Motions and ditto.             |
| Thursday  | "    | 30 | - | - |                                         |
| Friday    | May  | 1  | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                   |
| Saturday  | "    | 2  | - | - |                                         |
| Monday    | "    | 4  | - | - |                                         |
| Tuesday   | "    | 5  | - | - |                                         |
| Wednesday | "    | 6  | - | - | } Appeal Motions and ditto.             |
| Thursday  | "    | 7  | - | - |                                         |
| Friday    | "    | 8  | - | - | } Appeals and Causes.                   |
| Saturday  | "    | 9  | - | - |                                         |
| Monday    | "    | 11 | - | - |                                         |
| Tuesday   | "    | 12 | - | - |                                         |
| Wednesday | "    | 13 | - | - | Appeal Motions and ditto.               |

Such days as his Lordship is occupied in the House of Lords excepted.

VICE CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

|           |      |    |   |   |                                                                   |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|-------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Wednesday | Apr. | 15 | - | - | Motions.                                                          |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | Petition Day.                                                     |
| Friday    | "    | 17 | - | - | } No Sitting.                                                     |
| Saturday  | "    | 18 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Monday    | "    | 20 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Tuesday   | "    | 21 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Wednesday | "    | 22 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.   |
| Thursday  | "    | 23 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Friday    | "    | 24 | - | - | } Short Causes and Unopposed Petitions previous to general Paper. |
| Saturday  | "    | 25 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Monday    | "    | 27 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.   |
| Tuesday   | "    | 28 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Wednesday | "    | 29 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Thursday  | "    | 30 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Friday    | May  | 1  | - | - | Motions.                                                          |
| Saturday  | "    | 2  | - | - | } Short Causes and Unopposed Petitions previous to general Paper. |
| Monday    | "    | 4  | - | - |                                                                   |
| Tuesday   | "    | 5  | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.   |
| Wednesday | "    | 6  | - | - |                                                                   |
| Thursday  | "    | 7  | - | - | Motions.                                                          |
| Friday    | "    | 8  | - | - | } Short Causes and Unopposed Petitions previous to general Paper. |
| Saturday  | "    | 9  | - | - |                                                                   |
| Monday    | "    | 11 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, and Further Directions.   |
| Tuesday   | "    | 12 | - | - |                                                                   |
| Wednesday | "    | 13 | - | - | Motions.                                                          |

ROLLS' COURT.

|           |      |    |   |   |                                                                 |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------|
| Wednesday | Apr. | 15 | - | - | Motions.                                                        |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | Petitions in General Paper.                                     |
| Wednesday | "    | 22 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Thursday  | "    | 23 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Friday    | "    | 24 | - | - | Motions.                                                        |
| Saturday  | "    | 25 | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Monday    | "    | 27 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Tuesday   | "    | 28 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Wednesday | "    | 29 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Thursday  | "    | 30 | - | - | Motions.                                                        |
| Friday    | May  | 1  | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions and Exceptions.  |
| Saturday  | "    | 2  | - | - |                                                                 |
| Monday    | "    | 4  | - | - |                                                                 |
| Tuesday   | "    | 5  | - | - |                                                                 |
| Wednesday | "    | 6  | - | - | } Motions.                                                      |
| Thursday  | "    | 7  | - | - |                                                                 |
| Friday    | "    | 8  | - | - | } Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Further Directions, and Exceptions. |
| Saturday  | "    | 9  | - | - |                                                                 |
| Monday    | "    | 11 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Tuesday   | "    | 12 | - | - |                                                                 |
| Wednesday | "    | 13 | - | - | Petitions in General Paper.                                     |

AT THE ROLLS.

Thursday " 14 - - Short causes after swearing in the Solicitors.
 Short causes, Consent causes, and Consent petitions, every Tuesday at the sitting of the Court.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Sittings in Easter Term, 1840.

|           |      |    |   |   |                  |                |
|-----------|------|----|---|---|------------------|----------------|
| Wednesday | Apr. | 15 | - | - | Banco.    | Equity. |
| Thursday  | "    | 16 | - | - | Peremptory Paper | Lord Abinger.  |

|           |     |    |   |   |               |               |
|-----------|-----|----|---|---|---------------|---------------|
| Monday    | „   | 27 | - | - | Special Paper |               |
| Tuesday   | „   | 28 | - | - | -             | Lord Abinger. |
| Wednesday | „   | 29 | - | - | Special Paper |               |
| Friday    | May | 1  | - | - | -             | Lord Abinger. |
| Saturday  | „   | 2  | - | - | Crown Cases   | Lord Abinger. |
| Monday    | „   | 4  | - | - | Special Paper |               |
| Tuesday   | „   | 5  | - | - | Errors        | Lord Abinger. |
| Wednesday | „   | 6  | - | - | Special Paper |               |
| Saturday  | „   | 9  | - | - | -             | Lord Abinger. |
| Monday    | „   | 11 | - | - | -             | Lord Abinger. |

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

IN TERM.

| Middlesex. |   |   |   | London.  |        |   |       |
|------------|---|---|---|----------|--------|---|-------|
| Wednesday  | . | . | . | April 29 | Friday | . | May 1 |
| Wednesday  | . | . | . | May 6    | Friday | . | May 8 |

AFTER TERM.

|          |   |   |   |        |        |   |        |
|----------|---|---|---|--------|--------|---|--------|
| Thursday | . | . | . | May 14 | Friday | . | May 15 |
|----------|---|---|---|--------|--------|---|--------|

The Court will sit at ten o'clock in the forenoon on each of the days in Term, and at half-past nine precisely on each of the days after Term.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in Term, if not disposed of on those days will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

On Friday, May 15th, in London, no causes will be tried, but the Court will adjourn to a future day.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,

PHILLPOTTS v. WILLIAMS.—EXCHEQUER.

Action for assault and battery. Defendant allowed judgment to go by default. On writ of inquiry before Sheriff of Monmouth, the jury assessed the damages at £5.

A. and B. (law students and subscribers) differ on the following point: A. contending that had the jury assessed the damages under 40s. the plaintiff would have no more costs than damages, under the 23 Chas. 2. c. 7. & 9.

B. contra contends that the defendant, by allowing judgment by default, precludes himself the benefit of the Act, and cites the case of Johnson v. Northwood, 1 Moore, 420. & 7 Taunton, 689. wherein defendant was debarred the benefit, having admitted the assault and battery, and pleaded justification, and the jury gave some minor damages (under 40s.)

Will you, in your next number, oblige by deciding this point. NEWPORTIENSIS.

trespass, assault, and battery, and other personal actions, wherein the judge at the trial shall not find and certify under his hand, upon the back of the record, that an assault and battery was sufficiently proved, or that the freehold or title of the land was chiefly in question, (Littlewood v. Wilkinson, 9 Price 314. See Tyler v. Bennett 5 Ad. & Ell. 577.) in case the jury find the damages to be under the value of 40s. the plaintiff shall not recover or obtain any more costs than the damages so found shall amount to. But this statute, as also the 21 J. I. c. 16. only restrains the Court from awarding more costs than damages; and the jury not being restrained thereby, may give what costs they please. (Watkinson v. Sanger, Cas. Prac. C. P. 45. Pr. Reg. C. P. II. S. C.; Browne v. Gibbons, 1 Salk. 202. This statute extends only to actions for assault and battery, and to such personal actions as relate to the freehold, or to things fixed to the freehold; that is to cases where the freehold may come in question. (Brown v. Phillips, 1 Saund. 500. n.) It extends to trespass for man-

By 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 9. in all actions of ofits, (Doe v. Davies, 6 T. R. 593.); and trespass for throwing stones at and breaking the windows of plaintiff's house. (Adams v. Grenaway, 6 T. R. 281.); but it does not extend to inquisitions upon writs of enquiry in any case; therefore, if judgment by default, the plaintiff will be entitled to costs, though the damages be assessed at less than 40s. (Bull N. P. 329.) See 2 Chbald's Prac. Q. B. by Chitty, 1142.

EDITOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,—In answer to a letter inserted in the number of the Legal Guide by E. A., and begging that you will excuse my troubling you with the following observations in reply, I beg to say that I never intended by a side-wind, E. A. states to be the case, to cast any slur on the answer previously inserted by ALPHONSO to Problem II. Vol. 3, which probably is the more correct answer of the two, nor do I think that the letter which I addressed to you in connection thereto conveys any such idea upon the subject of it. To determine between ALPHONSO and myself as to which is right in his interpretation of the question above referred to is for you. I confidently submit that each correspondent is right, and is bound to express his opinion upon any particular question—bearing, in his argument two interpretations, without being censured for so doing, and having motives imputed to him which never had any existence in his mind.

My answer would certainly have been more correct had I stated what the rule of Equity was on the subject of "Time being the essence of the contract;" but considering that as this was not the question principally involved in the Problem, I formed but a part of my answer, I referred to the work where the subject is admirably treated, trusting that by so doing nobody could possibly be misled. If your correspondent, E. A. will refer to Mr. Chitty, Junr's. work on Contracts, page 248, he will there find the passage, of which I say,—"that its verbal sense is not at all correct," and that so far from being "intended" it is a correct extract from Sugden's valuable work, the words are those of Mr. Chitty, and he also see that I did not cite Sugden's Vendors and Purchasers, but referred to it as bearing on the subject. Mr. Chitty, at page 248 of his work on Contracts, is considering the very question,—“When a Contract is to be performed?”

Does your correspondent mean to say that, because one man differs from another on any particular subject, he thereby holds out his own opinion as infallible? I beg leave to inform E. A. that I am not a Roman Catholic, that I altogether disclaim the doctrine of infallibility, and that in my answer I neither expressly, or by implication, stated such to be my belief.

J. A. M.

We wish to inspire our correspondents with a spirit of rivalry and emulation, but we cannot encourage a want of that courtesy between rivals, which is due from one gentleman to another. E. A. has not expressed himself in the most courteous manner. We have removed a few remarks on the subject made by J. A. M. in his letter to us, in addition to the above (which we entirely approve), that would only lead to another reply, which we could not admit. This paper is for legal discussion only, and where parties are unknown to each other, personal discussion (we would suppose) cannot arise. We have classed J. A. M. among the best of our correspondents, and are satisfied with his Answer. We would call to the mind of E. A. the passage of QUINTILLIAN.—Non sapientem se, sed studiosam sapientiae vocari voluit, as applied to PYTHAGORAS.—ED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,—The number of your subscribers who wish for a double number once a month being very many, and as the present volume is almost drawn to a close, I beg to offer a few suggestions upon the same, viz.: that the Editor of this paper be good enough to state the minority which those favourable to the double number are in, and that subscribers be allowed until the 1st number of the ensuing volume be published, to express their opinion upon the subject, so that if those favourable to the change are then in a majority (which I doubt will not be the case), the first double number can be published on the 30th of May. I am sure that subscribers must see the necessity of the change, for without a double number much useful information must necessarily be rejected.—I am, Sir,

Your's obedient,
S. A. W.

EXAMINATION AT THE LAW SOCIETY. EASTER TERM, 1840.

This Examination is appointed to take place on Wednesday, May 6, at 10 o'Clock in the forenoon.

Testimonials of qualification must be left on or before Wednesday next.—Beware defects.

NEW POSTAGE.

PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE.

We understand that Mr. Hill's plan of transmitting letters free, without actual cash payment of postage, is likely to come into operation very shortly, and that the three modes of carrying it into effect which were proposed last summer, and led to a good deal of discussion and controversy, are all to be brought into operation, viz :

1. Paper may be sent to the Stamp Office, and prepared for passing free by the post by the application of a stamp.
2. The public will have the opportunity of purchasing small adhesive labels, which they can stick on to their letters.
3. They may purchase stamped covers, or envelopes printed on a paper manufactured by Mr. Dickinson, with lines of thread in the interior of the sheet; and it is stated that "by causing part of the lines to be nearest to one surface of the paper, and part to the other, he has super-added a great protection against forgery."—Times.

LEGACY DUTY.

A return has been made to the House of Commons showing the amount of capital on which the several rates of legacy duty have been paid in Great Britain in the year 1839, and also an abstract of the total amount of legacies which paid duty since 1797. The latter amounts to the enormous sum of £1,081,468,000; the total amount of capital on which legacy duty was paid in 1839 was £42,052,297; and of that more than four millions sterling paid the ten per cent. duty, and £21,504,065 paid the one per cent. duty; the former being the per centage payable by distant relatives or strangers in blood, and the latter by children or parents, or any lineal descendant or ancestor. The total legacy, probate, and other duties of this description paid into the public treasury since 1797 was about fifty-eight millions sterling.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A COUNTRY SUBSCRIBER—Newport.—Your letter does not come within our rules.

E. C. R.—We have no reason to doubt the authority of Marshall's case.

Any person who has served under articles of clerkship in order to his admission in the courts of Great Sessions of Wales, or of the Counties Palatine of Chester, Lancaster, or Durham, or in any other court of record in England (not being one of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster), holding pleas where the debt or damage amounts to 40s. may, upon payment of £120. have his articles of clerkship stamped, and be admitted an attorney or solicitor in any of the courts at Westminster, provided the articles have been properly stamped before the time of the application.

W. M.—We have nothing to add to our former notice.

Our many Correspondents during the week shall have due attention.

Just published, price 4s. to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part III.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING
Adapted to the Present State of the Law Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England" dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to Town and Country Solicitors. The term "CUSTOMS OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in several Counties of England for grants of LEASES. — Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

Vol. IV. Part III. contains A NEW FORM of Assignment of several Terms to attend the inheritance to one Trustee (to save the expense of several Trustees) without causing MERGER—also the law relating to such Terms—and a

NEW FORM of MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT Of Real Property, adapted to meet the statute 3 and 4 W. 4. c. 74.

With the Law relating to USES, REMAINDERS, SHIFTING LIMITATIONS, POWERS, and SUBSTITUTIONARY USE.

London: JOHN BRIDGES and Co., Law Bookellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookeller, 194, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, April 18, 1840.

The Legal Guide.

L. III.]

SATURDAY, APRIL 25, 1840.

[No. 26.

ESSAY III.

ON THE ENGLISH LAW OF BAILMENTS.

(Continued from page 387.)

As to the second sort of bailment, viz. commodatum, or lending gratis, the borrower is bound to the strictest care and diligence to keep the goods, so as to restore them back again to the lender; because the bailee has a benefit by the use of them, so that if the bailee be guilty of the least neglect he will be answerable: as if a man should lend another a horse to go westward, or for a month; if the bailee go northward, or keep the horse above a month, if any accident happen to the horse in the northern journey, or after the expiration of the month, the bailee will be chargeable; because he has made use of the horse contrary to the intent he was lent to him under; and it may be said, if the horse had been used no otherwise than he was lent, that accident would not have befallen him. This is mentioned by Bracton, his words are, (a)—‘Is autem res aliqua utenda datur, re obligatur, si commodata est, sed magna differentia inter mutuum et commodatum; quia in mutuum accepit, ad ipsam restituenda tenetur, vel ejus pretium, si forte in- cendio ruina, naufragio, aut latronum vel hostium incursu, consumpta fuerit, vel deperdita, subtracta vel ablata. Et qui rem utendam accepit, non sufficit ad rei custodiam, quod talem diligentiam adhibeat, qualem suis rebus propriis adhibere solet, si alias eam diligentius potuit custodire; ad vim autem majorem, vel casus fortuitos non tenetur quis, nisi culpa sua intervenerit. Ut si rem sibi commodatam domi, secum detulerit cum peregre profectus fuerit, et illam incursu hostium vel prædonum, vel naufragio, amiserit, non est dubium quin ad rei restitutionem teneatur.’ I cite this author, though I confess he is an old one, because his opinion is reasonable, and very much to my present purpose, and there is no authority in the law to the contrary. But if the bailee put his horse in his stable, and he were stolen from thence, the bailee shall not be answerable for him. But if he or his servant leave the house or stable-doors open, and the thieves take the opportunity of that, and steal the horse, he will be chargeable; because the neglect gave the thieves the occasion to steal the horse. Bracton says, the bailee must use the utmost care; but yet he shall not be chargeable, where there is such a force as he cannot resist.

As to the 3rd sort of bailment, scilicet locatio, or lending for hire, in this case the bailee is also bound to take the utmost care, and to return the goods when the time of the hiring is expended. And here again I must recur to my old author, fol. 62, b. (b.) ' Qui pro usu vestimentorum auri vel argenti, vel alterius ornamenti, vel jumenti, mercedem dederit vel promiserit, talis ab eo desideratur custodia, qualem diligentissimus paterfamilias suis rebus adhibet, quam si præstiterit et rem aliquo casu amiserit, ad rem restituendam non tenebitur. Nec sufficit aliquem talem diligentiam adhibere, qualem suis rebus propriis adhiberet, nisi talem adhibuerit, de qua superius dictum est.' From whence it appears, that if goods are let out for a reward, the hirer is bound to the utmost diligence, such as the most diligent father of a family uses; and if he uses that, he shall be discharged. But every man, how diligent soever he be, being liable to the accident of robbers, though a diligent man is not so liable as a careless man, the bailee shall not be answerable in this case, if the goods are stolen.

(a) See Just. Inst. lib. 3, tit. 15, text. 2.

As to the 4th sort of bailment, viz. vadum, or a pawn, in this I shall consider two things; first, what property the pawnee has in the pawn or pledge; and, secondly, for what neglects he shall make satisfaction. As to the first, he has a special property, for the pawn is a securing to the pawnee, that he shall be repaid his debt, and to compel the pawnor to pay him. But if the pawn be such as it will be the worse for using, the pawnee cannot use it, as clothes, &c.; but if it be such as will be never the worse, as if jewels for the purpose were pawned to a lady, she might use them: but then she must do it at her peril; for whereas, if she keeps them locked up in her cabinet, if her cabinet should be broke open, and the jewels taken from thence, she would be excused; if she wears them abroad, and is there robbed of them, she will be answerable. And the reason is because the pawn is in the nature of a deposit, and, as such, is not liable to be used. And to this effect is Ow. 123. But if the pawn be of such a nature as the pawnee is at any charge about the thing pawned to maintain it, as a horse, cow, &c. then the pawnee may use the horse in a reasonable manner, or milk the cow, &c. in recompence for the meat. (c) As to the second point, Bracton, 99 b. gives you the answer:—Creditor, qui pignus accepit re obligatur, et ad illam restituendam tenetur; et cum hujusmodi res in pignus data sit utriusque gratia, scilicet debitoris, quo magis ei pecunia crederetur, et creditoris quo magis ei in tuto sit creditum, sufficit ad ejus rei custodiam diligentiam exactam adhibere, quam si præstiterit, et rem casu amiserit, securus esse possit, nec impeditur creditum petere. (d) In effect, if a creditor takes a pawn, he is bound to restore it upon the payment of the debt; but yet it is sufficient, if the pawnee use true diligence, and he will be indemnified in so doing, notwithstanding the loss, yet he shall resort to the pawnor for his debt. Agreeable to this is 29 Ass. 28. and Southcot's case. But, indeed, the reason given in Southcot's case is, because the pawnee has a special property in the pawn. But that is not the reason of the case; and there is another reason given for it in the book of Assize, which is indeed the true reason of all these cases, that the law requires nothing extraordinary of the pawnee, but only that he shall use ordinary care for restoring the goods. But indeed, if the money for which the goods were pawned be tendered to the pawnee before they are lost, then the pawnee shall be answerable for them; because the pawnee, by detaining them after the tender of the money, is a wrong doer, and it is a wrongful detainer of the goods, and the special property of the pawnee is determined. And a man that keeps goods by wrong must be answerable for them at all events; for the detaining of them by him is the reason of the loss. Upon the same difference as the

(b) Just. Inst. lib. 3, tit. 25, text 5.

(c) See 3 Salk. 208. Holt, 528. Salk. 522.

(d) See Just. Inst. lib. 3, tit. 15, text 4. De Pign.

is in relation to pawns, it will be found stand in relation to goods found. As the fifth sort of bailment, viz. a delivery carry, or otherwise manage, for a reward be paid to the bailee, those cases are of two sorts; either a delivery to one that exercises a public employment, or a delivery to a private person. First, if it be to a person of the first sort, and he is to have a reward, he is bound to answer for the goods in all events. And this is the case of the common carrier, common hoyman, master of a ship, &c.; which case of a master of a ship was first adjudged 26 Car. 2. in the case of Wright v. Slem, Raym. 220. 1 Vent. 190-238. The law charges this person thus entrusted, to carry goods against all events, but acts of God, and of the enemies of the King. For though the force be never so great, as if an insupportable multitude of people should rob him; nevertheless he is chargeable. And this is a politic establishment, contrived by the policy of the law, (e) for the safety of all persons, the necessity of whose affairs obliges them to trust these sorts of persons, that they may be safe in their ways of dealing; for these carriers might have an opportunity of doing all persons that had any dealings with them, by combining with thieves, &c., yet doing it in such a clandestine manner as would not be possible to be discovered. This is the reason the law is founded on in that point. The second sort are bailment factors; and such like. And though a factor is to have a reward for his management, yet he is only to do the best he can; if he be robbed, &c. it is a good account. The reason of his being a servant is not in the thing; for he is at a distance from his master, and acts at discretion, receiving and selling corn, &c. And yet if he misuses his master's money, and keeps it mixed up with a reasonable care, he shall be answerable for it though it be stolen.

<sup>1</sup> See Just. Inst. lib. 4. tit. 5. text 3.; and lib. 3. text 11, n. 2.

But yet this servant is not a domestic servant, nor under his master's immediate care. But the true reason of the case is, it would be unreasonable to charge him with a trust, further than the nature of the thing put it in his power to perform it. But it is allowed in the other cases, by reason of the necessity of the thing. The same law of a Factor.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM XXVI.

ILLUSORY APPOINTMENTS.

What is deemed an Illusory Appointment?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE:
ANSWER TO PROBLEM XVII. VOL. 3.

WHO MAY BE MADE A BANKRUPT?

The 6 G. 4. c. 16. s. 2. enacts "That all bankers(a), brokers(b), and persons using the trade or profession of a scrivener, receiving other men's monies or estates into their trust or custody(c), and persons insuring ships or their freight, or other matters against perils of the sea(d), warehousemen(e), wharfingers(f), packers(g), builders(h), carpenters(i), shipwrights(k), victuallers, keepers of inns, taverns, hotels, or coffee houses, dyers, printers, bleachers, fullers, calenderers, cattle or sheep salesmen(l), and all persons using the trade of merchandize by way of bargaining, exchanging, bartering, commission, consignment, or otherwise, in gross or by retail; and all persons who either for themselves, or as agents or factors for others, seek their living by buying and selling(m), or by buying and letting for hire(n), or by the workmanship of goods or commodities(o), shall be deemed traders liable to become bankrupt: provided that no farmer, grazier, common labourer, or workman for hire, receiver general of the taxes, or member or subscriber to any incorporated commercial or trading companies established by charter or act of Parliament, shall be deemed as such a trader liable by virtue of this act to become a bankrupt."

And it is enacted by sec. 135, that the act "shall extend to aliens, denizens, and women(p), both to make them subject thereto, and to entitle them to all the benefits given thereby."

(a) Bankers were by the 5 G. 2. c. 30. s. 39. made liable to the bankrupt laws; and it has been held that in order to constitute a person a banker, it was not necessary for him to keep an open banking-house, or to keep his books and conduct his business in a manner exactly the same as that usually adopted by bankers, but that all persons were to be deemed bankers who acted as such (Ex Wilson, 1 Atk. 218). But an army or navy agent is not to be deemed a bankrupt. (1 Mont. B. L. 2.)

(b) Brokers were made subject to the bankrupt laws by the 5 G. 2. c. 30. s. 89. The word "brokers" here includes not only brokers concerned in the purchase and sale of merchandize, but also stock-brokers (Cullen, 48), ship-brokers (Pott v. Turner, 4 Moore 551; 6 Bing. 702), and pawn-brokers (Higmore v. Molloy, 1 Atk. 206; Rawlinson v. Pearson, 5 B. & A. 124); and a pawnbroker who has ceased to receive pledges, but continues to sell those that remain in his hands unredeemed may be a bankrupt. (Ibid.) An assurance broker is within this clause of the statute. (See Ex Stevens, 4 Mad. 256, and Pott v. Turner, supra.) But a person not a bill-broker by trade, will not bring himself within the pale of the bankrupt laws by merely discounting bills, and procuring bills to be discounted for friends, especially if he does not hold himself out as a bill-broker. (Ex Harvey, 2 Men. & A. 593.)

(c) With respect to who may be deemed a scrivener within the 6 G. 4, we may have recourse to the cases decided on the stat. of James the First (21 Jac. 1. c. 19. s. 2.), by which it was enacted, that scriveners should be liable to the bankrupt laws; and it is to be observed that the words used in that statute, and in the 6 G. 4, are precisely alike. In order to constitute a person a scrivener, so as to bring himself within the act, it was and is necessary that he should be entrusted with the money for the purpose of lending it out to others at an interest payable to his principal, and for a commission or bonus to himself, whereby he seeks to gain his livelihood. Therefore a man who possesses other persons' money with which he discounts bills for his own emolument, is not a scrivener. (Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Esp. 555.) Nor is an attorney who purchases and sells estates, negotiates loans, &c. for his clients in the common course of his profession, for which he makes only the regular professional charges for the conveyance, &c. a scrivener within the statute of Jac. 1. (Ex Matkin, 1 Rose, 406; 2 id. 27, 28; Re Lewis, 2 id. 59; Hurd v. Brydges, 1 Holt, 654.) But if money were usually lodged in the hands of an attorney, by his client and others, for the purpose of being invested in securities, and upon his so investing the money, he charged not only for the conveyance, but also a certain bonus or commission for himself, and he were a conveyancer as well as an attorney, he would be deemed a scrivener within the above statute. (Hutchinson v. Gascoigne, 1 Holt, 507; Ex Bath, Mont. 82.)

(d) This does not extend to insurance brokers. (See Ex Stevens, 4 Mad. 256.) But see ante (note 2).

(e) This is a term well understood in the city of London, and means persons who buy and sell linens, muslins, silks, and woollen goods by wholesale; and does not, it should seem, include in it every person who owns or keeps a warehouse, and who is not otherwise a trader within the words or meaning of this statute. (Arch. B. L. p. 37. 7th edit.)

(f) This also is a term well understood in London, and means the proprietor of waterside premises, who land, warehouse and ship goods, either foreign or coastwise for reward. (Ibid.)

(g) In London, packers are understood to be persons employed by merchants to receive, and, in some cases, to select goods for them, from manufacturers, dyers, calenderers, &c., and pack the same for exportation. (Ibid.)

(h) A builder is one who builds houses for sale, whether on lands purchased or leased for that purpose, or builds for other persons by hire or contract. (Ex Neirinch, 2 Mont. & A. 384; 1 Dea. 78.)

(i) A carpenter is a person who purchases timber and other materials, which he works up as a carpenter, and not a person who merely works at the trade. (See 3 Mod. 155; 1 Cook, B. L. 49.)

(k) This seems not to mean a person who only works at the trade, but one who also purchases and furnishes the materials. (Arch. B. L. 37, 7th edit.)

(l) A farmer who is in the habit of buying half as many more sheep as are necessary to stock his farm, and of selling the surplus at a profit, is a trader within this section. (Re Newall, 3 Dea. 333.)

(m) Upon the words "buying and selling," contained in the statute of Jac. 1. (21 Jac. 1. c. 19. s. 2.), it has been held that to bring a person within the bankrupt laws under this section, it is necessary that he should buy and sell, or act with intent to sell; for buying alone, without an intent to sell. (1 Com. Dig. Bankrupt, A.) as a scrivener done without a buying (ibid.) will not constitute a trading within the meaning of this clause of the statute. (See Arch. B. L. 7 edit. p. 39, 40, 41, where all the cases on this subject will be found collected.)

(n) A livery-stable keeper, who buys horses for the purpose of letting them out, and occasionally lets them out, without having obtained a proper licence, is within this section. (Martin v. Nightingale, 11 Moore 15.) But the shareholders of steam-packets are not traders within this clause. (Ex Tismould, Mont. 302.)

(o) A person who purchases raw materials, and makes it into a vendible article for the purpose of sale, and with a view to profit, was, under the former statutes, held to be within the bankrupt laws; and it made no difference that part of the gain was to be derived from bodily labour. (Dally v. Smith, Burr. 1448; 3 Mod. 380; Crampe v. Jarne, Cro. Car. 31; Stanley v. Osbaston, Cro. Eliz. 268; Parker v. Wells, Cooke 66.) But if the manufacturer did not buy the raw materials, he was held not to be within the bankrupt laws. Thus, where a person made cider from apples, which he grew, he was held not to be a trader within the former statutes. (Per Lord Mansfield in Parker v. Wells, 1 T. R. 34.) But query, whether such is the law now, for the present act provides that "all persons who seek their living by the workmanship of goods or commodities, shall be deemed traders, liable to become bankrupt."

And in order to render a person liable to the bankrupt laws under this section, it will not be sufficient to prove a single act of buying and selling by him. (Ex Blackmore, Ves. 3; Ex Bowes, 4 Ves. 168; Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 748.) unless it can be shewn that he had an intention to continue it. (Patman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572; Barntlemere v. Sherwood, 1 T. R. 578; Holmes v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; Ex Wilks, Mont. & A. 667.) And in proof of this intention, a declaration by the party of the object of his buying; (Gale v. Halfknight, Stark. 56.); or his representing himself as a dealer, and buying goods and offering them in exchange, is admissible evidence. (Millikin v. Brandon, 1 Car. & P. 380.) The legality or illegality of the buying and selling is of no importance. (Sawderson v. Tomles, 4 Burr. 2068; Martin v. Nightingale, supra; Ex Maymot, 1 Atk. 169; Jobb v. Symonds, 1 D. & R. 111; 5 B. & A. 16.)

(p) A married woman is not a trader within the bankrupt laws, unless she carry on trade free from the control of her husband, and he is not liable for the debts contracted by her in such business. (See Ex Preston, Green 8; Cooke 40; Ex Mear, 2 Bro. 266.) And for the instances in which it has been held that the wife may be made a bankrupt, see the following cases—(Ex Franks, 1 M. and Scott, 1; 6 M. & P. 1; 7 Bing. 762; Lavis v. Phillips, 3 Burr. 1776; ex parte Carrington, 1 Atk. 206.)

A second fiat in bankruptcy against an uncertificated bankrupt is a nullity, because his property, as well after-acquired as otherwise, is already assigned under the first fiat. (Martin v. O'Hara, Cowp. 824; Ex Martin, 15 Ves. 114; Till v. Willson, 7 B. & C. 684.) But it is discretionary with the Great Seal, whether or not it will supersede such second fiat. (See 16 Ves. 236, 472.)

C. B.

We have another Answer to this Problem, by R. H., who, after stating the enactments of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2, thus proceeds:—

The chief difficulty being to prove a decisive act of trading, in order to ground the opening of a fiat in bankruptcy, it is provided by the last part of the clause, that those whom it might be difficult to class under any particular denomination of traders, are yet subject to the bankrupt laws, if it can be proved in evidence, that they are buying and selling mere personal goods, with a view to profit; and are proceeded against as "dealers and chapmen:" care must however be taken at the same time to shew a repeated practice of such buying and selling, or a commencement coupled with an intention to continue it; for a single act of bankruptcy, unaccompanied with such intention, will not be sufficient. (Ex p. Blackmore, 6 Ves. 3; Ex p. Bowes, 4 Ves. 168; Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 478.)

Law Reports.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT, Nov. 27.

BEADLES v. BURCH.

ATTORNIES—PRACTICE—Whether in Cases where Bills are filed to impeach Deeds on the ground of fraud, the Attorney who prepared them may be properly made a party to the suit as a party to the fraud, to obtain a discovery.

In this case a deed of compromise had been prepared to terminate a former suit, the draft of which, as settled by counsel, had been sent to the solicitors of a defendant in the former suit to be engrossed by them. The bill charged the solicitors, who were defendants to it, with having, without plaintiff's knowledge, introduced into the deed a passage that was not in the draft, and it prayed costs against them. They demurred to the bill for want of equity, as they had no interest in the subject-matter of the suit, having been only solicitors for one of the defendants, for whom also they might be examined as witnesses. Another demurrer was put in to the bill for want of parties. The original suit related to the administration of the estate of an intestate named Knightley Adams, to whom a prerogative administration had been taken out. Mrs. Robinson, one of his next of kin, dying, after executing the deed compromising that suit, her husband took out letters of administration to her in the diocesan Court of Peterborough, within which jurisdiction she had lived, and she was a plaintiff in this second suit. The ground of the second demurrer was, that Mrs. Robinson was not duly represented, and that a prerogative administration was necessary to constitute Mr. Robinson her proper legal representative.

The present bill was filed to rectify the deed.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, that he had read the bill, and was of opinion that such a case was stated as required an answer. It appeared to him, as to the first demurrer, that there could be no doubt of the propriety of filing such a bill, if what was stated by Lord Redesdale in his book on pleading was correct. "Where bills have been filed to impeach deeds on the ground of fraud, attornies, who have prepared the deeds, and other persons concerned in obtaining them, have been frequently made defendants, as parties to the fraud complained of, for the purpose of obtaining a full discovery: and no case appears in the books of a demurrer by such a party, because he had no claim of interest in the matter in question by the bill." That was stated by Lord Redesdale without giving any authority. Then he went on: "Indeed, an attorney under such circumstances, being brought as a party to the suit to a hearing, has been ordered to pay costs." (Mitf. Pleadg. 189, 4th ed.) For this Lord Redesdale did give authority. His Honour said he could not suppose that a person of Lord Redesdale's experience would have declared in his book that attornies had been made parties to such bills, if there could be any doubt such had been the case. In the case of Le Texier v. the Margravine of Anspach, the opinion of Lord Eldon was thus expressed. (15 Ves. 164). "Where an attorney or other agent is so involved in the fraud charged by the bill, that, though a reconveyance or other relief cannot be prayed against him, a Court of Equity will, rather than that the plaintiff shall not have his costs, order that agent to pay them; if he is made a party, the plaintiff must pray that he may pay the costs, otherwise a demurrer will lie." It was clear from this passage Lord Eldon took it for granted the practice was as Lord Redesdale had laid it down. In Bowles v. Stewart, (1 Sch. and Lef. 227.) Lord Redesdale himself acted on what he stated in his book, for there he said, "as to Mr. Bowles's solicitor, he was acting, for his client, but his duty as a solicitor did not bind him to assist his client in an act of injustice, &c. His zeal for his client has led him too far; he has properly been made a party. He was an acting party in the transaction, and properly brought to a hearing, and ought to be chargeable with the costs, so far as they relate to the release, in case they cannot be recovered from Richard Bowles." Here was a judicial recognition of the doctrine stated by Lord Redesdale. His Honour wished it to be understood that he was proceeding upon the footing of the statements contained in the bill; and that Messrs. A. B. would not suppose he had the least suspicion of the purity of their intentions in acting as they had done. He had known them too long to suppose they would be guilty of any impropriety of conduct. But from what was stated in the bill, he thought they had been properly made parties, and that what was prayed against them was properly prayed.

The point stated by the second demurrer was more important. It appeared to his Honour a strong proposition that, in no case, was a person, who had obtained a diocesan probate or administration, capable of being a plaintiff in equity. He always thought it was a rule that such a party could bring what action he chose; and if he could bring any action, of course equity, which followed the law, would permit him to file a bill. The case of Willet v. Cox clearly proved that a diocesan administrator could support an action at law. There the parties, being unable to demur, were driven to a special plea to show the diocesan administration was wrong. But then it appeared that there had been a diocesan administration taken out at Oxford, when it should have been in Berkshire; and if in the present case it appeared on the face of the pleadings there could not properly have been an administration from the Court of Peterborough, it would have been a ground of demurrer. But the case stood differently. Here Knightley Adams died intestate, and after some contrary prerogative administration was granted to Sarah Cole (afterwards Robinson), who was represented as his next of kin, who had a right to see for her portion of the clear residue after all the property had been turned into money and the debts and funeral expenses of the intestate satisfied. It was of very little importance to state whether the first intestate was possessed of property in di-rent diocesan, as the right of the next of kin was not to the specific property, but to a clear share of the surplus which would be produced by it after payment of all the demands upon it. There was nothing on the face of the bill to show that Sarah Cole was not residing in the diocese of Peterborough, and his opinion on that part of the bill was, that it might very well stand that the diocesan administration granted to Robinson as administrator to Sarah, his wife, was properly granted. Then the ground of demurrer was wrong, and must be overruled with costs.

ROLLS' COURT—Jan. 23.

PATTELL AND OTHERS v. SIMONS AND WIFE.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—SOLICITORS—

Imprudence of a Solicitor acting for Vendor and Purchaser—Necessity for the authority of the client employing the Solicitor, being in writing—Whether a purchaser shall be allowed to have possession of his purchase, and the purchase money also.

Mr. Kindersley, on behalf of the plaintiff (the vendor), moved that Thomas Harris, who had been reported by the Master to be the best bidder, might be ordered to pay into Court the purchase money, and also to pay the costs of the application.

Mr. Pemberton for the defendant Harris (the purchaser), moved also that an order of the 7th of December, 1838, for him to pay in the purchase money might be discharged, and that his costs might be paid by Mr. Wardle, the solicitor of the plaintiffs.

LORD LANGDALE stated the facts of the case in delivering his judgment. His Lordship said, Harris was the purchaser, in August, 1838, of property sold under the direction of this Court. He was confirmed purchaser, and by an order of the 7th of December, 1838, was to be at liberty to pay in the purchase money, and he had since entered into possession of the estate. The motion was, that this order might be discharged with costs. On the other side the motion was, that Harris should pay the amount of the purchase-money into Court. The questions raised were, whether Harris was to be deemed to have accepted the title, and whether he ought to be at liberty to remain in possession of the property, and also of the purchase-money. Mr. Wardle being the solicitor of the plaintiffs had a communication with Harris soon after he became purchaser, in which it appeared that Harris gave him (Wardle) liberty to proceed for him, at least to the extent of confirming the purchase, and Harris was confirmed purchaser by the Master's report of the 23d of November, and of that confirmation there was no complaint. The next step was that of the greatest importance. Harris being the purchaser had a right to be satisfied that the seller could make a good title. Wardle acted for him, but whether with authority in that respect was the question, and Wardle was also solicitor for the plaintiffs. He would have acted with more prudence if he had not been the solicitor of both parties. Without imputing misconduct to him, he had placed himself in a situation in which it was difficult to do entirely right. As solicitor for Harris it was his duty to get everything as to the title perfectly satisfactory. He obtained the order of the 9th of December, 1838, which declared that Harris was content with the title, and therefore leave was given him to pay the purchase-money into Court on the 22d of December. Before that day Wardle having intimated to Harris that the purchase-money was to be paid into Court, Harris said he wished to have Mr. Burton to be his solicitor, and Wardle sent the abstract of title to Burton, and also his (Wardle's) bill of costs as solicitor, which contained an account of the acts he had done as solicitor for Harris. That bill therefore contained a statement that Wardle had procured the Master's report, had got it confirmed, and had obtained the order for paying the money into Court, and it must be assumed that from its delivery Harris had notice of what Wardle had done. When a solicitor acted for a client, and it afterwards became a question whether he acted for him or not, the client had a right to call upon him for his authority in writing, but that was a rule not without exception, for the conduct of the client might be such as to show authority either at the time or by the acquiescence of the party afterwards. The acts done were communicated to Burton, Harris's solicitor, on the 4th of February, 1839. He must, therefore, consider that Harris was informed of them on that day, but it was a different question whether he knew the effect of them. Many of these parties seem to have thought that Harris was precluded from examining the title by the order of the 7th of December. The abstract, however, was delivered to Burton, who, on proceeding to examine it with the deeds, found some of them missing. Expectations were, however, held out that they would be forthcoming, but they had not been produced. Whilst these things were in progress Harris took possession, on the faith that a good title would be completed, and exercised acts of ownership. It was a rule that the purchaser was not to hold the property and the price of it at the same time, and Harris was not exempt from the payment of the purchase-money, although he was exempt from the admission of the title. He had been in a situation in which the ought not to be placed, and in which he was entitled to relief, which could not be obtained without application to the Court. He ought, therefore, to be exempt from payment of costs. Wardle's conduct appears to have been entirely supported by the plaintiffs, and he ought not to be put to the costs from which Harris was exonerated. His Lordship's present impression was that these costs ought to come out of the funds in Court. Harris must be exonerated from the costs of the application he was obliged to make. He must pay the purchase-money into Court, and he might investigate the title. He ought not to be exempt from the costs of the order to confirm the purchase, but he must be exempt from all other costs.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Sittings in Banco.

HATCH v. TRAVES.

WATSON v. KEIGHTLEY.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE.—Whether an action of debt can be maintained between the immediate parties to a Bill of Exchange or Promissory Note, without the words "value received" appearing upon the Bill or Note.

These two cases arose upon the same point—an action of debt brought by the payer against the drawer, in the first action, of a promissory note, and in the second action against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, neither of which contained the usual words, "for value received." The defendants demurred to the declarations upon the ground that an action of debt would not lie. These demurrers now came on for argument.

Mr. Watson appeared to support the demurrer to the first action, and cited Comyns' Digest (a) that in such a case debt will not lie. He contended that a promissory note or a bill of exchange is not necessarily given in payment of an existing debt; each is often given for the accommodation of a particular party, and often for collateral engagements, to meet some demand which is not a debt. It is only where the instrument is given for a positive debt, acknowledged upon the face of it, that such an action as the present can be maintained, and even then it must be between the immediate parties, Priddy v. Hendry, (b) That a promissory note does not constitute a debt is shown by Ruddy v. Price, (c) where it was held that an action of debt could not lie on a promissory note, payable by instalments, until the last day of payment was past. Randle v. Rigby it was held that a defendant could not be sued in debt to pay a sum of money unless such sum was charged upon land, which shows that where a covenant is collateral, debt will not lie. Cresswell v. Crisp (d) the Court would not set aside, as frivolous, a demurrer to a declaration in which the ground of demurrer was, that in debt on a promissory note it did not appear that the words "value received" were in the note, and the same rule was acted on in Lyons v. Cohen. (e)

COLERIDGE, J.—Under the new rules the same forms are applicable both to debt and assumpsit. If that is so, it is difficult to say that debt will not lie.

Mr. Butt, against the demurrer, contended that it is not now necessary in any case to insert the words "value received" in a bill of exchange, either in assumpsit or in debt. Stratton v. Hill (f) was an action by the first indorser against the first indorser of a bill, and the contract there was consequently a contract to pay if the acceptor did not. A direct privity was held to exist there. A covenant and a promise to pay both import consideration. (g) In Rumball v. Bell (h) an action of debt was brought upon a note. The words there were, "I acknowledge myself indebted to" such a one.

LITTLEDALE, J.—These words necessarily import consideration. There is nothing in the words "value received" to show that there was a consideration moving between the two parties, but even if there were, no such words are used in the present instrument.

Mr. Bramwell appeared in support of the demurrer in the second action, and cited Compton v. Taylor (i), which he said determined two points (*) the first point was, that the word "promised" does not prevent a count from being a count in debt. The other was that the demurrer to the whole declaration was too large; and bad even on the assumption that debt would not lie on the bills in question. But if it decided thus on the authority of the rule T. T. Wm. 4. debt would lie now, where it would not before those rules, then it was decided on an untenable ground. For it was clear, that when those rules were made, the judges had no power to alter the law that had been admitted by the courts. There are many authorities in Comyn's Digest (i) to show debt will not lie in this case. It has been supposed that the general proposition there had

(d) 2 Dowl. P. C. 635.

(e) 8 Dowl. P. C. 24.

(f) 3 Price, 253.

(g) Com. Dig. Debt. pl. 1. Bayley on Bills, 4 Ed. p. 40.

(h) 10 Mod. 38.

(*) The marginal note in the report of that case is incorrect.

(i) Com. Dig. Action on Assumpsit, d. 2. Merchant f. 12—14. Debt, d.

(a) In this Digest it is said that debt will lie in the City of London.

(b) 1 Barn. & Cresk. 674.

(c) 1 Hen. Bl. 347.

Feb. 20.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

DREW AND ANOTHER v. KNIGHT.

PILOTS.—Their liabilities for negligence.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff to recover compensation from the defendant, a pilot, who, while in the execution of his duty, in conducting the Braganza steam-vessel, burdened 700 tons, carrying her Majesty's mails for Lisbon, had run down the defendant's vessel, the Phoenix, a Deal hoy, off Gravesend.

It appeared that, on the 29th of November last, the plaintiff's vessel was proceeding to Deal, laden with a general cargo; but, on proceeding as far as Gravesend, from the appearance of the weather, the captain thought it prudent to cast anchor opposite to the Thames and Medway Canal, that portion of the river where small craft usually came to anchor. The Phoenix came to her berth about three o'clock in the afternoon, the weather being then squally, and it blowing a fresh gale. About two o'clock in the morning, the Braganza steamer was seen coming down the river, and, nearly abreast of the Phoenix, she shifted suddenly round, and ran against the Phoenix, and carried away her topmast, bowsprit, and stern; at the same time she broke from her anchor, and drifted down the river for four miles, where she cast her bower anchor, but on the next day was obliged to return to London to be repaired, which cost £72.

The foregoing facts were proved by the crew of the Phoenix. It was further proved that the defendant had admitted that the owners of the Phoenix ought to be compensated for the injury she sustained, and he hoped that the owners of the Braganza would do so.

For the defendant it was contended that he could not be held liable, as the injury which the Phoenix sustained was owing to a sudden squall of wind, and not to the want of any skill of his as a pilot. He was at his post at the time of the accident, standing on the larboard paddle-box, and the captain on the starboard, while the second mate was on the poop; they did not observe the Phoenix until within a ship's length of her, and they hailed her. The engines were immediately stopped, and even an attempt was made to back, so as to avoid coming in collision with her. The anchor of the Braganza was parted, and her mainstay set, so as to come to anchor, when a sudden squall drove her against the Phoenix. The foregoing facts were proved by the captain and crew of the Braganza.

Lord DENMAN addressed the jury, and said that, before he would proceed to sum up the evidence, he would make one observation; and it was that the defendant, as a pilot of considerable experience, ought to have known where in the own, that debt would not lie on a bill, could not be relied on as law, having been at least qualified by subsequent cases. But in Priddy v. Hendry, (4) and Bishop v. Young, (1) the judges not only did not dissent from the older authorities, but quoted them, and founded their judgments on them. The authorities therefore are in conflict, but amount to this, that debt will not lie on a bill of exchange, but will for the consideration apparent on the face of it. Here it is not the case, for there is no consideration on the face of the instrument, there being nothing but a bare promise to pay.

Lord DENMAN.—We have considered these cases, and think that an action of debt may be maintained between the immediate parties to a bill of exchange or a promissory note, even if the words "value received" are not found upon the instrument. And in coming to this decision, we are happy to follow the authority of the Court of Exchequer, which we consider to have determined this question.

(1) 4 Mee. & W. 138. In that case the declaration was on two bills of exchange;—the first two counts were upon promises in the form prescribed by the Rules, T. 1 W. 4. the 3rd, 4th, and 5th counts were in debt for goods sold, interest and account stated and concluded as usual in a declaration in debt. The defendant demurred specially on the ground that there was a misjoinder of counts.

In support of the demurrer Cloves v. Williams (3 Bing. N. C. 868.; 5 Scott, 68.), and Wile's (4 Co. 92. b.; Yelv. 20.) case were cited—the latter as an authority that every contract implies a promise.

PARKE, B.—Cloves v. Williams is precisely in point. I was anxious to find an authority for what seemed so consistent with common sense. There is no substantial difference between promising and agreeing.

ALDERSON, B.—I see that the forms given by the rules of T. T. 1 Will. 4, which apply to both assumpsit and debt, make no difference in the cases; and this declaration follows the form precisely. One form is given for both, and this is that form.

The Court concurred, and judgment was given for the plaintiff.—ED.

(4) 1 Barn. & Cres. 674. (1) 2 Bos. & Pul. 78.

river small craft, such as the plaintiffs' vessel, were likely to anchor, and he should not have attempted to bring a vessel of 700 tons, on such a night, to anchor amongst such craft. He would read the evidence over to them, if they pleased. Verdict for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

RE LORD CARDROSS, AND MESSRS. HODGSON AND BURTON, ATTORNIES.

ATTORNIES.—Jurisdiction of a Court of Law for calling upon an Attorney to deliver his Bill of Costs where no business has been done in the Court in which the application is made.

Messrs. Hodgson and Burton had been Attornies for the late Lord Cardross, whose life they had insured to secure the payment of their bills of costs, and upon his Lordship's death they had received the amount of the policy.

A rule had been obtained calling upon the Attornies to shew cause why they should not deliver a bill of costs, and give credit for all monies received, and upon payment of what should be due, to deliver up the life policy.

Mr. Erle shewed cause against the rule, upon upon two grounds—first, that the affidavits on which the rule had been obtained were bad, as not being entitled in any cause; and, secondly, that none of the business having been done in the Exchequer, this court had no jurisdiction to order the delivery of a bill.

PARKE, B. said, they may be compelled to account for the balance of the money received by the policy, in an action for money had and received.

Mr. Kelly, in support of the rule, cited the case of Aitkin, (a) to shew that the Court had power to interfere in a summary way, and in that case no business had been done in the Court in which the application was made.

PARKE, B.—With respect to calling on an attorney to deliver his bill, the Courts have jurisdiction for that purpose under the stat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 23. s. 23. only when an action has been brought on the bill, and the greater part of the business is done in the Court to which the application is made. The Courts have, by construction, got rid of the latter branch of the qualification, and now hold that if part of the business be done in the Court it will suffice. But it is imperatively requisite that some portion of it be done there, and the affidavit upon which such application is founded must be entitled in the cause. Now, here there is no business done in this Court, and consequently these affidavits are wrong. The next question is, have we power here by virtue of the general jurisdiction of the Courts over their officers? The rule is that laid down by Lord Tenterden in re Aitkin, that where an attorney is employed respecting deeds or conveyances, or any other business properly belonging to the profession of the law, the obligation to discharge which faithfully arises out of the duty imposed on him in that character, and he receives money in that capacity, he must account with his principal for it. The only foundation of a claim in the present case is, that there is a policy of insurance remaining in the hands of these attornies. But when called on to account, they deny that Lord Cardross or his representatives have any interest in it. But, suppose it even did belong to Lord Cardross, is the party to be called on to give an account merely because he takes a security? Such a position would go far beyond the case of In re Aitkin. On the contrary, there is a case of Ex parte Schwalbanker, (1 Dowl. 182.) where Patteson J. refused to call on an attorney to account with a party for whom he had discounted bills, and refused to give an account of the balance. Rule discharged, with costs.

Jan. 15.

CHAMBERS v. BIRCHAM.

ACT for abolishing ARREST for DEBT. PRACTICE. Whether the hearing of a cause will be stayed upon production of the vesting Order of the Insolvent Court until the Assignee of the Insolvent should appear in the cause.

Mr. Barber, upon this cause being called, objected to its matter being proceeded with, on the ground that the plaintiff had become an insolvent. The plaintiff had been compelled, under the provisions of the act passed for the relief of insolvent debtors, to take the benefit of that act, whereby the whole of his property had become vested in the person of the provisional assignee for the benefit and advantage of his creditors. Unless, therefore, the provisional assignee consented to file a supplemental bill, it would be impossible that the plaintiff in this suit could proceed with the bill then before the Court. It was held in his hand the usual order of the Insolvent Court, which proved that the plaintiff had taken the benefit on the 19th of December, 1839. He now had to pray that his Lordship would allow the cause to stand over, with a view of ascertaining whether the provisional assignee would file the supplemental bill. Supposing that the party were to decline or refuse to take that course,

(a) 4 Barn. and Ald. 4.

en it would be necessary, as he would undoubtedly be entitled to do, that he should come once more to the Court, and pray the dismissal of the present bill without costs.

Mr. Temple, for the plaintiff, admitted it to be true that the plaintiff had remained unfortunately so long in prison as to give a right to his creditors to call upon him to take such a course. A copy of an order had been obtained by Mr. Wilson from the Insolvent Court, which declared it under the provisions of the 1st and 2d of Statute that the plaintiff had in fact taken the benefit thereof. Now, he was instructed that certain competent legal authorities had intimated to the plaintiff that the order in question did not of necessity make him an insolvent.

Lord ABINGER inquired whether the late act did not enable creditors to oblige parties who were indebted to them, who had been arrested, who were in prison, to take the benefit with- out specific time?

Mr. Barber replied in the affirmative.

Lord ABINGER thereupon said, it was clear that the Court was bound to receive the order which had been produced by the learned counsel for the defendant, as a proof that the plaintiff, under the particular circumstances which had been adverted to, taken the benefit.

Mr. Taylor then said, that after hearing the opinion of his Lordship on the point, he should abstain from any further interference upon the present occasion.

The case was then ordered to stand over.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.—Jan. 23.

STOCKDALE v. DUNLOP.

INSURANCE ON PROFITS.—In order to effect an Insurance upon Profits, the Goods insured must be such as the Assurer has an actual present Interest and a vested Right in.

A rule had been obtained in this case by the plaintiff, an underwriter, for the purpose of bringing before the Court the question whether the plaintiff had such an interest in certain quantities of palm oil as would entitle him to insure its safety. The plaintiff had entered into a verbal contract with Messrs. Harrison, who were shipowners and merchants concerned in the African trade. The terms of this agreement were, that Messrs. Harrison promised to buy and sell the oil in question, if it should arrive in certain vessels of the firm then engaged in the trade. The plaintiff then insured the oil, the vessels being lost in the homeward voyage. The principal questions raised for the consideration of the Court were, whether this was a contract which ought to have been reduced into writing, and whether, the insurance having been effected before all but a very small quantity of oil had been shipped, the plaintiff had an insurable interest therein.

Mr. Wightman showed cause against the rule, and contended that there was a part performance of the contract sufficient to take it out of the operation of the statute, and also that there was an insurable interest vested in the plaintiff, inasmuch as though he had not possession or actual interest in the oil, yet, as the contract was one from which he might expect to reap profit, he had an interest therein which would entitle him to insure its safe arrival. Besides these, there were other points regarding the manner in which the various issues should be entered; but the main features of the case may be gathered from the following judgment, which was delivered without hearing the counsel for the defendant.

Lord ABINGER.—The chief question in this case is, whether the plaintiff had an insurable interest in the oil on the species of contract which is proved to have been entered into between the plaintiff and Messrs. Harrison. I have no hesitation in stating it to be my opinion, that he had not such an interest therein as would entitle him to insure the goods. The case has been likened to that of an insurance for freight, but the cases are not analogous, for there is an actual interest in the amount of freight, and here there is neither an inception of the risk nor a part performance of the contract at the time of insurance, which alone could entitle the plaintiff to enforce the promise of the Messrs. Harrison. If it were to be held that the plaintiff had an insurable interest in this oil, though he had no actual interest in it, all that a man would require to give such an interest to him would be, that he should lay a wager that certain goods would arrive, and then insure that wager, a state of things which it would be very dangerous to admit. This is only a contract in futuro, a contract to sell, if the oil should arrive in certain vessels; and as the oil did not arrive, it is clear that the contract is void: that being so, how can the plaintiff insure the profits?

Mr. Baron PARKE.—I am of the same opinion; all the cases in the books on this subject show, that in order to effect an insurance on profits, the goods insured must be such as the assurer has an actual present interest and a vested right in. The profits in that construction of the term are the additional value of the property of the assurer. Here, however, the plaintiff has no possible interest in the oil at the time of the insurance being effected, and was wholly dependent upon the honour of Messrs. Harrison, who might or might not choose to keep their promise, which was one to sell the oil if it arrived in certain vessels, thus placing their liability to perform their bargain upon a double condition. This, moreover, is not a contract which the plaintiff could enforce, as it was not in writing, and that being so could confer no actual interest in the oil upon him.

The other Barons concurred.

Judgment for the defendant.

Feb. 3.

Sittings at Nisi Prius.

MUIR v. SEWELL AND OTHERS.

LANDLORD and TENANT—DISTRESS—Trespass.

This was an action of trespass brought by a tenant against her landlord, a broker, and his men, who had distrained upon her goods in an unlawful manner, as the entry into the house had been effected by means of a ladder put up to a window at the back of the house. Having thus obtained admission, the broker produced a paper bearing the signature of Sewell, the landlord, as his authority, and proceeded to levy for £4. 4s. due, for which purpose goods to a much larger amount than was necessary were taken, and ultimately sold at a sacrifice.

There being no evidence against Mr. Sewell, the judge directed a verdict to be taken for him, and the case proceeded as against the broker and his assistants.

Mr. Thesiger contended, that though the entry at the window might be admitted to have been somewhat irregular, yet the plaintiff could not complain, as she had refused admission to the defendants by the door.

Mr. Platt then replied, that as Mr. Sewell had been withdrawn from the case, it must follow that there was no authority from him to the other defendants to enter the plaintiff's house to make a distress, in which case the whole proceeding would be a trespass on their part without any pretence at a justification, and they ought to be made to pay handsomely for their conduct.

Mr. Justice COLERIDGE said, that as the defendants now in question had failed to connect themselves with the landlord, it must be taken that all their proceedings were without justification in point of law, though there could be no moral doubt that they did commit the trespasses with which they were charged under colour of a right to do so. It had been most properly admitted, that the mode by which they had effected their entry was in itself an act of trespass, for which they would have been answerable, even if they had succeeded in showing that they had the authority of the landlord's warrant for taking a distress. The case therefore was one purely for the jury to say what amount of compensation they would give, always bearing in mind that there did not seem to have been any wilful oppression on the part of the broker and his men, against whom all that could fairly be charged was, that they had committed several irregularities in their proceeding, for which they were liable to the plaintiff in this form of action.

Verdict for the plaintiff, damages £25.

February 12.

Sittings in Banco.

REYNOLDS v. SHERWOOD.

PRACTICE—JUDGE'S ORDER for staying proceedings on payment of debt and costs within a limited time—Whether the Judge have a compulsory jurisdiction.

This was an action on a bill of exchange, and before declaration had been delivered, the defendant had obtained an order of Gurney, B. ex parte, that on payment of the bill, interest and costs, within a limited time, proceedings should be stayed; in default of such payment the plaintiff to be at liberty to sign final judgment. The debt and costs was not paid by the defendant at the time specified by the order, and Mr. Barstow had obtained a rule nisi to set it aside, contending, that should a bankruptcy or insolvency take place, great inconvenience must arise from such a course.

Mr. Chandlee showed cause against the rule, and submitted that the Court or a judge in chambers has always power to stay proceedings where the justice of the case requires it.

LORD ABINGER, C. B.—A judge has power to make an order of this kind, either where the party is already under terms to plead, or with the consent of the opposite side.

ALDERSON, B.—There could be no doubt of the power of the judge to stay proceedings, the money had been paid. Cases like this frequently present themselves at chambers, and it is usual for judges to endeavour to settle them on reasonable terms. But they can go no further than recommend a particular course to be adopted by the parties; they have no compulsory jurisdiction.

ROLES, B., concurred.

Rule discharged on terms.

Sittings in Banco.

April 16.

HALL v. STANLEY.

WRIT OF CAPIAS—PRACTICE. Whether Plaintiff, in giving time generally to Defendant for payment of his demand.

hinders his taking any step to prevent the Defendant leaving the country before the time arrives for payment.

Mr. Hunfrey shewed cause against a rule to rescind an order of Mr. Baron PARKE, and to set aside a writ of capias which had been issued in pursuance thereof. It appeared that an action having been brought against the defendant, an arrangement was made during its progress, by virtue of which a judge at chambers made an order, by consent of both parties, by which, on the defendant agreeing to pay down the costs and the debt, £300. within six months from that time, all further proceedings would be stayed on the part of the plaintiff. As, however, the defendant was about to leave the country, the plaintiff applied to Mr. Baron PARKE, under the recent act, for an order to arrest him, which being granted, a writ of capias was issued, and the defendant forthwith arrested. The consequence was, that he paid into the hands of the sheriff the amount of the debt, and moved this Court to rescind the order under which he had been so arrested, on the ground that the step taken by the plaintiff was in violation of the original order, in the pursuance of which all further proceedings were to be stayed on certain terms, one of which the defendant had punctually performed, and was still ready to comply with the other, when the proper time should arrive. It was now argued, in opposition to this rule, that the arresting the defendant was not a step or proceeding in the cause; that the writ of capias was now a step out of the course rather than in it, and wholly disconnected from its regular course under the new rules of practice. The true definition of a proceeding in a cause was any step which was necessary towards arriving at its conclusion, which a writ of capias was not now, and could not therefore be called a proceeding the adoption of which could be termed an infraction of the order in question.

PARKE, B. said — Certainly, his first impression was, that this was not a proceeding in the cause, but that had been removed by the learned counsel when the rule was obtained, and there was a necessity for a repetition of the arguments then used. The issuing of a capias, though not necessary to the final judgment, is yet a proceeding which is collateral in the cause, and is only obtained on affidavits which must be made in the cause wherein the application is made: when, therefore, a plaintiff agrees to give up generally to his debtor, as here, he ties up his hands from taking any step to prevent his going out of the country; so that if he should have cause for suspicion, it would be proper in the future to insert a special clause in the margin reserving to himself leave to issue a capias if necessary. This was not done here, and the rule must therefore be made absolute with costs, on the condition that no action shall be brought for the arrest.

Judgment for the defendant.

Spring Assizes.

OXFORD CIRCUIT.—GLOUCESTER, Apr. 7.

DAVIS v. BLACK, Clerk.

LAW OF MARRIAGE.—Whether a Clergyman of the Established Church can refuse to marry a Party on producing the regular License, for insufficient reasons.

The plaintiff is a carpenter, living at Turkey, in this county, and the defendant the rector of the adjoining parish of Blaisdon. It appeared that in the early part of last year, a young woman, named Mary Ann Hogg, was living in the service of the defendant as housemaid. She had for some time previous been intimate with the plaintiff, who was her acknowledged lover, and in the course of March last year, the rector, having discovered that she was far advanced in pregnancy, discharged her from his service. She was ashamed to return to the house of her father, a respectable farmer in the neighbourhood, and accordingly went to lodge at the house of a neighbour named Dobbins, till Davis should redeem his promise to make her his wife. He was anxious to lose no time in doing so, and accordingly they went together to Gloucester, where he purchased a license, to avoid the delay which the publication of banns would occasion, and where they also purchased some wedding clothes. They returned to Blaisdon, and on Sunday, the 7th of April, the plaintiff applied to the parish clerk in the usual way, requesting him to ask the defendant to perform the ceremony on the following day. This the defendant refused to do; and in answer to repeated applications persisted in that refusal, but without giving any reason for it. The plaintiff then complained to the registrar of the diocese, who wrote to the defendant to request an explanation of his conduct. The letter of the defendant in reply was read. It charged the young woman and the plaintiff with improper conduct in defendant's house, while the former was in his service, but defendant declined entering into particulars, considering himself accountable for his conduct to his diocesan only.

In consequence of this answer, Dr. Maddy, the Chancellor and principal Surrogate of the diocese, was applied to, and he wrote to the defendant, explaining to him that the grounds he had stated for his refusal to marry these parties were insufficient, and calling upon him for any additional reasons for his conduct which he might have to offer. To this letter Mr. Black, on the 21st of April, wrote the following reply:—"Reasons, my dear Sir, as Falstaff says, 'are plenty as blackberries; but I will give no man a reason on compulsion.' I refer you to Canon 101—'No license shall be granted but to such persons as be of good state and quality.' The parties alluded to in your letter do not answer this description. Ergo, the license is illegal. Licenses are not compulsory, but only an exemption from certain penalties. They do not control the power of the clergyman, which is and ought to be discretionary." The refusal being still persisted in, the plaintiff caused the banns between himself and the young woman to be published in Turley church; they were read for the third time on the 19th of May. On the 21st of May, within a few hours before the intended celebration of the marriage, labour came on, and the young woman was confined with a female child, which is still living, but the mother died the same evening. The plaintiff now brought this action to recover compensation for the loss he had sustained by the defendant's refusal to marry him. No attempt was made to justify that refusal; it was admitted by his counsel, and laid down distinctly by the learned Judge, that he had no right so to refuse. If a clergyman thinks a license improperly obtained, he may delay the celebration of the marriage in order to ascertain the fact, but he is not entitled, on reasons evidently insufficient, to deny to his parishioners that which is a common law right. The learned counsel pressed strongly on the jury that the power of legalizing a marriage by going through, a form, before, a lay registrar, does not the less entitle parties to the sanction to the marriage ceremony, derived from its being also an act of religious worship.

Mr. Justice PATTERSON left it to the jury to say what damages the plaintiff was entitled to, observing that it was an action such as he had never heard of before, and that the right to sustain it would probably be matter for decision before a higher tribunal.

Verdict for the plaintiff—Damages £100.

SOLICITORS IN CHANCERY.

New Order for Examination of Candidates at the Rolls.

I do hereby order and appoint that Joseph Bicknell, Richard Mills, George Gatty, and John Wainwright, Sworn Clerks in Chancery, together with John Teesdale, Thomas Metcalfe, Thomas Adlington, Robert Riddell Bayley, William Loxham Farrer, George Frere, James William Freshfield, Bryan Home, William Lowe, Edward Rowland Pickering, William Tooke, and Richard White, Solicitors of the Court of Chancery, be Examiners, until the last day of Easter Term 1841, to examine every person (not having been previously admitted an Attorney of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, or one of them) who shall apply to be admitted a Solicitor of the said Court of Chancery, touching his fitness and capacity to act as a Solicitor of the said Court: And I do hereby direct that the said Examiners shall conduct the examination of every such applicant as aforesaid, in the manner and to the extent pointed out by the Order of the 27th day of July, 1836, and the Regulations approved by me in reference thereto, and in no other manner and to no further extent.

LANGDALE, M. R.

A BILL,

[WITH THE AMENDMENTS MADE BY THE LORDS]
INTITULED,

An Act to give summary Protection to Persons employed in the Publication of Parliamentary Papers. (1)

[N.B.—The words and clauses printed beneath a black line were struck out, and the words and clauses printed in Italics were added by the Lords.]

Whereas it is essential to the due and effectual exercise and discharge of the functions and duties of Parliament, and to the promotion of wise legislation, that no obstructions or impediments should exist to the publication of such of the reports, papers, votes or proceedings of either House of Parliament, as such House of Parliament may deem fit or necessary to be published:

And whereas obstructions or impediments to such publication have arisen, and hereafter may arise, by means of civil or criminal proceedings being taken against persons employed by or acting under the authority of the Houses of Parliament, or one of them, in the publication of such reports, papers, votes or proceedings: By reason and for remedy whereof, it is expedient that more speedy protection should be afforded to all persons acting under the authority aforesaid, and that all such civil or criminal proceedings should be summarily put an end to and determined in manner hereinafter mentioned:

(1) and to persons employed in the execution of certain warrants granted by the Speaker of the House of Commons.

(2) Be it therefore enacted, by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons who now is or are or hereafter shall be a defendant or defendants in any civil or criminal proceeding commenced or prosecuted in any manner soever, for or on account or in respect of the publication of any such report, paper, votes or proceedings by such person or persons, or by his, her or their servant or servants, by or under the authority of either House of Parliament, to (3) bring before the Court in which such proceeding shall have been or shall be so commenced or prosecuted, or before any Judge of the same (if one of the Superior Courts at Westminster), first giving twenty-four hours' notice of his intention so to do to the prosecutor or plaintiff in such proceeding, a certificate under the hand of the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, or the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, or of the Speaker of the House of Lords for the time being, or of the Clerk of the (4) Parliaments, or of the Speaker of the House of Commons, or of the Clerk of the same House, stating that the report, paper, votes or proceedings, as the case may be, in respect whereof such civil or criminal proceeding shall have been commenced or prosecuted, was published by such person or persons, or by his, her or their servant or servants, by order or under the authority of the House of Lords, or

(2) And whereas an action hath been brought, and is now depending, against certain persons employed in the execution of a warrant granted and issued by the Speaker of the House of Commons, during the present Session of Parliament, for taking into custody the person therein named, and it is expedient that such action should be put an end to, and that no other action should be allowed to be brought or prosecuted in respect of the execution of any such warrant which has been so granted or issued by the said Speaker as aforesaid, during the present Session of Parliament;

(3) deliver and leave or cause to be delivered and left at the office of the Court or Jurisdiction wherein any such civil or criminal proceeding shall have been commenced, or is or shall be depending or prosecuted, in which office the judgment in such matters is or may be signed or entered, or with the officer, clerk or person whose duty it may be to sign or to enter such judgments, to make up, prepare or receive, or file the rolls or records of such judgments.

(4) Parliament, of the House of Commons, as the case may be, together with an affidavit verifying such certificate; and (5) such Court or Judge shall thereupon immediately stay such civil or criminal proceeding, and the same and every writ or process issued therein, shall be and shall be deemed and taken to be finally put an end to, determined and superseded by virtue of this Act.

(6)

And be it enacted, that in case of any civil or criminal proceeding hereafter to be commenced or prosecuted for or on account or in respect of the publication of any copy of such report, paper, votes or proceedings, it shall be lawful for the defendant or defendants, at any stage of the proceedings, to lay before the court or judge such report, paper, votes or proceedings, and such copy, with an affidavit verifying such report, paper, votes or proceedings, and the correctness of such copy, and the court or judge shall immediately stay such civil or criminal proceeding, and the same, and every writ or process issued therein, shall be and shall be deemed and taken to be finally

(5) from and after the delivery of such certificate and affidavit, every

(6) And be it further enacted, that in every such civil proceeding as aforesaid, within forty-eight hours after the delivery of such certificate and affidavit as hereinbefore is provided, the defendant or defendants in such civil proceeding shall cause a notice in writing to be delivered at the residence, office or lodging of the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or of the attorney or attorneys, of the plaintiff or plaintiffs, as the same may be in the particular case indorsed upon the writ or process by which such civil proceeding shall have been commenced, in which notice it shall be stated that such civil proceeding is stayed pursuant to and by virtue of this Act.

And be it further enacted, that all and every action or actions heretofore brought or prosecuted by any person or persons for or in respect of any trespass or trespasses alleged to have been committed in or under colour of the execution of, or in or under colour of the endeavouring to execute any warrant or warrants granted or issued by the Speaker of the House of Commons, by authority of the said House, since the commencement of the present session of Parliament, shall be and are stayed, put an end to, finally determined, discharged and made void by virtue of this Act; and that no action, suit or prosecution shall hereafter be brought or commenced for, on account, or in respect of any such alleged trespass or trespasses as aforesaid, but that all proceedings in any such action, suit or prosecution shall be null and void to all intents and purposes.

put an end to, determined and superseded by virtue of this Act.

And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful in any civil or criminal proceeding to be commenced or prosecuted for printing any extract from or abstract of such report, paper, votes or proceedings, to give in evidence under the general issue such report, paper, votes or proceedings, and to show that such extract or abstract was published bonâ fide and without malice; and if such shall be the opinion of the jury, a verdict of not guilty shall be entered for the defendant or defendants.

Provided always, and it is hereby expressly declared and enacted, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or taken, or held or construed, directly or indirectly, by implication or otherwise, to affect the privileges of Parliament in any manner whatsoever.

Amendments of the Lords agreed to by the House of Commons, 18th April, and Bill received the Royal Assent by Commission, 14th April, 1840. Ed.

NEW POSTAGE REGULATION.

The Lords of the Treasury have fixed the 6th May as the day when the postage stamps shall come into use. The issue of the stamps will in the first instance begin in London, and be extended as speedily as practicable throughout all the kingdom; but letters properly stamped, posted in any part of the kingdom, will pass free.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

This Number will complete Vol. III. of THE LEGAL GUIDE.—An Index will be published on Saturday next, price 6d.

The Three Vols. may be had of the Publisher, bound in cloth boards, with Indexes complete, price £2. 5s.

We call attention to the London circulation of this Paper, as an advantageous medium for Advertisements on the Wrapper.

We have resolved upon omitting to publish in future the names of Candidates for the Examination at the Law Society.—We will continue to publish the names of those who do pass.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. A. M.—E. A. has made the amende honorable.

E. A.—The subject, we are quite aware, is somewhat capacious.—Observe Lord Bacon's 15th Ordinance—proceed as you have begun.

Our many Correspondents during the week shall have due attention.

ALPHONSO.—Your last note is satisfactory.

Just published, price 4s. to be continued Monthly, Vol. IV. Part III.

PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Present State of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F.R.A.S. of the Middle Temple; Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen, &c. in continuation of the PRECEDENTS by S. VALLIS BONE, Esq.

This work, independent of the Precedents, which are all drafts of actual practice, abounds with valuable practical information to TOWN and COUNTRY SOLICITORS. The term "CUSTOM OF THE COUNTRY," is fully explained, and Tables are given, shewing those Customs in the SEVERAL COUNTIES of ENGLAND for granting LEASES.—Almost every Number contains a NEW FORM of Instrument to meet the existing state of the laws.

Vol. III. was published December 1, with Table of Contents, price 17s. Price of Vols. I. and II. £1. 10s.

Vol. IV. Part III. contains

A NEW FORM of Assignment of several Terms to attend the inheritance to one Trustee (to save the expense of several Trustees) without causing MERGER—also the law relating to such Terms—and a

NEW FORM of MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT Of Real Property, adapted to meet the statute 3 and 4 W. 4. c. 74.

With the Law relating to USES, REMAINDERS, SHIFTING LIMITATIONS, POWERS, and SEPARATE RATE USE.

London: JOHN RICHARDS and Co., Law Booksellers, 194, Fleet-street.

This Work will be completed in Four Vols.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 194, Fleet-street, in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, April 25, 1840.

THE LEGAL GUIDE.

---

VOL. IV.

FROM MAY 2, 1840, TO OCTOBER 31, INCLUSIVE.

---

LONDON:

PUBLISHED FOR THE PROPRIETORS, BY

JOHN RICHARDS & CO.

LAW BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS, 194, FLEET STREET.

1840.

---

G. NORMAN, PRINTER, MAIDEN LANE, COVENT GARDEN.

TABLE OF CASES REPORTED.

---

- |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|  ickroyd, Jonathan, and another, Exp. 282 Allen v. McPherson, 285 Attorney-General v. Cleeve, 152 all v. Stanley, 188 ank of England v. London Joint Stock Bank,             189, 203 anks v. Lord Le Despeneer, 308 arter v. Jones, 27 ateman, Jas. exparte, 268 aylis v. Lawrence, 142 ennett v. Baxter, 5 ernell v. Curteis, 346 irtwhistle v. Vardill, 204, 214 oth v. Bank of England, 203 anquet v. Rainsforth, 329 itten In re, 235 ryan v. Unwin, 237 owne v. Keatinge, 142 dd v. Edwards, 270 rnnett v. Bauch, 173 moys, Lord v. Scur, 90, 108 ne v. Martin, 155 adigan, Earl of, Case, 414 m v. Bryce, 60 rtter v. Evans, 190 rtter v. Bentall, 206 stle v. Irving, 234 upton v. Bulmer, 75 hrane, Mrs. In re, 119 egrave v. Manley, 5 ls v. Cooke, 171 llard v. Allison, 22 ok v. French, 44, 65 rnfoot v. Fowke, 10 urvoissier, Francis Benjamin, Case of, 126 mming v. Griffith, 172 rtis v. Richards, 414 vis v. Cole, 361 ries v. Chapman, 267 e dem Dunning v. The Earl of Cranstoun, 267             — Hickman v. Hickman, 280             — v. Roe, 159             — Sabine v. Sabine, 89 aldson, Hugh, Goods of, 124 ffield v. Elwes, 21          |  Edwards v. Lamport, 219 Ellis, Alexander, Goods of, 110 England v. Davison, 25             — v. Downs, 152 Eve v. Rumboll, 28 Eyre v. Shelley, 92  Fearnley v. Worthington, 314 Field v. Churchill, 411 Forsyth, Francis, Insolvent, 123 Franks v. Price, 278 Franks Re, a Bankrupt, 302 Friend v. Batterfield, 142  Gardener, Joseph, Insolvent, 251 Garner, Re, a Bankrupt, 57 Giblett, John, Insolvent, 180, 251 Gillett v. Green, 222 Gould, Richard, Case of, 127 Graham v. Bunn, 92 Graham v. Oliver, 168 Gravenor v. Beaumont, 157 Gray v. Foot, 141 Green, Re, Bankrupt, 110 Greenlaw v. King, 326 Griffin v. Smith, 188 Gripper v. Barstow, 300.  Harper in Re, a Bankrupt, 187 Hastings, Horatio, Insolvent, 29, 94 Haughton v. Brine and another, 330 Hebblewhite v. McMorine, 360 Hillier, Richard, Goods of, 94 Hinds v. Pugh, 397. Hislop v. Metcalf, 5, 155 Hoggart v. Cutts and others, 230 Holmes v. Coghill, 5             — Exparte, 57 Hopkinson v. Snow, 253  Ibbotson v. Ibbotson, 106  Jenkin v. Pence, 382 Jones v. Hughes, 76  King, Jacob, exparte, 206 King v. Burrell, 205          |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Table of Cases Reported.

Kenney v. Hutchinson, 46

Keys v. Danniels, 172

Kirk v. Dolby, 122

Lamont v. Crook, 109

Lane v. Burghart, 234

Legg v. Evans, 7

Lennox v. Lennox, 41

Lewis v. Gompertz, 61, 65.

London Joint Stock Bank v. Bank of England, 183, 203

MacKenzie v. Yoe, 223

Marriott v. Stourley, 345

Martin and ———, 189

Marston v. John, 206

Mason v. Graham, 108

Maugham v. Vincent, 138

Messenger v. Southey, 44, 65

Metcalf v. Fowler, 430

Michael's, Catherine, Case, 11

Milbank v. Oldrey, 315

Milner v. Singleton, 381

Moore, James, Re, a Bankrupt, 348

Morris v. King, 249

Mortimer v. Wright, 45.

Moxhay v. Coleman, 250

Munroes, Re, Bankrupts, 282

Oxford's, Edward, Case, 125

Packwood in Re, 187

Page v. Thomas, 330

Parker v. Mitchell, 108

Parrott v. Oakes, 286

Paternoster v. King and another, 429

Peacock v. Trimnell, 158

Percival v. Horne, 221

Phillips v. Huth, 26, 158

——— v. May, 143

Portugal, Queen of, v. Sir Richard Carr Glynn, 166

Rainy v. Vernon, 249

Rayner v. Green, 107

Regina v. Ahrenfield and others, 63

——— v. Berks and Wiltshire Canal Co. 413

——— v. D'Oyley, 314

——— v. Dunn, 220

——— v. Price, 58

Rix v. Boston and another, 205

Roberton and another v. Crawford and others, 423

Roberts, Mary, Goods of, 383

Robertson v. Sheward, 298

Robinson v. Evans, 190

——— and others v. Addison and others, 311

Rugby v. Moss and Humphreys, 222

Rycraft v. Christy, 344

Saunderson v. Westley, 78

Savory v. Chapman, 89

Seddon v. Connell, 412

Semple v. Turner, 92

Sharp v. Reed, 252

Shaw v. Scarisbrick, 123

Shepherd v. Pybus, 171

Sheriffe, Robert, Goods of, 251

Smith v. Nangle, 105

——— v. Grey, 286

Society for the Illustration and Encouragement of Practical Science v. Abbott, 425

St. Clement Danes v. St. Giles, Parishes of, 285

Stephens, Edward, Goods of, 143

Stevens v. Harman, 157

Tanner v. Smith, 358

Taylor, Mrs. in Re, 262

Thomson v. Farden and others, 109

Thompson, Thomas, Goods of, 61

Tippins, Celia, Case of, 40

Tomlinson v. The Manchester and Birmingham Railway Company, 167

Viner v. Vaughan, 23

Vyse v. Wakefield, 331

Walsh, Robert Henry, a Bankrupt, 206

Wallworth v. Holt, 379, 396

Waters v. Sapte and others, 220

Welford v. Bell and others, 428

Weller v. Lewis, 157

Williams v. Nixon, 43

——— v. The Earl of Jersey, 246

Wood, Thomas, in Re, 7

Woods v. Woods, 300

Wotherspoon, Matthew, a Bankrupt, 268

INDEX.

- Actions, joint and several, Report, 429
 Affidavits sworn in Ireland, Report, 188
 Agreement, Stamp, Report, 330
 ——— for a Lease, present demise, Report, 345
 Annuity for Lives, Reports, 187, 326
 Apothecaries, Action, Report, 315
 Arrest, Witness, Report, 235
 Articles of the Peace, Jurisdiction, Report, 220
 Assignees, retaining monies, Report, 29
 ——— official, their liabilities, Report, 302
 ATTORNEYS, prosecution of suit, Report, 5
 ——— Bills of costs of London agents, their taxation, Report, 7
 ——— their Petition for the removal of the Courts, 15
 ——— Costs, orders for payment after taxation, service, Report, 21
 ——— exempt from serving on Coroner's Juries, 37
 ——— admission of—New Rule of Queen's Bench, Easter Term, 38
 ——— Plaintiff settling action, Report, 76
 ——— see WARRANT of ATTORNEY
 ——— Discharge by, of a judgment prisoner, Report, 89
 ——— Executors of, taxation of costs, Report, 89
 ——— Certificates, entry of—Action, Report, 92
 ——— Not delivering paper to the Judge, penalty, Report, 141
 ——— Lien upon papers in a cause, Report, 155
 ——— their liabilities, Report, 222
 ——— costs, Report, 280
 ——— and Proctors' costs, Report, 285
 Auctioneers, commission, Report, 249
 Augusta, H. R. H. the Princess, Death of, 352
 Bailments, ORIGINAL ESSAY on the ENGLISH LAW of, 1, 17, 33, 49, 81, 98, 113, 129, 145, 161, 193, 209, 225, 241, 257, 273, 289, 305, 321, 337, 353, 369
 ——— Reports, 9, 26, 90, 108, 221
 Bankrupt, his future liability on Guarantee, Report, 234
 Bankrupts, List of, in 1839
 Bankruptcy, annulling fiat, Reports, 187, 282
 ——— act of, assignment, Report, 348 Bar, Gentlemen called Easter Term, 95
 ——— Trinity Term, 138
 Bills of EXCHANGE, ORIGINAL ESSAY upon, NOTICES of DISHONOUR, 65
 ——— Reports, 44, 57, 61, 143
 Bill in Chancery, amendment after time expired, Report, 423
 Births, Marriages, and Deaths' Registration Act, Report, 58
 Boundaries of Parishes, Pauper Settlement, Report, 285
 Cardigan, Earl of, offence of Duelling—see Duelling Chancery, Court of—Appeals from the Vice-Chancellor and Master of the Rolls—Order, 87
 ——— Reform, Letter from Mr. Fane to Lord Abinger, 103
 CHARGES of the JUDGES to JURIES, case of Catherine Michael, MURDER, 11
 Charter Party, guarantee, Report, 250
 Churchwardens, place of election, Report, 314
 Circuits of the Judges, Summer, 135
 CLERKS, ARTICLED, who passed their Examination, Easter Term, 54—Trinity Term, 159, 174
 ——— Number for admission in Michaelmas Term, 331 Commission to Examine Witnesses, Report, 158
 Composition made before Bankruptcy, and not fully paid, Report, 268
 Contract—Nuisance—Principal and Agent, Report, 10
 Counsel's Notes on Briefs, Lord Langdale's Observations, 156
 Courvoisier, Trial of, Charge to the Grand Jury, 125
 Covenant to appear at Insurance Office, construction, Report, 47—Appeal Report, 331 Costs, Judge's certificate, Report, 361
 ——— false defence, Report, 411
 Descent, Law of, under 3 & 4 W. 4. c. 106, 79
 Detinue, Report, 220
 Devise, Reports, 267, 278, 307
 Discovery, Bill of, appeal case, Report, 166 Distress for Rent, butcher's meat, Report, 286
 Distringas, Report, 108
 Duelling, offence of—Charge of the Recorder to the Grand Jury in the Earl of Cardigan's case, 414
 EDITOR'S OBSERVATIONS upon Holmes v Coghill, defective execution of a power, 5
 ——— upon Hislop v. Metcalf, and Colegrave v. Manley—Attornies—Prosecution of suits, 6, 7
 ——— see Insolvent Debtors' Court, 29
 ——— upon the proposed removal of the Courts—Speeches of Sir Fred. Pollock and Sir Robt. Peel, 32
 ——— upon notice of dishonour of Bills of Exchange, ——— upon the liability of a father for necessary provision made for his infant son, 41
 ——— upon the Jurisdiction of the Court to order taxation of an attorney's bill against his representations, 95
 ——— on Bailments—immoderately riding a horse by which it died, 91
 ——— on the meaning of the words "dying under the age of 21 years unmarried and without lawful issue," 141
 ——— on Solicitor's lien upon papers in a cause, 155
 ——— on misstatements on fire insurance cases, 157
 ——— on the right of Auctioneers to retain from the deposit their charges for commission, duty, and costs, 233
 ——— on the arrest of a witness attending the Court, shewing the law laid down by Lords Eldon, Hardwicke, Northington, and Rosslyn, 235
 ——— upon a person practising as an Apothecary without having obtained the certificate required by the stat. 55 Geo. 3. c. 194—Leading case, 316
 ——— upon an agreement for a lease, whether to be construed as a demise, or only as a contract for a lease, 346

- Editor's Observations on the Law of Evidence—Interested witnesses, 368
- Ejectment, rule for judgment, Report, 159
- ESSAYS, ORIGINAL—see Bailments—Bills of Exchange—Marriage—Prescription Act—Tenants for Life impeachable for Waste—Small Tenements' Act
- EVIDENCE, CIRCUMSTANTIAL, case of Celia Tipples, 40
- Joint and several Promissory Note, Report, 330
- I. O. U., Report, 414
- Examiners, order appointing Common Law, 63
- Exceptions to Answer, Report, 142
- EXECUTORS' liabilities, 43
- FACTOR'S ACT—Report, 26
- False Imprisonment—Reports, 172, 190, 191, 252
- Fraud—Goods—Indictment, 88
- Gould, Trial of—charge to the Grand Jury, 125
- Husband and Wife—Witness—Report, 270
- Widows' Pensions—Law of Scotland, Report, 428
- Reports, 92, 119, 152
- Habeas Corpus—Report, 119
- Infants, Custody of—Report, 262, 292
- Insolvent Debtors' Court—RULE, when funds in Court, or monies set aside, not to appoint an Assignee, 29
- Insolvent out upon Bail and not appearing to be heard, Reports, 29, 94
- Future acquired property, Report, 125
- Overseer's Case, 189, 251
- Circuits of Commissioners—Autumn, 191
- Operation of the Act, 189, 252
- Vesting Order, Report, 251
- Allowance to Prisoners, 318
- Issues—Chancery—Report, 152
- Insurance—Misstatement—Report, 157
- JOINT STOCK BANKING COMPANIES—Observations of the Editor upon the Appeal Case in the HOUSE of LORDS—The London Joint Stock Bank v. The Bank of England, 177
- The Appeal Case, Report, 183,
- Opinion of the Judges, 203
- Meaning of the term "Manager," Report, 298
- Execution against Proprietors of Shares, Report, 329
- Necessary parties to a suit, Report, 373, 396
- Joint Stock Companies—Liability of Directors and Shareholders, Report, 253
- Blank Shares—Transfer, Report, 360
- Actions between the Members, Report, 412
- Incorporated—Mandamus, Report, 413
- Necessary parties to a suit, 428
- Judge's Order upon a Summons—Practice—Report, 46
- of the Court of Exchequer, 110
- for payment of debt—Report, 188
- Jurors Special—Challenges—Report, 237
- Lease for lives—Perpetual removal—Appeal—Report, 105
- Legacies—General and specific—Report, 311
- LETTERS to the EDITOR, by a SUBSCRIBER—Mode of measuring distances legally, 15
- by D., proposed removal of the C—31
- by ANTI-HUMBUG, on the mode of address adopted by the Judges to Prisoners—conviction, 311
- by JUSTITIA, on the justice of the sentence passed upon FROST the Chartist, 355
- Second by JUSTITIA in reply to Canidus and E. H., 357
- by AN ELECTOR—Objection to the Voter's clause in the Reform Act, 376
- by ALIQUIS—Examination of Articled Clerks, 395
- Letter from Commissioner Fane to Lord Abinger on Chancery Reform, 163
- Lex loci domicilii—Appeal—Report, 204, 214
- Libel—Duties of the Judge—Report, 142
- Limitations, Statute of—Report, 411
- London, City of—Corporation Reform Bill amending the representation, 36
- TABLE, shewing the number of Houses and amount of rateable property in the several wards. The number of Common Councilmen at present elected by each ward and the number to be elected at the next election, 37
- Lunatic, service of process upon, Report, 206
- Magistrates, Actions against, Report, 205
- Marriage—A Discussion upon Conditions annexed to Gifts or Legacies in restraint of Marriage, 341, 373
- Articles—Ultimate Limitation—Report, 138
- Act—Opinion of the Registrar General upon, 73
- Incestuous—Report, 300
- Marine Policy of Insurance, Meaning of the term "Sea Worthy"—Report, 234
- Mines—see Tenant for Life
- Mortgagee—Equitable of House and Fixtures—Report, 206
- Municipal Corporation Act—Reports, 265, 314
- Notices to Subscribers, 16, 32, 240, 320, 384, 395
- Country Subscribers, 16, 32, 176
- Correspondents, 32, 80, 96, 112, 161, 191, 208, 224, 240, 256, 288, 304, 336, 352, 368, 384, 398, 416
- Nuisance—Report, 246
- Oxford, Trial of, charge to the Grand Jury, 125
- Parliament, Administration of Justice Bill, 41, 36, 183
- Postage Acts, 73
- Marriage Act, 73
- Copyhold Enfranchisement, 183
- Parent and Child, Maintenance, Report, 45
- Partnership, Injunction, Report, 219
- PATENT, Injunction, Practice, Report, 22
- Invention, Report, 222
- Personal Estate, Canons for division of Intestates, 160
- Pleadings, Penalties, Report, 142
- Profert, Report, 382
- Police, Metropolitan, Extension of, Order in Council, 410
- Policemen, Rewards to, Report, 25
- See REWARDS

STAGE NEW ACTS—Treasury orders that came into operation May 6, 12 — STAMPS—Order, April 20, 30, 31
 — Labels, 57
 — Returns, 1839 and 1840, Jan. to June, 272

— Opinion of Sir F. Pollock as to sending Ship Letters by Vessels outwards, 343 vers, Defective execution of—Rule perfectly settled, 5

scription Act, c. & 3 W. 4, c. 71—ORIGINAL ESSAY upon, 148, 180
 cipal and Surety, Bankruptcy, Report, 57 over for debt and Gaoler, Escape, Report, 267

Terms—

Oyer of Instruments—What is the import of the term Oyer? In what cases, and how is it demandable? In what cases will an inspection of Instruments be granted to a Plaintiff, and in what Cases to a Defendant? 3

Answer, 227

Landlord and Tenant—Re-entry—What are the necessary formalities required by the Common Law to enable a Lessor to re-enter for breach of the proviso for re-entry or non-payment of rent? Suppose the condition to be that if the rent shall be in arrear for 21 days after any of the specified days of payment, 20

Answer, 115

Bankruptcy—Joint and separate Fiats—In what cases may a joint fiat be sued out against all or some of the members of a firm, or a separate fiat against one or each of them? and what debts may be admitted to proof under each of such fiats? 35

Answer, 186

CONTRACTS—VENDOR and PURCHASER—In what cases will equity permit the contracting parties to make time the essence of a contract? 51

Answer, 244, 259

TRUSTS—What trusts arise by operation of Law? 69

Answer

FIXTURES—What constitutes a Fixture?—Shew the right to Fixtures as between Landlord and Tenant—Trade Fixtures and Ornamental Fixtures. What effect has the bankruptcy of the tenant on the tenant right? 83

Answer, 290, 308, 323

POSSESSIO FRATRIS—describe it, 100

Answer, 148

NEC TEMPUS NEC LOCUS OCCURRIT REGI—Illustrate this maxim, 115

Answer

PRIVATE NUISANCES—What Acts amount to Private Nuisances? 132

Answer, 356, 393

1. CRIMINAL LAW—Construe Malice aforethought to sustain an Indictment for Murder, 148

Answer

2. INTERESSE TERMINI—What is it?

Answer, 276, 339

3. DEVASTAVIT—What shall not amount to Devastavit, 178

Answer

4. TITLE DEEDS—Where several Estates are held under the same Title, in what cases will equity compel the owner of Title Deeds to produce them to other persons? In what cases will their production be compelled in adverse suits and actions? 106

Answer

Problems—

14. LESSOR and LESSEE. — COVENANTS. — WAIVER.—What amounts to a WAIVER of a breach of contract? 212

Answer, 371, 372

15. EJECTMENT—For what will this action lie? 227

Answer, 405, 417

16. COVENANTS PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES —How are EXECUTORS or ADMINISTRATORS affected by covenants made by or in favour of their testators or intestates? 244

Answer

17. COMMON LAW—Shew the line drawn by the law between actions on the case and actions of trespass? 259

Answer

18. BANKRUPTCY — CREDITORS' ASSIGNEES —What are their rights, duties, and liabilities? 276

Answer.

19. What is an EXECUTORY DEVISE? 290

Answer, 401

20. REPLEVIN—For what does it lie? What are the different sorts? By and against whom does it lie? 308

Answer

21. VENDOR and PURCHASER—What amounts to notice of claims and incumbrances—taking for granted that there is no difference between actual and constructive notice in its consequences? 323

Answer

22. LANDLORD and TENANT — TIMBER and TREES—What is meant by the term Timber? What are the implied rights of Landlord and Tenant? What acts of a Tenant amount to waste? What construction has been put upon Covenants relating to Trees? 339

Answer

23. SECURITY for COSTS at COMMON LAW—In what cases will proceedings be stayed until a plaintiff give security for costs? 356

Answer, 394, 395

24. VENDOR and PURCHASER—Shew the cases in which the right to Rescind a Contract arises? 371

Answer

25. DEVISES—What is the law upon this subject, as it applies to Wills executed upon or subsequently to the 1st of January, 1838? 393

Answer

26. VENDOR and PURCHASER—In what cases will a Court of Equity decree a specific performance of an agreement? First, with respect to the Vendor. Secondly, with respect to the agreement itself. 405

Answer

27. VENDOR and PURCHASER—In what case will Equity enforce the specific performance of a Contract, with a compensation for misdescription, and where not? 425

Answer

ANSWERS to PROBLEMS in Vol. II.

Problem 8, 132

ANSWERS to PROBLEMS in Vol. III.

Problem xx. 3, 163

Problem xxi. 4

Problem xxii. 37

Problem xxiii. 20

Problem xxiv. 178

Problem xxv. 35, 51, 52, 69, 71, 83, 85, 100

Problem xxvi. 212

Queen, The—Attempt to Assassinate—Address of Parliament, 97 Queen's Counsel—New Questions put by the EXAMINERS to ARTICLED CLERKS—Easter Term, 87
 — Trinity Term, 116

Records, Public—Rules made by the Master of the Rolls, 255

Requests—Court of—Reduction of Debt, Report, 286

Replevin, Report, 109

REWARDS for Informations, Report, 28—see POLICEMEN

Review of New Books:—

A Chart, shewing the Descent of Estates and Inheritance in Fee Simple in Possession, Freehold, Copyhold, in Remainder, Reversion, or by Custom upon Deaths, after the 1st day of Jan. 1834, under the Statute 3 & 4 W. 4. c. 106, by W. B. D. Gent., one, &c. 79

Report of the BRAINTREE CHURCH-RATE CASE —(Velej & Joslin v. Burder) to which is appended Gaudern v. Silby. Second edition, by Cuthbert William Johnson, Esq., of Gray's Inn, one of the Counsel in the cause, 111

A LAW GRAMMAR, or RUDIMENTS of the LAW, by Giles Jacob, author of the LAW DICTIONARY; eighth edition, greatly enlarged and carefully revised, by John Hargrave, Esq., of the Inner Temple, 128

A CHART, shewing the Distribution of the Personal Estate of an Intestate, under 22 & 23 Charles II. c. 10, and 29 Charles II. c. 30; by W. B. D., Gent., one, &c. 160

Adventures of an Attorney in Search of Practice, or a Delineation of Professional Life; second edition, 394

Rule Nisi, shewing cause against, Practice, 304

Serjeants-at-Law—Promotions, 138

Separate Use—Reports, 60, 344

Settlement—Limitations, Report, 398

Sheriffs' Poundage, Report, 171

Ship Brokers—Freight, Report, 173

Shipping—Collision, Report, 172

Shopkeepers—Shutter Apertures, Report, 158

Shopkeepers—negligence of, in exposing Goods, Report, 345

Sittings in and after Michaelmas Term, 430

Spoiled Stamps—Order for allowance in the Country, 368

Stock-brokers and Jobbers, and Principal, Report, 280

Stock in Trade—Taxation of, Report of Poor Law Commissioners, 202

Subpoena, duces tecum, Report, 123

Supersedeas—Bankruptcy, Report, 92, 110

Statutes, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 74—Small Tenements, 180

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 16—Indemnity to Articled Clerks, Solicitors, &c. 223

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24—Frivolous Suits, 179

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26—Evidence, 202

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 55—Settled Estates, drainage, 431

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 72—Marriages, 396

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82—Abolishing Arrest on Mesne process Amendment, 287

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 83—Usury

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 94—Administration of Justice in Chancery, 270

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 96—Postage, 304, 318, 331, 349, 363, 376

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97—Railways, 409

— 3 & 4 Vict. c. 111—Joint Stock Banking Companies, 396

— 4 Vict. c. 52—Regency, 239

TENANTS for LIFE impeachable for Waste—ESSAY on his right to work open Mines, and Lease them under the usual power of Leasing 24

— digging for Clay to make Bricks—Injunction, Report, 23

Tenements Act (Small)—a Discussion of this Act 276

Tithes—rating them to the Poor-rate—Letter from the Secretary to the Poor Law Commissioners 245

Undertakers' Charges—Report, 27

Vendor and Purchaser—Reports

— Specific performance, 107

— Mistake, 167

— Specific performance, 168

— Auctioneers, Deposit, 230

— Conditions of Sale, Fraud, 358

— Principal and Agent, 381

— Breach of Contract—Interest, 4

Warrant of Attorney, Execution of, Report, 78, 30

— Scire facias, Report, 249

Warranty—Breach of, Report, 171

Way—Right of, construction of 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 7 s. 2, Report, 108

WILL—Bequest, Construction, Report, 41, 75, 100

— Limitation—dying without Issue, Report, 296

— New Will Act, Reports, 61, 94, 110, 131, 143, 223, 251, 363

Writ of Error coram vobis—Supersedeas, Report, 92

Writs of Copies—Alteration, Report, 192

Writs—New—Variation in, Report, 189

Just Published, 2nd Edit. price £1. 1s. cloth bds.
COMMENTARIES on the CONSTITUTION and LAWS of ENGLAND, incorporated with the Political Text of J. L. DE LOLME, LL.D. Advocate, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S. of the Middle Temple, Second Edition.

This work contains the entire NEW LEGAL and POLITICAL CONSTITUTION of the Country, revised and corrected to the present time. The Appendix contains all the new Real Property Statutes.

The First Edition was dedicated and presented to her Majesty by her Majesty's special command, and was also honoured with the notice and approval of Foreign Sovereigns and the principal Nobility and Gentry of this country.

Just Published,
PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING adapted to the present state of the Law. Illustrated with Notes, Practical and Critical, by THOMAS GEORGE WESTERN, Esq. F. R. A. S. of the Middle Temple, Author of "The Commentaries on the Constitution and Laws of England," dedicated by command to her Majesty the Queen. In 4 vols.

This Work contains NEW FORMS of Instruments to meet the existing state of the Laws.

JOHN RICHARDS & Co. 194, Fleet Street.

The Legal Guide.

VOL. IV.]

SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1840.

[No. 1.
Price Sixpence.

Contents.

ESSAY ON THE ENGLISH LAW OF BAILMENTS.

PROBLEM 1. Vol. 4.—OYER of INSTRUMENTS.—
What is the import of the term Oyer?—In what cases, and how is it demandable?—In what cases will an inspection of Instruments be granted to a plaintiff, and in what cases to a defendant?

ANSWER TO PROBLEM 20, Vol. 3.—The different Acts of Bankruptcy, by ALIQUIS.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM 21, Vol. 3.—Defective execution of Powers, by R. J. T.

Editor's observations upon Sir William Grant's opinion in Holmes v. Coghill, shewing the rule perfectly settled

LAW REPORTS.

CHANCERY.

Went v. Barter—Solicitors in Chancery—10th Order. Lien upon papers

Editor's observations upon LORD COTTENHAM'S opinion in Hidlop v. Metcalfe, and upon the leading case Colegrave v. Manley, by LORD ELDON

1

3

ib.

4

5

6

CHANCERY.

Re Thomas Wood, a Country Solicitor, and Messrs.
White and Whitmore, his London Agents—Jurisdiction of the Court to tax Agents' Bills of Costs.

7

EXCHEQUER.

Legg v. Evans and another—BAILMENT Lien on Goods—liability of the lien to execution issued against the Bailee

9

Cornfoot v. Fowke. Bart. Contract—Nuisance—Principal and Agent—Judgment of the Court

10

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

MURDER—Mr. Baron Alderson's Charge to the Jury in the case of Catherine Michael 11

NEW POSTAGE.

All the Treasury Orders that come into operation next Wednesday, May 6

12

REMOVAL OF THE COURTS.—Petition of the London Solicitors

13

Letter to the Editor by "a Subscriber," and Reply
Notice to Subscribers

16

Notice to Country Subscribers—reduction of the price of the COUNTRY EDITION OF THIS PAPER

ib.

ESSAY III.

ON THE ENGLISH LAW OF BAILMENTS.

(Continued from Vol. III. page 403.)

As to the sixth sort of bailment, it is to be taken, that the bailee is to have no reward for his pains, but yet that by his ill management the goods are spoiled. Secondly, it is to be understood that there was neglect in the management. But thirdly, it had appeared that the mischief happened by any person that met the cart in the way, the bailee had not been chargeable.
If a drunken man had come by in the nights, and had pierced the cask of brandy;
in this case the defendant had not been answerable for it, because he was to have nothing for his pains. Then the bailee being undertaken to manage the goods, and having managed them ill, and so by his neglect a damage has happened to the bailor, which is the case in question, what will you call this? In Bracton, lib. 3, 100, it is called mandatum. It is an obligation which arises ex mandato. It is what we call in English an acting by commission. And if a man acts by commission for another gratis, and in the executing his commission behaves himself negligently, he is answerable. Vin- nicius, in his Commentaries upon Justinian, lib. 3, tit. 27, 684, defines mandatum to be contractus quo aliquid gratuito gerendum committitur et accipitur. This undertaking obliges the undertaker to a diligent management. Bracton, ubi supra, says, "Contra- hitur etiam obligatio non solum scripto et verbis, sed et consensu, sicut in contractibus bonæ fidei; ut in emptionibus, venditionibus, locationibus, conductionibus, societatibus, et mandatis." I do not find this word in any other author of our law, besides in this place in Bracton, which is a full authority, if it be not thought too old. But it is supported by good reason and authority.

The reasons are, first, because in such a case, a neglect is a deceit to the bailor. For when he entrusts the bailee upon his undertaking to be careful, he has put a fraud upon the plaintiff by being negligent, his pretence of care being the persuasion that induced the plaintiff to trust him. And a breach of a trust undertaken voluntarily will be a good ground for an action. 1 Roll. Abr. 10, 2 Hen. 7. 11. a strong case to this matter. There the case was an action against a man, who had undertaken to keep an hundred sheep, for letting them be drowned by his default. And there the reason of the judgment is given, because when the party has taken upon him to keep the sheep, and after suffers them to perish in his default; inasmuch as he has taken and executed his bargain, and has them in his custody, if, after, he does not look to them, an action lies. For here is his own act, viz.—his agreement and promise, and that after broke of his side, that shall give a sufficient cause of action.

But secondly, it is objected, that there is no consideration to ground this promise upon, and therefore the undertaking is but nudum pactum. But to this I answer, that the owner's trusting him with the goods is a sufficient consideration to oblige him to a careful management. Indeed if the agreement had been executory, to carry these brandies from the one place to the other such a day, the defendant had not been bound to carry them. But this is a different case, for assumpsit does not only signify a future agreement, but in such a case as this, it signifies an actual entry upon the thing, and taking the trust upon himself. And if a man (a) will do that, and miscarries in the performance of his trust, an action will be against him for that, though nobody could have compelled him to do the thing. The 19 Hen. 6, 49, and the other cases cited by my brothers, show that this is the difference. But in the 11 Hen. 4, 33. this difference is clearly put, and that is the only case concerning this matter which has not been cited by my brothers. There the action was brought against a carpenter, for that he had undertaken to build the plaintiff a house within such a time, and had not done it, and it was adjudged the action would not lie. But there the question was put to the Court,—What if he had built the house unskillfully?—And it is agreed in that case an action would have lain. There has been a question made, if I deliver goods to A, and in consideration thereof he promise to re-deliver them, if an action will lie for not re-delivering them, and in Yelv. 4, judgment was given that the action would lie. But that judgment was afterwards reversed; and, according to that reversal, there was judgment afterwards entered for the defendant in the like case.—Yelv. 128. But those cases were grumbled at; and the reversal of that judgment, in Yelv. 4, was said by the Judges to be a bad resolution; and the contrary to that reversal was afterwards most solemnly adjudged in 2 Cro. 667. Tr. 21 Jac. 1, in the King's Bench, and that judgment affirmed upon writ of error. And yet there is no benefit to the defendant, nor no consideration in that case, but the having the money in his possession and being trusted with it, and yet that was held to be a good consideration. And a bare being trusted with another man's goods must be taken to be a sufficient consideration, if the bailee once enter upon the trust, and take the goods into his possession. The declaration in the case of Mors v. Sear was drawn by the greatest drawer in England in that time; and in that declaration it was always in all such cases, it was thought most prudent to put in, that a reward was to be paid for the carriage. And so it has been usual to put it in the writ where the writ is by original.

It is said that this case of Coggs v. Bernard is one of the most celebrated ever decided in Westminster Hall, and the judge

(a) Just. Inst. lib. 3, tit. 27, text 11.

ment of Lord Holt, which we have now given, contains the first well-ordered exposition of the English Law of Bailments, which distributes into the following classes:—

1. Depositum; or a naked bailment of goods, to be kept for the use of the bailor.
2. Commodatum.—Where goods or chattels that are useful, are lent to the bailee gratis to be used by him.
3. Locatio rei.—Where goods are lent to the bailee, to be used by him for hire.
4. Vadium.—Pawn.
5. Locatio operis faciendi.—Where goods are delivered to be carried, or something is to be done about them, for a reward to be paid to the bailee.
6. Mandatum.—A delivery of goods to somebody, who is to carry them, or do something about them, gratis.

SIR WILLIAM JONES raised an objection to the distribution (b), but it is considered at this day that Lord Holt's classification is the correct one. The whole of the divisions are borrowed from the Civil Law.

(To be continued.)

PROBLEM I.—VOL. IV.

OYER OF INSTRUMENTS.

What is the import of the term Oyer? In what cases, and how is it demandable? In what cases will an inspection of Instruments be granted to a plaintiff, and in what cases to a defendant?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

ANSWER TO PROBLEM XX. VOL. 3.

BANKRUPTCY.

What are the different Acts of Bankruptcy? An act of bankruptcy may be defined as being anything which a trader does to defraud his creditors. Acts of bankruptcy are very numerous, the first and foremost is departing the realm. This must be done with intent to defraud or to delay his creditors, if it appears that there was no such intention, it will not be a departure within the meaning of the statute, Fowler v. Paget, 1 R. 509.

2d. Being out of the realm shall remain out of the realm. This is a provision introduced by the statute, 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, and was certainly very requisite, as it removes all doubts that were formerly entertained with regard to the first act of bankruptcy. As the law stood before this present act, if the trader had gone abroad without the intent to delay his creditors, but having when abroad discovered the embarrassed state of his affairs, had solemnly announced his determination never to return to England, this was not an act of bankruptcy. At present, if the intent to delay can be ascertained, either in the departing from the realm or in the remaining abroad, an act of bankruptcy will be proved.

3rd. Departing from his dwelling-house.—Such departure must be with intent to defraud and delay his creditors, for the departure with an intent to delay, without an actual delay of some creditors, has been held insufficient,—Str. 803

4th. Voluntary arrest. This was introduced by the 13th Elizabeth, c. 13, s. 1, and the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2. It is immaterial if this be for a fictitious debt or a just one, so that if a man suffers himself to be arrested for a just debt when he has money sufficient to pay it, chose rather to go to prison for the purpose of forcing his creditors into a composition, it was holden an act of bankruptcy,—Ex parte Barton, 7 Vin. Ab. 61.

5th. Suffering outlawry. The statutes last mentioned were also the means of introducing this.—An outlawry suffered without the intent mentioned in the statute, is not an act of bankruptcy, Radford v. Bloodworth.(a) It was formerly laid down, that if the outlawry be reversed before the commission issue, or for default of proclamation after the commission, that it will not be an act of bankruptcy—but see Co. B.L. 96,—An outlawry in Ireland will not make a man a bankrupt in England.

6th. Procuring his goods, money, or chattels, to be attached, sequestered, or taken in execution. So much of this act of bankruptcy as relates to attachment and sequestration was introduced by the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2. It was contended that a fraudulent execution was within those words, but the Court decided in the negative, (b) Harman v. Spottiswoode.(c) This defect is now supplied by the new statute.

7th. To make, or cause to be made, either within the United Realm or elsewhere, any fraudulent grant or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods, or chattels.

8th. To make, or cause to be made any fraudulent gift, delivery, or transfer of any of his goods or chattels.

(a) 1 Lev. 12. The outlawry must be in England or Wales.—EDITOR.

(b) Clavey v. Hayley, Cowp. 427.—ED.

(c) Cooke.—ED.

(b) Treatise on Bailments.

The former of these is from the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2. It has been altered by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, inasmuch as deeds executed abroad are now made acts of bankruptcy. The latter owes its origin to the same statute, and comprises those assignments which not being in themselves fraudulent or void when made by a person not a trader, are considered when made by a trader to be a fraud upon the policy of the bankrupt law. Both the grant and assignment must be by deed.

9th. Fraudulent surrender of copyhold lands, and tenements. This owes its origin to Lord Henley, who introduced it in his statute to remedy the defect which Lord Thurlow considered to exist in the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15. He (Lord Thurlow) thought that copyhold could not be taken in execution, and that the statute in speaking of an intent to defraud creditors, meant not an intent to defraud creditors under a commission, but creditors where a commission does not issue.

10th. Lying in prison for debt for six months was made an act of bankruptcy by the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, that period was afterwards reduced to two months by the 21 Jac. 1.—The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, make a still farther reduction to 21 days.

11th. Escape out of prison. The 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 2, made this an act of bankruptcy. The original words have been altered, that statute requiring that the debt for which the trader was arrested should be of the amount of £100., by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, it is immaterial what the amount of debt is.

12th. Declaration of insolvency filed at the bankruptcy office. The object of this provision which was introduced by Lord Henley into the bankrupt law, is to enable the honest trader, who believes himself insolvent, or who has not the present means of paying his debts, to effect an equal distribution of his property among his creditors. The 6th section of the new act directs that if the trader shall file such declaration in writing, attested by an attorney, in the bankrupt office, the secretary or his deputy shall sign a memorandum that such declaration has been filed, which shall be authority to the printer of the Gazette, to insert an advertisement of such declaration. The declaration, after the advertisement is inserted, is an act of bankruptcy from the time of filing.

13th. Compounding with petitioning creditor. This was first made an act of bankruptcy by the 24th section of the 5 Geo. 2. The clause was very obscurely penned, and besides giving room for great doubts, did not fully reach the evil it was intended to repress. By the 8th section of the present act,—If a trader pay to the person striking the docket, money, or deliver satisfaction or security for his debt, whereby such person is more in the pound than the other creditors, such payment, satisfaction, or security for payment, is an act of bankruptcy. If a commission shall have issued, the Chancellor may either declare it valid, and order it to be proceeded with, or may direct it to be superseded and a new one issued. The creditor compounding shall forfeit his whole debt, and also repay the consideration he received.

“ALIIQUIS.”

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE. ANSWER TO PROBLEM XXI. VOL. I.

POWERS.

In what cases will a Defective Execution of Power be supported?

In modern times it has been contended that whatever is an equitable ought to be a legal execution of a power (Zouch v. Woolston, Burr, 1136), but which doctrine is at the present day completely exploded, as equity alone will relieve against a defective execution of a power and that only where there is a meritorious consideration in the person applying for the aid of the Court. 2 H. Blackst. 139.

In Chapman v. Gibson, 3 Bro. C. C. 217 Ves. Jr. 297, Lord Alvanley laid it down that the execution of a power and a surrender of a copyhold go hand in hand; proceeding on the same ground, consequently, the same relief is to be granted in cases of a defective execution of a power and of the grant of a surrender of a copyhold.

Equity always aids a defective execution of a power voluntarily executed in favour of a wife or child, as depending upon natural obligation.

The rule is now settled (I believe), that if there be a good consideration, the party to whom the estate is not permitted to rely on the defect, but the Court will effectuate the intention of the settlor; and, speaking generally, this equity is enforced, not against the settlor himself, but in his favour, that is, in the execution of his intention, and at the expense of a third party.

Thus, then, the jurisdiction stands, and I now endeavour to point out what amount of such a consideration as will enable equity to interpose its aid in favour of a defective execution of a power.

The aid of equity then will be given to a purchaser, which term includes a mortgagee or lessee (Fothergill v. Fothergill, 2 Freem. & Cowp. 267, Reid v. Shergold, 10 Ves. 370, Jennings v. Moore, 2 Vern. 609), and to a creditor (Birley v. Eley, 2 Bro. C. C. 2 Dick. 698.)

The like aid will be afforded to a wife (Clifford v. Earl of Burlington, 2 Vern. 261) and to a legitimate child (Sarah v. Lady Mordaunt, 10 Ves. 241).

tray, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 166), for wives and children are in some degree considered as creditors by nature, Barnard C. C. 107; and although to constitute a valuable consideration for a settlement on a wife or child, it must be made before marriage, yet the marriage and blood are meritorious considerations, and claim the aid of a Court of Equity in support of a defective execution of a power in their favour (Hervey v. Hervey, 1 Atk. 561), although the power was executed after marriage.

The like equity is extended to a charity. Lord LOTHINGTON laid it down that the uniform rule of Court before, at, and after the statute of Elizabeth, was, where the uses are charitable, and the person has in himself full power to convey, to aid a defective conveyance to such uses (Attorney General v. Tancred, 1 Eden, 10; Attorney General v. Sibthorpe, 2 Russ. and Myl. 107.)

The character of purchaser, wife, creditor, child, must be borne by the party claiming relief, in relation to the donee of the power, and not by the person creating the power. Lord Hardwicke indeed supported a defective execution of a power by a wife, for the payment of her deceased husband's debts as well as her own (Wilkie v. Holmes, 9 Mod. 465; 1 Dick. 165). The power was created by their marriage settlement, and the survivor of them by will to raise a sum of money for the purpose of paying the debts of the husband and wife, or either of them, or making a provision for the younger children of the marriage. He said it had been objected that the debts which were to be paid by means of the power were the debts of the husband, whereas the estate was originally the wife's; but those debts were expressly provided for by the deed of settlement. This seems to introduce a new principle. If the power had been general, the execution of it in favour of her husband's creditors, if defective, could not have been supported in equity; for there was no contract or consideration, and the creditors had no claim upon the wife. If the naming of the object or party in the power varies the case, then the principle of the rule is not followed. Unless the power would authorize the appointment if duly made, no defect can be aided. (1)

R. J. T.

(1) SIR W. GRANT, in Holmes v. Coghill, Ves. Jun. 506, said—It is difficult to discover a sound principle for the authority this Court assumes for aiding a defective execution in certain cases. If the intention of the party possessing the power is to be regarded, and not the interest of the party to be affected by the execution, that intention ought to be executed wherever it is manifested; for the owner of the estate has nothing to do with the purpose. But if the interest of the party to be affected by the execution is to be regarded, why in any case exercise the power, except in the form and manner prescribed? In the sort of equity upon this subject, there is some want of equality. But the rule is perfectly settled: and though, perhaps, with some violation of principle, with no practical inconvenience.

EDITOR.

Law Reports.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

BENNETT v. BAXTER.

SOLICITORS.—The 56th Order. A Solicitor compelled under this order to withdraw from the prosecution of a Decree. Whether he shall be also compelled to give up the papers to the new Solicitor.

Mr. Girdlestone, in this case, moved upon the 56th order, which directs that where the party actually prosecuting a decree or order does not proceed before the Master with due diligence, then the Master shall be at liberty, upon the application of any other person interested, either as a party to the suit, or as one who has come in and established his claim before the Master under the decree or order, to commit to him the prosecution of the said decree or order; and from thenceforth, neither the party making default nor his solicitor shall be at liberty to attend the Master as the prosecutor of the said decree or order. The present was a creditor's suit, and the motion was by a creditor, who had been appointed to manage the suit, that he might be at liberty to inspect all papers, &c., in the possession of the former solicitor of the plaintiff, who the Master had removed from the management of the suit.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR said—It is admitted the point has never occurred before. I have already held, in Heslop v. Metcalfe, that a solicitor who voluntarily removes himself from a cause shall give up the papers to his client's new solicitor, without prejudice to his own lien for costs, so as to enable the new solicitor to carry on the suit; and that decision has been confirmed by the Lord Chancellor, (a) and I cannot in principle see any difference between that case and

(a) 3 Myl. and Craig, 183.

the present, where the solicitor has, by his own voluntary omissions, been, in effect, compelled by the court to withdraw from the prosecution of the decree. A solicitor in such circumstances ought not to be suffered to add to the expenses of the suit by rendering it necessary to take copies de novo of the proceedings.

Order made as prayed.

LORD COTTENHAM, C., in giving judgment in that case, adopted the rule laid down by LORD ELDON, in Colegrave v. Manley, (1. Turn. and Russ. 400.) who said, "Where the solicitor discharges himself, the rule is quite different from what it is where the solicitor is discharged by the client;" and afterwards he adds:—"So far as the use of papers is concerned, the suitor, when his solicitor discharges himself, must have his business conducted with as much ease and celerity, and at as little expense, as if the connection of solicitor and client had not been dissolved."

LORD COTTENHAM said it is true that in several preceding cases, where the solicitor had discharged himself, orders were made, giving to the client the right of inspection only; but it cannot be supposed that Lord Eldon, who, with all his experience, had decided Colegrave v. Manley, in the year 1823, was not acquainted with the prior authorities. In Creswell v. Byron, (14 Ves. 271.) his Lordship intimates, in the form of a doubt, his opinion; that a solicitor discharging himself cannot claim a lien; an expression which must be understood as meaning, not that the solicitor loses the lien altogether, but that he cannot set it up so as to prevent the client from proceeding in the cause. And his Lordship's language in Lord v. Wormleighton (Jac. 580.) is to the same effect.

Undoubtedly, that doctrine may expose a solicitor to very great inconvenience and hardship if, after embarking in a cause, he finds that he cannot get the necessary funds wherewith to carry it on. But, on the other hand, extreme hardship might arise to the client if—to take the case, which is not uncommon in the smaller practice in the country—a solicitor, who finds a poor man having a good claim, and having but a small sum of money at his command, may go on until that fund is exhausted, and then, refusing to proceed further, may hang up the cause by withholding the papers in his hands. That would be a great grievance and means of oppression to a poor client, who, with the clearest right in the world, might still be without the means of employing another solicitor. The rule of the Court must be adapted to every case that may occur, and be calculated to protect suitors against such conduct. Now, a solicitor, if he knows that he must trust to the result of the cause for his remuneration, will, of course, be disposed to proceed with it in such a way as, while it promotes the interest of his client, is most likely to render his lien available. I have no doubt, therefore, that the existence of the lien, while it is a great protection to the solicitor against his client, is also a great benefit to the client; but the benefit would be entirely lost if the solicitor might stop short in the middle of the suit, and insist upon retaining the papers, because then no other solicitor could take up and carry on the cause.

It is admitted that, when the solicitor discharges himself, the client and his new solicitor shall, at all events, have free access to inspect and copy the papers at the office of the former solicitor. The mere giving of access, however, is, nine times out of ten, of no practical value; for if the papers are to remain, notwithstanding, in the custody of the solicitor who has discharged himself, it is obvious that they cannot be made use of in the further progress of the suit. The result would be, that the client is to be put to the expense of fresh copies, that fresh briefs must be prepared for counsel; in short, that all the costs arising from making copies of the papers and documents to be used in the

ROLLS' COURT—April 25.

In RE of THOMAS WOOD, a Country Solicitor, and Messrs. WHITE AND WHITMORE, his Town Agents.

BILLS of COSTS of LONDON AGENTS to COUNTRY ATTORNIES.—Whether the Court has jurisdiction to order their taxation. (a)

This petition was presented by Thomas Wood, of Wolverhampton, in the county of Stafford, solicitor, against his late London Agents, Messrs. White and Whitmore, praying that their bills of fees and disbursements might be taxed by the master, and that they might be examined on interrogatories, and account, on oath, for all monies received, and give credit for two sums of £15. and £58. in such accounts, and also give up, on oath, all deeds, with papers and writings, books of account, and vouchers, and also for a taxation of all costs between the petitioner and Thomas White.

Mr. Stuart, for the petition, said the petitioner was admitted a solicitor in 1797, and employed Mr. Price as his agent, who afterwards took into partnership Mr. Williams and Mr. White. Williams died in 1825, Price in 1828, and White became partner with Whitmore. They all successively were employed by Wood as his London agents. They delivered their bills of fees and disbursements from year to year, and Wood paid them various sums upon account, but there was no settlement between them. In Trinity vacation, 1838, White and Whitmore delivered their bills of costs, and claimed a balance of £692. 6s 11d., and White also claimed on his separate account £48. 6s 7d., and actions at law were commenced to recover these sums. On December 19, 1838, Wood promised to give notes for both sums with interest, and to give a cognovit when the notes should become due, and White then advanced £10. for Wood's certificate for that year. White drew up the form of a cognovit, which Wood declined signing on account of the time mentioned in it for entering up judgment. White assured Wood that his bills being the bills of an agent could not be taxed, and always said taxation was out of the question. Wood in January, 1839, returned to London, and notices of trial were given, and he agreed to give judgment in the action, but White added interest on both sums. Immediate execution was no part of the agreement. Wood consented to give judgment on the condition that all errors and omissions should be open to objection. He was urged to place in the hands of White and Whitmore a certain deed relating to property called "Key Downton" property. At a meeting at White's house in cause must be incurred over again, and so the client is to be greatly damnified.

(a) See In re Board and Messrs. Morris & Verbeke, ante pp. 340. 391.

That is entirely inconsistent with the dictum of Lord Eldon, that the suitor must have his business conducted with as much ease and celerity, and at as little expense, as if the connection had not been dissolved.

On the other hand, if all that expense be, in fact, incurred by the client, what is the use of the solicitor's lien? There may, indeed, be original papers; but supposing them, as here, to be papers in the cause, the effect of the rule would only be to impose a very great hardship on the client, without any benefit to the solicitor. But if the expense is to operate so as to compel him either to pay the solicitor's bill than to go to the expense of fresh copies, the admission of access and inspection would be nugatory, and of no value. Now that a suitor, whose solicitor withdraws himself from the further conduct of a cause, shall be permitted to have the free use of the papers held by that solicitor, so far as they may be required in the prosecution of the cause, is quite consistent with the observations of Lord Eldon, in Commerell v. Poynton, (1 Swanst. 1.) and Lord v. Wormleighton. Those observations, coupled with the express decision to that effect in Colegrave v. Manley, leave no doubt in my mind as to what Lord Eldon considered to be the rule in such cases, and I entirely concur in the propriety of that rule.

I think the principle should be, that the solicitor claiming the lien should have every security not inconsistent with the progress of the cause. But it is clear that there will neither be, to use the expression of Lord Eldon, the same ease and celerity, nor as little expense, in the conduct of it, if the new solicitor is merely to have access to the papers, as where they are placed in his hands, upon his undertaking to restore them after the immediate purposes of the production have been served. (S. C. 3 Myl. & Cr. 187.)

EDITOR.

January last, Wood stipulated for investigation of the bills of costs. White proposed that Wood should make an assignment of his property in trust for payment of his debts, which Wood refused. On the 21st of January his (Wood's) goods were taken in execution under a fi. fa. issued upon the judgment entered up, and he was afterwards committed to the Fleet for contempt of Court. Another bill of costs to the amount of £212. 10s. was afterwards sent in, and there was a new action and claim of a further balance of £77. Wood was within the walls of the Fleet for contempt of the Court of Common Pleas. A sum of 15 guineas for iron hurdles paid for by him, and £58. 14s. 11d. received out of court, ought to be credited to his account. He submitted that White and Whitmore's bills of costs, although they were agents' bills, were taxable, and he denied there had been any such settlement of accounts as to preclude Wood from opening them.

Mr. Pemberton.—On a petition to open an account for errors, the errors should be stated in the petition and proved by affidavit.

Lord LANGDALE.—The petition is not to surcharge and falsify, but generally to open. There is no allegation of errors in the petition.

Mr. Stuart.—It is alleged generally that there are improper charges.

Lord LANGDALE.—You cannot charge in the petition certain errors, and then, failing in the proof, allege others in the affidavit.

Mr. Stuart.—The petition then prayed for the delivery up to Wood of deeds and documents. The petitioner required certain papers to enable him to make out his bill of costs against a Mr. Clare. He was entitled to have all his papers delivered up to him upon oath by the respondents, who had an immense number of them. Two grounds were alleged by White and Whitmore that the bills were not taxable—they were agents' bills, and they were delivered half-yearly, and no objection ever made to them. The delivery of bills of costs and part payment was no acquiescence in those bills; and as to the other point, courts of equity, in opposition to those of common law, had decided that agents' bills were taxable.

Mr. Pemberton, for the London Agents, said the petition had many different objects: first, a general taxation of all the bills of White and Whitmore from 1826, when they became partners; then, that all deeds and papers in their possession belonging to Wood might be delivered up; and that two sums alleged to be improperly omitted might be included in the account. With respect to the taxation of agents' bills, his Lordship would adhere to authorities, and not interfere with the rules of common law. He would not entertain such a jurisdiction as was attempted to be imposed upon him; it would be to entertain a writ of error from the Court of Common Pleas to the Court of Chancery. Here were bills of costs which had been delivered by the agent to his solicitor: after those bills had been delivered for years, after application made month after month, year after year, without success, for payment, an action was brought in the Common Pleas, and an application was then made for a taxation, but the rule nisi was abandoned because it was found against the practice of the Court of Common Pleas to allow such bill to be the subject of taxation. "Weymouth v. Knipe," (b) decided that they had no power to refer agents' bills to the prothonotary to be taxed. This agency having gone on from 1797 to 1837, in 1838 actions were brought in the Common Pleas to recover the balance, and Wood applied to tax the bills, but abandoned his rule. The application to this Court to tax the bills, the amount of which had been increased, was, in reality, an appeal from the Common Pleas to Chancery. He did not argue that the Court might not interfere upon equitable principles, but it would not interfere by petition in a matter in which each court was of competent jurisdiction. Mr. Pemberton then went generally through the accounts, the charges of interest, &c., to show that there was no ground for the petition.

Lord LANGDALE said, the petition prayed that the bills of costs of the petitioner's agents might be taxed, that they might be examined upon interrogatories, and account upon oath, and that the petitioner might have credit for two particular sums. Wood had for many years practised as an attorney in the country. He considered the conclusion he came to on a former occasion ought to be adhered to, and that the Court had authority to tax the bills of a London agent with his principal in the country. It was to be regretted that courts of law had come to a different conclusion. He did not depart from the jurisdiction this Court had exercised. He regretted it had not been finally determined; but until it was, he should adhere to the rule that the Court had the authority. Both White and Whitmore regularly, from half-year to half-year, sent their bills of costs to Wood in the country; they were duly received by him, and he stated (what was very extraordinary), that although they were regularly delivered for 13 years, yet he never examined, never looked at them. If so, he was guilty of breach of his own duty to himself, and White and Whitmore had a right to consider he would have done what any man of ordinary prudence would have done. Claims to a large amount were made by White and Whitmore. They were in advance. That was said to be the habit of London agents with country solicitors; but the limits were exceeded, and frequent demands of payment were made. The evasions were frequent, and became more and more unsatisfactory, and at last White and Whitmore insisted on payment. His impression was, that Wood had not produced the whole of the correspondence. Wood was repeatedly dunned and payment demanded, yet he said he never looked at the bills, but depended upon his clerk, who would not perform that duty. This was one of the most absurd things he had ever heard stated. Payment or security was insisted upon, and on the 15th of November, 1838, an action was commenced, and Wood wrote that it would be well to have some gentleman to look over the accounts. This letter was answered by Mr. White, that it was not honest to wish to do that. White had delivered the bills half-yearly for many years; he had been continually demanding payment, and no payment had been made, and (Lord Langdale) did not think it very extraordinary for White to say he did not think it a very honest course of proceeding. Particulars of demand were delivered, and interest claimed in respect of the dilatory payments. In another interview Wood desired to be relieved from interest: the discussion did not succeed, notice of trial was given, a subsequent meeting was had, and in which the statements of what took place were different. The conclusion he came to was, that the judgment was to be entered up and be enforced, unless White and Whitmore were to be satisfied with security. An offer of security was made, but it could not be prudently accepted, execution was taken out upon the judgment, and White and Whitmore obtained full payment. The relief now asked was upon petition, and not upon bill; and his opinion was, that so much as sought for a reference to the master to tax the bills, and for an account, must be dismissed with costs. He was also of opinion that there was no foundation for the claim to be allowed the sums of £15. and £58. The case relating to the papers had more difficulty. He (Lord Langdale) did not know that they belonged to Mr. Wood. They belonged to the clients, but Mr. Wood might have a lien upon them, and where he continued to be the solicitor of the parties he had a right to the possession. If Mr. Wood's bills had been paid the papers belonged to the clients. There was, however, no evidence upon this point; and it was difficult to say what ought and what ought not to be given up, as some person might intervene who had a right to the possession of the papers. Without, therefore, knowing these facts, and to what Mr. Wood was entitled, he could not make any general order. There was no reason stated why Mr. Wood could not specify the papers he required; he had only a lien on those upon which costs remained unpaid. He would, however, consider before he made any order.

(b) Ante Vol. 3. p. 341.

Mr. Stuart pressed for a reference to the master.

Mr. Pemberton stated Messrs. White and Whitmore were willing to give up all which were specified by Mr. Wood, provided they, as agents for the solicitor of Mr. Wood's quondam clients, could not show a satisfactory reason in writing for retaining them.

The application was directed to stand till the next petition day.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—Feb. 22.

Sittings in Banco.

LEGG v. EVANS AND ANOTHER.

BAILMENTS—LIEN ON GOODS—Whether a Bailee of Goods, as a security for debt, may maintain TREVOR against the Sheriff for seizing them under a fieri facias issued against the Bailee.

This was a demurrer to a replication upon an action of Trevor against the Sheriffs of Middlesex, to recover some goods they had seized, which the declaration alleged to be the property of the plaintiff, and which the defendants had taken under a writ of fieri facias issued against him.

The replication stated that the goods were the property of David Williams, and were delivered by him to the plaintiff in the way of his trade of carver and gilder, who continued to hold them as a lien for work and labour bestowed on the said goods, and also under a special agreement as security for the amount of some bills of exchange, drawn by Williams upon and accepted by the plaintiff, who but for the conversion would still have had a lien upon the goods. Demurrer first, generally, that goods held by way of lien were not exempted from being seized in execution; and secondly, that the replication was a departure from the declaration; the latter alleging a general property in the plaintiff, and the former only setting up a qualified one by way of lien.

In support of the demurrer it was contended, that the sheriff may seize goods held in partnership, and sell the moiety belonging to the party against whom the writ was issued. Haydon v. Haydon(a), Dutton v. Monson(b), Field v. —(c). He may also sell the moiety of an interest in chattels real, Duffil v. Spottiswoode(d), or in chattels personal, Dean v. Whittaker(e), without being liable in trover.

In support of the declaration it was argued,

(a) 1 Salk. 392.

(b) 17 Ves. 193.

(c) 4 Ves. 396.

(d) 3 C & P. 435.

(e) 1 C. & P. 347.

that as a general principle of law, the sheriff can only seize such chattels as he can sell; and this principle is not interfered with by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12, which empowers him to seize money and other securities. A lien being merely a personal right to hold goods until a claim is satisfied, and which right is not assignable to any one else, the instant a party entitled to it gives up possession, the lien is gone. Lickbarrow v. Mason(f), Jacobs v. Latour(g), Capper v. Dickinson(h), and that the only exception to the rule was when the expence of keeping the lien is more than its value; as in the case of an innkeeper, in whose possession an horse has been left, who when the horse has eaten out his value, may sell him for his keep at a fair appraisement.(i) In this respect, a lien varies very much from a common pledge by way of security, for in the latter case the latter may indemnify himself by selling the goods deposited, if the money be not repaid, Pothonier v. Dawson.(k)

PARKE, B.—The question here is, can the sheriff substitute as the owner of these goods a third person, between whom and the original owner there is no privity? It is quite clear, that by the general law, a sheriff can seize nothing in execution but what he can sell; that law remains except so far as altered by statute, and the recent act of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. s. 12. does not at all apply to the present case. A lien is a personal right to hold the goods of another party by way of pledge, until a debt is paid. The right of the bailee is altogether personal; he cannot dispose of those goods to another, nor can the sheriff, who subsequently comes into possession of them. The right of lien continues so long only as the goods remain in the possession of the party as a pledge, pursuant to the term of the original delivery. It is a right altogether personal, and consequently differs materially from the case put in argument, where a term of years has been demised to a party, that the sheriff may sell, because it is a valuable interest, and may be the legitimate subject of a sale. But this lien is an interest which the bailee could not hand over to any one (unless, perhaps, to a servant) without being guilty of a conversion. If, therefore, these goods cannot be sold, neither can they be seized, for nothing is by law seizable that may not afterwards be sold.

The rest of the Court concurred.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

(f) 6 East. 21.

(g) 1 Roll. R. 215.

(h) 5 Bing. 130.; 2 M. & P. 20.

(i) Yelv. 66.

(k) 1 Holt N. P. C. 383.

April 25.—Sittings in Banco.

CORNFOOT v. FOWKE, Bart.

CONTRACTS.—NUISANCE.—Whether a house of ill-fame is a sufficient nuisance to entitle a party to relief from an agreement for taking adjoining premises, he being ignorant of such ill-fame at the time he entered into the contract.

This action was brought to enforce the performance of an agreement for the lease of a house in York Place, Baker Street, Portman Square, to which the defendant pleaded that the agreement in question was void, on the grounds of fraud, covin, and misrepresentation on the part of the plaintiff, and others in collusion with him. The alleged fraud, it was stated, consisted in an untrue representation made by a house agent who had been employed by the plaintiff in answer to a question put to him by the defendant, whether there was any objection to the house, and to which the answer was, that there was none. It subsequently turned out, however, that the house next door was of objectionable repute; of which fact it was alleged the plaintiff was cognizant at the time of making the agreement, although his agent was not aware of it. On the trial, Lord Abinger held that the plaintiff was bound by the representation of his agent, and left it to the jury to say whether such representation had been intended to relate to intrinsic objections only, or whether it had been intended to apply to extrinsic objections also. The jury found that the representation had been understood to apply and refer to both. To the mode in which that question had been left by his lordship to the jury, no objection was made, but on the part of the plaintiff it was contended, that in order to support the plea, it was not enough to prove that the representation was untrue, but it was necessary to prove that the representation had been fraudulently made; (a) and last Michaelmas Term a rule nisi was granted for a new trial on the ground of misdirection by the learned judge (b).

The Court now proceeded to give judgment: but the learned Barons were not unanimous in their opinions. PARKE, B., ALDERSON, B., and ROLFE, B., gave their opinions seriatim, and were unanimous that as the representation had not been embodied in the contract itself, the contract could not be effected, unless it were shown to be a fraudulent representation; that being the principle upon which the plea was founded. The simple fact, that the plaintiff had known of the existence of the nuisance, and that the agent, who was not cognizant of it, had represented that it was not in existence, were not sufficient to constitute fraud; each person was innocent, because the plaintiff had not made any false representation, whilst the agent who made the representation was not aware that the statement was false; it, therefore, appeared to be an untenable proposition that, if each were innocent, both could be held as having made a representation which could be regarded as a fraud. No case could be found in which such a principle had been laid down, a circumstance which had indeed been admitted in the course of the argument. It must be considered, their lordships observed, that a party who employed an agent to make a contract, and that agent, though the principal might be perfectly guiltless, knowingly committed a fraud in making the contract, not only would such contract become null and void, but the principal himself would be liable to an action. In the present case, however, it appeared that the agent had acted without any fraudulent intent, and consequently his act done neither rendered the plaintiff liable to an action, nor vitiated the contract. At the same time it must be admitted that, if the plaintiff had not merely known of the existence of the nuisance, but purposely employed an ignorant agent, suspecting that a question would be asked of him, and also believing or suspecting that, by reason of such ignorance, the question would be answered in the negative, the plaintiff would in that case unquestionably be guilty of fraud, and the contract would be void; for then the representation of the agent, which he had so intended him to make, would become the same as his own; and his own representation, coupled with his knowledge of its falsehood, would doubtless be a fraud. Whether the facts of the case warranted the inference that such a fraud had been in fact committed, it was unnecessary here to inquire; for if the facts had warranted such an inference, the question would doubtless have been submitted to the jury. On these grounds their lordships were of opinion that the rule for a new trial ought to be made absolute.

(a) See the case reported, ante vol. 2. p. 123.

(b) See ante vol. 3. p. 40.

Lord ABINGER, was of opinion, and decided that the rule ought to be discharged.

Rule absolute.

CRIMINAL LAW.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—April 15.

MURDER—Where a person intending to commit a Murder, fails to do so by the means he proposed, but yet effects his object through another agency, he is guilty of the crime.

Catherine Michael, aged 23, a single woman, was indicted for feloniously administering to her infant son, George Michael, on the 31st of March last, in the parish of Paddington, a certain deadly poison, to wit, one half-ounce of laudanum, causing a mortal sickness, of which he died, and that the prisoner did feloniously kill and murder him.

Mr. Baron ALDERSON said, he felt it necessary to make a few remarks upon the law of the case, in order that the jury might, coupled with the evidence adduced, come to a right conclusion. He held the law to be this,—that if a person, intending to commit a murder, fails to do so by the means he proposed, but yet effects his object through another agency, he is guilty of the crime. For instance, if a man is engaged in the prosecution of a felony, and intends to shoot A, instead of which the bullet kills his dearest friend B, his death is coupled with the malice against A, and the man would be equally guilty of murder as if he killed A. There was a case reported in Hale of a husband who prepared a poisoned apple, intending it for his wife, but she gave it, unconsciously to her child, whom the husband dearly loved, and the child dying in consequence, the malice of the husband towards his wife being proved, the husband was declared guilty of murder. So again in the play of Hamlet, the Queen drinks from the poisoned chalice which the King intends alone for Hamlet, her son. The Queen dies, and, according to the English law, the King would unquestionably be guilty of murder. Then there was the case of an apothecary who prepared a draught, into which another party put poison, intending to destroy the life of the party for whom the medicine was intended. The patient, not liking the taste of the draught, and considering that there was something suspicious about it, sent it back to the apothecary, who, knowing the ingredients of which he had composed it, and to prove that he had done nothing wrong, drank it himself and died, and, although he was the unconscious agent of his own death, it was in that case held that the party who had poisoned the draught, intending it for another, was as much guilty of the murder of the apothecary as if he had destroyed his intended victim. The jury must, therefore, in the case now before them, be satisfied, first, that there was an intention to kill her child on the part of the prisoner, and secondly, that she procured the witness, Mrs. Stephens, to administer to the infant a certain quantity of the poison, which quantity she knew would cause death. Both he and his learned brother, (Littledale J.), as at present advised, although the poison was, in fact, administered by an innocent and unconscious agent, were of opinion that the prisoner would, in that case, be guilty of murder, and ought to be convicted. If, however, the result of the trial should unfortunately render it necessary, they would take the opinion of the rest of the learned judges upon the point. His Lordship then proceeded to sum up the facts of the case, and left it to the jury to say whether they believed the prisoner intended to destroy her child.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, but strongly recommended her to mercy.

Mr. Baron ALDERSON.—Upon what grounds, gentlemen?

The Foreman.—We think, my Lord, that the fact of the prisoner having been seduced and thrown upon the world is an extenuating circumstance in the case.

Mr. Baron ALDERSON.—I shall take care that the recommendation shall be forwarded to the proper quarter, should it be necessary. In the mean time let judgment be respited upon the prisoner until the point of law is decided by the judges.

THE NEW POSTAGE STAMPS.

COPY OF TREASURY MINUTE, DATED APRIL 22, 1840.

My Lords refer to their minutes of the 26th of December, 20th of February, and the 2d inst., regarding the preparation and sale of postage stamps.

My Lords read a letter from the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, naming the day on which they will be ready to issue stamped covers, envelopes, and labels in London, and that on which the application of such stamps to letters may, in their opinion, commence; but adding that they are unable at present to state when the preparations will be ready for stamping the paper which the public may send in for that purpose.

Having communicated on the subject with the authorities of the Post-office, my Lords are pleased to direct as follows:—

That the issue of the postage stamps for sale to the public be commenced as early as practicable; that such issue be, in the first instance, confined to London; and that it be extended first to Dublin, and Edinburgh, and afterwards to other parts of the kingdom in such order as the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes may determine, and as rapidly as the necessary supply can be obtained. Also, that the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes be instructed to give due notice to the public as soon as they are ready to stamp the paper which may be sent in for that purpose.

That on and after the 6th of May next, letters written on stamped paper, or enclosed in stamped covers, or having a stamp or stamps affixed thereto (the stamp or stamps in every such case being of the same value or amount as the rates of postage now charged on such letters if prepaid), shall, if within the limitation of the weight fixed under the provisions of the 2d and 3d Victoria, c. 52, and if the stamp or stamps have not been used before, pass by the post free of postage in whatever part of the kingdom they may be posted.

That as many parts of the kingdom cannot be supplied with postage stamps by the said 6th of May, prepayment by money as well as by stamps be continued until further directions are issued.

That unstamped letters (unless prepaid by money, as at present) be charged double postage on delivery.

That letters insufficiently stamped or insufficiently prepaid be charged on delivery double the amount of such insufficiency.

Transmit a copy of this minute officially to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, and to the Postmaster-General, and desire that the Postmaster-General will direct the solicitor of the Post-office, after conferring with the solicitor of the Stamps and Taxes, to prepare the necessary warrant for authorizing the use of stamps as proposed in this minute, such warrant to be inserted in the Gazette, pursuant to the provisions of the act.

A Supplement to the London Gazette was published on Saturday, containing a "Treasury warrant," which, after reciting the powers of an "Act for the further regulation of the duties on postage until the 4th day of October, 1840," the warrant of the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, bearing date "the 27th December, 1840," (together with an abstract of its intent and provisions,) and also a similar warrant, dated the 31st January, 1840, proceeds:—

"Now, we the undersigned, being three of the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, do, in the exercise of the power or authority in us for such purpose vested in and by the said act, and of all other powers enabling us in this behalf, order and direct that this present warrant shall come into operation on the 6th day of May next. And we hereby direct, that all letters, printed votes and proceedings of the Imperial Parliament, which, on or after that day shall be posted in any town or place within the United Kingdom, shall, if written on stamped paper, or enclosed in stamped covers, or having a stamp or stamp affixed thereto (the stamp or stamps in every such case being the value or amount hereinafter expressed, and specially provided under the authority of the said act as herein-after expressed and specially provided under the authority of the said act as herein-after directed, and if the stamp shall not have been used before), pass by post free of postage as herein-after mentioned—(that is to say),

"In case any such letter shall be directed to any place within the United Kingdom, the stamp or stamps thereto shall be equal in value"

amount to the rates of postage to which such letters would be liable under the said warrant of the 27th of December last, if pre-paid.

" In case any such letters shall be addressed to any other of the British dominions or colonies, or to any foreign country, the stamp or stamps thereon shall be equal in value or amount to the rates of British postage to which such letters would have been liable under the said warrant of the 27th day of December last.

" And on all such printed votes and proceedings of Parliament the stamp or stamps shall be equal in value or amount to the rates of postage to which such votes and proceedings would have been liable under the said warrant of the 31st day of January last.

" And we further order and direct, that in all cases in which the same shall be necessary, in order to place on any such letters, printed votes or proceedings of Parliament, the full amount of stamps hereby required as aforesaid, there shall be affixed thereto such a number of adhesive stamps, as alone or in combination with the stamp on such letter or packet, or on the envelope or cover thereof, will be equal in amount to the rates of postage, to which such letters, printed votes or proceedings of Parliament, would be liable under the said warrants of the 27th day of December and 31st day of January now last respectively as aforesaid.

" That in all cases in which letters addressed to places within the United Kingdom shall be posted without any stamp thereon, and without the postage being pre-paid, there shall be charged on such letters the postage to which such letters would be liable under the said warrant of the 27th day of December last; and in all cases in which printed votes or proceedings in Parliament, addressed to places within the United Kingdom, shall be posted without any stamp thereon, there shall be charged on such votes and proceedings the postage to which the same would be liable under the said warrant of the 31st of January last.

" That in all cases in which any letters addressed to places within the United Kingdom shall be posted, having thereon or affixed thereto any stamp or stamps, the value or amount of which shall be less than the rate of postage to which such letters would be liable under the said warrant of the 27th day of December last if pre-paid, there shall be charged on such letters a postage of double the amount of the difference between the value of such stamp or stamps, and the postage to which such letter would be liable as aforesaid if pre-paid.

" And in all cases in which any votes or proceedings of Parliament addressed to places within the United Kingdom, shall be posted, having thereon or affixed thereto any stamp or stamps the value or amount of which shall be less than the rate of postage to which such votes and proceedings would be liable under the said warrant of the 31st of January last, there shall be charged on such votes or proceedings a postage equal to the amount of the difference between the value of such stamp or stamps, and the postage to which such votes or proceedings would be liable as aforesaid.

" Provided always, that it shall in all cases be optional with the parties sending any letters, printed votes or proceedings of Parliament, by the post, to forward the same, free of postage, by means of a proper stamp or stamps thereto, in manner herein-before provided, or to forward the same in like manner as the same might have been forwarded before the signing of this present warrant.

" But in case any letters, or printed votes or proceedings of Parliament, addressed to places out of the United Kingdom, shall have thereon or affixed thereto any stamp or stamps being less in value or amount than the rates of postage to which letters or such votes or proceedings would be liable under the said warrants of the 27th day of December and 31st day of January last respectively, such letters or printed votes or proceedings of Parliament, shall not, in any case, be forwarded by post, but shall, so far as may be practicable, be returned to the senders thereof, through the dead letter-office.

" Provided also, that with reference to the existing treaties between his late Majesty King William the Fourth, her present Majesty, and his Majesty the King of the French, letters between the United Kingdom and France may be sent without being stamped or pre-paid; but in all other cases of letters sent out of the United Kingdom it shall be lawful for the postmaster-general to require either that such letters shall be duly and properly stamped as herein directed, or that the postage thereof shall be paid by the sender on the tender or delivery of such letters at the post-office, or other places appointed by the postmaster-general for the receipt of such letters, for the purpose of transmission by the post (subject, nevertheless, to the regulations and enactments in this respect contained in the act of the 1st of Vic. c. 34. s. 14).

" Provided also, that the transmission of printed votes and proceedings of Parliament by the post shall be subject to all the regulations and restrictions in force under the said act of the 1st of Victoria, cap. 34, and the said warrant of the 31st of January last.

" And we further order and direct, that in any case in which a stamp shall be placed on any letter, or printed votes or proceedings of Parliament, or affixed thereto, which shall have been used before, the same shall have no force or effect whatsoever.

“ And we further order and direct the commissioners of stamps and taxes, from time to time, to provide proper and sufficient dies, or other implements, for expressing and denoting rates or duties of one penny and twopence for the purposes herein before directed.

“ And we further order and direct, that the terms and expressions used in this present warrant shall be construed to have the like meaning in all respects, as they would have had if inserted in the said warrant of the 27th day of December last.

“ Provided lastly, and we hereby declare, that it shall be lawful for the Lords Commissioners for the time being of her Majesty's Treasury, or any three of them, by warrant under their hands, at any time hereafter, to rescind, vary, or alter all or any of the regulations and directions herein contained, and to make, establish, and declare any new or other regulations and directions respecting the sending by the post of letters written on stamped paper, or enclosed in stamped covers, or having a stamp affixed thereto, in manner provided by the said act, made and passed in the last session of Parliament, as they shall deem expedient.

“ As witness our hands this 24th day of April, 1840.

“ F. T. BARING,

“ THOS. WYSE,

“ H. TUFFNELL.”

We learn that instructions respecting the postage stamps, about to come into operation on the 6th of May, are as follow:—

Price of Stamps.

At a post-office, labels 1d. and 2d. each; covers 1½d. and 2½d. each.

At a stamp distributor's, as above, or as follows:—

Half-ream, or 240 penny covers, £1. 2s. 4d.; penny envelopes, £1. 1s. 9d.

Quarter-ream, or 120 twopenny covers, £1. 1s. 4d.; twopenny envelopes, £1. 1s. 1d.

At the stamp-offices in London, Dublin, and Edinburgh, as above, or as follows:—

Two reams, or 960 penny covers, £4. 7s.; penny envelopes, £4. 5s.

One ream, or 480 twopenny covers, £4. 3s. 6d.; twopenny envelopes, £4. 2s. 6d.

Covers may be had at these prices either in sheets or cut ready for use. Envelopes in sheets only, and consequently not made up. No one, unless duly licensed, is authorized to sell postage stamps.

The penny stamp carries half an ounce (inland), the twopenny stamp one ounce. For weights exceeding one ounce, use the proper number of labels, either alone, or in combination with the stamps of the covers or envelopes.

The penny stamps will be printed in black, and the twopenny in blue ink. The above directions, with others relating to the rates of postage, are printed at either side of the designs on the covers. The peculiar marks on the paper on which the covers and envelopes are printed, consist of thin lines of blue and red thread; the red are woven at the inside, and the blue at the outside of the covers. In the envelopes a blue line is placed towards the outside, between two red lines on the inside. For the labels, or adhesive stamps, a water-mark has been employed; a crown is placed in each label, and the sheet which holds 240 labels, has the word “postage” at each side of it. Each label is marked with different letters, so that in every sheet of 240 labels each stamp will have an essential difference from the others. This is a precaution against forgery (should it be attempted), which will oblige the forger to engrave as many plates as stamps to be printed.—Times.

Thus, it appears, that between the purchase of a single cover and of 960, there will be an allowance of about 14 per cent. A single label may always be bought at every post-office for 1d. and a cover for 1½d. The price for a dozen or more covers purchased of a licensed vender will be left for competition; every body, however, having the opportunity of buying 960 penny covers for £4. 7s. at the chief stamp-offices, or 240 for £1. 2s. 4d. of a stamp distributor. Besides the design on the covers and envelopes, the word “postage” on an engine-turned ground, is printed on the lower fold at the back. The covers and envelopes are printed on paper manufactured by Mr. John Dickinson. The peculiarity of this paper is the insertion of lines in the woof of the paper; three red lines towards the inner, and two blue lines towards the outer side of the cover. The lines are differently placed on the envelopes; a series of lines being at either corner, each having a blue line towards the outside, between two red lines towards the inside. The labels, or adhesive stamps, have been printed on water-marked paper. Each label has the water-mark of a crown; and the sheet of labels, holding 240, has the word “postage” in each of the four borders. Certain combinations of letters of the alphabet are inserted in the two corners of the lower part of the labels; and as they are varied in every one of 240 labels, the probabilities nearly amount to a certainty that no one having a less stock than 240 will have two stamps with the same lettering in his possession. There can be no doubt that these peculiarities afford a very ample guarantee against forgery. At all events, in the case of the labels, it will not suffice that the forger engrave a single die, but he must produce several, each being identical in appearance in all respects, excepting the check lettering.—Morning Herald.

STAMPS AND TAXES, April, 1840.

The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury having authorized and directed the use of stamps for denoting the duties of postage on and after the 6th day of May next, and that the sale of such stamps shall in the first instance be confined to London, notice is hereby given, that on and after the 1st day of May next the Stamps undermentioned may be obtained at this office, and also at the Sea Policy Office, Bank Buildings, in the city of London, in the quantities and at the prices following, viz.:—

|                                                                                        | £. | s. | d. |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|----|----|
| Two reams of 1 d. stamps for covers, containing 80 sheets or 960 stamps         | 4  | 7  | 0  |
| Same quantity of 1 d. stamps for envelopes                                      | 4  | 5  | 0  |
| One ream of 1 d. stamps for covers, containing 40 sheets or 480 stamps          | 2  | 4  | 8  |
| Same quantity of 1 d. stamps for envelopes                                      | 2  | 3  | 6  |
| Half a ream of 1 d. stamps for covers, containing 20 sheets or 240 stamps       | 1  | 2  | 4  |
| Same quantity of 1 d. stamps for envelopes                                      | 1  | 1  | 9  |
| One ream of 2 d. stamps for covers, containing 40 sheets or 480 stamps          | 4  | 3  | 6  |
| Same quantity of 2 d. stamps for envelopes                                      | 4  | 2  | 6  |
| Half a ream of 2 d. stamps for covers, containing 20 sheets or 240 stamps       | 2  | 2  | 8  |
| Same quantity of 2 d. stamps for envelopes                                      | 2  | 2  | 2  |
| Quarter of a ream of 2 d. stamps for covers, containing 10 sheets or 120 stamps | 1  | 1  | 4  |
| Same quantity of 2 d. stamps for envelopes                                      | 1  | 1  | 1  |
| Sheet of 1 d. labels, containing 240 stamps, 1 d. per sheet.             |    |    |    |
| Same of 2 d. , £2. per sheet.                                                   |    |    |    |

To enable any persons to sell these stamps it will be necessary that they should obtain licences from the vendors of stamps generally.

By order of the Board,

CHARLES PRESSLY, Sec.

PROPOSED REMOVAL OF THE WESTMINSTER HALL COURTS.

A petition of the London solicitors is about to be presented to the House of Commons, for the removal of the courts in Westminster-hall to the neighbourhood of the inns of court. The petition, which has been already numerously signed, is for further signature at the Law Institution. The reasons for the proposed removal are stated briefly as follows:—

1. The increased discomfort and suffering endured in the courts of Westminster-hall.

2. The inadequacy of that site to afford any space for the accommodation of the proposed new equity judges.

3. Or for the three subsidiary common law courts now needed for the term Nisi Prius, and other business.

4. Much less for any future increase of courts or judges.

5. The unsatisfactory nature of the present plan of the equity vacation sittings, which obliges the judges, when, for the convenience of the profession, they remove from Westminster at the end of term, to occupy, by sufferance only of the benchers, the scattered halls of the various inns of court, and the difficulty of providing even such accommodation for the proposed new equity judges.

6. The necessity now pressing on the Government, of making immediate provision for existing wants, and of considering this question in reference to the designs for the new Parliament houses, and before further progress is made with those works.

7. The improvidence of laying out money except for purposes of permanent usefulness, and without due regard to the suitors' interests, which can alone be promoted by uniting all the courts in a suitable structure under one roof, in the vicinity of Lincoln's-inn, and thereby concentrating in one neighbourhood all the places of professional resort.

8. The fact (incontrovertible) that no public necessity, nor any convenience of a public nature, justifies the evils attendant on the present site.

9. The large surplus income at present arising from the fee-funds of the common law courts, and the immense unclaimed suitors' fund in Chancery, rendering it unnecessary to call on the public treasury for the expense of the building.

10. An excellent site, the garden of Lincoln's-inn-fields, being obtainable (as is believed) without compensation or expense.

It appears that in November, 1838, there were 2,660 attornies in London, and 6,761 in the country; of the former, 1,365 (representing 5,231 country attornies) were located about the inns of court between Waterloo and Blackfriars bridges, and 803 (representing 1,321 country attornies) in the city. This number (making, with 77 resident to the north-east, 2,245, and representing, in all, 6,588 country attornies,) are obliged, each time of attending and returning from court, to travel, needlessly, three miles; and to the same proportion, therefore, of the profession, those other and greater evils apply which result from the courts being placed in a district remote from that of the attorney's occupations.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEGAL GUIDE.

SIR,—By the 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 12, it is enacted, that where any felony or misdemeanor shall be committed on the boundary of two or more counties, or within 500 yards of such boundary, or shall be begun in one county, and completed in another, the offender may be tried in any of the counties as if wholly committed therein.

A robbery was committed in Lancashire, but was tried at the late Chester Assizes, it being sworn by the constable to be within 500 yards of the boundary of Cheshire, where the robbery took place; the place has since been measured, and found to be upwards of 500 yards from the bed of the river which divides the two counties; no rule was laid down by the judge who tried the cause as to the mode of measurement in such matters; and, as some disputes have arisen, and there appear to be no precedents at all on the subject, I shall feel greatly obliged if you will in your next publication inform me the mode of measuring the distances in such cases.

1st. Whether it is along the highway or bye-ways.

2ndly. Whether through people's property, or whether along what is denominated "crow road," or if you can inform me of any cases on the point, I shall be very glad.

I am, Sir,
Yours respectfully,
A SUBSCRIBER.

We think that the decisions of the judges in cases of Agreements between parties, not to carry on a trade within certain limits, will equally apply to the above.—See the cases collected in Western's Conveyancing—tit. AGREEMENTS, vol. iii. p. 108.—ED.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We have commenced this Volume with some new features, to meet, if it be possible, the views of our Subscribers. We neither wish to have the additional labour, nor to incur the expense of a double number every month. It will be seen that by a different arrangement of type, we are enabled to give considerable more matter. The face of every number also readily shews its contents, which we submit to be an improvement. We shall continue to give the Questions put to the Candidates for Examination at the Law Society, and the names of such as do pass,—and Gentlemen called to the Bar.—also the Sittings of the Courts; all other Lists we shall discontinue.

TO COUNTRY SUBSCRIBERS.

We are desired to state, that in consequence of the great circulation of this Paper out of London, in England, Ireland, and Scotland, the Country Subscribers will in future be relieved from the expence of the government duty. Every future number will therefore be sent out of London post free, price only 6d.

THE LEGAL GUIDE,

Published in LONDON every Saturday morning, and in DUBLIN and EDINBURGH every Monday morning, price 6d. post free.

Advertisements.

|                          | £. | s. | d. |
|--------------------------|----|----|----|
| Not exceeding 10 Lines . | 0  | 5  | 0  |
| "          15   "        | 0  | 7  | 0  |
| "          20   "        | 0  | 9  | 0  |
| "          30   "        | 0  | 12 | 0  |
| "          40   "        | 0  | 14 | 0  |
| "          50   "        | 0  | 16 | 0  |
| A Column . . . . .       | 1  | 0  | 0  |
| A Page . . . . .         | 1  | 8  | 0  |

Bills.

|                             |   |    |   |
|-----------------------------|---|----|---|
| Inserting Bill, Single Leaf | 1 | 0  | 0 |
| Ditto, Two Leaves . . .     | 1 | 10 | 0 |
| Half Sheet . . . . .        | 2 | 0  | 0 |
| Whole Sheet . . . . .       | 3 | 0  | 0 |

1500 Bills required.

ADVERTISEMENT.

WANTED £3000. by way of MORTGAGE, £5. per Cent. upon ample fee simple land, also £500. upon equal ample security. Apply to Mr. Heath, Solicitor, 12, Farnival's Lane, Holborn.

Printed by GEORGE NORMAN, at his Printing Office, 29, Maiden Lane, in the Parish of St. Paul, Cornhill, in the County of Middlesex; and Published by JOHN RICHARDS, Law Bookseller, 124, Fleet Street, in the Parish of St. Dunstons-in-the-West, in the City of London.—Saturday, May 2, 1846

The Legal Guide.

VOL. IV.]

SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1840.

[No. 2.

Price Sixpence.

Contents.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |        |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| ESSAY on the ENGLISH LAW of BAILMENTS—continued                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |        |
| PROBLEM 2. Vol. 4.—LANDLORD and TENANT—RE-ENTRY—What are the necessary forma-lities required by the Common Law to enable alessor to re-enter for breach of the proviso forre-entry on non-payment of rent?—Supposethe condition to be that if the rent shall be inarrear for twenty-one days after any of the spe-cified days of payment              | 17     |
| ANSWER to PROBLEM 23, Vol. 3.—“What will,under ordinary circumstances, be received atlaw as a sufficient proof of hand-writing?”—ByE. A.                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 20     |
| TENANTS for LIFE IMPEACHABLE for WASTE.—On the right of Tenant for Life, impeachablefor waste, to work open Mines, and to Leasethem under the usual Power of Leasing.—ByT., Barrister-at-Law                                                                                                                                                                      | 24     |
| LAW REPORTS.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |        |
| CHANCERY.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |        |
| Field v. Elwes—ATTORNEYS COSTS—Ordersfor payment of, after taxation within a limitedtime—Regularity of proceedings upon the Orderwhere served upon the Client after the time forpayment has transpired                                                                                                                                                            | 21     |
| Field v. Allison—PATENT—Injunction—Prac-tice—After Verdict at Law for the Plaintiff,and a rule nisi granted for a new trial                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 22     |
| ROLLS' COURT.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |        |
| Field v. Vaughan and another—TENANT forLIFE impeachable for Waste—Whether he mayremove the surface soil and dig for Clay for mak-ing Bricks—Injunction                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 23     |
| COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |        |
| England v. Davison—Rewards to Policemen—Whether recoverable by action—Demurrer                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 25     |
| EXCHEQUER.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |        |
